There has been a great deal of corruption among the village officials of Bemidji during the past few years, it is said, and many flagrant cases of bribery have been reported. The business men of that village do not propose to stand for it any longer and organized an association for the sole purpose of punishing guilty officials.

Rev. Sterling and Prof. Wilson were out to the Copp school house, five miles northwest of this city Monday evening and delivered temperance lectures. They secured 22 new members to sign the pledge, who together with the 26 secured some time ago, makes a total of 48. A permanent organization was effected and officers elected. Many of the members are young men.

A bad story is being circulated about one of the local members of the "Buffalo" lodge, who recently visited his best girl down at St. Hilaire. He hadn't been in her presence very long, however, when the young lady discovered him to be asleep. She lost no time in giving him a shaking up, and coming to, he let a bellar, exclaiming, "Buffalo" offered the grip and challange—then rubbing his eyes he discovered where he was at; and—well he felt like dropping through the floor.

All people who carried insurance in the Fire and Marine Insurance company, of Minneapolis, have been served with notices from W. S. Dwinnel, receiver of the defunct company, that they have been assessed one hundred per cent of the amount of their policies in the company. Inasmuch as the company is a mutual company, the policy holders are stockholders in the concern and are liable to assessments to pay the company's indebtedness. Quite an amount of insurance was written among the farmers near this city and it is needless to say that they are wroth.

AN INHERITANCE IN WESTERN CANADA.

Indian Reservations and Other New Districts to Be Opened Up This Year.

In the Great Saskatchewan Valley and the Fertile Plains of Assiniboia.

To the Editor, Dear Sir: The past three or four years have demonstrated to a large number of Americans the value of the grain-growing and ranching lands of Western Canada. Tens of thousands have taken advantage of the offer made by the Canadian government as well as of the exceedingly low prices asked for lands by the railway, colonization and other companies. The experience of those who have been settled there for some little time is of a highly gratifying character. So much so that the Canadian government, who has control of the immigration into Western Canada, has decided to open up some new districts this year in the well known Saskatchewan Valley and also in the fertile plains of Assiniboia. These Districts are probably the most productive in the entire West and in close touch to largely settled communities as well as being situated on some of the most important lines of railway. They are within easy reach of markets, schools, churches and other social advantages. In some of these districts lands may be homesteaded as well as purchased outright at very low prices. Now as to what can be done on these lands. The evidence of the settlers in the neighborhood of the lands now about to be opened for settlement (some of them being located in one of the best Indian Reservations) goes to show that the very best results have followed even most indifferent methods. Cases are given where farmers having gone there with most limited means, barely enough to erect a small house and break up a little land, have in three or four years time become prosperous; all debts paid and money in the bank. The soil in the Districts mentioned, Assiniboia and Saskatchewan, is a rich black loam, fifteen inches to three feet deep. As a settler says, "It appears like the accumulation of decayed vegetation and ashes for centuries (the sub-soil is a stiff, putty clay)." On this soil it is possible to raise from 40 to 50 bushels of wheat to the acre, oats 75 to 100 bushels, all of which bring good prices at the local market. For mixed farming these new districts are probably among the best in Western Canada. Stock fatten easily on the wild grasses. Hay is plentiful, and prices splendid. Another settler writing to a friend in Iowa says: "The climate is all that could be desired, plenty of rainfall in summer, with no hot, dry winds. On the 28th of September I saw prairie flowers in full bloom, sweet corn, potato and tomato vines that had not been touched a particle with frost, and the winters are milder than those in the State from which I came. After the holidays the winter sets in clear and cold, with plenty of snow for good sleighing; no high winds or blizzards are known. Horses live out all winter and pick their own living, while cattle live all winter in open sheds and around the hay ricks. Wheat, oats and barley are the principal grain crops. Potatoes and all other roots and vegetables do well, the yield being enormous as compared to those in the States. Wild fruits, such as strawberries, raspberries, cranberries, gooseberries and all varieties of currants yield in abundance. As a reader of your valuable paper for a number of years, I feel that I should inform you of the progress and advancement being made in Canada within the past few years, and the inducements and advantages that will follow settlement in Western Canada. Those who desire information can do as I did, and apply to any Agent of the Canadian Government, whose name I see appears in advertisements appearing elsewhere in the columns of your paper, and when writing ask particularly about the Saskatchewan Valley or Assiniboia Districts.

Yours truly,
Old Reader."

In His Own Trap

ONE CONFIDENCE MAN OUTWITS ANOTHER

The slickest confidence man that ever perambulated down the pike was in Memphis last week and did some smooth business of the bunko variety, according to Patrolman Pat Horan, that makes the clumsy Memphis method pale into insignificance, says the Memphis Commercial Appeal. Officer Horan refuses to give names, but he says that the victim in the case was a king bee Memphis con man who thinks he is more than "two or three," and who happened to be out looking for hayseeds. The con man dropped into a certain hotel in Memphis to lay for a "fish," and he had gotten himself up to pass for a commercial traveler. He was soon spotted by the "slick one," who seemed to have a lofty scorn for the innocent "Rubes" and loved to make monkeys out of the swell-head frauds who think they know it all. Not long after the "slick" one spotted the Memphis shark a hayseed Rube of the most harmless looking type came into the hotel lobby and glared through his spectacles at the men sitting around. Failing to see the face he was looking for the old Rube stood a moment in the center of the floor and then walked over to the clerk's desk. He took a long range chance at the cuspidor and missed, and then, addressing the clerk, asked: "Has Bill Smith been here looking for me?" The clerk looked up, and, seeing a chance for some fun, began to humor the old man. The Memphis shark grew interested and drew near. Soon the whole hotel knew the old man's story. Bill Smith was a stranger he had met in the morning who had borrowed $50 from him to pay a freight bill, promising to meet Rube at the hotel and pay it back. Rube was certain he would be in soon, because it was now past the appointed time. The old man's apparent innocence amused the crowd and he was advised to go on and forget Bill Smith as he would never see Bill any more. The old man replied good humoredly that he guessed he would wait awhile for Bill, and, winking at the crowd, he pulled out a well filled wallet with the remark that he had plenty left if Bill should go back on his word. The eyes of the Memphis shark glistened at sight of the wallet and, approaching Rube, he began to manifest the tenderest sympathy in his case and assured him that Bill Smith was a rascally thief and that the town was full of such sharks. Rube grew nervous under the repeated flings at his friend Bill Smith and in his excitement he pulled his money and swore he would bet every dollar of it on Smith's honesty. "Well," said the Memphis shark, "I'll just bet you $50 that Smith don't show up with your money." Reuben took the bet and, with trembling fingers, pulled out the fifty, and the stakes were put in the hands of the clerk. After this Rube grew silent and nervously paced up and down the lobby. Presently, as Rube was standing some distance from the desk, pensively rolling his quid and gazing through the skylight, a smartly dressed man walked briskly through the door and up to the clerk's desk, eyeing the bystanders critically as he passed. Seizing a pen he rapidly wrote on the register, "William J. Smith, Hushpuckana, Miss." As he was writing Rube had once more advanced toward the desk and, seeing the form at the counter he strode eagerly forward, peered into the face of the newcomer, and, slapping him on the back, exclaimed: "By gosh, if it ain't Bill Smith at last."

The rest of the story was simple. Smith recognized Rube, thanked him for the loan and immediately pulled out his purse and paid over the promised fifty he had borrowed. The Memphis shark turned pale as Rube claimed the wager, but it had to go. Later the Memphis shark got a little note advising him that Rube thanked him for the little donation and advised him to try the trick on some of his fellow sharks and play for even.

When Lincoln Was in Congress

Former Governor William A. Newell, who had the rare distinction of being governor of two states—New Jersey and Washington—writes in the March Success of his romantic experience as a congressman in 1849, when he originated the life saving service by offering a resolution in the house of representatives to appropriate money to save lives imperiled by the sea. Fellow members of congress at that session were John Quincy Adams and Abraham Lincoln. Mr. Newell says: "Various objections were made to my motion, the strongest of which was that the scheme was impracticable. I laid the matter before a great many senators and members, speaking to them in person. Ex-President John Quincy Adams occupied a seat just behind mine, and, after the reading of the resolution by the clerk, leaned forward and said to me, 'I would like to see that resolution.' I sent for it and handed it to him. He read it over carefully, and, handing it to me, said with a smile: 'It is good; I hope it will prevail.' Abraham Lincoln also read it, and said: 'Newell, that is a good measure. I will help you. I am something of a lifesaver myself, for I invented a scow that righted itself on the Mississippi sandbars!'"

MORAL SUASION

As Exerted by Women. It Has Many Possibilities.

Women in a neighboring Illinois city are making ready to exert an influence on local politics through moral suasion, says a St. Louis paper. Among the objects they wish to attain, besides the customary ones of stopping the men from drinking, smoking and chewing gum, are a few others which they seem more likely to accomplish than the first categoried, such as cleaning the streets, planting trees, and the abolition of fences and dogs, except those tied with a string. Moral suasion is a great deal more effective in sweeping a street than in stopping the consumption of beer. There is no difference of opinion over the advantage of keeping a street clean, though there may be a stubborn opposition to paying for it. Moral suasion and neighborly example are strong influences against dirt. One good lawn properly rolled and watered has been known to regenerate a whole block, and has in time resulted in the exodus of all the rickety barricades in the neighborhood. Moral suasion may not be as powerful in changing the physical aspects of a city as the ballot, but if exerted by the women in an organized movement it can exhibit the possibilities in such a manner as to rouse enthusiasm in favor of improvement. It is no more disagreeable to call in committee upon a householder and ask him to plant trees in front of his house than to solicit him to buy tickets to a church festival, and it may occur to him that the trees in the end will be of more value to him than the tickets. While ordinances which provide for the planting of trees, removal of fences and suppression of dogs can accomplish more and do it in a better way than voluntary organizations, moral suasion is a good starter for building up public sentiment so that the ordinance will be demanded.

Sticky.

An inventive turn of mind sometimes leads its possessor into peculiar difficulties. A Boston daily paper tells of a man who devised a one-piece rubber-lined cotton undergarment, which was intended to be soft and warm and at the same time waterproof. He expected to make a fortune by the sale of the same to miners, seafaring men and others whose occupations are pursued in damp or wet places. Unfortunately, however, when he donned the new garment and it became warm, the rubber melted and stuck to his body, and the fabric was only removed with the aid of a pair of scissors and a scraping knife. Something similar, although from a different cause, happened to an Indiana tramp who was prowling around in search of shelter for the night and found a convenient barn. It was dark, and he felt his way up the ladder into the loft. While walking around there he stepped into an open shaft and down he went to the floor below. That was not the worst of it. There was a vat of sorghum molasses directly beneath the shaft, and the tramp went in up to his neck. He crawled out and tried to scrape off the mess with hay and straw, but when he emerged next morning he was such a sight that the dogs were afraid of him. In the end he was forced to surrender himself to the police, so that he might get a change of clothing.—Youths' Companion.

The Old Farmer

A southern paper tells a story of a Chattanooga (Tenn.) merchant who installed a telephone near the front door of his shop and one morning stepped up to the transmitter to answer a call. Just at that moment a North Georgia farmer who had never seen a telephone before came into the place and inquired, "Wanter buy any aigs?" The merchant, who was intent upon getting his message, gazed abstractedly at the farmer and told the telephone, "I can't hear you!" "Wanter buy any aigs?" shouted the farmer in a voice that made the windows rattle. Still unable to hear the man who was calling him, the merchant again remarked, this time without looking at the farmer, "I can't hear you! Speak louder!" For the third time the farmer spoke, roaring out his previous question so loud that people several blocks away stopped and asked what the trouble was. This had the desired effect. The merchant left the telephone, forgetting his call, and turning savagely on the intruder, remarked, "No! damn it, I don't want any eggs!" The farmer smiled, and as he went out was heard to remark softly, "I never did see one o' them deef fellers but what I could make 'em hear if I only let myself out."

THOUSANDS OF FAIR WOMEN HERALD PRAISES FOR PERUNA.

Catarrhal Dyspepsia and Nervous Prostration Make Invalids of More Women Than All Other Diseases Combined.

Mrs. F. J. Lynch
Miss Anna Prescott
Miss Marie Coats

Peruna is the woman's friend everywhere. It is safe to say that no woman ever used Peruna for any catarrhal derangement but what it became indispensable in her household.

Letters From Women.

Every day we receive letters from women like the following. Women who have tried doctors and failed; women who have tried Peruna and were cured.

Miss Katie Klein, 6125 Bartmer avenue, St. Louis, Mo., writes:

"Peruna has done me more good for catarrh than the best doctors could. I had catarrh so bad, but after taking Peruna it is entirely gone, and I feel like a different person."

Miss Anna Prescott's Letter.

Miss Anna Prescott, in a letter from 216 South Seventh street, Minneapolis, Minn., writes:

"I am sincerely grateful for the relief I have found from the use of Peruna. I was completely used up last fall, my appetite had failed and I felt weak and tired all the time. My druggist advised me to try Peruna and the relief I experienced after taking one bottle was truly wonderful.

"I continued its use for five weeks, and am glad to say that my complete restoration to health was a happy surprise to myself as well as to my friends."—Anna Prescott.

A constant drain of nervous vitality depleting the whole nervous system causes the mucous membrane surfaces to suffer accordingly. This is the condition called systemic catarrh. It very nearly resembles, and there is really no practical difference, between this condition and the condition known as neurasthenia, or nervous prostration.

Peruna will be found to effect an immediate and lasting cure in all cases of systemic catarrh. It acts quickly and beneficially on the diseased mucous membranes, and with healthy mucous membranes the catarrh can no longer exist.

Peruna a True Friend to Women.

Mrs. F. J. Lynch, writes the following from 224 S. Division street, Grand Rapids, Mich:

The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, O.

Gentlemen—"I earnestly recommend Peruna to any suffering woman, as it cures quickly. Last year I had a most persistent cough which nothing seemed to cure. Two bottles of Peruna did more for me than all the doctors seemed to do. In a couple of weeks I found myself in excellent health, and have been enjoying it ever since. Hence I look on Peruna as a true friend to women."—Mrs. F. J. Lynch.

Peruna is equally efficacious in curing catarrh of the throat as in curing systemic catarrh or catarrh of the stomach. Catarrh is essentially the same wherever located. Peruna cures catarrh.

Peruna Makes You Feel Like a New Person.

Miss Mary Coats, a popular young woman of Appleton, Wis., and president of the Appleton Young Ladies' Club, also speaks in glowing terms of Peruna. A letter recently received from her by The Peruna Medicine Co., of Columbus, Ohio, reads as follows:

"I am glad to call the attention of my friends to Peruna. When that languid, tired feeling comes over you, and your food no longer tastes good, and small annoyances irritate you, Peruna will make you feel like another person inside of a week.

"I have now used it for three seasons, and find it very valuable and efficacious."—Miss Marie Coats.

Diseased nerves are traceable directly to poor digestion, and poor digestion is directly traceable to catarrh. With the slightest catarrh of the stomach no one can have good digestion.

Very few of the many women who have catarrh of the stomach suspect what their real trouble is. They know they belch after meals, have sour stomach, a sensation of weight or heaviness, a fullness, irregular appetite, drowsiness, gnawing, empty sensations, occasional pain—they all know this; but they do not know that their trouble is catarrh of the stomach. If they did they would take Peruna.

Peruna cures catarrh wherever located. As soon as Peruna removes catarrh from the stomach the digestion becomes good, appetite regular, nerves strong, and trouble vanishes. Peruna strengthens weak nerves, not by temporarily stimulating them, but by removing the cause of weak nerves—poor digestion. This is the only cure that lasts. Remove the cause: Nature will do the rest. Peruna removes the cause.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

To Prevent Burial While Alive.

What if in the tomb I awake?—Romeo and Juliet.

Alfred E. Giles, AB, LLB, who was educated at Brown university and practiced law in Boston for a quarter of a century, has made provision to guard against a premature burial without waiting for legislation by the general court of Massachusetts.

He resides at 265 Fairmount av., Hyde Park, Boston. The house stands on the top of a high hill, amid pleasant surroundings, the outlook of the fairest. A shed runs at right angles from the main building, and therein he has prepared a room, furnished it, and in this apartment, whenever the time may come, his spirit will disengage itself from the body.

Mr. Giles believes that real death works gradually; never instantaneously. The death of the body is the birth of the spirit. The death trance continues at times for days, even for weeks. The lungs then cease to breathe, the heart to act; the corpse-like face, glazed eyes, absence of sensation and intelligence, rigidness and coldness of the body—not one, nor even all of these appearances, are conclusive that the person is really dead. The only sign of death which is sure, both to manifest itself in due time, and to be absolutely conclusive and undeniable, is the development of a sufficient degree of putrefaction.

The retired lawyer, silvery-haired, bright-eyed, animated, sat in the parlor of his home and discussed the subject with enthusiasm, the writer being his auditor. He had a copy of the bill introduced into the present legislature. He read the section which deals with certain tests by physicians and objected. A moment later he was on his feet leading the way to the case which contained volume after volume of the literary works of Andrew Jackson Davis. Tenderly he laid open great books with such profound titles as "The Divine Revelations of Nature," and "Harmonial Man; or, Thoughts For the Age." He showed a steel engraving of a young woman on a bed, the physicians close by, watching, while the spirit of the maiden rose into the air from the body. Then, returned to the easy chair, the genial old gentleman conversed concerning his practice of law in Boston from about 1850 until 1876. His children having died, he saw no necessity for continued accumulation of money, and so he retired. He has lived for 30 years in Hyde Park.

Mr. Giles threw open a door and disclosed what appeared to be a closet with clothes hooks. But the back of this closet formed a second door. This, too, he opened and there in sight was the private mortuary. The old bare walls of the end of the shed have been plastered and are white and clean. The little rafters are painted blue. The room now is furnished like an ordinary sleeping apartment, with single bed, washstand, mirror, a picture or two, knicknacks and a chair. An exit at the rear leads directly out into the open air, where lattice work bars the intrusion of wandering men, women and children.

"See those windows," exclaimed the old gentleman, as he pointed to oblong apertures in the walls which were head high. "These are for the admission and emission of air. The casket would be brought in and placed upon the floor perhaps. The temperature of the room would be kept at a moderate degree. Here in this closet I keep some of my books and magazines."

"Do you see this place at the present time?"

The query was suggested by the neatly made-up bed.

"O, yes! Sometimes I have a friend as a guest who sleeps here when he tarries under my roof."

Mr. Giles does not have much faith in the schemes devised for the ringing of bells and the shooting of balls into the air, etc., which are meant to give notice that one apparently dead is yet alive. He does not approve even of certain tests by physicians placed in the bill before the legislature, because, in his opinion, the spirit is more sensitive to suffering when disentangling itself from the body than before that mysterious process begins.

He says that, without specially looking for any, he has found in the newspapers the details of some 60 or more cases wherein the patient was conscious of preparations being made for his funeral, and yet was unable to manifest the slightest sign of life.

WEST POINT ADMISSION.

The Method of Appointing Cadets Explained in Brief.

To secure admission to West Point you must pass through a grammar school course and be proficient in all the studies taught, such as arithmetic, reading and writing, including orthography, English grammar, geography, particularly of this country, and the history of the United States. The cadets are appointed by the President and members of congress and you can get there in no other way. The pay of a cadet is $540 per annum, and one ration per day, against which are charged his board, clothing, books, stationery and other items of expense. The course of instruction is as follows: First year, mathematics, English studies, fencing, bayonet exercise, and practical instruction in the school of the soldier, company and battalion and artillery. Second year mathematics, French, fencing, and tactics of infantry, artillery and cavalry. Third year, natural philosophy, chemistry, drawing, riding and tactics of infantry, artillery and cavalry. Fourth year, military and civil engineering, mineralogy and geology, chemistry, law and literature, practical military engineering, tactics of infantry, artillery and cavalry, ordnance and gunnery. The instruction is free, but the cadet, unless sooner released by the government, is required to serve for eight years after completing his course. The cadet must not be under seventeen nor more than twenty-one years of age on entering. Write to the representative in congress from your district and he will inform you of your chance in securing an appointment.—New York Press.

Powdering a Royal Baby.

When Edward VII was born, on November 9, in the second year of the Queen's marriage, every one at Buckingham Palace [illegible] wild with delight. Bells rang and guns boomed the glad tidings all over the kingdom. Douglas Jerrold, amidst the roaring of the ordnance, said: "Dear me, how they do powder these royal babies!"

Don't Drink a "Carrie Nation."

Last summer it was the Mamie Taylor. Now it's the Carrie Nation, the drinking of which causes a man to go home, break up the furniture and fearlessly "sass" his wife just to show that in this part of the country, at least, women don't run things entirely, says the New York Press. This is the recipe for a real hot Carrie Nation: First half fill your mixing glass with cracked ice, the same as for a cocktail. That is to make it cool. Then put in a dash of Angostura bitters to make it hot. Next add a dash of lemon juice to make it sour, and a half a spoonful of sugar to make it sweet. A small portion of sherry wine is next added to give the drink a flavor. Then the glass is filled almost to the top with good whisky to make the drinker high spirited and devilish. Lastly, the mixer adds maraschino. This is carefully mixed and cooled and then poured off into a bar glass or a regular cocktail glass. Some also add either a cherry or an olive to the drink. It is a fine mixture of a punch and a cocktail, and is quite smooth. But a few of them will suffice for the ordinary individual. Several are dangerous.

A New Aristocracy.

A branch of the Society of Mayflower Descendants has been organized in Wisconsin. The new offshoot has started out with twenty-eight members, twenty-four of whom are women. To be eligible one must be a lineal descendant of a passenger who landed from the Mayflower at Plymouth in December, 1620.

Idle wishes are apt to enfeeble the mind.

IS NOW A LAWYER.

Sullivan, the "Terrible Plebe" of West Point Is Prospering.

Colonel H. M. Cordill of New Orleans writes to the Press to say that John Patrick Sullivan, the "Terrible Plebe," an account of whose prowess at West Point recently appeared in this paper, is now a lawyer in the Crescent City. He is the same athletic Sullivan as in the days when he whipped all comers at West Point. He is now colonel of one of the "crack" militia corps of his city. When the war with Spain broke out Sullivan was one of the first to offer his services to the government. Sullivan has a lucrative law practice and is a rising citizen of New Orleans. He married the daughter of ex-Mayor John Fitzpatrick, one of the most prominent politicians in the state of Louisiana. Sullivan has been so successful since he left the military academy that there is every reason to believe that he would have made a good officer could he have graduated, and that he would have graduated had he not been so busy fighting that he could not properly attend to his studies. While at West Point Sullivan whipped thirty men of the yearling class and all the members of the first class who came against him. Sometimes he had as many as four fights in one day. Colonel Cordill says "Sullivan has lost none of his physique, and if called upon could put up a 'scrap' of no mean proportions."

Jay Gould's Timely Hint.

"I called upon Jay Gould once to ask him for a rule that would bring me success in my work," said Edward Boyer, principal of one of the finest grammar schools in New York City. "Every one who knew Jay Gould knew that he was a preoccupied man—that his thoughts were usually far away from the present scene. I was introduced to him by a friend, but I felt that he was scarcely conscious of my presence. We had planned to make some startling remark to attract his attention; and, as I did so, the great financier looked at me for a second as if he saw me for the first time. Then I put my important question.

"What is your business?" he asked, as quick as a flash.

"I am a schoolmaster," I replied.

"Then let the other people do the work."

The advice was to the point, and has proved invaluable.—Success.

NEARLY GONE.

Mrs. Julia A. Mallahan, of Owosso, Mich., Has a Very Narrow Escape—The Doctor Had Little Hope.

Owosso, Mich., March 25.—(Special.)—Elite Rebekah Lodge, No. 2, I. O. O. F., of this town, came very nearly losing their esteemed and capable secretary, Mrs. Julia A. Mallahan. Mrs. Mallahan caught a severe cold last winter, and like many others, failed to recognize the dangerous possibilities until it had settled in her kidneys and left her with very severe bearing down pains and almost constant backache. It almost carried her off. Mrs. Mallahan tells the story this way:

"I caught a cold last winter, which I neglected until it settled in my kidneys, causing severe bearing down pains and almost constant backache. My health had previously been so good that I paid little attention to these symptoms, until the disease had gone so far that my doctor entertained but a slight hope of my recovery.

"Fortunately, one of our Lodge Members mentioned Dodd's Kidney Pills. Her description of the cures they had effected sounded like a fairy tale, but I sent for a box, deciding to give them a trial. I soon found that she had but half told the story of what they would do. I bless the day that I first tried them, and have nothing but the highest praise for them."

Many very valuable lives have been saved by the timely use of Dodd's Kidney Pills, and not a few of these have been in Owosso and other neighboring Michigan towns. There seems to be no case of kidney trouble or backache that Dodd's Kidney Pills will not cure. They are 50c a box, six boxes for $2.50. Buy them from your local druggist if you can. If he cannot supply you, send to the Dodds Medicine Company, Buffalo, N. Y.

WOMEN MUST SLEEP.

Avoid Nervous Prostration.

If you are dangerously sick what is the first duty of your physician? He quiets the nervous system, he deadens the pain, and you sleep well.

Friends ask, "what is the cause?" and the answer comes in pitying tones, nervous prostration. It came upon you so quietly in the beginning, that you were not alarmed, and when sleep deserted you night after night until your eyes fairly burned in the darkness, then you tossed in nervous agony praying for sleep.

CONSTIPATED
OLD AGE
Means misery on the eve of life. Nine out of ten old people are constipated because the muscles of their intestines have become weak, worn out and flabby. Constipation is the curse of old age, causes bile and acid poisons to remain in the blood, making the skin yellow and wrinkled, the eyes bleary and causing the "bones to ache." Keep the bowels strong, healthy and regular and old age loses all its terrors and weaknesses. No reason why grandpa and grandma shouldn't have bright eyes, and clear, ruddy skin and feel lively and active, if they will only keep their bowels open and vigorous with CASCARETS CANDY CATHARTIC, the greatest bowel tonic ever heard of. Try them to-day—a 50c box—a whole month's treatment—and find that the tortures of constipated old age are

SHIRT WAIST POPULAR

It is no longer a question of to be or not to be. The shirt waist has settled that matter for itself long ago. It is to be! This season the shirt waist is pronouncedly in style. It is more than that—it is in vogue. Plain or trimmed, made of velvet or dimity, of satin foulard at $5 per yard or of printed stuff at 10 cents, it is the style. A time and place for shirt waists of all materials; and all in their own time and place.

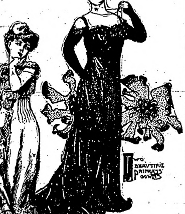
But it is not without a struggle that the bodice has yielded up its position of precedence to the shirt waist. And not without a final tug of war has the bolero corsage given place to its natty little sister. But bodice and corsage have at last given up, and the shirt waist reigns.

As all rulers must compromise, so has the shirt waist come to terms of concession. You will scarcely see a shirt waist this summer made upon the plain straight lines of earlier seasons. That sort of a waist has a place of its own, which is in one's room or on the piazza of a country hotel of a morning, or, perchance, it is the room or house waist for the woman who does not like a wrapper.

But the shirt waist, as it will be known and seen, will be much more elaborate. It will borrow certain lines from the bodice and will be neatly fitted in the back. It will partake of the corsage, in being somewhat elaborately trimmed, especially across the bust.

On being asked a good, serviceable color for a shirt waist which could be worn with dark skirts all summer, a salesman in one of the best dry goods establishments unhesitatingly pulled down a piece of silk muslin with tiny little polka-dots in self color. The shade was a pale heliotrope. "This," said he, "is serviceable. It should be made up with a yoke and undersleeves be made up with a yoke sole. The mousseline should be finely tucked."

Last year the total number of new books published in the United States reached 6,356, or 653 more than in any previous year.



ITALIAN CHILDREN.

Italy is the first country in the world where a systematic effort has been made to enlist the children in the work of protecting the wild birds from harm. Dr. Vitolanio Tonta recently pointed out to the leading Italian teachers that little children could easily be taught to love birds and that this lesson, once learned, would never be forgotten, whereas, if the lesson were not taught until the children were grown up little heed would be paid to it except by those persons who were naturally sympathetic and fond of dumb creatures. In Germany, France and England, he said, there are many persons who are interested in birds and who are doing what they can to prevent them from being killed for the sake of their plumage, but in order to do really effectual work a more thorough crusade is needed and it is only from the ranks of children that crusaders of the right type can be obtained.

The doctor's suggestion has attracted a good deal of attention and many think it would be well for teachers throughout the country to carry it into effect, which they could easily do by simply impressing on their pupils the fact that it is wrong to be cruel toward birds or any other innocent creatures.

HOME WORKSHOP.

Every woman wants her morning gown to be attractive as well as comfortable. The admirable model shown in the Workshop today is both stylish and simple.—The back fits smoothly across the shoulders and is arranged in shirrs at the waist line, below which the skirt falls in soft, full folds. The fronts are slightly loose, but are adjusted at the neck.

To cut this gown for a woman of medium size 11 yards of material 27 inches wide, 9½ yards 32 inches wide, or 7 yards 44 inches wide will be required.

WOMEN MANAGERS.

Buffalo Ladies Assisting in Conducting Pan-American Fair.

Among the Buffalo members of the Board of Women Managers of the Pan-American Exhibition in Buffalo are some of the most prominent women in the Queen City of the Lakes. The president of the board is Mrs. William Hamlin, who for years has been identified with philanthropic work. She is of the famous Hamlin family, whose Village Farm in East Aurora has been noted for years for its race horses. Another member of the board is Mrs. Charles Cary, wife of Dr. Cary, who, with his brothers, ranks at the top of the cross-country riders of the United States. Mrs. Cary designed the official poster of the exhibition, "The Spirit of Niagara." She has been president of the Buffalo Society of Artists. Mrs. David Gray also is a member of the board. Mrs. Gray is the widow of one of Buffalo's widest known editors, David Gray of the old Buffalo Courier. Probably the woman manager whose name is known furthest outside of Buffalo is Mrs. George W. Townsend, who has been president of the Women's Educational and Industrial Union since its organization, in 1884. She is now a member of the executive committee of the New York State Federation of Women's Clubs, having declined in 1896 the nomination for president of the State Federation. She was for two years a member of the executive committee of the General Federation, representing New York state. She is the director for New York state of the Association for the Advancement of Women, having acted in this capacity for eighteen years. Mrs. William A. Rogers, vice president of the board of women managers and a member of the executive committee and the committee on entertainments and ceremonies, is the daughter of Professor Benjamin Silliman of Yale and a great-granddaughter of Governor Trumbull of Connecticut and a great-great-granddaughter of Governor Jonathan Trumbull, familiarly called "Brother Jonathan," who was one of the war governors of the American revolution.

PLEASURE AND HAPPINESS.

Pleasure Is a Passing Sensation, Happiness Is a State.

Whether Americans take their pleasures too sadly or not, it is certain that they pursue them too seriously. With many people the desire to be amused becomes a craze, and instead of making pleasures but incidents of life they make them a business. Occasions of enjoyment should be accepted as they come, and not to be striven after, for the effort of the pursuit deprives pleasures of their zest. The spirit of enjoyment should flow in when the soul is open to receive it. Pleasures that are sought are like heavy food that nauseates. Pleasures are for moments of recreation and relaxation. If you have, you say in objection, too much time at your disposal already, that is your misfortune. You can find something to do and not hunt very far. One serious mistake in connection with pleasure hunting is made under the impression that pleasure and happiness are synonymous. As a popular lecturer and writer recently pointed out, pleasure is a passing sensation and happiness is a state. Happiness, like pleasure, cannot be pursued and caught, and, unlike pleasure, it cannot be lured and held by appointed occasions. Pleasure comes from without and depends upon others, happiness proceeds from within and is not dependent on time or circumstances. Pleasure comes through the senses; happiness is a condition of the soul. Occasions of pleasure are often beyond our reach, happiness is within the ken of every one. Happiness means harmony—a harmonious relation between man and God. If this seems like preaching, then happiness arises from doing or trying to do, your whole duty toward your fellow-men, and in acts of love and usefulness. The calm and serenity which flow from such endeavor, are proof that the effort is at least in harmony with the laws of your own nature. Pleasure for the most part takes self into account; happiness results from self-forgetfulness. Pleasures can not bring happiness, but happiness can lend keener enjoyment to pleasures.—Indianapolis News.

DEAD-LANGUAGE TYPEWRITING

A Young Man Pays His College Expenses in a Novel Way.

"One young man at our university," said a student in speaking of boys who were working their way through college, "is earning his living in a rather novel way. It seems that inventions have been perfected by which typewriting can be done in any language, and this boy, having a knowledge of Greek and Hebrew, supports himself by typewriting manuscripts for professors. He sent word to them that he was prepared to typewrite in Greek and Hebrew as well as German text, and the orders began to come in fast enough to fill his depleted pocketbook. The convenience of the thing as well as the young man's originality appealed to the professors, and when he last confided his financial status to me he had a comfortable surplus of several dollars a week. He is going to add Sanscrit to his list as he makes his way along, and he says he would attach Chinese if Mr. Wu would give him a job to report his honor's speeches for the Pekin press. Typewriting can now be done in any language desired. It opens a new field of usefulness for impecunious students, and saves busy professors with erratic handwritings a lot of trouble—to say nothing of saving the compositor's disposition and relieving the drain on his vocabulary. The attachments for writing different languages are inexpensive, he tells me, and one machine can be used with them all."—New York Tribune.

DEED OF A MANIAC

WOMAN KILLS HER SIX CHILDREN AND ATTEMPTS SUICIDE.

After Taking the Lives of the Children the Blood-Drenched Bodies Were Placed Upon Two Beds, Then the Mother Laid Down Beside Them and Cut Her Throat With a Razor—When Found She Was Much Weakened by Loss of Blood, but Will Probably Recover.

Cold Brook, Mass., March 23.—Mrs. Lizzie Naramore, while in a fit of insanity yesterday afternoon killed her six children at her home, half a mile from this village and then tried to take her own life. The children ranged from ten years to a babe of ten months old, and their lives were taken by the mother with an axe and a club. She laid the blood-drenched bodies on the beds, two on one bed and the other four on a bed in another room and then attempted to take her own life by cutting her throat with a razor. When discovered she was in the bed on which the bodies of four children were lying. Although she cut a deep gash in her throat and suffered the loss of much blood, it is believed she will recover.

Frank Naramore, the husband and father, left his home at the usual hour yesterday morning to go to work at a saw mill and at that time his wife did not attract his attention by acting strangely. It is supposed the crime was committed shortly after noon, the discovery being made by George Thrasher, an employe of a grocery store, who visited the Naramore house at about 2:45 for the purpose of delivering groceries that had previously been ordered by Mrs. Naramore. He was unable to get in the house by the door and he looked in a window and noticed while Mrs. Naramore was lying on a bed. He was surprised also at the absence of the children, whom he was accustomed to see playing about the house. He returned to the village and told of what he had seen. A party was made up and a hasty visit made to the Naramore house. An entrance was effected without delay and the mutilated bodies of the six children in two beds were found. Mrs. Naramore was alive but very weak. She was removed to the village hotel and at a late hour the attending physicians were confident that she would survive. Five of the children were killed by being struck on the back of the head by the back of an an axe, while the baby was killed with a club. Mrs. Naramore says she fully expected the gash in her throat would cause her death, and that when her husband returned at night he would find all of the bodies in the two beds. She appeared rational last evening, but displayed no signs of sorrow for the deed she had committed, although she is unable to give any reason for killing the children.

When Mr. Naramore reached the house he was prostrated with grief by the loss of his family.

KILLED HIS THREE CHILDREN.

Despondent Father Evidently Develops a Streak of Insanity.

Clinton, Me., March 23.—Jacob Dearborn Marr, a farmer living eight miles from here, killed his three children, Alice M., aged 13; Edwin, aged 9, and Helen, aged 7, with an axe shortly after the family had arisen from the dinner table. Mr. Marr had been despondent for some time, but his actions were not such as to make his wife believe that he had any serious trouble to brood over. The eldest daughter was washing dishes when her father went by her to the shed and got an axe. He came back into the kitchen and struck the girl a single blow on the head, killing her. Mrs. Marr saw this and ran screaming to the house of her husband's father, Samuel Marr. The husband apparently walked up stairs to where the younger children were playing and dealt each a single blow with the axe, killing them both. When Mr. Marr, Sr., came in the younger Marr was washing his hands at the sink. He was asked why he had done the deed, and said: "I don't know." Later in the day he was placed under arrest and taken to Waterville.

SCHOOLS CLOSED.

Funds Exhausted, the Commissioners Shut Off Teachers.

Cass Lake, Minn., March 23. — Cass Lake has been stripped of her schools. The several schoolrooms were closed about two weeks ago on account of insufficient funds. At the urgent request of citizens the teachers took immediate steps to hold private schools, using the regular schoolrooms for this purpose. This privilege, however, has been denied them. School Commissioners Carson and Hayward appeared yesterday and stripped the rooms of all books and furniture, which will be shipped and stored at Walker, the county seat. Offers to pay rental for the use of this furniture were turned down.

Mr. Greatsinger's Successor.

Duluth, March 23. — It is expected that C. P. Coffin, will be elected president of the Duluth & Iron Range and Minnesota Iron company to succeed J. L. Greatsinger. Mr. Coffin is now vice president and treasurer of both companies. If he should be selected the responsibility of operating would fall upon Supt. Owens more fully than in the past.

Montague Cleared.

Ottumwa, Iowa, March 23. — Frank Montague, who has been on trial in Indiana for the murder of his traveling companion, william Gilmore, was adjudged not guilty. A letter from the chief of police says the man died from delirium tremens.

Deal in Machinery.

Argyle, Minn., March 23. — W. F. Powell & Co. of Warren have purchased the warehouse and farm machinery of Olson & Holen, one of the largest warehouses in the county.

MILWAUKEE SCORCHED.

Big Piano Factory Completely Wiped Out.

Milwaukee, March 24. — Fire completely wiped out the big piano establishment of William Rohlfing & Sons, on Broadway between Wisconsin and Mason streets, and wrought farther destruction to adjoining property entailing a loss close onto $300,000; fully covered by insurance. The fire started in the Rholfing store, a four-story structure which was heavily stocked with pianos and sheet music. The building and contents were licked up in the space of half an hour and quickly spread to buildings on either side. William Rholfing & Sons' loss will reach $250,000. William E. Goodman, plumber, occupying the next building north, lost $15,000 on his stock, and Ferry & Class and Elmer Grey, architect firms, and William Marnitz, tailor, sustained losses aggregating $25,000. The flames then leaped to the sixth floor of the old insurance building to the south and completely destroyed that floor. The loss on the old insurance building will will reach fully $10,000. Price & Thomas, furniture store, sustained a small loss from water. Carroll & Carroll, lawyers; Benedict & Morsell, patent attorneys and Miss Gray, stenographer, occupying offices on the sixth floor of the old insurance building, sustained small losses. The cause of the fire is unknown.

LOWRY'S DAUGHTER FOUND DEAD.

Police Believe That She Committed Suicide.

New York, March 24.—A good-looking woman about thirty years old was found dead yesterday morning in a boarding house at 321 West 124th street. She was known at the boarding house as Mrs. L. B. Robertson, the wife of a Chicago tailor. Dr. Thomas J. Carney, who viewed the body at the Harlem morgue, said that he was almost positive the woman was Mrs. L. R. Robinson, the daughter of Thomas Lowry, the millionaire street railway man of St. Paul and Minneapolis. Dr. Carney said that Mr. Lowry's daughter was in the Glen Springs sanitarium at Watkin's Glen, New York, when he was on the house staff there about three years ago. In the room where the woman was found were two vials containing the remains of some dark liquid. The boardinghouse keeper said the bottles had contained bromide of soda and blackberry brandy. The police are inclined to believe that she committed suicide, and Coroner's Physician O'Hanlon will perform an autopsy on the body to-day. When Dr. Carney was examining the body he said he got a perceptible odor of laudanum from the woman's lips.

M'KINLEY IN TWIN CITIES.

President May Change the Itinerary of His Western Trip.

Washington, March 24. — President McKinley may change his itinerary any pay Chicago a visit during his return from the Pacific. Charles Truax, representing the National Business league, has called upon the president and extended an invitation to visit Chicago. The present plans of the presidential party are to pass overland as far as Duluth, whence the journey east will be continued by the great lakes to Buffalo. It is possible, however, that the president will change his route and come home via St. Paul and Minneapolis, stopping at Chicago and depart for Buffalo via the lakes from there. There is no intention to slight Chicago, and there is every prospect that the invitation will be accepted.

CHILDREN BURNED TO DEATH.

Penned in the Bedrooms of a Burning House.

Davenport, Iowa, March 24. — Two children were burned to death and six other members of his family are in a hospital as a result of the burning of the home of John Holland near Milan, Ill., about five miles from here yesterday morning. The house caught fire from a defective flue and the flames made rapid progress before they were discovered. Holland's father, wife and six children were penned in bedrooms. All jumped from second-story windows but Willie and Edward, aged five and three years. Their bodies are in the ashes of the home. The others were burned and bruised except Holland and a sixteen-year-old son, but will probably recover.

DESERTED HIS CHILDREN.

An Arab Peddler Fails to Return for the Children He Left in Sargent County.

Forman, N. D., March 24. — Five months ago a peddler left three children to be boarded at the residence of John Murach, in the northwestern part of Sargent county. The man has not since been heard of. The children are Arabs, aged 10, 8 and 4 years respectively, one being a girl.

FROM A HOT PULLEY.

Elevator Fire From a Peculiar Cause Does Damage.

Mayville, N. D., March 24. — The Northwestern elevator at Murray, six miles south of here, burned. The fire caught from a hot pulley chain in the top of the building. There was no protection and the loss is probably total, with a large amount of wheat.

Arrested for Burglary.

Fargo, N. D., March 24. — Ed Lee, who was arrested on the charge of burglarizing a store at Tower City, pleaded guilty. Sentence was postponed till some men whom Lee had formerly worked for could testify as to his character. Lee says he was in a Northern Pacific sand house when the real robbers came along and divided the booty with him to avoid exposure.

Company D Elects Officers.

Zumbrota, Minn., March 24. — Company D, Third regiment, M. N. G., elected officers last evening. The company is in a prosperous condition and arrangements are being made to erect an armory this summer.

Fergus Falls Grocery Fire.

Fergus Falls, Minn., March 24. — Wheeler Holmes' grocery store was totally destroyed by fire. Total loss about $2,000; insurance, $1,400. The fire apparently originated from a defective chimney.

BOERS SCATTERING

NO ORGANIZED BODIES FOR BRITISH TO FIGHT.

Small Parties Being Energetically Pursued by the British Troops—Evident, in Spite of Constant Rumors of the Presence of Commandos, That There Is No Coherence Among Boers in Orange River Colony—None of the Forces Capable of Withstanding a British Advance.

Cape Town, March 24. — The prime minister reports that Col. Scobell engaged Commandants Fouche and Malon near Blauuwkrantz last Wednesday. The enemy broke and scattered to the northeast. The British casualties were three killed and four wounded. The Boers lost four killed and twenty-eight captured. They also lost 148 horses, captured.

Commandant Fritzinger crossed the railway at Henning station yesterday, moving to the northeast. The British columns are in vigorous pursuit. The Boers in the eastern and midland districts are apparently making for the Orange River colony. They are being steadily pursued by the British. The small parties remaining in the South in the vicinity of Adelaide and Fort Beaufort are being energetically pursued by the British. The small parties remaining in the south in the vicinity of Adelaide and Fort Beaufort are being energetically dealt with. There are apparently no organised bodies of the invaders against which the troops can operate. A small commando appears to be still in the neighborhood of Kakamas, Namaqualand. Boers are watching the town of Pella. It is evident, in spite of constant rumors of the presence of commandoes, that there is no coherence among the Boers in the Orange River colony. None of the forces there is strong enough to withstand a considerable British advance.

SCANDINAVIAN SETTLERS.

Mayor Johnson Expects Twenty Thousand for North Dakota.

Liverpool, March 24. — Mayor J. A. Johnson of Fargo, N. D., who has been visiting Norway and Sweden endeavoring to increase immigration from these countries to North Dakota, sailed on the Tunisian for home. Mr. Johnson expressed eminent satisfaction with the result of his visit, and estimated that no less than 20,000 Scandinavian emigrants would cross the Atlantic during the coming season. This exodus, he added, was being stimulated by the dislike of the Scandinavian agriculturists for the system of military conscription about to be established in their native country. They desire to leave before the new law shall become operative, and great efforts will be made to induce the majority of the 20,000 to settle in North Dakota rather than in any other part of the United States.

EASY FOR CREEDON.

He Disposes of Billy Stift in Five Rounds.

Hot Springs, Ark., March 24.—Dan Creedon defeated Billy Stift easily in the fifth round before about 2,000 persons in the arena of the Whittington Park club. After the second round the only hope Stift's friends had of his winning was by a chance blow. Stift seemed in excellent condition and struck a vigorous blow, but he could not hit Creedon. The latter received only one blow that jarred him and this was a right swing on the jaw in the third round. Creedon played for the jaw when he found he could hit Stift, and paid but little attention to the body. He knocked Stift down in the third round and to his knees again in the fourth. Creedon's in-fighting was terrific and he always got the best of the clinches, landing with his left on the jaw at the breakaway. Stift was put out in the latter part of the fifth round with a short jab on the point of the chin.

Spaniards Fired Out.

Washington, March 24. — Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Taylor has ordered the deportation of fifteen Spaniards who landed in New York March 4, en route to Boise City, Idaho, where they were to engage in sheep herding. They were refused admission on the ground that they came in violation of the alien contract labor law.

Chaffee to Take Command.

Washington, March 24.—It has been definitely decided that Gen. MacArthur will be relieved by Gen. Chaffee as governor general of the Philippines July 1, and will return to the United States. In this the president is only carrying out his policy of relieving officers after a couple of years' service in the Orient.

Library Building for St. Olaf.

Northfield, Minn., March 24.—President Kildahl of St. Olaf college has received news which causes much rejoicing among the students. Halle Steensland of Madison, Wis., has intimated his intention of giving the college a library building. The building will probably be erected this summer or next.

Royal Engagement.

Weimar, March 24.—It is stated on reliable authority that the Grand Duke Wilhelm Ernest of Saxe-Weimar will, on the expiration of the period of mourning for Queen Victoria, become engaged to the youngest daughter of the late Duke Alfred of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha.

Convicted of Murder.

Harrisburg, Pa., March 24.—Watson Keiper and Henry Rowe who shot and killed Cashier Charles W. Ryan in an attempt to rob the National Bank of Halifax, have been convicted of murder in the first degree.

Ice Bridge Moving.

Niagara Falls, N. Y., March 24.—The Niagara ice bridge, which, in the winter, is one of the scenic wonders of the river, has moved down stream. It remained longer this season that for several years.

FRAUDS AT MANILA

OFFICERS OF THE COMMISSARY DEPARTMENT ARRESTED.

Sensational Developments Which Overshadows Interest in the Capture and Fate of Aguinaldo—How Widely the Frauds Have Extended Is Not Known, but It Is Believed They Are Far-Reaching—New Scandals Are Developed Daily—Investigation Being Made.

Manila, April 2.—Interest in the capture and fate of Aguinaldo is well nigh overshadowed in Manila by sensational developments, present and prospective, of frauds in the commissary department. How widely these extend has not yet been ascertained, but enough is already known to justify the belief that they are far reaching. Capt. Fred J. Barrows, of the Thirtieth volunteer infantry, quartermaster of the department of Southern Luzon, together with seven commissary sergeants, several civilian clerks, a prominent government contractor, the assistant manager of the Hotel Orient, the proprietors of three of the largest bakeries in Manila, a number of storekeepers and other persons have been arrested. The investigation has scarcely begun, but thousands of sacks of flour, a quantity of bacon and wagon loads of other goods, all bearing government marks, have been found in the possession of unauthorized persons.

It is alleged that the contractor in question, who has been doing a business approximating $100,000 per month, has spent huge sums in entertaining officers. A prominent commissary officer is accused of leading a scandalously immoral life. It is asserted that large quantities of stores have been lost or stolen in transit and also that there is a shortage in the commissary depot.

New scandals are developed daily. Illicit transactions have been traced back to June, 1900, and it is possible that there are others of earlier date. The exorbitant tariff on provisions makes the surreptitious sale of supplies immensely profitable. It is understood that other United States officers may be arrested. Lieut. Philip K. Sweet, of the Forty-sixth volunteer infantry, is prosecuting the investigation under the direction of Col. Wilder, chief of police.

-o-

Capt. Barrows, mentioned in the above dispatch, is from Minneapolis, where he is well known and prominently connected. His father was state oil inspector under Gov. Clough. Capt. Barrows was appointed a lieutenant in the Fifteenth Minnesota when that regiment was organized. He was promoted a captain on the death of Col. Shandrew. When the Fifteenth was mustered out he was given a commission as captain, in the Thirtieth United States volunteers.

Aguinaldo Is Pleased.

Aguinaldo continues to express himself as pleased with and impressed by the courteous treatment accorded him by Gen. MacArthur. "I am a prisoner," said he, "but I am treated like a guest."

GIVES HIS LIFE FOR HIS MEN.

Commander of the Gunboat Petrel Dies Like a Hero.

Cavite, April 2.—At 7 o'clock yesterday morning a fire was discovered in the sail room of the United States gunboat Petrel, Lieut. Commander Jesse Mims Roper, commanding. The heat was intense, the smoke suffocating, and the flames difficult to extinguish. Lieut. Commander Roper was the first to descend into the hold, but he was forced to return to the deck. Others then went down. Seaman Patrick Toner was prostrated and was about to perish when Lieut. Commander Roper endeavored to rescue him and was suffocated in the attempt. Lieut. Josiah Stutts McKean and Cadet Lewis suffered severely in bringing the body of Lieut. Commander Roper to the deck. Twenty-two of the crew were prostrated, Toner, Evans, Flaherty, Larsen, Kesler, Kahey, Burton, Smith, Sullivan and Forsbern seriously, but all will recover. The contents of the sail room were destroyed but the damage to the gunboat was slight. The origin of the fire has not been ascertained. Possibly it was a case of spontaneous combustion. The death of Lieut. Commander Roper is greatly deplored. His body will be sent to the United States April 5 by the Buffalo.

BLOWN OVER A PRECIPICE.

Woman Falls Three Hundred Feet and Is Killed.

Cold Springs, N. Y., April 2. — Mrs. Daniel Patterson, accompanied by her husband and a party of friends yesterday visited "Table Rock," a plateau 800 feet above tidewater on Bull Hill mountain at this place. When they arrived there the wind was blowing at the rate of forty miles an hour. Mrs. Patterson was lifted from her feet and carried over the precipice and fell a distance of 300 feet before she struck among the rocks. When her husband reached her she was unconscious and just breathing her last. She died within a few moments.

MINE DISASTER.

Many Men Thought to Have Been Killed in New Mexico.

Albuquerque, N. Mex., April 2.—An explosion occurred Friday night in the Weaver mine at Gallup, operated by the Colorado Fuel and Iron company. Three are known to have been killed outright, and many others who were cut off in the mine are believed to have died from suffocation.

PLACE FOR NORTHROP.

University President on International Congress of American States.

Washington, April 2.—The president has appointed a commission to attend the international congress of American states to be held in the City of Mexico some time this year. The bureau of American republics arranged for such a congress some months ago, with a view to drawing closer together the republics of North and South America, and congress made an appropriation in the sundry civil bill to provide for the necessary expenses of delegates representing this government. The president has appointed as delegates Prof. Cyrus Northrop, president of Minnesota university; Henry G. Davis of West Virginia, William I. Buchanan of Iowa, Charles M. Pepper of the District of Columbia and Volney W. Foster of Illinois.

The president has also completed the St. Louis fair commission. As the commission stands it is composed of Ex-Senators Thomas H. Carter of Montana, John M. Thurston of Nebraska, William Lindsay of Kentucky and George W. McBride of Oregon; ex-Representatives John Allen of Mississippi and M. H. Glynn of New York, John F. Miller of Indiana, F. A. Bates of Connecticut and E. D. Scott of Arkansas.

NATIONISM IN IOWA.

Three Joints in Centerville Are Smashed.

Centerville, Iowa, April 1. — Eight Centerville women, headed by a man, raided three joints, smashing two of them and breaking the plate glass windows and fixtures. The proprietor of the third joint destroyed his own liquors. The women warned the dealers to cease selling liquors, claiming saloons here have not complied with the mulct law.

From Poverty to Affluence.

Rapid City, S. D., April 2.—There is one happy man in this city at least. James A. Carew has been a miner and prospector for a number of years in the Hornblende mining district. Of late years he has been a sufferer from a bad case of rheumatism. He was laid up in his little cabin for days at a time, with nobody around to help him. He had a fine property that showed values in gold, but as long as he could not sell he was worse than a pauper. His case became so bad that he was brought to the poorhouse in this city, where he had been some time. His mine was sold a few days since, and he is now a rich man. He has left the poor farm and is now living in ease and comfort. He is well known all over the Black Hills.

Stepmother Wife Deserted.

Sioux City, Iowa, April 2.—The authorities here are endeavoring to locate Gus Becker, who married his stepmother at Sioux Falls, S. D., several weeks ago. She came here to meet him and it is reported that he passed through the city en route to Cleveland, Ohio, whence he came to wed her. She possessed some money and after he had married her he told her he wanted to go into the mattressmaking business. She let him have money to come to Sioux City to buy materials and she was to meet him here the following day and go back with him to Sioux Falls.

Sued for Damages.

Sioux Falls, S. D., April 2.—William A. Snyder of this city has instituted a suit for $3,300 damages against Wesley J. Snell, a local furniture dealer, on the charge of alienating the affections of his wife. The case will be tried at the next term of the circuit court. Snell has been in business here several years. The plaintiff and his wife have three children. Snell claims the suit was commenced for blackmailing purposes.

Medals Awarded Stock Judges.

Fargo, N. D., April 2.—In the stock-judging contest at the agricultural college W. H. Workman of Grandin won the gold medal offered by the board of trustees for first prize and Bruce Clyde of Hamilton won second and the gold medal offered by Prof. Shepperd, ranking only one point below Mr. Workman in a scale of 600. The content was close for a large class, as the first six men were within ten points of 600.

Early Settlers Going Fast.

Black River Falls, Wis., April 2. — The interment of Miles German at Irving cemetery takes away one of the very early settlers of this county who had reached his eighty-fifth year. The fatality list among very old people is the largest for the past six months of any six months since the organization of the county.

Iowa Town Suffers From Smallpox.

Grinnell, Iowa, April 2.—Lake City, Iowa, is suffering from the smallpox scourge in its most violent form. One death occurred and there are several more serious cases. All schools are closed and all gatherings at churches and lodges are forbidden. There are twenty-nine cases in town and conditions are very serious.

Boys Missing.

Litchfield, Minn., April 2. — Eugene McNeal and Frank Flynn, aged about thirteen years, are missing since Friday, and it is supposed they have hidden themselves in an emigrant car that was loaded and shipped from here for Kalispel, Mont. Friends say it is a case of reading trashy literature.

Stolen Money Found.

Manila, Iowa, April 2.—The first trace of the stolen express booty taken at this point has been found in a barn on a farm about one a half miles south from town. The sack contained $19 in silver. It was known to have had $450 in it. It was identified as one of the sacks stolen.

FUNSTON'S REWARD

BECOMES A BRIGADIER GENERAL IN THE REGULAR ARMY.

President McKinley Promptly Rewards the Kansas Soldier for His Daring Exploit in Capturing Aguinaldo—Gen. Wheaton Is Promoted to Be a Major General—Many Staff Appointments for Volunteer Officers—Gen. Funston Is Likely to Become Lieutenant General.

Washington, April 2.—The following important army appointments were announced at the White House Saturday:

To be major general United States army, Brig. Gen. Lloyd Wheaton, vice Miles, promoted to lieutenant general. To be brigadier generals in the regular army, Col. Jacob H. Smith, Seventeenth United States volunteers, vice Daggett, retired; Brig. Gen. Funston, United States volunteers, vice Wheaton, promoted.

The announcement of the appointments was made after a conference between the president, Secretary Root and Adjt. Gen. Corbin, and at the same time the long expected list of appointments of majors and captains in the paymaster's, quartermaster's and commissary departments and of the chaplains was made known. The list included two majors and twenty-five captains in the paymaster's department; twenty-one captains in the commissary department; thirty-seven captains in the quartermaster's department, and seventeen chaplains.

All of these appointees are in the regular army under the recent act of congress enlarging and reorganizing the army, and without exception the staff appointees are from volunteer officers. The chief interest, however, centered in the three high appointments of a major general and two brigadier generals, and more particularly in the selection of Gen. Funston after his gallant exploit in capturing Aguinaldo.

One interesting feature connected with the appointment of Gen. Funston to the regular army with the rank of brigadier general is that he is likely to become the lieutenant general commanding the army. The recent appointment of officers to be brigadier generals showed that Gen. Leonard Wood would succeed to the position of senior major general of the army in about ten years and thus become eligible for appointment as lieutenant general commanding the army.

Should he be appointed the head of the army he would continue in that position over ten years, during which time Gen. J. Franklin Bell and Gen. Jacob Smith, the officers next preceding Gen. Funston, would retire. Their retirement would make him the senior major general commanding the army upon Gen. Wood's retirement. His selection then to be the lieutenant general of the army would be probable.

BRUTAL WORK OF BURGLARS.

Aged Woman Is in a Critical Condition.

Pittsburg, April 2.—Mrs. Ann Ward, aged sixty years, is lying in a critical condition from the effects of brutal treatment by three masked burglars at her home early yesterday. Mrs. Ward and her daughter were awakened by the presence of the burglars at their bedside, each woman finding a revolver pointed directly at her head. Mrs. Ward undertook to resist the burglars, and while the daughter was held in subjection by one of the men another beat the mother into unconsciousness with a short club, literally crushing her skull. The husband and son of Mrs. Ward were sleeping on the third floor, having in their possession about $1,200, the booty the burglars evidently were after. Being awakened by the noise, Ward and his son hastened to the floor below, but the burglars had made good their escape, leaving no clue as to their identity.

DUE TO FEAR.

Coal-Black Negro in South Carolina Turns Brown.

Charleston, S. C., April 2.—The terror of being confined in jail with the added fear of a term in a federal penitentiary has caused a remarkable change in the color of Solomon P. Brown, a negro who was arrested for alleged pension frauds. Brown was a coal-black negro when he was sent to jail. When he was released on bond the experience was such that his color had changed to a dark brown and he is almost able to enter the mulatto class. The change of color is attributed to fear. Brown has since turned state's evidence, and the court this week will probably suspend sentence, in which event it is believed the negro will regain his former shade. The case is puzzling to the authorities.

A GHASTLY SUICIDE.

Woman Saturates Her Clothes With Oil and Then Applies a Match.

Canostola, N. Y., April 2.—Saturday night William Welch and his wife Mary quarrelled. Yesterday noon the woman, brooding over her trouble, saturated her clothes with coal oil, and, going out of the house to avoid setting fire to it, applied a match to her dress. People coming from church discovered her burned almost beyond recognition, but still conscious. They carried her to the house, but physicians could do nothing. Neighbors then gathered at the bedside and sung hymns until Mrs. Welch died. Although the flesh was burned from her face she feebly joined in the singing until she lost consciousness.

MINNESOTA LEGISLATURE.

Umland Divorce Bill Is Recommended to Pass.

St. Paul, April 1. — After a spirited and lively debate the Umland divorce bill was recommended to pass. The measure provides that no marriage of either party shall occur until six months after divorce.

After a scrimmage in the senate Saturday the two bills from Senator Young, providing for the compromise of the Little Falls & Dakota land grant litigation, were recommended to pass.

The farriers of the state scored a victory in the senate and secured a recommendation for passage of their bill, introduced by Senator Benedict, providing for liens on horses and other animals for the cost of shoeing.

In the House.

The Peterson bill making telegraph companies peculiarly liable for damages incidental to mental anguish caused by delay in the delivery of messages was, after a debate of an hour, taken from the table and placed on the house calendar.

The Sikorski bill permitting the taking of fish for food purposes with nets from the Mississippi river below St. Anthony Falls was passed by the house. The bill provides that the mesh of the nets used shall not be smaller than two and one-half inches.

FIVE DAYS FOR A KISS.

Sioux City Man Kissed His Sweetheart on the Street.

Sioux City, Iowa, April 2. — Because he kissed his sweetheart on the street Joseph Frederick was arrested and sentenced to five days in the county jail. He walked up to Miss Anna Schimmelfenig, put his arms around her neck and kissed her. She was indignant and swore out a warrant for his arrest. He explained he had been out of the city and was overjoyed when he met her. She claimed he was not her lover, although he had been before they had a disagreement prior to his departure from the city. The court thought the assault unjustified.

SQUATTERS GET MUSSY.

North Dakota United States Marshal Notified of Trouble at Buford.

Fargo, N. D., April 2. — Postmaster Jones of Fort Buford, in the extreme northwestern part of this state, wires United States Marshal Haggart of serious troubles among settlers south of there. It is claimed attacking parties have destroyed property and fired at peaceful settlers. Washington authorities have been notified. The trouble is supposed to be on the Buford reservation among squatters. The land is to be opened for settlement in July.

DIED AT HIS WIFE'S GRAVE.

Grief Causes a Saloonkeeper to Commit Suicide.

Kansas City, April 2. — The body of Florain Irner, a saloonkeeper aged forty years, was found hanging on a tree over his wife's grave in Elmwood cemetery in this city yesterday. The man committed suicide from grief over his wife's death, which occurred less than a year ago. The limb upon which he hung himself was so low that his feet touched the ground when his body was fully extended. He held his feet up and died with his knees bent. Persons who first saw him thought he was in an attitude of prayer on his wife's grave, and not wishing to disturb him did not venture close enough to discover the rope, but later some of the cemetery attendants found the body. Irner had tried to kill himself twice before.

PASSING OF ROLAND REED.

Famous Comedian Succumbs to Cancer of the Stomach.

New York, April 2.—Roland Reed the actor, died at the residence of his mother-in-law, Mrs. Rush. At his bedside there were his daughter, Miss Florence Reed and Mrs. Rush. His wife was in Philadelphia, but on receipt of a telegraph message she started at once for this city. The actor's death was caused by cancer of the stomach, from which he has been suffering for some time, and for the amelioration of which he had submitted to several operations.

HUGE COAL SHIPMENTS.

Thirty Million Bushels Leave Pittsburg on Present Rise.

Pittsburg, April 2.—The largest shipment of coal ever made by the coal combine on a single rise was completed Saturday when 2,000,000 bushels was started South. This shipment brought the total up to more than 30,000,000. With the harbor clear of coal the remaining tow boats will be used for shipment of large numbers of steel rails to be taken to New Orleans.

Coates Under Investigation.

Washington, April 2.—The postoffice department is investigating an advertisement published in Sioux Falls, S. D., offering to raffle the farm of Clarke L. Coates of Sioux Falls. If the advertised offer is found to have been sanctioned by Coates the remedy of the government will be the issuance of a lottery order forbidding his use of the mails. Pending the investigation the postmaster at Sioux Falls has been ordered to refuse to receive any mail deposited by Coates relating to the advertised offer.

Boy Fatally Shot.

Mitchell, S. D., April 2. — Johnny Gregory, the sixteen-year-old son of W. H. Gregory, division roadmaster of the Milwaukee road, was accidentally shot in Fox & Walt's bowling alley and shooting gallery. The rifle ball entered his left ear and went upward, but could not be located. The boy was standing out of range of the gun, when it went off while the attendant was loading it. The boy is alive but can not recover.

BOERS DRIVEN OFF

ATTEMPT TO LOOT A TRAIN RESULTS DISASTROUSLY.

Two Hundred Men Wreck a Train by Means of a Mine, but Lose Six Men When They Advance to Secure Loot — British Bring in Fifteen Hundred Horses Captured From the Boers—Gen. French Inflicts Serious Losses on Boers and Takes Fifty Prisoners.

London, April 2.—A dispatch to the war office from Gen. Kitchener, dated Pretoria, March 30, says that a train was derailed by a mine near Pan. Two hundred Boers who were advancing to loot the train were driven off with a loss of six killed. The British sustained no losses. A train of empty cars was wrecked last night at Olifantsfontein. Nobody was hurt. Fifteen hundred horses and other stock from the Orange River colony have been brought in recently. The troops making the capture killed seven Boers, wounded nine and captured seventy. Gen. French reports from Vryheid that between March 16 and March 27 his command has killed or wounded 17 Boers and taken 51 prisoners; 93 burghers surrendered. The British also captured 100 rifles, 5,050 rounds of ammunition, 475 horses and much other stock.

ROYAL SEPARATION.

Church Row May Cause Portugal's King and Queen to Part.

London, April 2.—When the King of Portugal came to London in connection with the queen's funeral he received a deputation of Protestants, to whom he made a speech, promising a continuance of the enlightened policy of religious toleration in his dominions. The speech was manly and courageous and widely reported. It was commented upon in Portugal, and while it elicited the enthusiastic approval of the Liberals, it served to accentuate the feud between the king and the religious orders, which was originally caused by the alleged interference of the Jesuits in the secular affairs of the government of that country. The first unhappy result of the friction was trouble in the royal household itself, the queen taking sides with the church. According to advices just received from Lisbon this breach has widened, and there is said to be a probability of a separation of the royal couple.

WAR IN SOUTH AFRICA.

British Troops Clearing the Eastern Transvaal Country.

London, April 2.—A special dispatch from Standerton says the Imperial Light Horse have captured Commandant Prinsloo and a convoy of twenty-eight wagons. Commandant Englebrecht, the dispatch says, has surrendered. The British are sweeping the eastern Transvaal clear of everything useful to the Boers. All standing crops have been destroyed, but the women and children are being cared for. Five hundred of them have been conveyed to Utrecht, where their wants are well attended to.

Pretoria, April 1. — The Boers derailed and plundered a freight train near Johannesburg last night.

REVOLUTION IS DYING OUT.

The Crisis in Russia Is Apparently Ended.

Vienna, April 2.—The Lemberg Journal, in a description of the riots in St. Petersburg on Sunday last, says that 800 workmen marched along the Nevski Prospekt toward the winter palace, singing revolutionary songs. The Cossacks attacked them, and, aided by the infantry, dispersed them after a struggle, in which several on both sides were killed. Proclamations have been displayed calling the people to arms, but there has been no response.

St. Petersburg, April 1.—Peter Karpovitch, the student who recently shot and killed M. Bogolyepoff, minister of public instruction, has been sentenced to twenty years at hard labor.

FIREMEN HURT AT KANSAS CITY.

Packing Company's Main Building Burns—Chief Hale and Four Men Injured.

Kansas City, April 2.—A fire in which $200,000 worth of property was destroyed and five firemen, including Chief Hale, were injured, occurred at the Jacob Dodd Packing company's plant in Eighth street, near the Kansas line. The cause of the fire is not known. It was first discovered in the box factory, which is directly under the butterine department, after it had gained considerable headway. The night watchman had just gone on duty and the other employes had gone home. All of the available firemen in the city were on the scene, but it was evident it would be impossible to save the main building. The fire burned fiercely for three hours. The firemen prevented it from spreading to the other buildings, but the main building was a total wreck.

STRIKE IN INDIANA.

Coal Miners in Brazil District to Quit Work.

Brazil, Ind., April 2.—The conference of block coal operators and miners, which has been in session here two days endeavoring to reach an agreement, has adjourned sine die and work has been ordered suspended in all the mines of the county, making thousands of workmen idle. Both sides declare they will not yield. The miners will call upon President Mitchell to aid in settling the trouble.

THIEF RIVER FALLS NEWS

By John W. Eastman.

THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN

Athletic sports are taking strong hold in the European universities. The football team or "equipo" of Louvain university has recently defeated the teams of Liege and of Brussels.

Japan has greatly increased her cavalry in the last few years, and still more recently added nearly forty field batteries to her artillery, and as the country itself produces no horses suitable for this purpose, the necessity for importing them is urgent.

The removal of a man's veins would seem an impossible operation. A New Orleans man's subveinous veins from his groin down stood out like whipcords, were immensely swollen, and gave him intense pain. An operation was finally resorted to, and the veins were all successfully removed, leaving only the arteries.

The other day a man made a tour of the diamond houses in Maiden Lane, New York, with a pair of diamond earrings, for which he had paid twenty years ago $700. In all but two places the stones were pronounced faultless, but cut in an old fashioned style, and the highest offer he received anywhere for them was $150.

To determine whether the shore line has not been shrinking a corps of engineers belonging to the United States coast and geodetic survey department has been at work on the Pacific coast. It is believed that the results of their labors will show the Pacific to have sunk several inches within the century and to be going down now much more rapidly than the Atlantic.

The recent census taken throughout Switzerland has shown a remarkable increase in the number of inhabitants. Perhaps the most extraordinary growth is in the Canton of Zurich, whose population in 1888 numbered 337,183, but now it is 428,030, an increase of 90,847 inhabitants in twelve years. This is considered a world's record. Geneva has increased by 21,412 persons during the same period.

Paris is about to lose one of its great historical landmarks. The old Temple market is doomed to demolition. Its ancient stronghold and palace, once the home of knights and royalty, afterward a state prison, monastery and market, and associated with the most momentous events of the history of France and its capital, went through all the stages of power and pomp, decline and fall, and now ends as a resort of rag pickers and beggars, and a rendezvous for thieves and junk dealers.

The superintendent of the New Haven schools has recently recommended that all his teachers wear short skirts the year around, on account of the hygienic effect upon the scholars. The authorities of El Paso, Texas, have gone a step further, and prohibited the admission of teachers to their public schools in skirts that touch the floor. An excellent remark in the same direction is contained in a recent letter by the Princess Reuss in a London newspaper: "I think it the most absurd and disgusting performance to perform the duties of crossing sweeper and janitor minus the salary."

The foreign ministers at Pekin have prepared a list of high Chinese officials whose execution they demand as a punishment for their complicity in the Boxer outrages and the attack on the legations. Of the expediency of this demand, in certain instances, there may be some doubt; but of its substantial justice, assuming that the officials did what they are reputed to have done, there can be no question. While the attempt is being made to distribute responsibility and to exact penalty for these crimes, neither the foreign ministers at Pekin nor the powers which they represent can afford to be indifferent to certain other crimes, still more inexcusable and atrocious.

A church choir, complete in all its parts and composed exclusively of Chinese vocalists, accompanied on the organ by a young Chinese matron, is one of the unique practical sights and results of Christian effort in San Francisco. Of course it has required years to accomplish this result, but in those years the zeal and hope of the Rev. J. M. Condit and his missionary wife have known neither flickering nor wavering. As a result, Dr. Condit presides Sunday after Sunday at the services in the Presbyterian Chinese church on Stockton street; a Chinese congregation composed of men, women, children and infants in arms attends for worship, and now sufficient advance has been made to have the music of the service rendered by a double quartette of male and female voices.

England has ordered five Holland submarine boats—her first experiment in submarine navigation. France has ordered twenty-three new boats to add to her already large submarine fleet, and has begun experiments to test the effect of a plunging fire on objects under water. We have eight submarine boats built or under construction, but we are evidently going to have no monopoly of the new method of warfare. It might have been worth our while to buy up the Holland patent and prevent foreign nations from supplying their fleets with our inventions.

FATE OF AGUINALDO

FILIPINO CHIEFTAIN LIKELY TO BE DEPORTED.

Cabinet Discusses the Question of the Disposition of Aguinaldo—Belief Expressed That It Would Be Better to Send Him Away—Nothing Definite Yet Decided—Gen. Funston Will Probably Be Rewarded With a Commission as Brigadier General in the Regular Army.

Washington, March 31.—The disposition of Aguinaldo and the reward for Gen. Funston were discussed by the cabinet yesterday, and while nothing definite was decided in either case, it is thought probable that Aguinaldo will be deported and that Gen. Funston will be made a brigadier general in the regular army.

The view of the majority of the cabinet was that the time was not ripe to decide what course should be pursued in the disposition of Aguinaldo. It is felt that some little time should elapse to permit an opportunity to deliberate carefully over what course would be the wisest; whether he can be of any service to the United States government by remaining in Manila and exerting his influence in the direction of peace; whether it to permit him to remain so close to the field of insurrectionary activity, or whether, even, it would be best to send him among the other insurgent prisoners on the Island of Guam. There is a disposition to deal leniently with him, but there are various questions that will have to be considered in the case, as, for instance, whether he personally instigated assassinations of Americans, and similar offenses, which some of the members of the cabinet feel call for some penalty. It cannot be too emphatically stated that the administration will avoid giving the captured leader any basis for posing as a martyr.

The president and all the members of the cabinet are in favor of the most liberal and substantial recognition of the services of Gen. Funston. There is a disposition to make him a brigadier general in the regular army, but it is thought that full reports should be awaited

Before Action Is Taken.

The matter probably will be allowed to rest where it is for the present. Gen. Funston is holding a volunteer commission as brigadier general, which will not expire until June 30 of this year; therefore, so far as honor and emoluments are concerned his standing will not be prejudiced by the delay.

The president and his cabinet do not underestimate the importance of the capture of Aguinaldo, but they have been led to believe that the insurrection has practically collapsed and that there remain now only a few bands of outlaws who are on the warpath more for booty than for principle. They are looking forward to the work of the Taft commission as of more importance than that of the army.

Some More Surrenders.

Another important dispatch was received at the war department yesterday from Gen. MacArthur at Manila. It did not refer to Aguinaldo or Funston, but in the opinion of the war department officials it went far to support the prediction made by Gen. MacArthur in Thursday's dispatch relating to those two leaders, that the end of the rebellion is near at hand. This dispatch chronicles the surrender of a considerable additional number of rebels and military arms and the important feature of it is that the surrender marks the complete stamping out of the insurgents in the island of Mindanao, which is, next to Luzon, the largest island in the Philippine group.

Gen. Geronimo Surrenders.

Manila, March 31. — The capture of Aguinaldo by Gen. Funston has already had its effect. Gen. Geronimo, the insurgent leader in the province of Morong, Luzon, has surrendered with six officers, forty-six men and fifty rifles, to Col. J. Milton Thompson of the Forty-second regiment at San Mateo. As the news of Aguinaldo's capture spreads through the archipelago the insurgents are becoming disheartened and there is a marked increase in the number of individual surrenders.

Downed by the Turk.

Boston, March 31. — Nouraloub, the Turk, proved more than a match for the two heavy-weight wrestlers, Lundin, the Swedish champion, and John Smith of Brooklyn, last night. The big fellow handled both his opponents with comparative ease. The first bout was with Smith, Graeco-Roman style. Time, 4:29. The second bout, with Lundin, was catch-as-catch-can. Time, 5:38.

Injured in a Runaway.

Indianapolis, Ind., March 31.—A maddened runaway horse attached to a wagon created a panic on Washington street yesterday afternoon during the most congested business hour. Mrs. H. C. Patterson of Irvington, wife of a minister, and the infant child of Mrs. O. F. Shaw in a baby carriage pushed by Mrs. Patterson, were struck and it is feared that both will die.

Prize Farm Sold.

Ida Grove, Iowa, March 31.—William Bender has disposed of his ranch located near this city. The purchaser was Robert Lipton, a local banker and capitalist. The purchase price was $25,000. Possession will not be given for a year. It is one of the finest farms in the state.

Girl Orator.

Madison, Wis., March 31.—Miss Louise Loeb of Appleton won the final oratorical contest at the university. There were six contestants. The subject was "The Triumph of Altruism." Miss Loeb also won the junior contest two weeks ago.

Lord Salisbury Ill.

London, March 31.—Lord Salisbury, according to the Daily Express, is suffering from a kidney affection which is likely to incapacitate him for some time.

DRUGGED AND ROBBED.

Then John Crosby Was Placed on a Train at Minneapolis.

Hastings, Minn., March 31.—A stranger named John Crosby arrived here last evening, and after reaching the Gibbins hotel became violently ill, requiring the attendance of two physicians to save his life. He claimed that he had been in the pineries working for the Rutledge Lumber company, and upon arriving in Minneapolis was inveigled into a saloon, drugged and robbed of $78. Afterward, it appears, while in an irresponsible condition, he was placed on a train and sent here without any knowledge of his whereabouts.

TO TEST THE LAW.

Appeal Taken in Attempt to Tax Indian Improvements.

Sioux Falls, S. D., March 31.—W. G. Porter, assistant United States attorney for South Dakota, has filed an appeal in the case of the United States vs. James A. Rickert, county treasurer of Roberts county, which was instituted to test the right of county authorities to tax improvements upon lands allotted to Indians by the government, and personal property of Indians who have taken their allotments.

Navigation Opens Early.

Winona, Minn., March 31.—Navigation of the Mississippi river at this point opened yesterday, when the piledriver Good Luck came down from West Newton for pumps for raising the E. Douglas which was sunk at that place several days ago. This is very early for boats to be plying the river at this place. The earliest boat up since 1856 was the Union, on March 16, 1864, and the latest opening of navigation was in 1899, when the Musser was the first boat up on April 15.

Tillie Is Fortunate.

Winona, Minn., March 31.—Miss Tillie Kries, a resident of Prairie du Chien, had a miraculous escape from death while a passenger on the Burlington train. While the train was going at the rate of forty miles an hour south of this city she accidentally stepped off the rear end of one of the coaches and fell to the roadbed without sustaining any injuries, with the exception of a slight contusion of the forehead.

May Be Mustered Out.

Stillwater, Minn., March 31. — After battalion inspection last night Maj. Seebach called the members of Company K into their room and gave them a quiet but vigorous talk on the subject of attendance at the regular drills, and intimated that there must be an improvement or the company would be mustered out of service. It is reported that there will soon be a change in the captaincy of the company.

Freight Train Smashed.

Sparta, Wis., March 31.—A wreck occurred on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway a few miles east of here. A west-bound freight broke in two and the crew on the head end did not notice it. They were on a down grade and the head end sidetracked for the fast mail. The rear end crashed into them, smashing seven cars and injuring one brakeman.

Superintendent Found Not Guilty.

La Crosse, March 31. — Supt. C. S. McKown of the La Crosse county insane asylum, who was tried before a special committee appointed by the county board on the charges of cruelty to patients, misappropriating asylum funds and other alleged misdemeanors, was found not guilty in the final report of the committee submitted to the county board.

Aid From Outside.

Grand Forks, N. D., March 31.—Levi C. Taylor broke jail at Rolle Wednesday night. He was arrested on the charge of selling liquor to Indians. He evidently had outside assistance in getting away, as the doors of the jail had been pried open from the outside and a heavy crowbar was found on the ground near by.

Dying of Pistol Wounds.

Burlington, Iowa, March 31. — Peter Abriss, a night police officer, is near death, the result of a pistol wound from his own revolver. He retired at noon and laid the weapon on a shelf above the bed. It fell off, struck a sewing machine and inflicted a fatal wound in the body of its owner.

Hospital for Smallpox Patients.

Des Moines, Iowa, 31.—The city has at last provided a detention hospital for smallpox patients, Tracy hospital having been purchased. The numerous patients are being moved into the new hospital as rapidly as possible. It is hoped the epidemic here will be rapidly overcome.

At Work Again.

Fargo, N. D., March 31. — The state supreme court has resumed its routine work, and an effort will be made to entirely clear up the calendar before the adjournment for the Bismarck term, which begins April 8.

New Lease of Life.

New Virginia, Iowa, March 31.—The city election was the first in fifty years. The place is again taking on metropolitan airs. The school house in course of construction will cost $6,000.

Mere Scratch Causes Death.

Grand Meadow, Minn., March 31. — Sven, an old settler living north of town, died from blood poison, started from a scratch on his hand. He was about seventy years old.

Milaca Opera House Burned.

Milaca, Minn., March 31.—The opera house block burned; also R. P. Townsend's store and meat market in the same building. The origin of the fire is unknown.

Broken Head.

Keokuk, Iowa, March 31.—John McGary fell from a lunch car, striking his head on the pavement, fracturing his skull. It is said the proprietor gave him a slight push. He was intoxicated and had been ordered out.

Indians Were Disorderly.

Ashland, Wis., March 31.—A crowd of five drunken Indians started a row on the Courte Oreilles reservation, near Hayward, resulting in a general disturbance. The aggressors were arrested.

WITH THE LAWMAKERS

Doings In the State Legislature.

In the House.

St. Paul, March 25.—The thirty-second session of the Minnesota legislature will adjourn April 12. The substitute resolution fixing the date of adjournment adopted in both houses Saturday afternoon, carries with it a recommendation for an extra session, to be called by the governor in February, 1902, for the consideration of the tax commission's report. The thirty-second session abbreviated by thirteen days of the statute limitation of ninety days will be the first shortened session in the history of the state.

Representative Laybourn, St. Louis, introduced in the house a bill providing for the distribution of 90 per cent of the total amount of railroad gross earnings tax received by the state to counties, cities and villages and organized towns, in lieu of the present system under which the state retains the whole amount.

The uniform text book bill, recently introduced in the senate by Senator Reeves, was introduced in the house by Representative Berg, Roseau. The bill provides for the appointment by the governor of a text book commission, whose duty it shall be to decide upon a uniform series of text books covering the common branches to be used in the public schools and to enter into contracts for the purchase of the books decided upon.

In the Senate.

The legislature is asked to appropriate $35,000 for the revision and codification of the state laws in a bill introduced by Senator Lord. It results from the public hearing several weeks ago, at which leading members of the bar urged that there is a necessity for such action.

A good roads bill, introduced by Senator Johnson, declares that all Minnesota roadways are regarded as being two rods wide, and makes extensive provisions for their care and maintenance.

State Treasurer Block's bill providing for a board of deposit to determine where state funds shall be placed was recommended to pass by the senate.

Senator Wilson secured the passage of a bill authorizing the tax commission to secure and examine witnesses and to have books and papers affecting its work produced in evidence.

In the Senate.

St. Paul, March 26.—The Dunn direct primary election bill, passed by the house, was reported to the senate yesterday from the committee on elections without amendment and with the recommendation that it pass.

Senator Du Toit introduced a bill providing that at the next senatorial election senators from uneven numbered districts shall be elected for but two years, the term of all senators thereafter to be as at present—four years. This bill is designed to permit half the senate members to hold over at each election.

The Torrey house bill providing for the sale of the state capitol lands in Kandiyohi county was recommended for passage.

After killing a similar bill from Senator Wilson the upper house has recommended that J. A. Peterson's constitutional revision bill be passed.

In the House.

A resolution empowering the bribery investigating committee to summon witnesses, administer oaths and later submit the testimony taken, to the house, was adopted without opposition.

Representative Hurd introduced a bill providing for the distribution of the portraits of the Minnesota state officials and legislators among themselves and various libraries at a cost to the state of $5,000.

The house practically cleared up the calendar yesterday. The most important measures passed were those permitting voters to vote for all presidential electors by making one cross, and amending the game and fish laws. The latter makes the closed season for woodcock or upland plover from Nov. 1 to Sept. 1; for trout, Sept. 1 to April 15, and for black, gray or Oswego bass, March 1 to June 1.

In the Senate.

St. Paul, March 27.—The Halvorsen anti-cigarette bill met its death in the senate yesterday. After concurring in the house amendments the senate killed the bill and emphasized its action by defeating a motion to reconsider by a tie vote.

The first measure of the session relating to the taxation of the street railway corporations was introduced yesterday by Senator Hospes of Stillwater. The bill purports to compass the entire situation by proposing the submission of a constitutional amendment applying a gross earnings system of taxation to such interests.

The senate passed the house bill providing for the building of bicycle paths throughout the state.

In the House.

Mr. Sageng introduced a bill providing for the public ownership of telephone systems. The bill authorizes supervisors of townships, having received the sanction of a majority vote of the qualified electors of the township, to levy a tax for the construction of a township telephone system.

The Hemstead baby farm bill was yesterday passed by the house. The same bill, introduced by Mr. Chilton, has passed the upper house and substitution will be effected in one of the houses to allow the bill to become a law.

In the House.

St. Paul, March 28.—After a repetition of the scenes of last week, minus the sensational thrills furnished by the Washburn-Jacobson charges of bribery, the railroad gross earnings bill was yesterday taken up from the table on motion of Mr. Jacobson by a vote of 57 to 56. Before adjournment consideration of the bill was made a special order for 10:30 o'clock to-morrow morning.

After visiting the exposition city the Pan-American commissioners issued the ultimatum that unless the state stands ready to appropriate another $30,000 it will be better to withdraw the previous appropriation of $20,000 and have no exhibit at all. Commissioners Hall and Morton appeared before the senate and house and presented a report, prepared at the request of Gov. Van Sant.

A bill aimed at restriction of the operations of fake mining stock dealers was yesterday introduced by Mr. Roberts of Hennepin.

In the Senate.

After an all-day fight in the senate yesterday the Schaller bill extending and increasing the Anoka and Hastings asylums was defeated by a vote of 32 to 22, and then reconsidered and laid on the table. The six years' fight that closed with the construction of the two institutions was reopened and gone over again in a heated and long drawn out wrangle.

The Nichols bill, imposing a 5 per cent gross earnings tax on express companies, passed the senate yesterday and will become a law as soon as signed by the governor.

The salary of the insurance commissioner is increased from $2,500 to $3,000 a year, the salary of the deputy commissioner from $1,800 to $2,000 a year, and three new employes allowed the department by a bill introduced by Senator McGill.

In the Senate.

St. Paul, March 29. — The primary election bill came up as a special order before the senate yesterday morning and no sooner was the first section read than amendments were offered in wholesale quantities. Senator Grindeland wanted the time of the election in rural districts set for June. Senator Wilson wanted June made the date in cities as well. Senator Young made a lengthy speech demanding that congressional and judicial officers be exempt from the provisions of the law. Senator Johnson finally moved that the senate consider the various classifications of offices to be included in the bill in turn and then refer the section in question to a committee of three for redrafting. This motion prevailed and voting accordingly commenced. By a vote of 31 to 24 the senate decided to include state officials; by a vote of 49 to 7 to include congressional candidates and by a vote of 45 to 8 to include judicial officers. The bill was then made a special order for this morning.

The senate committee on finance submitted the biennial general appropriation bill yesterday, covering the expenses of the various state departments until another legislative session. The aggregate amount is $252,320, in addition to the regular standing appropriations.

The opposition in the senate to the Deming bill that will liberate the Younger brothers from the state prison, exhausted itself in the debates when the measure was on general orders. It came up yesterday on the calendar and was passed by a vote of 40 to 17.

The senate bill creating a state highway commission and carrying the provisions of the constitutional amendment into effect was defeated yesterday on the calendar.

In the House.

With the signature of the governor the board of control bill will become a law. The changes made by the senate were agreed to by the house yesterday after a disultory debate that developed no serious opposition, by a vote of 94 to 12.

The Nichols bill taxing the gross earnings of express companies came up for concurrence in senate amendments. The bill was passed after considerable debate at the 6 per cent rate fixed by the senate.

The house failed to pass the bill increasing the salary of the chief game warden yesterday. It was lost on a tie vote of 55 to 55. Sixty votes were necessary.

The J. D. Jones bill, reserving all minerals on state lands to the state, has passed both houses and will become a law as soon as the governor signs it.

NEW GOEBEL TRIALS.

Caleb Powers and James Howard Will Be Tried Again.

Frankfort, Ky., March 30.—The court of appeals granted new trials to Caleb Powers and James Howard, sentenced to life imprisonment and death, respectively, in connection with the shooting, in February, 1900, of Gov. William Goebel. In the Howard case the entire court concurred, but in the Powers decision Judges Hobson, Painter and White dissented. The decision in the Powers case holds the Taylor pardon not valid, that the indictment is good, but orders a new trial on the ground of erroneous instructions to the jury and admission of incompetent testimony. The Howard case is reversed because of erroneous instructions, incompetent evidence admitted in the trial and other minor points.

TWO SENATORS IN NEBRASKA.

Millard of Omaha and Governor Dietrich.

Lincoln, Neb., March 30. — After a deadlock of two and a half months the Republicans of the Nebraska legislature nominated J. H. Millard of Omaha and Gov. Charles H. Dietrich of Hastings for the long and short terms, respectively, in the United States senate. A joint session of the legislature at noon ratified the caucus nominations. Each received seventy votes, the full Republican strength. Mr. Millard will succeed Senator Thurston and Gov. Dietrich is the successor to the late Senator Hayward. If there had been no choice yesterday Nebraska would not have been represented in the United States senate.

FIGHTING IN MANCHURIA.

Russians and Chinese at It Again—Chinese Lose Heavily.

London, March 30.—The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Daily Mail says that there is renewed unrest in the south of Manchuria. There has been fighting on a considerable scale at Kobanzy and Sinnintin. A Russian colonel was killed. The Chinese losses were severe.

Gen. Fitzhugh Lee is confined to his room in Omaha with a severe attack of grip.

GROSS EARNINGS TAX

JACOBSON'S BILL FINALLY PASSES THE HOUSE.

Attempt to Amend the Measure by Making the Rate Five Per Cent Instead of Four Per Cent Fails and the Bill Carries by a Vote of 78 to 30—Meets Stormy Reception in the Senate—Vote in the Senate by Which State Officers Were to Be Included in the Primary Bill Is Reconsidered.

St. Paul, March 30. — The 4 per cent gross earnings tax bill met only a show of opposition in the house yesterday and was passed by a vote of 79 to 30. The only feature of the concluding stage of the fight was Representative Dobbin's effort to carry out the plan for its defeat framed several days ago, and change the rate to 5 per cent in hope of a deadlock. His own and one other vote went on record for the change, while 110 representatives declared against it. The debate that preceded the roll call on the passage of the bill was perfunctory.

The bill received a stormy reception in the senate and after being referred and recalled several times was finally sent to the committee on taxes and tax laws.

The house passed a concurrent resolution asking the president to name one of the new battleships "Minnesota."

Representative Walter Nelson has introduced a bill requiring railroad companies to accept bicycles as baggage without additional charge and issue checks for their transportation.

In the Senate.

The only advantage the direct primary bill obtained in the senate debate yesterday was a vote for reconsideration of the former action, by which a committee, yet to be appointed, was instructed to redraft its first section to include state officials. Another delay was secured and the bill will not come before the senate until Tuesday morning, when it will be taken up as a special order at 11 o'clock.

Senator Stockwell introduced a bill providing for local option in methods of levying taxes.

Senator Brower introduced an appropriation bill carrying $108,525 for the St. Cloud reformatory.

A bill from Senator Knatvold increases the term of the superintendent of public instruction from two to four years and fixes his salary at $2,500.

Senator Sivright introduced a bill providing for the appointment of two inspectors of normal schools.

GRIGGS RETIRES.

Associates in the Department of Justice Present a Token of Esteem.

Washington, March 31. — Attorney General Griggs late yesterday afternoon took leave of his associates in the department of justice, and to-day he will depart for his home in Paterson, N. J. During the leave taking Solicitor General Richards, on behalf of the officers and employes of the department, presented to the retiring attorney general a large solid silver claret pitcher of classic shape and unique design.

MUSKEGON PLANT TO START.

Rolling Mills Change Hands and Will Employ 500 Men.

Chicago, March 31.—J. H. Palmer and W. L. Moody, president and secretary respectively of the Palmer Steel and Iron company, have promoted the purchase of the rolling mill plant in Muskegon, Mich., on behalf of the American Rolling Mill Company. The mill belongs to the American Tin Plate company. It has been idle for a year and will be started at once with a force of 500 men.

PETTICOAT ON A POSTER.

Some One in New Brunswick Was Shocked by a Picture.

New York, March 31. — Indiana students, who recently dressed the statue of Apollo in breeches, were emulated in New Brunswick. A theatrical poster, the picture of a beautiful chorus girl, was made more presentable to modest eyes by the addition of a frilled newspaper petticoat, which had been made with great care and was pinned to the offending poster lady at the waist.

TRANSPORT LOGAN ARRIVES.

Carries Soldiers of the Thirty-Fourth Infantry and Sixth Cavalry.

San Francisco, March 31.—The transport Logan, a battalion of the Thirty-fourth infantry, a battalion of the Sixth cavalry and Gen. Young, who succeeds Gen. Shafter as commander of this department, has arrived. She was twenty-five days out of Manila.

REPRIMANDED BY CZAR.

Member of Imperial Council Who Interferred With Police Orders.

London, March 31.—A dispatch from St. Petersburg says that the czar has issued a severe reprimand to Prince Viasemski, a member of the council of the empire, for having interfered with the orders of the police on the occasion of the recent riots.

LOST ALL HIS WIVES.

An Explosion in an African Chief's Powder Magazine.

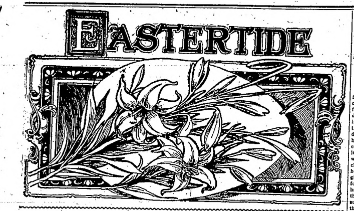
Paris, March 31.—In connection with the defeat of the native chief Fodey Kabba by a French expedition at Madina, West Africa, on Saturday last, it is announced that an explosion of the chief's powder magazine killed his forty wives.

Defendant in a Bigamy Suit.

Oskaloosa, Iowa, March 31. — Robert Eubanks of Nashville, Ill., was arrested at Lost Creek, near Oskaloosa, and taken back to Illinois. He is charged with deserting his wife and living with wife No. 2. He will be prosecuted.

Hanging to a Rafter in His Barn.

Baraboo, Wis., March 31. — Ferdinand Affeldt was found hanging from a rafter in his barn between here and Portage. He had been under the delusion for some time that his neighbors were trying to take his life.



...The... Easter Lilies

Brunetta Roth burst unceremoniously into her friend's room.

"Mary," she cried, "is it possible you have refused Christopher Patton?"

Mary Vane, a tall, pretty girl, who was adjusting her fur collarette before the mirror, turned quickly, her soft cheeks flushing scarlet.

"Why, Brunetta," she exclaimed, "how can you expect me to answer such a question?"

Brunetta, who was small and stout, and attired in the height of the prevailing mode, sank down in a chair and laughed.

"I didn't expect you to answer it. There is no necessity you should do so. Mr. Patton told Tom last night that you had thrown him over. I don't see how your conscience allowed you to act so. He is such a catch—young and good-looking. Best of all, he is enormously wealthy."

Mary smiled as she speared a crown of her demure little turban with a long pin. She was thinking of a man who was no longer young—near forty, perhaps—who was handsomer in her eyes than all other men, and who was by no means wealthy.

"I really believe," went on Miss Roth, "that you have an absurd fancy for Charlie Everett—I do, indeed!"

Mary's smile became quizzical.

"Really?" she said.

"Oh, I have no patience with you!" declared Brunetta, wrathfully. "You've known Charlie Everett three or four years. All this time he has been most devoted to you, but not one of your friends knows to this day whether you are engaged or not."

The smile faded from Mary's lips. "We are not," she answered, and the gay little cousin fancied her tone was sad.

"And yet you have been more gracious to him than to any of the others," pursued Miss Roth, relentlessly. "Mary, are you in love with him?"

"Isn't that," counter-questioned Mary, evasively, "what the lawyers would call a leading question? I don't wish to seem rude, or to hurry you, Brunetta, but I have an engagement to sign some papers this afternoon at the office of Deal & Burrit. Can't you come with me?"

"Yes. I must see Mme. Mireau about my Easter hat. One must arrange with her in time, as she is always rushed with orders. Are those papers connected with your uncle's will?"

"He left you everything! What a lucky girl you are! I suppose now you feel you can afford to marry whom you please."

The conversation again turned on Charlie Everett as the girls rode down town together on the Metropolitan Elevated.

"He is a mysterious fellow," Brunetta remarked.

"Mysterious!" Mary sent her a sudden look of inquiry. "What do you mean?"

"Well, there really is reason why he should be considered a good deal of an enigma. While not wealthy like Christopher Patton, Tom tells me he has a good salary, and adds to this by writings. But you know he does not spend money as other men in our class do. He is not liberal in the matter of theaters or flowers. He lives quietly. He has no expensive habits. Where, then, does his money go?"

Mary Vane was silent.

"There is one house in the suburbs where he is known to frequently visit," the other went on. Brunetta, as will be observed, was not above enjoying a gossip. "Two women live there. One is apparently a superior sort of a servant. The other is a pretty, delicate-looking little creature of about twenty-five or thereabouts. Occasionally Mr. Everett takes her driving through the parks. Has he ever mentioned her to you?"

Mary forced herself to answer: "No."

"Nor to anyone else. But I have seen him out with her. Who is she?"

A feeling of unrest, an undefinable fear, thrilled the heart of Mary Vane. She recalled the night Charlie Everett had told her of his love. "I cannot now ask you to be my wife," he had said. "I will some day, God willing. The time may not be far off, but I love you too well to bind you by a promise you might later find burdensome. And yet—dear, you will trust me and wait?"

"I will wait for you till I die!" she had replied, and had questioned him not at all.

Then he had protested that this was not an engagement—that she was free—quite free. Only he was bound.

"Very well," she had agreed. "We are not engaged."

But the understanding that existed between them was sweet to both.

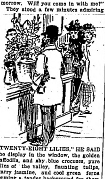
That was a year ago.

And now she had to acknowledge to herself that she knew little more of his private life or of his personal affairs than she knew then. She was unusually silent as she and Brunetta descended the steps and walked together to the lawyer's office. Her errand there attended to, Mary Vane went with Brunetta to see about the latter's Easter hat. Then the two walked down State street just as the matinee-goers were flocking from the theaters.

Brunetta paused suddenly before a florist's window.

"O, I had almost forgotten! Mamma told me to order some flowers for tomorrow. Will you come in with me?"

They stood a few minutes admiring the display in the window, the golden daffodils, and shy blue crocuses, pure lilies of the valley, flaunting tulips, starry jasmine, and cool green ferns forming a tender background for them all. The attendants were busy when they entered. The girls stood back of a high rubber tree admiring some rare chrysanthemums when the door was flung open and a gentleman came in. He was of medium height and had a kind, brown-bearded, thoughtful face. Not noticing any one in the store he went directly to the counter. To a man at that instant disengaged he gave his order.



"TWENTY-EIGHT LILIES," HE SAID

"Twenty-eight lilies," he said. "Yes—like those. Have them tied with broad white satin ribbon. Send to this address."

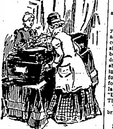
And he laid a card and a bill on the counter. An instant later he had received his change and walked out.

The girls stared at each other.

"That," gasped Brunetta, "was Charlie Everett!"

"Yes, I know," murmured Mary.

Before she could put out her hand to stop her meddlesome friend the latter had stepped to the counter and read the address on the card which lay there.



"Oh, she cried. "She is dead!"

"Just as I thought," she remarked a few minutes later, when they were out in the street together. "The address is 14 Forest Avenue, Idlewild. That is the suburb in which his mysterious acquaintance of whom I told you lives."

That number, street, place, burned in Mary's brain. She parted from Brunetta and went home. A fierce fever of jealousy possessed her. Who was this woman to whom he sent Lenten lilies? Idlewild was directly south of her own home. A cable car ran out to the pretty place. She would go there. She would call at the house. She would ask the lady who dwelt therein: "What is Charlie Everett to you?" When that was answered she would know how worthy of continued loyalty was her confessed lover. But not until the morning. She would not go until morning.

"Shame to doubt him!" cried her heart through all the sleepless night that followed. But her rigid will silenced that assailing protest. So the morning of the beautiful day that followed found her at the gate of a cosey cottage set back amid a group of bare-branched maples. There were drifts of snow in the little garden, but the air was warm with the effulgent prescience of spring. So peaceful was the place, the hour, her courage almost failed her. All the blinds were down. The entrance she chose brought her to a side door. She rang the bell. A maid appeared.

"May I—" Mary Vane began, then faltered. For whom should she ask?

"Yes," the girl replied. "Come in."

Marveling, Mary followed her. She led the way into a front room. The curtains were drawn. Tapers burned in the dimness. At first Mary fancied that—

"There was silence, and nothing there
But silence, and scents of eglantere,
And jasmine, and roses, and rosemary—"

Then she saw that there was something else. A coffin, and in it lying a white-robed form, with folded hands, and lilies lying on the pulseless breast.

Mary shrank back.

"Oh," she cried. "She is dead!"

"Yes, Miss. I thought you wished to see her. A good many of the neighbors were in last evening. She had many friends hereabout for all her misfortunes. Ain't those lilies beautiful? Mr. Charlie sent them. Twenty-eight for twenty-eight years."

Mary went nearer, looked down on the dead face, a young face which had once been lovely, but bore the unmistakable impress of sorrow and suffering.

"It's not many men," went on the servant, wiping her eyes, "who would do what Mr. Charlie did. After his brother was injured in that railroad wreck four years ago he begged Mr. Charlie in dying to take care of his young wife. Mr. Charlie promised him. He has supported her and given her every comfort since. She was always weakly, and when her mind gave out from brooding over her husband's death, and she was such a charge, Mr. Charlie was that gentle and patient with her—my! She had spells of understanding. Then she'd beg not to be sent to an asylum—not that Mr. Charlie would think of such a thing. She wouldn't hurt a bird, poor dear! There! That is Mr. Charlie now!"

A step crossed the hall. Looking pale and worn, Charlie Everett came into the room. His face lighted up at sight of his sweetheart.

"You—Mary!" he cried.

"Hush!" she begged. She broke down, crying bitterly. "Don't look at me—don't speak to me until I have told you how it is that I am here."

She brokenly whispered the truth.

"You can never trust me again," she said in conclusion.

He took her in his arms.

"Perhaps I should have spoken to you of her, but I hated to cast so dark a shadow over your young life. I could not keep up two households, and she was penniless. She was my charge before I learned to love you. My first duty was to her. The doctors agreed she could not live long. As for trusting—my dearest, you must forgive me for not having confided in you—I you, for your doubt of me. So we are equal. Is it not Whittier who writes:

"Love scarce is love that never knows
The sweetness of forgiving!"

They passed out together into the brilliance of the Sabbath morning.

Occasion Is Tricky.

Fortune is like the market, where many times, if you can stay a little, the price will fall; and again, it is sometimes like Sibylla's offer, which at first offereth the commodity at full, then consumeth part and part, and still holdeth up the price; for occasion (as it is in the common verse) "turneth a bald noddle after she hath presented her locks in front and no hold taken," or, at least, turneth the handle of the bottle first to be received, and after the belly, which is hard to clasp.—Francis Bacon.

During the last century the Bible was translated into 250 languages, and it is now accessible to nine-tenths of the world's population.

BRAVE IN DANGER

NEBRASKA WOMAN'S EXPERIENCE WITH INDIANS.

Mrs. Larimer Recently Rewarded by the Government for Valuable Information Furnished to United States Troops in 1864.

Mrs. Sarah L. Larimer of Nebraska has been in Washington recently to collect a claim against the government for losses sustained by her from Indian depredations and for valuable information given the United States troops regarding the plans of the Indians, a large sum of money having been awarded to her lately by the court of claims. Her story is as follows: In 1864 Lieutenant Larimer, who had just been honorably discharged from the union army, left his home in Kansas, accompanied by his girl wife and baby, to cross the plains for the restoration of his health, which had given out through hard service in the war. They were in company with several other travelers and had with them nearly $4,000 in money. When in Wyoming territory they were surprised by a band of Sioux Indians, who murdered three of the party, wounded two, Lieutenant Larimer being one of the wounded, and captured Mrs. Larimer and her child. The Indians took the woman and child to their camp, about seventy miles from the spot where they had attacked the travelers. A day or two after the news of the attack came to the Eleventh United States cavalry, stationed at Fort Laramie, Wyoming territory. Lieutenant Larimer had been found nearly dead from arrow wounds and distracted at the fate which had befallen his wife and baby. The officers of the Eleventh immediately moved part of their command up the Platte river and obtained further information as to where the raid had taken place. They were about to move against the Indians with a force of two companies when Mrs. Larimer came crawling into camp, carrying her child. She and the baby were nearly famished. As soon as Mrs. Larimer was able she gave a detailed account of the position of the Indians, their plans and movements, their designs against the command, which they knew would be moving against them, their numbers, and the ambuscades which they had prepared. Her information was so valuable that the officers were able to thwart the designs of the Indians, not only against the pursuing troops, but against exposed points and trains that were on the emigrant road. The officers found the information Mrs. Larimer gave as to the position and movements of the Indians to be exactly as she had said and marveled at the memory which had endured through the hours of horror she had undergone. The accuracy of her statements was particularly verified by the fact that one of the lieutenants and a few of his men who had disobeyed orders and followed a trail apart from the command fell into an ambuscade described by Mrs. Larimer and were killed. Mrs. Larimer was never quite clear as to how many hours she had spent with the Indians. She had read of the tortures inflicted by Indians upon women captives and was determined if possible to get her child and herself away from their clutches and die in some other way than by their tortures. She had always been a girl of fearless disposition, quick in her movements and very observant. She pretended to be bodily in a languid and almost immovable state. After hours of waiting and watching their dances and listening to their plans for further depredations, when they had ceased to observe her, she found a chance to slip away beyond the fires into the dark bush. Through two days and nights she struggled on, faint, nearly dead, until she fell exhausted into the cavalry camp.

Reputation More Than Local.

By the death of the Rev. Andrew Thomson, D. D., of Broughton Place United Presbyterian church, Edinburg lost a minister of more than local reputation. Dr. Thomson, who was in his 87th year, had been an Edinburg minister for sixty-three years, and for fifty-nine of these he was the pastor of one church, that of Broughton place, which under his direction became not only one of the leading congregations in the city, but in the denomination to which it belonged. One of his best known books was an excellent volume entitled "In the Holy Land," which he wrote after an extensive tour through Palestine in company with Emmanuel Deutsch and the late Prof. Milligan of Aberdeen. When over 80 he wrote the "Life of Boston of Ettrick," a work which showed how Dr. Thomson had carried undimmed his mental faculties even to that old age.

Spain's Convents and Monasteries.

Spain now boasts of possessing more convents, more monasteries and more Jesuit colleges, seminaries and establishments of all kinds than at any time under the houses of Bourbon and Austria. The last census, in 1897, showed 28,549 nuns, 45,328 monks and priests, 1,200 Jesuits 9 archbishops, 51 bishops, 55 deans and 1,213 canons in the country. The religious houses of every kind exceed two thousand. It is not possible to ascertain their real wealth or the value of their movable property. They pay no duties on their real property, and none on their workshops, as they are not enrolled on the registers of ratepayers, only having to pay on capital invested in stock.

ENGLAND'S PEASANTRY.

Their Present Condition Contrasted with That of a Century Ago.

The agricultural laborers of today are certainly better clad, more luxuriously fed, have far more leisure, are better educated, and are rapidly becoming better housed than their forefathers, a century ago. And if these are the main constituents of happiness then they are happier. On the other hand, their grandfathers and great-grandfathers were much more gay and lighthearted than the modern; they enjoyed their lives much more than their descendants do; they had incomparably more laughter, more amusement, more real delight in the labor of their hands; there was more love among them and less hate. The agricultural laborer had a bad drunken time between twenty and thirty years ago, and he has been growing out of that. A village sot is now a very rare bird, as rare as he was 100 years ago. Then the laborer could not afford a drunken debauch—he had not the wherewithal. His master, the farmer, did drink, and sometimes deeply, in those days, when he was prospering. And for a few years afterward the rise of the laborer's wages, some twenty-five years ago, the laborer was the publican's friend. But hard drinking has been steadily declining, and the habitual drunkard is looked upon as a coarse brute to be avoided. As to other vices, things are pretty much as they were; I am afraid rather worse than better. Perhaps the saddest characteristic of the men of the present, as compared with the men of the past, is that the men of the past were certainly more self-dependent—I do not mean independent, in the sense in which that word is used now—more resourceful, more kindly, courteous and contented with their lot than their descendants are. I think I know something about the English peasantry of a century or two gone by. I think I know just a little about the agricultural laborer nowadays. I bear him a genuine love, and feel with him a cordial sympathy, and there is no knowing any men or any class of men whom we do not love and sympathize with. But as to the agricultural laborer of the future, I am sometimes inclined to doubt seriously whether before another century has ended there will be any such thing as an agricultural laborer to know.—Nineteenth Century (London.)

AMERICAN SPECIALISTS.

Concentration Enables Our Manufacturers to Produce Cheaply.

The goal toward which all successful manufacturers work is the maximum of units of product at the minimum of cost per unit. This is attained, in part, by specialization—concentration upon a single specialty, says a writer in Cassier's Magazine. For example, in a great shop at Mulhouse, in Alsace, employing 5,000 men, I saw water works and blowing engines, and locomotives and other heavy machinery, along with cotton spinning machinery and the lightest articles made in iron. The same range of manufacturing would, in the United States, call for half a dozen separate plants, each concentrating effort on a single product, and selling it at figures for which the Alsatian works could not dream of making it. In Great Britain, to use another illustration, an agricultural implement works makes road engines, threshers, mowers, and reapers, cultivators, and a variety of small farm tools. But when they put any one of their machines into the field they meet a Chicago-made article which is laid down on the spot at a less price than that for which the British firm can hope to simply produce it. The Chicago manufacturer builds a vast works to make nothing but mowers and binders. One concern employs thousands of men on threshing machines, and road engines to haul them, while still other large factories make the cultivators, drills, etc. Machines turned out by tens of thousands, instead of thousands, can be made in greater perfection, and at materially lower cost, even if all other factors are uniform. But if cheaper raw materials, more efficient labor, better management, and more up-to-date works be added, the trans-Atlantic competitor of America is indeed facing a difficult proposition.

Cold in the Head in Infants.

J. Bermann of Washington, thinks that cold in the head in infants very frequently leads to serious trouble later in life, and ought not to be neglected, as it too often is, but should be treated with a two per cent solution of nitrate of silver, applied to the throat with a soft brush. Care should be taken not to use the fluid so freely that it will drop into the larynx. If the child makes any noise in breathing through the nose the next day, apply the nitrate of silver again. By treating an acute rhinitis in an infant, catarrh, deflections of the septum, or affections of the ear may often be avoided.

Wreck of the Rio de Janeiro.

There is every reasonable assurance that had the Rio been manned by American seamen all the passengers, if not all the hands, would have been saved. Indeed, nothing but sheer cowardice or brutality could account for failure to accomplish this much under the circumstances. The bay was calm, the shore within a stone's throw. The vessel remained intact for fully ten and probably fifteen minutes after striking. A crew of skillful, courageous white men, numbering but one-half the Chinese on board the Rio, could have landed every soul and probably a good part of the precious freight, mail, etc., in the time at their disposal.—Coast Seamen's Journal.

INVENTION OF PRINTING.

The Chinese Developed the Art Centuries Before Guttenberg.

Feng Tao (A. D. 881-954) is best known to the Chinese as a versatile politician who served, first and last, under no less than ten emperors of four different houses, and gave himself a sobriquet which finds its best English equivalent in the "Vicar of Bray."

In his history of "Chinese Literature," published by the Appletons, Dr. Giles tells how Tao presented himself at the court of the second emperor of the Liao dynasty, and positively asked for a post. He said he had no home, no money, and very little brains; a statement which appears to have appealed forcibly to the Tartar monarch, who at once appointed him grand tutor to the heir apparent.

By foreigners, on the other hand, he will be chiefly remembered as the inventor of the art of block-printing. It seems probable, indeed, thatt some crude form of this invention had already been known in the Tang dynasty; but until the date of the Feng Tao, it was certainly not applied to the production of books. Six years after his death the "fire-led" house of Sung was finally established on the throne, and thenceforward the printing of books from blocks became a familiar handicraft with the Chinese people.

INDIAN MISSIONARY'S STORY.

Years of Toilsome Ministry Among the Choctaws.

Little York, Ind., April 1.—(Special).—Twenty-five years ago the Rev. C. H. Thompson left Indiana. For a time he preached in Arkansas, afterwards entering on the regular missionary work among the Choctaw Indians.

For five years he lived and labored among the full-bloods of the Western prairies, until, on April 5th, 1885, having lost his wife, he left the circuit on which he had preached so long, and commenced traveling missionary work among the Indians of the various tribes scattered in the West.

This irregular work involved a great deal of travel over the prairies. The drinking of so much alkali water brought on kidney troubles which terminated in Diabetes.

Finally, while laboring among the Creek Indians at Wagoner, Indian Territory, this noble man was stricken down completely. A Chicago specialist was summoned, and after a careful examination declared that there was not the slightest chance of his recovery. Besides the prescriptions of the doctors, he tried many other medicines, but all to no avail. He says:

"I had concluded that my days were drawing to a close, when I picked up an almanac telling of the cures of Diabetes by the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills. I sent for two boxes. I gained strength and spirits from the time I commenced to use them, and so I sent for more. I am now completely cured, and have not the slightest symptom of my old trouble.

"I am 68 years of age. I tell everybody of the wonders Dodd's Kidney Pills have done for me. I can certainly endorse them heartily, and vouch that they are all that is claimed for them. They have certainly been a God-send to me."

Dodd's Kidney Pills are the only remedy that has ever cured Bright's Disease, Diabetes or Dropsy, and they never fail.

History Repeating Itself.

A Cape Town dispatch says that the British generals in South Africa regard DeWet as demented.

The defeated Austrian generals, after Napoleon's first campaign, wrote the Austrian emperor:

"This young soldier is crazy; he ignores the established rules of war; he fights in the winter time, and turns up in all sorts of places."

Gen. Banks wrote the secretary of war in the early part of 1862:

"To my mind, my opponent, Jackson, is crazy."—Denver Times.

THIEF RIVER FALLS NEWS

THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN

Athletic sports are taking strong hold in the European universities. The football team or "equipo" of Louvain university has recently defeated the teams of Liege and of Brussels.

Japan has greatly increased her cavalry in the last few years, and still more recently added nearly forty field batteries to her artillery, and as the country itself produces no horses suitable for this purpose, the necessity for importing them is urgent.

The removal of a man's veins would seem an impossible operation. A New Orleans man's subveinous veins from his groin down stood out like whipcords, were immensely swollen, and gave him intense pain. An operation was finally resorted to, and the veins were all successfully removed, leaving only the arteries.

The other day a man made a tour of the diamond houses in Maiden Lane, New York, with a pair of diamond earrings, for which he had paid twenty years ago $700. In all but two places the stones were pronounced faultless, but cut in an old fashioned style, and the highest offer he received anywhere for them was $150.

To determine whether the shore line has not been shrinking a corps of engineers belonging to the United States coast and geodetic survey department has been at work on the Pacific coast. It is believed that the results of their labors will show the Pacific to have sunk several inches within the century and to be going down now much more rapidly than the Atlantic.

The recent census taken throughout Switzerland has shown a remarkable increase in the number of inhabitants. Perhaps the most extraordinary growth is in the Canton of Zurich, whose population in 1888 numbered 337,183, but now it is 428,030, an increase of 90,847 inhabitants in twelve years. This is considered a world's record. Geneva has increased by 21,412 persons during the same period.

Paris is about to lose one of its great historical landmarks. The old Temple market is doomed to demolition. Its ancient stronghold and palace, once the home of knights and royalty, afterward a state prison, monastery and market, and associated with the most momentous events of the history of France and its capital, went through all the stages of power and pomp, decline and fall, and now ends as a resort of rag pickers and beggars, and a rendezvous for thieves and junk dealers.

The superintendent of the New Haven schools has recently recommended that all his teachers wear short skirts the year around, on account of the hygienic effect upon the scholars. The authorities of El Paso, Texas, have gone a step further, and prohibited the admission of teachers to their public schools in skirts that touch the floor. An excellent remark in the same direction is contained in a recent letter by the Princess Reuss in a London newspaper: "I think it the most absurd and disgusting performance to perform the duties of crossing sweeper and janitor minus the salary."

FATE OF AGUINALDO

FILIPINO CHIEFTAIN LIKELY TO BE DEPORTED.

Cabinet Discusses the Question of the Disposition of Aguinaldo—Belief Expressed That It Would Be Better to Send Him Away—Nothing Definite Yet Decided—Gen. Funston Will Probably Be Rewarded With a Commission as Brigadier General in the Regular Army.

Washington, March 31.—The disposition of Aguinaldo and the reward for Gen. Funston were discussed by the cabinet yesterday, and while nothing definite was decided in either case, it is thought probable that Aguinaldo will be deported and that Gen. Funston will be made a brigadier general in the regular army.

The view of the majority of the cabinet was that the time was not ripe to decide what course should be pursued in the disposition of Aguinaldo. It is felt that some little time should elapse to permit an opportunity to deliberate carefully over what course would be the wisest; whether he can be of any service to the United States government by remaining in Manila and exerting his influence in the direction of peace; whether it to permit him to remain so close to the field of insurrectionary activity, or whether, even, it would be best to send him among the other insurgent prisoners on the Island of Guam. There is a disposition to deal leniently with him, but there are various questions that will have to be considered in the case, as, for instance, whether he personally instigated assassinations of Americans, and similar offenses, which some of the members of the cabinet feel call for some penalty. It cannot be too emphatically stated that the administration will avoid giving the captured leader any basis for posing as a martyr.

The president and all the members of the cabinet are in favor of the most liberal and substantial recognition of the services of Gen. Funston. There is a disposition to make him a brigadier general in the regular army, but it is thought that full reports should be awaited

Before Action Is Taken.

The matter probably will be allowed to rest where it is for the present. Gen. Funston is holding a volunteer commission as brigadier general, which will not expire until June 30 of this year; therefore, so far as honor and emoluments are concerned his standing will not be prejudiced by the delay.

The president and his cabinet do not underestimate the importance of the capture of Aguinaldo, but they have been led to believe that the insurrection has practically collapsed and that there remain now only a few bands of outlaws who are on the warpath more for booty than for principle. They are looking forward to the work of the Taft commission as of more importance than that of the army.

Some More Surrenders.

Another important dispatch was received at the war department yesterday from Gen. MacArthur at Manila. It did not refer to Aguinaldo or Funston, but in the opinion of the war department officials it went far to support the prediction made by Gen. MacArthur in Thursday's dispatch relating to those two leaders, that the end of the rebellion is near at hand. This dispatch chronicles the surrender of a considerable additional number of rebels and military arms and the important feature of it is that the surrender marks the complete stamping out of the insurgents in the island of Mindanao, which is, next to Luzon, the largest island in the Philippine group.

DRUGGED AND ROBBED.

Then John Crosby Was Placed on a Train at Minneapolis.

Hastings, Minn., March 31.—A stranger named John Crosby arrived here last evening, and after reaching the Gibbins hotel became violently ill, requiring the attendance of two physicians to save his life. He claimed that he had been in the pineries working for the Rutledge Lumber company, and upon arriving in Minneapolis was inveigled into a saloon, drugged and robbed of $78. Afterward, it appears, while in an irresponsible condition, he was placed on a train and sent here without any knowledge of his whereabouts.

TO TEST THE LAW.

Appeal Taken in Attempt to Tax Indian Improvements.

Sioux Falls, S. D., March 31.—W. G. Porter, assistant United States attorney for South Dakota, has filed an appeal in the case of the United States vs James A. Rickert, county treasurer of Roberts county, which was instituted to test the right of county authorities to tax improvements upon lands allotted to Indians by the government, and personal property of Indians who have taken their allotments.

Navigation Opens Early.

Winona, Minn., March 31.—Navigation of the Mississippi river at this point opened yesterday, when the piledriver Good Luck came down from West Newton for pumps for raising the E. Douglas which was sunk at that place several days ago. This is very early for boats to be plying the river at this place. The earliest boat up since 1856 was the Union, on March 16, 1864, and the latest opening of navigation was in 1890, when the Musser was the first boat up on April 16.

Tillie Is Fortunate.

Winona, Minn., March 31.—Miss Tillie Kries, a resident of Prairie du Chien, had a miraculous escape from death while a passenger on the Burlington train. While the train was going at the rate of forty miles an hour south of this city she accidentally stepped off the rear end of one of the coaches and fell to the roadbed without sustaining any injuries, with the exception of a slight contusion of the forehead.

May Be Mustered Out.

Stillwater, Minn., March 31. — After battalion inspection last night Maj. Seebach called the members of Company K into their room and gave them a quiet but vigorous talk on the subject of attendance at the regular drills, and intimated that there must be an improvement or the company would be mustered out of service. It is reported that there will soon be a change in the captaincy of the company.

Freight Train Smashed.

Sparta, Wis., March 31.—A wreck occurred on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway a few miles east of here. A west-bound freight broke in two and the crew on the head end did not notice it. They were on a down grade and the head end sidetracked for the fast mail. The rear end crashed into them, smashing seven cars and injuring one brakeman.

Superintendent Found Not Guilty.

La Crosse, March 31. — Supt. C. S. McKown of the La Crosse county insane asylum, who was tried before a special committee appointed by the county board on the charges of cruelty to patients, misappropriating asylum funds and other alleged misdemeanors, was found not guilty in the final report of the committee submitted to the county board.

Aid From Outside.

Grand Forks, N. D., March 31.—Levi C. Taylor broke jail at Rolla Wednesday night. He was arrested on the charge of selling liquor to Indians. He evidently had outside assistance in getting away, as the doors of the jail had been pried open from the outside and a heavy crowbar was found on the ground near by.

WITH THE LAWMAKERS

Doings In the State Legislature.

In the House.

St. Paul, March 25.—The thirty-second session of the Minnesota legislature will adjourn April 12. The substitute resolution fixing the date of adjournment adopted in both houses Saturday afternoon, carries with it a recommendation for an extra session, to be called by the governor in February, 1902, for the consideration of the tax commission's report. The thirty-second session abbreviated by thirteen days of the statute limitation of ninety days will be the first shortened session in the history of the state.

Representative Laybourn, St. Louis, introduced in the house a bill providing for the distribution of 90 per cent of the total amount of railroad gross earnings tax received by the state to counties, cities and villages and organized towns, in lieu of the present system under which the state retains the whole amount.

The uniform text book bill, recently introduced in the senate by Senator Reeves, was introduced in the house by Representative Berg, Roseau. The bill provides for the appointment by the governor of a text book commission, whose duty it shall be to decide upon a uniform series of text books covering the common branches to be used in the public schools and to enter into contracts for the purchase of the books decided upon.

In the Senate.

The legislature is asked to appropriate $35,000 for the revision and codification of the state laws in a bill introduced by Senator Lord. It results from the public hearing several weeks ago, at which leading members of the bar urged that there is a necessity for such action.

A good roads bill, introduced by Senator Johnson, declares that all Minnesota roadways are regarded as being two rods wide, and makes extensive provisions for their care and maintenance.

State Treasurer Block's bill providing for a board of deposit to determine where state funds shall be placed was recommended to pass by the senate.

Senator Wilson secured the passage of a bill authorizing the tax commission to secure and examine witnesses and to have books and papers affecting its work produced in evidence.

In the Senate.

St. Paul, March 26.—The Dunn direct primary election bill, passed by the house, was reported to the senate yesterday from the committee on elections without amendment and with the recommendation that it pass.

Senator Du Toit introduced a bill providing that at the next senatorial election senators from uneven numbered districts shall be elected for but two years, the term of all senators thereafter to be as at present—four years. This bill is designed to permit half the senate members to hold over at each election.

The Torrey house bill providing for the sale of the state capitol lands in Kandiyohi county was recommended for passage.

After killing a similar bill from Senator Wilson the upper house has recommended that J. A. Peterson's constitutional revision bill be passed.

In the House.

A resolution empowering the bribery investigating committee to summon witnesses, administer oaths and later submit the testimony taken, to the house, was adopted without opposition.

Representative Hurd introduced a bill providing for the distribution of the portraits of the Minnesota state officials and legislators among themselves and various libraries at a cost to the state of $5,000.

The house practically cleared up the calendar yesterday. The most important measures passed were those permitting voters to vote for all presidential electors by making one cross, and amending the game and fish laws.

fore the senate and house and presented a report, prepared at the request of Gov. Van Sant.

A bill aimed at restriction of the operations of fake mining stock dealers was yesterday introduced by Mr. Roberts of Hennepin.

In the Senate.

After an all-day fight in the senate yesterday the Schaller bill extending and increasing the Anoka and Hastings asylums was defeated by a vote of 32 to 22, and then reconsidered and laid on the table. The six years' fight that closed with the construction of the two institutions was reopened and gone over again in a heated and long drawn out wrangle.

The Nichols bill, imposing a 6 per cent gross earnings tax on express companies, passed the senate yesterday and will become a law as soon as signed by the governor.

The salary of the insurance commissioner is increased from $2,500 to $3,000 a year, the salary of the deputy commissioner from $1,800 to $2,000 a year, and three new employes allowed the department by a bill introduced by Senator McGill.

In the Senate.

St. Paul, March 29. — The primary election bill came up as a special order before the senate yesterday morning and no sooner was the first section read than amendments were offered in wholesale quantities. Senator Grindeland wanted the time of the election in rural districts set for June. Senator Wilson wanted June made the date in cities as well. Senator Young made a lengthy speech demanding that congressional and judicial officers be exempt from the provisions of the law. Senator Johnson finally moved that the senate consider the various classifications of offices to be included in the bill in turn and then refer the section in question to a committee of three for redrafting. This motion prevailed and voting accordingly commenced. By a vote of 31 to 24 the senate decided to include state officials; by a vote of 49 to 7 to include congressional candidates and by a vote of 45 to 8 to include judicial officers. The bill was then made a special order for this morning.

The senate committee on finance submitted the biennial general appropriation bill yesterday, covering the expenses of the various state departments until another legislative session. The aggregate amount is $262,320, in addition to the regular standing appropriations.

The opposition in the senate to the Deming bill that will liberate the Younger brothers from the state prison, exhausted itself in the debates when the measure was on general orders. It came up yesterday on the calendar and was passed by a vote of 49 to 17.

The senate bill creating a state highway commission and carrying the provisions of the constitutional amendment into effect was defeated yesterday on the calendar.

In the House.

With the signature of the governor the board of control bill will become a law. The changes made by the senate were agreed to by the house yesterday after a disultory debate that developed no serious opposition, by a vote of 94 to 12.

The Nichols bill taxing the gross earnings of express companies came up for concurrence in senate amendments. The bill was passed after considerable debate at the 6 per cent rate fixed by the senate.

The house failed to pass the bill increasing the salary of the chief game warden yesterday. It was lost on a tie vote of 55 to 55. Sixty votes were necessary.

The J. D. Jones bill, reserving all minerals on state lands to the state, has passed both houses and will become a law as soon as the governor signs it.

GROSS EARNINGS TAX

JACOBSON'S BILL FINALLY PASSES THE HOUSE.

Attempt to Amend the Measure by Making the Rate Five Per Cent Instead of Four Per Cent Fails and the Bill Carries by a Vote of 79 to 30—Meets Stormy Reception in the Senate—Vote in the Senate by Which State Officers Were to Be Included in the Primary Bill Is Reconsidered.

St. Paul, March 30. — The 4 per cent gross earnings tax bill met only a show of opposition in the house yesterday and was passed by a vote of 79 to 30. The only feature of the concluding stage of the fight was Representative Dobbin's effort to carry out the plan for its defeat framed several days ago, and change the rate to 5 per cent in hope of a deadlock. His own and one other vote went on record for the change, while 110 representatives declared against it. The debate that preceded the roll call on the passage of the bill was perfunctory.

The bill received a stormy reception in the senate and after being referred and recalled several times was finally sent to the committee on taxes and tax laws.

The house passed a concurrent resolution asking the president to name one of the new battleships "Minnesota."

Representative Walter Nelson has introduced a bill requiring railroad companies to accept bicycles as baggage without additional charge and issue checks for their transportation.

In the Senate.

The only advantage the direct primary bill obtained in the senate debate yesterday was a vote for reconsideration of the former action, by which a committee, yet to be appointed, was instructed to redraft its first section to include state officials. Another delay was secured and the bill will not come before the senate until Tuesday morning, when it will be taken up as a special order at 11 o'clock.

Senator Stockwell introduced a bill providing for local option in methods of levying taxes.

Senator Brower introduced an appropriation bill carrying $108,526 for the St. Cloud reformatory.

A bill from Senator Knatvold increases the term of the superintendent of public instruction from two to four years and fixes his salary at $2,500.

Senator Sivright introduced a bill providing for the appointment of two inspectors of normal schools.

GRIGGS RETIRES.

Associates in the Department of Justice Present a Token of Esteem.

Washington, March 31. — Attorney General Griggs late yesterday afternoon took leave of his associates in the department of justice, and to-day he will depart for his home in Paterson, N. J. During the leave taking Solicitor General Richards, on behalf of the officers and employes of the department, presented to the retiring attorney general a large solid silver claret pitcher of classic shape and unique design.

...The... Easter Lilies

Brunetta Roth burst unceremoniously into her friend's room.

"Mary," she cried, "is it possible you have refused Christopher Patton?"

Mary Vane, a tall, pretty girl, who was adjusting her fur collarette before the mirror, turned quickly, her soft cheeks flushing scarlet.

"Why, Brunetta," she exclaimed, "how can you expect me to answer such a question?"

Brunetta, who was small and stout, and attired in the height of the prevailing mode, sank down in a chair and laughed.

"I didn't expect you to answer it. There is no necessity you should do so. Mr. Patton told Tom last night that you had thrown him over. I don't see how your conscience allowed you to act so. He is such a catch—young and good-looking. Best of all, he is enormously wealthy."

Mary smiled as she speared a crown of her demure little turban with a long pin. She was thinking of a man who was no longer young—near forty, perhaps—who was handsomer in her eyes than all other men, and who was by no means wealthy.

"I really believe," went on Miss Roth, "that you have an absurd fancy for Charlie Everett—I do, indeed!"

Mary's smile became quizzical.

"Really?" she said.

"Oh, I have no patience with you!" declared Brunetta, wrathfully. "You've known Charlie Everett three or four years. All this time he has been most devoted to you, but not one of your friends knows to this day whether you are engaged or not."

The smile faded from Mary's lips. "We are not," she answered, and the gay little cousin fancied her tone was sad.

"And yet you have been more gracious to him than to any of the others," pursued Miss Roth, relentlessly. "Mary, are you in love with him?"

"Isn't that," counter-questioned Mary, evasively, "what the lawyers would call a leading question? I don't wish to seem rude, or to hurry you, Brunetta, but I have an engagement to sign some papers this afternoon at the office of Deal & Burrit. Can't you come with me?"

"Yes. I must see Mme. Mireau about my Easter hat. One must arrange with her in time, as she is always rushed with orders. Are those papers connected with your uncle's will?"

"He left you everything! What a lucky girl you are! I suppose now you feel you can afford to marry whom you please."

The conversation again turned on Charlie Everett as the girls rode down town together on the Metropolitan Elevated.

"He is a mysterious fellow," Brunetta remarked.

"Mysterious!" Mary sent her a sudden look of inquiry. "What do you mean?"

"Well, there really is reason why he should be considered a good deal of an enigma. While not wealthy like Christopher Patton, Tom tells me he has a good salary, and adds to this by writings. But you know he does not spend money as other men in our class do. He is not liberal in the matter of theaters or flowers. He lives quietly. He has no expensive habits. Where, then, does his money go?"

Mary Vane was silent.

"There is one house in the suburbs where he is known to frequently visit," the other went on. Brunetta, as will be observed, was not above enjoying a gossip. "Two women live there. One is apparently a superior sort of a servant. The other is a pretty, delicate-looking little creature of about twenty-five or thereabouts. Occasionally Mr. Everett takes her driving through the parks. Has he ever mentioned her to you?"

Mary forced herself to answer: "No."

"Nor to anyone else. But I have seen him out with her. Who is she?"

A feeling of unrest, an undefinable fear, thrilled the heart of Mary Vane. She recalled the night Charlie Everett had told her of his love. "I cannot now ask you to be my wife," he had said. "I will some day, God willing. The time may not be far off, but I love you too well to bind you by a promise you might later find burdensome. And yet—dear, you will trust me and wait?"

"I will wait for you till I die!" she had replied, and had questioned him not at all.

Then he had protested that this was not an engagement—that she was free—quite free. Only he was bound.

"Very well," she had agreed. "We are not engaged."

But the understanding that existed between them was sweet to both.

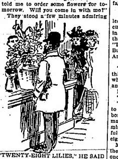
That was a year ago.

And now she had to acknowledge to herself that she knew little more of his private life or of his personal affairs than she knew then. She was unusually silent as she and Brunetta descended the steps and walked together to the lawyer's office. Her errand there attended to, Mary Vane went with Brunetta to see about the latter's Easter hat. Then the two walked down State street just as the matinee-goers were flocking from the theaters.

Brunetta paused suddenly before a florist's window.

"O, I had almost forgotten! Mamma told me to order some flowers for tomorrow. Will you come in with me?"

They stood a few minutes admiring



"TWENTY-EIGHT LILIES," HE SAID

the display in the window, the golden daffodils, and shy blue crocuses, pure lilies of the valley, flaunting tulips, starry jasmine, and cool green ferns forming a tender background for them all. The attendants were busy when they entered. The girls stood back of a high rubber tree admiring some rare chrysanthemums when the door was flung open and a gentleman came in. He was of medium height and had a kind, brown-bearded, thoughtful face. Not noticing any one in the store he went directly to the counter. To a man at that instant disengaged he gave his order.

"Twenty-eight lilies," he said. "Yes—like those. Have them tied with broad white satin ribbon. Send to this address."

And he laid a card and a bill on the counter. An instant later he had received his change and walked out.

The girls stared at each other.

"That," gasped Brunetta, "was Charlie Everett!"

"Yes, I know," murmured Mary.

Before she could put out her hand to stop her meddlesome friend the latter had stepped to the counter and read the address on the card which lay there.

"Oh, she cried. "She is dead!"

"Just as I thought," she remarked a few minutes later, when they were out in the street together. "The address is 14 Forest Avenue, Idlewild. That is the suburb in which his mysterious acquaintance of whom I told you lives."

That number, street, place, burned in Mary's brain. She parted from Brunetta and went home. A fierce fever of jealousy possessed her. Who was this woman to whom he sent Lenten lilies? Idlewild was directly south of her own home. A cable car ran out to the pretty place. She would go there. She would call at the house. She would ask the lady who dwelt therein: "What is Charlie Everett to you?" When that was answered she would know how worthy of continued loyalty was her confessed lover. But not until the morning. She would not go until morning.

"Shame to doubt him!" cried her heart through all the sleepless night that followed. But her rigid will silenced that assailing protest. So the morning of the beautiful day that followed found her at the gate of a cosey cottage set back amid a group of bare-branched maples. There were drifts of snow in the little garden, but the air was warm with the effulgent prescience of spring. So peaceful was the place, the hour, her courage almost failed her. All the blinds were down. The entrance she chose brought her to a side door. She rang the bell. A maid appeared.

"May I—" Mary Vane began, then faltered. For whom should she ask?

"Yes," the girl replied. "Come in."

Marveling, Mary followed her. She led the way into a front room. The curtains were drawn. Tapers burned in the dimness. At first Mary fancied that—

"There was silence, and nothing there
But silence, and scents of eglanterre,
And jasmine, and roses, and rosemary—"

Then she saw that there was something else. A coffin, and in it lying a white-robed form, with folded hands, and lilies lying on the pulseless breast.

Mary shrank back.

"Oh," she cried. "She is dead."

"Yes, Miss. I thought you wished to see her. A good many of the neighbors were in last evening. She had many friends hereabout for all her misfortunes. Ain't those lilies beautiful? Mr. Charlie sent them. Twenty-eight for twenty-eight years."

Mary went nearer, looked down on the dead face, a young face which had once been lovely, but bore the unmistakable impress of sorrow and suffering.

"It's not many men," went on the servant, wiping her eyes, "who would do what Mr. Charlie did. After his brother was injured in that railroad wreck four years ago he begged Mr. Charlie in dying to take care of his young wife. Mr. Charlie promised him. He has supported her and given her every comfort since. She was always weakly, and when her mind gave out from brooding over her husband's death, and she was such a charge, Mr. Charlie was that gentle and patient with her—my! She had spells of understanding. Then she'd beg not to be sent to an asylum—not that Mr. Charlie would think of such a thing. She wouldn't hurt a bird, poor dear! There! That is Mr. Charlie now!"

A step crossed the hall. Looking pale and worn, Charlie Everett came into the room. His face lighted up at sight of his sweetheart.

"You—Mary!" he cried.

"Hush!" she begged. She broke down, crying bitterly. "Don't look at me—don't speak to me until I have told you how it is that I am here."

She brokenly whispered the truth.

"You can never trust me again," she said in conclusion.

He took her in his arms.

"Perhaps I should have spoken to you of her, but I hated to cast so dark a shadow over your young life. I could not keep up two households, and she was penniless. She was my charge before I learned to love you. My first duty was to her. The doctors agreed she could not live long. As for trusting—my dearest, you must forgive me for not having confided in you—I you, for your doubt of me. So we are equal. Is it not Whittier who writes:

"Love scarce is love that never knows
The sweetness of forgiving!"

They passed out together into the brilliance of the Sabbath morning.

Occasion Is Tricky.

Fortune is like the market, where many times, if you can stay a little, the price will fall; and again, it is sometimes like Sibylla's offer, which at first offereth the commodity at full, then consumeth part and part, and still holdeth up the price; for occasion (as it is in the common verse) "turneth a bald noddle after she hath presented her locks in front and no hold taken," or, at least, turneth the handle of the bottle first to be received, and after the belly, which is hard to clasp.—Francis Bacon.

During the last century the Bible was translated into 250 languages, and it is now accessible to nine-tenths of the world's population.

BRAVE IN DANGER.

NEBRASKA WOMAN'S EXPERIENCE WITH INDIANS.

Mrs. Larimer Recently Rewarded by the Government for Valuable Information Furnished to United States Troops in 1864.

Mrs. Sarah L. Larimer of Nebraska has been in Washington recently to collect a claim against the government for losses sustained by her from Indian depredations and for valuable information given the United States troops regarding the plans of the Indians, a large sum of money having been awarded to her lately by the court of claims. Her story is as follows: In 1864 Lieutenant Larimer, who had just been honorably discharged from the union army, left his home in Kansas, accompanied by his girl wife and baby, to cross the plains for the restoration of his health, which had given out through hard service in the war. They were in company with several other travelers and had with them nearly $4,000 in money. When in Wyoming territory they were surprised by a band of Sioux Indians, who murdered three of the party, wounded two, Lieutenant Larimer being one of the wounded, and captured Mrs. Larimer and her child. The Indians took the woman and child to their camp, about seventy miles from the spot where they had attacked the travelers. A day or two after the news of the attack came to the Eleventh United States cavalry, stationed at Fort Laramie, Wyoming territory. Lieutenant Larimer had been found nearly dead from arrow wounds and distracted at the fate which had befallen his wife and baby. The officers of the Eleventh immediately moved part of their command up the Platte river and obtained further information as to where the raid had taken place. They were about to move against the Indians with a force of two companies when Mrs. Larimer came crawling into camp, carrying her child. She and the baby were nearly famished. As soon as Mrs. Larimer was able she gave a detailed account of the position of the Indians, their plans and movements their designs against the command, which they knew would be moving against them, their numbers, and the ambuscades which they had prepared. Her information was so valuable that the officers were able to thwart the designs of the Indians, not only against the pursuing troops, but against exposed points and trains that were on the emigrant road. The officers found the information Mrs. Larimer gave as to the position and movements of the Indians to be exactly as she had said and marveled at the memory which had endured through the hours of horror she had undergone. The accuracy of her statements was particularly verified by the fact that one of the lieutenants and a few of his men who had disobeyed orders and followed a trail apart from the command fell into an ambuscade described by Mrs. Larimer and were killed. Mrs. Larimer was never quite clear as to how many hours she had spent with the Indians. She had read of the tortures inflicted by Indians upon women captives and was determined if possible to get her child and herself away from their clutches and die in some other way than by their tortures. She had always been a girl of fearless disposition, quick in her movements and very observant. She pretended to be bodily in a languid and almost immovable state. After hours of waiting and watching their dances and listening to their plans for further depredations, when they had ceased to observe her, she found a chance to slip away beyond the fires into the dark bush. Through two days and nights she struggled on, faint, nearly dead, until she fell exhausted into the cavalry camp.

Reputation More Than Local.

By the death of the Rev. Andrew Thomson, D. D., of Broughton Place United Presbyterian church, Edinburg lost a minister of more than local reputation. Dr. Thomson, who was in his 87th year, had been an Edinburg minister for sixty-three years, and for fifty-nine of these he was the pastor of one church, that of Broughton place, which under his direction became not only one of the leading congregations in the city, but in the denomination to which it belonged. One of his best known books was an excellent volume entitled "In the Holy Land," which he wrote after an extensive tour through Palestine in company with Emmanuel Deutsch and the late Prof. Milligan of Aberdeen. When over 80 he wrote the "Life of Boston of Ettrick," a work which showed how Dr. Thomson had carried undimmed his mental faculties even to that old age.

Spain's Convents and Monasteries.

Spain now boasts of possessing more convents, more monasteries and more Jesuit colleges, seminaries and establishments of all kinds than at any time under the houses of Bourbon and Austria. The last census, in 1897, showed 28,549 nuns, 46,328 monks and priests, 1,200 Jesuits, 9 archbishops, 51 bishops, 55 deans and 1,213 canons in the country. The religious houses of every kind exceed two thousand. It is not possible to ascertain their real wealth or the value of their movable property. They pay no duties on their real property, and none on their workshops, as they are not enrolled on the registers of ratepayers, only having to pay on capital invested in stock.

ENGLAND'S PEASANTRY.

Their Present Condition Contrasted with That of a Century Ago.

The agricultural laborers of today are certainly better clad, more luxuriously fed, have far more leisure, are better educated, and are rapidly becoming better housed than their forefathers, a century ago. And if these are the main constituents of happiness then they are happier. On the other hand, their grandfathers and great-grandfathers were much more gay and lighthearted than the modern; they enjoyed their lives much more than their descendants do; they had incomparably more laughter, more amusement, more real delight in the labor of their hands; there was more love among them and less hate. The agricultural laborer had a bad drunken time between twenty and thirty years ago, and he has been growing out of that. A village sot is now a very rare bird, as rare as he was 100 years ago. Then the laborer could not afford a drunken debauch—he had not the wherewithal. His master, the farmer, did drink, and sometimes deeply, in those days, when he was prospering. And for a few years afterward the rise of the laborer's wages, some twenty-five years ago, the laborer was the publican's friend. But hard drinking has been steadily declining, and the habitual drunkard is looked upon as a coarse brute to be avoided. As to other vices, things are pretty much as they were; I am afraid rather worse than better. Perhaps the saddest characteristic of the men of the present, as compared with the men of the past, is that the men of the past were certainly more self-dependent—I do not mean independent, in the sense in which that word is used now—more resourceful, more kindly, courteous and contented with their lot than their descendants are. I think I know something about the English peasantry of a century or two gone by, I think I know just a little about the agricultural laborer nowadays. I bear him a genuine love, and feel with him a cordial sympathy, and there is no knowing any men or any class of men, whom we do not love and sympathize with. But as to the agricultural laborer of the future, I am sometimes inclined to doubt seriously whether before another century has ended there will be any such thing as an agricultural laborer to know.—Nineteenth Century (London.)

AMERICAN SPECIALISTS.

Concentration Enables Our Manufacturers to Produce Cheaply.

The goal toward which all successful manufacturers work is the maximum of units of product at the minimum of cost per unit. This is attained, in part, by specialization—concentration upon a single specialty, says a writer in Cassier's Magazine. For example, in a great shop at Mulhouse, in Alsace, employing 5,000 men, I saw water works and blowing engines, and locomotives and other heavy machinery, along with cotton spinning machinery and the lightest articles made in iron. The same range of manufacturing would, in the United States, call for half a dozen separate plants, each concentrating effort on a single product, and selling it at figures for which the Alsatian works could not dream of making it. In Great Britain, to use another illustration, an agricultural implement works makes road engines, threshers, mowers, and reapers, cultivators, and a variety of small farm tools. But when they put any one of their machines into the field they meet a Chicago-made article which is laid down on the spot at a less price than that for which the British firm can hope to simply produce it. The Chicago manufacturer builds a vast works to make nothing but mowers and binders. One concern employs thousands of men on threshing machines, and road engines to haul them, while still other large factories make the cultivators, drills, etc. Machines turned out by tens of thousands, instead of thousands, can be made in greater perfection, and at materially lower cost even if all other factors are uniform. But if cheaper raw materials, more efficient labor, better management, and more up-to-date works be added, the trans-Atlantic competitor of America is indeed facing a difficult proposition.

Cold in the Head in Infants.

J. Bermann of Washington, thinks that cold in the head in infants very frequently leads to serious trouble later in life, and ought not to be neglected, as it too often is, but should be treated with a two per cent solution of nitrate of silver, applied to the throat with a soft brush. Care should be taken not to use the fluid so freely that it will drop into the larynx. If the child makes any noise in breathing through the nose the next day, apply the nitrate of silver again. By treating an acute rhinitis in an infant, catarrh, deflections of the septum, or affections of the ear may often be avoided.

Wreck of the Rio de Janeiro.

There is every reasonable assurance that had the Rio been manned by American seamen all the passengers, if not all the hands, would have been saved. Indeed, nothing but sheer cowardice or brutality could account for failure to accomplish this much under the circumstances. The bay was calm, the shore within a stone's throw. The vessel remained intact for fully ten and probably fifteen minutes after striking. A crew of skillful, courageous white men, numbering but one-half the Chinese on board the Rio, could have landed every soul and probably a good part of the precious freight, mail, etc., in the time at their disposal.—Coast Seamen's Journal.

INVENTION OF PRINTING.

The Chinese Developed the Art Centuries Before Guttenberg.

Feng Tao (A. D. 881-954) is best known to the Chinese as a versatile politician who served, first and last, under no less than ten emperors of four different houses, and gave himself a sobriquet which finds its best English equivalent in the "Vicar of Bray."

In his history of "Chinese Literature," published by the Appletons, Dr. Giles tells how Tao presented himself at the court of the second emperor of the Liao dynasty, and positively asked for a post. He said he had no home, no money, and very little brains; a statement which appears to have appealed forcibly to the Tartar monarch, who at once appointed him grand tutor to the heir apparent.

By foreigners, on the other hand, he will be chiefly remembered as the inventor of the art of block-printing. It seems probable, indeed, that some crude form of this invention had already been known in the Tang dynasty; but until the date of the Feng Tao, it was certainly not applied to the production of books. Six years after his death the "fire-led" house of Sung was finally established on the throne, and thenceforward the printing of books from blocks became a familiar handicraft with the Chinese people.

INDIAN MISSIONARY'S STORY.

Years of Toilsome Ministry Among the Choctaws.

Little York, Ind., April 1.—(Special).—Twenty-five years ago the Rev. C. H. Thompson left Indiana. For a time he preached in Arkansas, afterwards entering on the regular missionary work among the Choctaw Indians.

For five years he lived and labored among the full-bloods of the Western prairies, until, on April 5th, 1885, having lost his wife, he left the circuit on which he had preached so long, and commenced traveling missionary work among the Indians of the various tribes scattered in the West.

This irregular work involved a great deal of travel over the prairies. The drinking of so much alkali water brought on kidney troubles which terminated in Diabetes.

Finally, while laboring among the Creek Indians at Wagoner, Indian Territory, this noble man was stricken down completely. A Chicago specialist was summoned, and after a careful examination declared that there was not the slightest chance of his recovery. Besides the prescriptions of the doctors, he tried many other medicines, but all to no avail. He says:

"I had concluded that my days were drawing to a close, when I picked up an almanac telling of the cures of Diabetes by the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills. I sent for two boxes. I gained strength and spirits from the time I commenced to use them, and so I sent for more. I am now completely cured, and have not the slightest symptom of my old trouble.

"I am 68 years of age. I tell everybody of the wonders Dodd's Kidney Pills have done for me. I can certainly endorse them heartily, and vouch that they are all that is claimed for them. They have certainly been a God-send to me."

Dodd's Kidney Pills are the only remedy that has ever cured Bright's Disease, Diabetes or Dropsy, and they never fail.

History Repeating Itself.

A Cape Town dispatch says that the British generals in South Africa regard DeWet as demented.

The defeated Austrian generals, after Napoleon's first campaign, wrote the Austrian emperor:

"This young soldier is crazy; he ignores the established rules of war; he fights in the winter time, and turns up in all sorts of places."

Gen. Banks wrote the secretary of war in the early part of 1862:

"To my mind, my opponent, Jackson, is crazy."—Denver Times.

THE NEWS,

By John W. Eastman.

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY.

$1.50 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE.

Gov. Van Sant has appointed Hon. N. S. Gordon, of Crookston, as the member of the state board of equalization for this district. The appointment was a good one and will give general satisfaction in this section.

The ladies of this city are entitled to a great deal of credit for the enthusiastic manner in which they have labored in order to secure a public library for Thief River Falls. An institution of this kind would be of great benefit to all the people.

THE COUNCIL

Held a Regular Meeting Monday Night.

The city council transacted considerable business at their regular meeting held Monday evening although nothing of importance was done.

Liquor licenses were granted to a number of applicants, bills were allowed and ordinances acted upon. A committee was appointed to wait upon James Meehan and ascertain what could be done in regard to the bridge across the Thief river. The bridge is at the present time in an unsafe condition.

A number of ladies addressed the council in the interest of the public library and asked for a liberal donation, but no action was taken.

The council will hold a special meeting tomorrow night and at this time the matter of having the G. N. depot removed to a more central portion of the city will be considered.

Retribution.

The Marshall County Banner says: "In the early history of Warren and Argyle, the entire county seat paraphernalia consisted of a large safe, which was brought to Argyle from Warren by a few of the faithful first settlers, and a county seat was established, but the Warren rough-riders of that day hauled it back again, without saying "if you please," or "thank you" to the authorities of Argyle. Their punishment was a long time coming, but it came at last one day this week and at the hands of one of their own men. The mills of the gods grind slowly, but exceedingly fine. Without any noise—silently and peaceably—W. F. Powell had the "county seat" brought back to the land of its birth, Argyle, and no one dared to stop him. Will the court house follow in the same quiet and peaceable manner? Who can tell?

ELECT OFFICERS

Ladies Form a Permanent Organization.

The ladies in this city interested in establishing a public library met at the residence of Mrs. C. L. Dobner Monday afternoon and organized a permanent society by electing the following officers:

President—Mrs. F. H. Kratka.
Vice-President — Mrs. S. F. Staples.
Secretary—Mrs. Jas. Meehan.
Treasurer—Mrs. C. L. Dobner.

A committee was also appointed to draft suitable by-laws and a constitution for the organization. Over $50 was made by the New England supper given last Thursday evening, and an active committee will commence work this week soliciting subscriptions from business men. It is hoped that enough can be secured to start the library at once.

THE MILL

Will Probably Be Started Up Next Week.

In case the ice goes out—and there is every indication that it will—the Thief River Falls Lumber company's large saw mill will start up for the season the latter part of next week. The mill has been greatly repaired during the winter and everything is now in ship shape. The cut this season will far exceed the cut of last season, and the mill will run steady until it freezes up.

FARM LANDS

The Purchasers Are Now Arriving.

The Great Northern is each day bringing land seekers to this city—not as many, perhaps, as are being dumped off in other portions of the Red River Valley, but the men who arrive here are so impressed with the quality of the soil and cheapness of the land that the real estate dealers do not find it hard to sell to them.

Temperance Lecture.

A second temperance meeting was conducted in the "Sandridge" school house by the Rev. W. Allen Sterling assisted by Prof. Jas. A. Wilson on the evening of March 25, 1901. The lecture by Rev. Sterling was instructive and convincing, while the plea made by Prof. Wilson was irristable. The pledge of the previous meeting was produced. It contained 26 names and 22 more were added, making a total of 48 members. A temperance band was organized and the following officers were elected:

President—C. Christiansen.
Vice-Pres.—Mrs. F. Copp.
Sec.—Fred Copp.
Treas.—Andrew Rindal.

Mrs. John Kellberg, Andrew Rindal and Fred Copp were appointed a committee on by-laws, and Mrs. F. Copp was appointed to arrange a program for the next meeting which will be held Monday evening, April 29, 1901.

Fred Copp, Sec.

EXCEL.

All the personal property of every description on the farm of Chris E. Wold was sold at auction by Frank Green on March 26. Mr. Green is special guardian and Louis Nelson acted as auctioneer. A large and representative crowd of farmers were present and at times the bidding was spirited.

Simon Warring has at last removed to his new house and a number of natives have been hunting for the postoffice.

H. L. Bergeron was down to St. Hilaire after a load of bran and shorts recently.

The ground is drying up fast and if the weather continues fair, many of the farmers will be found in the fields instead of on the streets in town.

Several of our young men have gone to the western end of the county to work during the season.

Martin Steiner has returned to Comstock.

Ed Werner and Herman Berndt were over to Warren on business last week.

No beginners will be admitted to the primary department at the beginning of the spring term. Our primary department is already crowded, and nothing will be gained by having children enter at this time. I urge that this recommendation be observed, that the progress of pupils now enrolled in that department be not hindered, and the teacher be not imposed upon.

The monthly report given above shows that there is still much irregularity and lack of punctuality in attendance. Fathers and mothers or guardians, and boys and girls, can we not make a better report during the two months of the spring term?

Jas. A. Wilson, Principal.

Prominent Iowa Railroad Man Says:

Illinois Central Railroad Company,
Office of Assistant General Passenger Agent.
Matt J. Johnson Co., West Superior, Wis.
Dubuque, Ia., Feb. 1, 1901.

Gentlemen:—Your Great Blood and Rheumatic Cure, 6088, is the best remedy I ever used, and I may say that it is the only one of many that has been of permanent benefit.
Yours truly,
J. F. Merry, Ass't G. P. A.

THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINNESOTA.

Albert Voss started up the river with a load of supplies for Carl Kretzschmar's store at the Red lake, Sunday, but had to abandon the trip. The river is fast getting in better condition for steamboats than for teams.

During the past week ten thousand homeseekers from the east and southeast passed through St. Paul for northwestern points. They were all a desirable class of settlers and many of them will locate in Minnesota.

A team belonging to the Thief River Falls Lumber company and driven by Chas. Shirley broke through the ice at a point about fourteen miles up the Red lake river on Monday, and one of the horses was drowned.

The three-year-old daughter of John Reidel, of Excel, was accidentially shot in the head by an older brother last Saturday. Three shot penetrated the top of the little girl's head, but fortunately did not prove serious.

Easter services will be held in the Presbyterian church Sunday. Rev. W. F. Finch, pastor at large of this presbytery will preach. There will be no evening services as announced, as Rev. Bredeson will hold evening services.

In conservation with a gentleman from Nobles county the first of the week he stated that there would be a large number from his county who would come to Thief River Falls the latter part of this month and buy farm lands near here.

Caspar Weiner received a check for $50 last week from the New York Underwriters Insurance Co. as payment in full for damages to his residence by fire. The money was received inside of a week after the claim was made.

Iver Krogestad, a farmer from the town of Hellem, suffered a fall from his wagon on the road a few miles north of town last Saturday and was severely bruised about the head. He was brought to this city where his injuries were repaired.

I am pleased to announce that I have taken the agency for the Matt J. Johnson's Great Blood and Rheumatic Cure, 6088. The miraculous cures of rheumatism and blood trouble made by the remedy have made it very popular in this section. See ad. J. P. Curtis, druggist.

Wiley Tindolph reports the following real estate sales this week: F. C. Faleat, St. Paul, two lots; Frank Komarek, city, one lot; Wm. Colosky, Manvel, N. D., two lots; Geo. W. Vesey, city, three lots; V. Ross, Detroit, fifteen lots. Two of the above parties are building houses on the lots purchased.

Dr. Watson, of Red Lake Falls, was in St. Paul last week to visit Representative Rapp, whose serious illness has been noted. Mr. Watson is of the opinion that Rapp has a chance of recovering sufficiently to be removed to his home in St. Hilaire, although it is not believed that he will ever fully regain his health.

Rev. F. D. Stone preached his farewell sermon to the Presbyterian congregation Sunday and left the first of the week for South Dakota where he has accepted a call. Rev. Stone has made many friends here who regret his departure. The Presbyterians expect to secure the services of another minister in a few days.

Deputy Game Warden P. O. Stephens was in the city last week and placed tags on all the mounted deer, moose and caribou heads in the city. Three unmounted moose heads, the property of a St. Paul traveling man, were found in the shop of Sam Cheeley and they were confiscated and shipped to St. Paul, where they will be mounted and sold, the money going into the state treasury.

Rev. Sterling very cordially invites all the people of this city to attend the services at Methodist church next Sunday. A special Easter program has been prepared and it is asked that all that may find it convenient to attend in the morning will do so, as the church is usually overcrowded in the evening. All of the children in the city are especially invited to attend the services in the afternoon.

Several Iowa and Southern Minnesota gentlemen were in the city last week looking over the prospects of the city with a view of locating here permanently. Just what business they would engage in is not known, but they have been looking over the Himle lands with the view of purchasing them. They were all greatly pleased with the city and one of the gentlemen, W. W. Prichard, has remained in order to make final arrangements.

While enroute to this city from the lake, Joseph Duchamp's team broke through the ice in the river about 12 miles from here. He left them in the river to help fertalize the water the for Crookston and Grand Forks public, together with a set of new harnesses and a sled loaded with hay. The water was quite deep where the accident—which will make a big hole in Mr. Duchamp's winter's earnings—occurred.

Doubtless many a farmer has wondered how "Chicago made" lard could be sold so cheaply in Minnesota and at a price lower than he could afford to produce it. The farmer will take his hogs to the Chicago market, and the lard comes back from these same hogs perhaps packed in neat little tin pails, and for sale at a price actually cheaper than he can make it himself. The reason is that in the large packing houses the hog fat is put under tremendous pressure; the oil that runs out is "olive oil" and similar delicacies; the refuse—corresponding to the pulp of apples from which the cidar has been extracted—is then made into "lard." We have a law in Minnesota prohibiting the sale of adulterated lard, but up to the present time there is no measure to restrict the sale of this product from which the lard fat has been taken out. The present legislature has passed a bill which places this lard on a par with the adulterated articles of food.

A. L. Himle is in the city this week.

ED. L. HEALY LAND AND LOAN COMPANY.

M. K. Wall, manager of the Ed. L. Healy Land and Loan Company, can be found at his new quarters in the Hanson building, where he will be pleased to consult with those desiring to sell or contemplating the purchase of farm or city property.

We have convinced people from the southern part of this state and other states that those lands offer to the poor man the chance of a lifetime to secure a home where the country abounds in game and the lakes and rivers teem with fish of many varieties, amidst flourishing settlements, near schools and churches and close to railway markets, in one of the most healthful localities in the world.

We have already secured the promise of hundreds of homeseekers whom we expect this spring. So, any one having farms or city property for sale is invited to call. We buy and sell property. We are here for that purpose. Call and see us.

Denmark's Three Little Islands

The Danish West Indies, which Denmark has just been notified must not be sold to any other power but the United States, are three little islands lying immediately east of Porto Rico at the gateway of the Caribbean sea. Santa Cruz is the largest of the three, and contains seventy-four square miles of territory, more than five-sixths of which is under cultivation. Its total population is 20,000, most of which is of negro descent. St. Thomas is the second in size, and is the first in importance because of its situation and fine harbor. St. Thomas also contains the commercial metropolis of the islands, the Town of Charlotte Amelia, which is better known as St. Thomas. Charlotte Amelia is a town of 12,000 inhabitants, and the total population of the island is only a few hundreds larger. St. Thomas contains but thirty-three square miles of territory, most of it too rocky for cultivation. The third island in the bunch for which the United States now proposes to pay $3,240,000, is St. John, a little rocky islet on which less than a thousand people live. Altogether the purchase would add but 24,000 people and less than 110 square miles of territory to the United States.

MAIN STREET OF CHARLOTTE AMELIA.

In 1867 Secretary of State Seward made an attempt to buy these islands for $7,500,000. The Danish government agreed to make the sale, provided the people of the islands were agreeable to it. The Rev. Dr. Hawley, pastor of the church which the secretary attended at Auburn, N. Y., was sent to St. Thomas to supervise an election held to give the people a chance to express their views. On all three islands but twenty-two votes were cast against the proposed union with the United States, several thousand being recorded in its favor. The sentiment of the people was almost unanimous. But the plan had many opponents in congress. Chief among these was Senator Sumner, then the head of the committee on foreign relations. He pigeon-holed the treaty and prevented its consideration for a long time. Meanwhile a congressional committee of inspection had been sent to make a trip through the islands for the purpose of seeing that the United States was getting a good bargain. Unfortunately this committee started out during the annual hurricane season, which begins on July 1 and continues for three months. The visiting statesmen happened to be at St. Thomas when the great hurricane and tidal wave of 1867 struck the town and carried away a part of it, and when they got back to Washington again they hastened to support Senator Sumner in his attempts to kill the treaty providing for the purchase of the islands.

A good many years later another attempt was made to buy out Denmark's possessions in the Caribbean. This time the price was fixed at less than $5,000,000, but, in spite of the reduction, it came to nothing. Meanwhile King Christian and the Danish government have been growing increasingly anxious to sell. Denmark is not and is not likely to become a great naval power, and the chief value of the islands lies in the fact that St. Thomas has a good harbor and commands the gateway to the Caribbean sea. Besides, the islands are not self-supporting. The Danish government is called upon to face an annual deficit incurred in their administration, and the treasury of Denmark is not sufficiently strong to stand such a strain without feeling it.

Whatever the islands may lack in any other direction they are strong in historic and romantic interest. They were discovered by Columbus on his second voyage to America, in 1493. But Columbus was not looking for a few little scattered islands, and when he found how small they were he hoisted sail and went away after naming them the Virgin Islands. Then for more than 150 years they lay unvisited by white men. In 1657 some adventurous Dutchmen sailed into the splendid harbor of St. Thomas and started a little settlement there. That lasted for ten years. Then the Dutch gave up the attempt, and a few years later the Danes took their place. Since then the English, French and Spanish have alternated in the control of one or more of the islands, which finally passed under the permanent control of Denmark in 1815.

But the chief romantic interest which attaches to St. Thomas lies in the fact that it was for years one of the headquarters of the famous pirates and buccaneers who so long infested and ravaged the Spanish Main. Before steamships were invented St. Thomas was more than it is today, a roadhouse of the seas, a sort of ocean half-way house between the continents. Into its great harbor Spanish galleons and heavily laden slave ships ran for shelter, and the buccaneers hanging close about were certain of good picking. Sometimes the pirate ships even pursued their prey into the land-locked harbor, and under the eyes of the town captured it.

All three of the islands are thought to be the tops of what were once volcanic mountains. In appearance they are typically tropical. When a ship sails into the harbor of Charlotte Amelia, for instance, the passenger sees a fringe of low white houses along the shore, shining against a background of glossy green, while behind and above towers a line of stately hills, covered for most of their height with thick, tropical foliage. Almost all the houses have bright red roofs, and the whole landscape is a riot of vivid color. Charlotte Amelia is remarkable among tropical cities in that it is extremely clean—a fact which must be laid to the credit of the Danes. Its straight streets, lined on either side with two-story wooden houses, are paved with asphalt, with wide gutters on either side. When rain falls on the hills swift currents of water rush down through these streets, washing out the gutters and making it easier to keep the town clean. Almost every house has a balcony across the front of its second story.

One of the most picturesque sights to be seen at St. Thomas is the procession of coal carriers, which is ceaselessly passing from the docks down into the holds of the vessels lying alongside. The coal carriers are all stalwart negro women, who carry great baskets filled with coal on their heads. They work in day and night shifts, and after darkness falls they sing weird songs as they work. In spite of the fact that the introduction of steam has taken much business away from St. Thomas, it is still a busy place, and as a result its people have little of the tropical lassitude and laziness about them. They do not even stop work to take a siesta in the middle of the day.

Prior to 1848 both St. Thomas and the larger island of Santa Cruz produced large quantities of sugar. In that year Denmark freed all the slaves, and as a result, most of the negroes left the plantations and gathered into the towns. The sugar planters could not get sufficient labor to work their plantations, and the industry almost disappeared. More recently it has been resumed on a considerable scale, particularly on Santa Cruz where there is a great quantity of fertile land. On this island many of the former slaves have set up as the proprietors of small plantations, and its annual production of sugar is now 12,000 tons, a supply sufficient to supply the wants of the United States for two days.

The temperature of the Island of Santa Cruz ranges from 66 to 82 degrees. It has many magnificent driveways, leading through avenues of palms, tamarinds and bananas. There are two towns on the island—Frederiksted and Christiansted. Neither is of any importance, from a commercial standpoint. Practically all of the 20,000 inhabitants of the island speak English, and the only sign of their allegiance to Denmark is the flag and a little garrison of about 100 Danish soldiers. Frederiksted is a tumble-down town of stucco-covered, two-storied buildings, the fissures in the walls and the tumbling walls being a result of the sack of the city in 1878, when the negroes on the island revolted against the Danish government.

One of the differences between men and women is that men have to die in order to become angels—so says a woman writer.

PUZZLING BRONZES.

Archaeologists Are Discussing Probable Creators of Rare Antiques.

In 1897 the English took possession of Benin, one of the most famous of African cities, and found in it many interesting works of art, mainly fashioned of bronze and ivory. Hundreds of these were brought to Europe and, after they had found their way into public and private museums, the startling discovery was made that in some of the museums there were already duplicates of some of the ivory works of art, but that no bronze work of art could be found anywhere. The question then arose. Since the people of Benin have for centuries been workers in bronze and ivory, how is it that so many specimens of their ivory art work have been imported into Europe from time to time and long before their city was captured, whereas there are very few Europeans who had ever seen any of their bronze engravings before 1897? Of this curious fact various explanations were given, but the one which was accepted as being most plausible is that these Benin artists who worked in ivory were permitted to export their wares, and that those who worked in bronze were not allowed to do so. Among those whom this discussion attracted was Herr F. von Luschan, a distinguished German antiquarian, and he took a deeper interest in it than others, since early in 1897, and before Benin was captured, he had purchased in an old curiosity shop near London bridge a bronze engraving unlike anything which he had ever seen before, but which he now felt certain had been imported at some unknown time into Europe from the African capital. Still, there was a problem before him which demanded solution and a few weeks ago he invited archaeologists everywhere to aid him in solving it. The problem is this: His bronze engraving, which he has presented to the museum in Berlin, represents the head of a man, but the question is, What man is it? The engraving, before Herr Luschan purchased it, was the property of W. A. Franks, another antiquarian, and he maintained that the man represented in it was a Spanish bishop. Herr Luschan, on the other hand, says that the head is that of a negro, and that the costume which he wears is that of a chieftain of Benin. On the head is a large miter-shaped cap; round the neck is a kerchief, which is fashioned of panthers' teeth and feathers and to which is attached a small square bell; over the shoulders is thrown a short mantle, made of panther's skin, and in the left hand is a spear. As to the time when the engraving was made there are no clews, but Herr Luschan is satisfied that it is very old.—Chicago Journal.

OUTDOOR AND INDOOR LIFE.

Fresh Air Is Not a Thing to Be Taken in Little Doses Once a Day.

The admitted advantage of an outdoor life in many morbid conditions, and notably in consumption, seems to point to the conclusion that there is something definitely injurious in the indoor life which is now the common existence among civilized people. It is a striking and a startling thing that the mere removal of a patient into the open air should lower his fever, should remove his night sweats and take away his hectic, and it is difficult to avoid the conclusion that, if these symptoms are removed by the purity of the air outside, they must have been largely caused by the impurity of the air within the house. Nor have we any right to assume that it is the consumptive only who suffers. Doubtless the healthy struggle against and overcome evil influences before which those who are tuberculous succumb, but that is not to say that in the struggle we do not suffer; and, indeed, the facts recently brought forward are sufficient to show that the stuffy life of warmth and comfort which civilized man now "enjoys" is bad for the health, even of the healthiest. We make our windows fit, we pad our doors, we shiver at a draught, we surround ourselves with woolen curtains, dusty carpets and fluffy, luxurious upholstery. We breathe the same air over and over again, and then we wonder that we are not strong and vigorous. The fact is, we are daily using up the exuberant vitality with which nature has provided us in struggling against artificial conditions. How powerful for evil, how deteriorating these conditions are, are shown by the fact that their mere removal gives back to the consumptive that vitality which enables him to overcome the seeds of disease within him. Fresh air is not a thing to be taken in little doses once a day, but a thing to live on.

He who would keep his heart pure and holy must plant a sentinel at every avenue by which sin may find access there, guarding against none more than the little sins, as they are called.—Thomas Guthrie.

OPERATIONS FOR CANCER.

If Taken in Time This Disease Can Be Cured.

Dr. Herbert Snow, an eminent English authority on cancer, notes the increased number of deaths from cancer (from 8,117 in 1864 to 22,945 in 1895 in England), and urges a more scientific study of cancer. He said recently: "It must be borne in mind that the majority of the sufferers are perfectly curable by a surgical operation within certain limits of time. In 90 per cent, or nine out of every ten cancer cases, the organ attacked is amenable to the resources of practical surgery, applied not merely to palliate, but to eradicate permanently. The bogie of heredity, i. e., of a transmitted constitutional taint, has been extinguished by the past twenty years' research and experience. No one conversant with those investigations now entertains the smallest doubt on the fact that cancer is primarily a purely local malady; that it differs only, say, from a carious tooth, in its peculiar properties of emitting cells which carry infection to distant parts of the organism. Hence, if it be wisely dealt with by the operating surgeon within that pre-infective period, a stage of several weeks or even months, it is just as easily extirpated as is an offending molar or incisor. The only really ab initio incurable cases of cancer are those wherein an internal organ essential to life is the primary site, and such constitute a very small minority of the whole. The popular idea is that 'cancer' is 'something in the system,' a mysterious entity, which when cut out in one place is certain to show itself sooner or later again, either there or in some other locality. That impression is by no means limited to the uneducated. Not long since I heard a very highly placed dignitary of the Established Church remark at a public function: 'Everyone knows that who once has cancer always has cancer.' Nothing could well be more remote from the truth."

WHAT "V" MEANT.

The Mysterious Emblem Accepted by a Boy at Amherst College.

Many years ago a young fellow entered the freshman class at Amherst College—a lad with a square jaw, a steady eye, a pleasant smile and a capacity for hard and persistent work. One day, after he had been in college about a week, he took a chair from his room into the hall, mounted it and nailed over the door a large square of cardboard on which was painted a big black letter V, and nothing else. College boys do not like mysteries, and the young man's neighbors tried to make him tell what the big V meant. Was it "for luck"? Was it a joke? What was it? The sophomores took it up and treated the freshman to some hazing; but he would make no answer to the questions they put. At last he was let alone and his V remained over the door, merely a mark of the eccentricity of the occupant. Four years passed. On commencement day Horace Maynard delivered the valedictory of his class, the highest honor the college bestowed. After he had left the platform, amid the applause of his fellow students and of the audience, one of his classmates accosted him: "Was that what your 'V' meant? Were you after the valedictory when you tacked up that card?" "Of course," Maynard replied. "What else could it have been? How else could I have got it?" Maynard needed to tack no other letters over his door. The impetus he had gained carried him through life. He became a member of Congress, attorney-general of Tennessee, minister to Turkey and postmaster-general, and adorned every position to which he was called.—Youths' Companion.

Transplanting Races Improves Physique.

It is asserted by ethnologists that the transplantation of the European races to newer countries results in the improvement of the physique. The French Canadian, for example, is of more hardy frame than the Frenchman in his own country, and the colonial-born Englishman, whether in Canada, South Africa or Australasia, is, on the average, slightly taller, though not heavier, than the natives of those islands. But, probably, the most striking example of increased stature is to be found in the South African Dutchmen, and especially in the Boers of the Transvaal. All travelers agree that not only are the Boers, physically, a much finer race than either the French or the Dutch, from whom they are descended, but that they are probably the tallest race of white men in the world. Two reasons for this remarkable increase in stature naturally suggest themselves. First, the almost perfect climate, which makes the open-air life of the South African uplands the healthiest in the world, and secondly, the struggle for existence which the emigrants had to fight with the wilderness and the natives, which must have rapidly weeded out all but the strongest and most enduring.

MDCCC or MDCD or MCM?

How shall we express the century in Roman numerals? Shall it be MDCCCC or MDCD or MCM? If we adopt the first style we lay up for those of us who survive till 1988 the following overpowering combination: —MDCCCCLXXXVIII. The second style is a sort of hybrid. The Times-Herald is in favor of style number three, which in the matter of simplicity, euphony and brevity certainly has the advantage over its rivals. It paves the way for the double M, which many children now living will live to write as the sign of the twenty-first century. —Chicago Times-Herald.

CONGRESSMAN BOTKIN

The Well-Known Kansas Statesman, Cured of Catarrh of the Stomach by Pe-ru-na.

AFTER TWENTY-FIVE YEARS' SUFFERING.

More Evidence of Interest to the Millions of Catarrh Sufferers in the United States.

HON. J. D. BOTKIN, CONGRESSMAN-AT-LARGE FROM KANSAS.

In a recent letter to Dr. Hartman, Congressman Botkin, of Winfield, Kan., whose fame is a national one, says of Peruna:

My Dear Doctor:—"It gives me pleasure to certify to the excellent curative qualities of your medicines—Peruna and Manalin. I have been afflicted more or less for a quarter of a century with catarrh of the stomach and constipation. A residence in Washington has increased these troubles. A few bottles of your medicine have given me almost complete relief, and I am sure that a continuation of them will effect a permanent cure. Peruna is surely a wonderful remedy for catarrhal affections."—J. D. Botkin, Congressman-at-Large.

CONGRESSMAN BOTKIN is one of the most influential and best known men in the State of Kansas. Whatever he may say on any subject will be accepted by the people as the truth. So famous a remedy as Peruna could not have well escaped the attention of so famous a man. He not only has heard of the remedy, but he has used it and was relieved of an affliction of twenty-five years' standing. Peruna is the one internal remedy that cures chronic catarrh. It cures catarrh wherever located. This is a fact that the people are rapidly finding out, but there are still a large multitude who need to know it.

Mr. Frank Richter, of Winona, Minn., says in a letter to The Peruna Medicine Company:

"As a remedy for catarrh I take pleasure in recommending Peruna for catarrh of the stomach. I know what it is to be afflicted with this awful disease and consider it my duty to say a word in behalf of the remedy which gave me such relief. Peruna cured me, and I know it will cure any one else who suffers from this disease. It gives me great pleasure to testify to the curative effects of this medicine. Peruna is a well tested and frequently used remedy, and for catarrh of the stomach it is unsurpassed.

"My catarrh was principally located in my head and stomach. I tried many remedies without success. I tried several doctors but they were unable to cure me. I read of Peruna in the papers and five bottles cured me."—Frank Richter.

The gastric juice is secreted by the mucous follicles of the stomach. When this juice is normal it digests (dissolves) the food without producing any disturbance whatever. If, however, the gastric juice is not normal, digestion causes many disagreeable symptoms. This condition is known as indigestion. Peruna will cure this.

Mrs. Selina Tanner, Athens, O., writes: "I cannot find words to express my thanks for your kind advice. I never once thought I had catarrh of the stomach. I commenced taking Peruna as you directed. My stomach continued to hurt me for about two weeks after I began the medicine and then it stopped. I now have a good appetite while before I was nearly starved."—Mrs. Selina Tanner.

Mrs. Selina Tanner.

Mr. L. O. Marble, of Geneva, Neb., writes:

"I do believe that my catarrh is entirely cured. I have not had any trouble with my stomach for a long time. I am as well as one of my age could expect (seventy years). I have had the catarrh ever since I was a young man, and have doctored for it for years and got very little better, but thanks to you and your Peruna and Manalin I believe I am well of it. I can eat anything now and it doesn't hurt me, and Peruna is the only thing I have ever found that will cure the catarrh. I believe it is the only cure for catarrh, and I hope every one troubled with catarrh will try Peruna and be cured."—L. O. Marble.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

The English Royal Band.

The royal band is one of those bodies attached to the court that will not be interfered with by the king. This royal orchestra is an ancient institution, dating back four centuries, and doubtless owing its origin to the musical performances given by David before Saul. Nowadays, however, these instrumentalists are not engaged to cure a monarch of melancholia, but their work consists of playing light pieces after the royal family have dined, and giving occasional concerts. The master of the music is Sir Walter Parratt, and in the king's band there are thirty-four instrumentalists, the first violinist being Alfred Gibson. Whenever they play before royalty the members of the band are attired in blue velvet coats and knee breeches, with white ties and white waistcoats, but the conductor's dress is different in the respect that he has a dark collar, whereas, each man under him wears a blue one. There is one woman in the orchestra, the harpist.

A Financial Merry-Go-Round.

"Judy and I got into a terrible tangle shopping to-day."

"How?"

"I owed her 10 cents and borrowed 5 cents and then 50 cents."

"Well?"

"Then I paid 30 cents for something she bought—"

"Yes?"

"And she paid 40 cents for something I bought, and then we treated each other to ice-cream soda."

"Well?"

"She says I still owe her a nickel."—Exchange.

Only Exception to Tip System.

A New York man tells this:

"A friend of mine from the country, who had been my guest for a week, was coming down town with me on a Broadway car. After I had paid the fare he was curious to know why I failed to tip the conductor. I asked what he meant.

"'Well,' he replied, 'you have tipped everything and everybody you have had anything to do with since I have been with you, and I don't know why you except a street car conductor.'

"Good deal of truth in what he said."—Exchange.

Jews in the Roumanian Army.

No Jewish soldier in the Roumanian army can be promoted to a commission, however loyal and brave he may be. The saying is that as long as he is with the flag he is a soldier. When he ceases to be a soldier, he becomes a Jew again. Even if he enlists for a second term of service, he does not, like others who do so, earn a pension thereby. An army surgeon, if he be a Jew, and the best surgeons in Roumania are Jews as a rule, only ranks as a common soldier, whereas, his professional inferiors rank as officers. No Jews are admitted to the military schools, and however high the scholastic or university distinction and grades of a Jew, he has to serve as a "ranker" for three years, instead of being let off as a "volontaire" with one year's service. Such is the treatment accorded to the 30,000 Jews belonging to the active army and reserves of the Roumanian state.—National review.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

DELAREY DEFEATED

RETREAT OF THE BOERS TURNED INTO A ROUT.

Gen. Babington Has a Running Fight With Delarey Lasting Two Days—Pursued Until the British Horses Are Exhausted—Last Day of the Fight Was a Rout for the Boers—British Casualties Were Two Dead and Seven Wounded—Boers Leave Many Dead on the Field.

London, March 29.—In a dispatch to the war office, dated March 27, Gen. Kitchener reports that the British casualties in the recent action between Gen. Babington's command and the Boers were two killed and seven wounded. The Boers left twenty-two dead on the field. Thirty dead on their side are accounted for. The pursuit being rapid, more casualties are likely. Gen. Kitchener describes the engagement as a running fight, which occurred on Saturday and Sunday, on which latter day the Boer retreat became a rout. The pursuit was continued until the British horses were exhausted. Gen. Babington was assisted by Shekelton's column. The Boers under Gen. Delarey numbered 1,500.

TURKEY IN A BAD WAY.

Abdul's Trustee Proclaimed Sultan by the Arabs.

London, March 29. — Advices from Constantinople are that affairs are rapidly reaching a dangerous pass there. Turkish finances are in an inextricable confusion. All government salaries are from six to eight months in arrears. Upward of a million Turkish pounds are due for war material, while the military expenditure is daily increasing to cope with the rebellion in the province of Yemen, in Southern Arabia, and the possible rising of Macedonia. There is no doubt that the Ottoman troops received a severe check from the Arab insurgents who, in a manifesto denouncing the sultan, proclaimed his brother, Mohammed Reshad Effendi, to be sultan, with the title of Mohammed V.

CZAR'S FATE IS SEALED.

That Is the Boast Made by the Nihilists.

Paris, March 29.—Knowledge of the nihilists' plots that surround the czar of Russia has aroused interest throughout Europe. Nihilists here, in London and Berlin say that the seriousness of the situation in Russia is not known throughout the rest of the continent. They boast that Nicholas is doomed and they add that he knows it. The secret police are said to be powerless to cope with the plotters. Since the discovery of the mine under the council chamber of the Tsarkoe-Selo palace the czar has been afraid to trust his advisors—even M. Pobiedonstzeff, the procurator of the holy synod, his most intimate friend and confidant.

Diplomacy Instead of Force.

Washington, March 29. — Secretary Long has cabled an order to Admiral Rodgers, on board the cruiser New York at Tangier, to proceed at once with that vessel to Manila. This is an abandonment of the plan to have the New York convey United States Consul General Gummere from Tangier to Mazargen in the attempt to collect American claims. It is the purpose of the state department to endeavor to adjust these claims and other outstanding issues against Morocco without any show of force and in the ordinary practice of diplomacy.

Not Killed by Her Dog.

New York, March 29.—The coroner's jury in the inquest to determine the cause of the death of Mrs. Carrie Cabus on March 17 brought in a verdict yesterday that she died from hemorrhage from a penetrating wound of the throat, involuntarily self-inflicted while suffering from an attack of epilepsy. At first it was reported that Mrs. Cabus' death was caused by a pet terrier biting her in the throat.

Boom for Montreal.

Cleveland, March 29.—Grain shipping firms assert that a great deal of the grain from the Northwest will be shipped via Georgian bay and Montreal, making inroads upon the Buffalo business and necessarily upon the New York trade. When the elevators at Both Port Colborne and Montreal are established the additional movement through Montreal will be much greater.

Would-Be Lynchers Cheated.

Galesburg, Ill., March 29. — An attempt was made here last night to lynch Edward Jackson, the negro who is charged with murdering Charles B. Rowe, a Chicago, Burlington & Quincy engineer. While the mob was around the jail the sheriff hurried the prisoner off to Monmouth. A committee from the mob was permitted to search the jail.

None can foresee the outcome of the quarrel between foreign powers over the division of China. It is interesting to watch the going to pieces of this ancient but unprogressive race. Mirrors for Girls in Prison.

It is said that the recommendation of the legislative investigating committee for an appropriation of $50 to buy small looking glasses for the inmates of the state industrial school for girls, was caused by the discovery that they have not been permitted to have anything of that kind.

Under the rules of the superintendent, girls and children found with a bit of broken looking glass in their possession received a large number of demerit marks, this evidence of worldly vanity being considered injurious to their moral welfare. The voluntary surrender of a bit of broken looking glass by a girl who had accidentally found it was construed as evidence of moral progress, and rewarded by numerous merit marks. As a result, the girls cleansed their faces and crimped their hair by polished surfaces of tin or wood, though the crimping of hair was also punished by demerit marks. Protests by some of the managers against these rules were of no avail.

"I followed Mrs. Pinkham's Advice and Now I am Well."

A woman is sick—some disease peculiar to her sex is fast developing in her system. She goes to her family physician and tells him a story, but not the whole story.

She holds back something, loses her head, becomes agitated, forgets what she wants to say, and finally conceals what she ought to have told, and this completely mystifies the doctor.

Is it a wonder, therefore, that the doctor fails to cure the disease? Still we cannot blame the woman, for it is very embarrassing to detail some of the symptoms of her suffering, even to her family physician. This is the reason why hundreds of thousands of women are now in correspondence with Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. To her they can give every symptom, so that when she is ready to advise them she is in possession of more facts from her correspondence with the patient than the physician can possibly obtain through a personal interview.

Following we publish a letter from a woman showing the result of a correspondence with Mrs. Pinkham. All such letters are considered absolutely confidential by Mrs. Pinkham, and are never published in any way or manner without the consent in writing of the patient; but hundreds of women are so grateful for the health which Mrs. Pinkham and her medicine have been able to restore to them that they not only consent to publishing their letters, but write asking that this be done in order that other women who suffer may be benefited by their experience.

Mrs. Ella Rice, Chelsea, Wis., writes:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—For two years I was troubled with falling and inflammation of the womb. I suffered very much with bearing-down pains, headache, backache, and was not able to do anything. What I endured no one knows but those who have suffered as I did. I could hardly drag myself across the floor. I doctored with the physicians of this town for three months and grew worse instead of better. My husband and friends wished me to write to you, but I had no faith in patent medicines. At last I became so bad that I concluded to ask your advice. I received an answer at once advising me to take your Vegetable Compound, and I did so. Before I had taken two bottles I felt better, and after I had taken five bottles there was no happier woman on earth, for I was well again. I know that your Vegetable Compound cured me, and I wish and advise every woman who suffers as I did to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Believe me always grateful for the recovery of my health."—MRS. ELLA RICE, Chelsea, Wis.

"In a word, he fell madly in love with her, a poor, obscure girl, with only her fortune in her face and voice. Such strides did his passion make that he was ready to offer her even his name; but when, in the madness of his love, he asked her to become his wife, he learned of an unexpected and insurmountable obstacle.

"She already was a wife. Married at sixteen, by her parents, to a coarse, rough man, who treated her cruelly, and whom she feared and disliked; her life for three years had been only wretchedness.

"You can foresee the result. Marriage was impossible between them; but in this country nothing was known of her. My cousin had only arrived in Florence on the day of her debut, and his presence there was not suspected. Therefore, they agreed that they should put the past behind them, and find a mutual heaven in each other's love.

"They left Florence at once—left in such a way that she might not be traced. He brought her to his own country, his own home. He presented her to his friends as his wife.

"A year later, Beatrice was born, and her mother's life paid the forfeit. Does my story surprise you, Mr. Arnold?"

"It surprises and shocks me, sir, beyond all words. But, I should be inclined to impugn it. It seems incredible that in all these years, I should have believed myself in your cousin's confidence, and yet that this page in his history should have been wholly shut out from my view. But—my God!" he exclaimed, as the dawning of a new idea penetrated his legal brain, "if this be true, in the absence of any will you, and not Miss Markham, are the legal heir."

"Yes," assented Mr. Chester, with an air of weariness, through his lids drooped for an instant over the black glittering eyes, to hide their flash of triumph. "Yes; but what matters that since Beatrice is to be my wife? Knowing my deep attachment for her, my cousin confided to me this history. He felt it justice to me to tell me all the truth. I need not say it made no difference in my purpose to win her for my wife. Of course, I supposed the property would pass her will. Failing this, I shall urge our marriage to take place at once. Once my wife, I am quite willing to allow the world to remain in ignorance of the facts, and to permit her to inherit, all undisputed by me."

"This is very generous action on your part, Mr. Chester, but I can well understand your wish to shield Miss Markham from this sad knowledge at any sacrifice. Have you any proofs to support the statements you have just made to me?"

"Proofs!" repeated Chester, with a half-sad, half-mocking smile. "It is scarcely my side of the story which requires proof. If my cousin's marriage had ever been legalized there would be abundant proof readily procured. Where is his marriage license—his marriage certificate? Among his papers we have found nothing. Yet you know how singularly methodical a man he was."

"I know—I know!" assented the lawyer, thoughtfully; "but may not these papers be in the same hiding place with the missing will? However, I am indeed rejoiced there is so happy a road out of all the difficulty. Your marriage with Miss Markham makes all things easy for you both, and saves her, poor girl, from a knowledge more bitter than death. I doubt, indeed, whether we fully recognize Bertram Talbot's unworthiness even of her passing favor. It is he, Mr. Arnold, who has orphaned her—he who robbed her father, and now awaits his trial for that crime. I hope to secure his conviction and condemnation before Beatrice recovers sufficiently to know what is being done in the matter. It will only cause her new pain. She is so proud that to feel that she had ever granted such a man a place in her esteem would be most cruel and humiliating."

"There can, of course, be no doubt of his guilt?"

"Doubt? One does not doubt the evidence of his own senses, Mr. Arnold. I saw Bertram Talbot commit the deed. I saw him steal the papers."

And then, circumstantially, he related the story he had told to Beatrice on the night of her father's death.

The lawyer listened, silently, to the end.

"Poor child!" he murmured, when he had heard all. "And yet such a man as this could turn her heart for a moment from such a one as yourself? You have, indeed, been generous, Mr. Chester, and I can only from my heart wish that you may win the success that you so richly deserve."

Rising as he spoke, he extended his hand, and grasped the other's cordially.

Randolph Chester stood a moment, as Mr. Arnold passed out from the room, while hate, triumph and desire alternately swept, in their varying expressions, over his face.

"The trial is set down for next week," he mused. "No man at the bar possesses keener legal acumen than Richard Arnold, and he saw no flaw in the story. How should there be a flaw? Did I not see the robbery committed? Did not Tyrrell pick up the bonds? Ay, Tyrrell? Dare he be trusted on the stand? Yes, I think so. And then, Bertram Talbot, we will see how your manly beauty adapts itself to the convict's garb! And you, my fair, proud cousin, will your love beat itself against the prison walls which hold your lover? I will let you bruise your wings a little while, if you must!

CHAPTER VI.

It was the morning of the day appointed for Bertram Talbot's trial.

The master of Grey Oaks had been buried a fortnight, and Beatrice, his beloved child, had nearly followed him to the portals of the grave.

For the last two weeks only she had been conscious of what was passing about her, but neither her father's nor Bertram's name had escaped her lips.

She lay upon her pillows with eyes closed, or widely open and staring into vacancy, through all the long hours. Mechanically she tasted the food and swallowed the medicine her attendants brought her. She shed no tears, but grief had set its impress upon that lovely young face, and needed no lamentation to proclaim its presence.

For the first time to-day she roused herself from her apathy of weakness and suffering as the physician entered her chamber.

"I have been trying to think,' doctor," she said, "and all is slowly coming back to me—all, all that happened on the night papa died. No, do not stop me; let me talk! The thoughts keep burning, burning inside me, and I shall be better when I know that some of them are the fancies born of my delirium! It seems to me that some one called Bertram Talbot a thief—some one said that he had robbed papa! Was it delirium, doctor, or was it truth?"

"Do not distress yourself now, my child. What matters it? Be assured that if it be true that justice will be done the evil-doer."

"True?" she gasped. "You mean it in reality Bertram stole papa's money? Do you not know, doctor, it would be for him as impossible as for me? I would as soon have touched papa's gold as he. But it is true, then, that he has been accused of this frightful thing? Oh, I did not think I could have dreamed it, and little by little it has been shaping itself within my brain. Where is he? He must come home, or I must see him at once, doctor—at once!"

"Calm yourself, Miss Beatrice," he said, quietly. 'You will no longer wish to see this man when I tell you that all your faith in him has been misplaced; but, if innocent, as you loyally believe him, he will soon be able to prove it, and come to you triumphant, since to-day is set for his trial."

"His trial?" she repeated. "You mean—"

"That Bertram Talbot is to be tried to-day for the robbery of bonds and papers from your father's safe on the night of his death. Indeed, there is little doubt but that death was the result of his agitation on the discovery. Indeed, there are many witnesses to the fact that your father was sufficiently conscious to identify him as the thief, and your cousin, Miss Markham, saw him commit the robbery."

"It is false—all false! And yet—oh, God! they will swear his liberty away, and I am powerless—powerless to save him! Oh, I see it all—the plot and the plotter, of which he and I are to be the victims! He and I! No! If it were true, Dr. Lovel, have I no right in this matter? Who should prosecute him if not I? What right have these outsiders to step in and take my place? But it is a lie—a false, foul lie—and I must prove it! I am not a weak, helpless girl! This has made me a woman! I have money! Ah, I can thank God for it now, since, with it, I can protect myself and him! Is Randolph Chester mad, that he dares thus defy me? I am strong, doctor. This event has banished my weakness and given me back my strength. You say this trial—this mockery of justice—takes place to-day? Then they shall have an unexpected witness, for I will be present at the trial!"

"You!" gasped the doctor, believing he, indeed, had a mad woman to deal with. "My child, I cannot permit you further to excite yourself. I told you all the truth, believing you would understand, then, why your wish to see Mr. Talbot could not be granted, and so grow calmer."

But, sadly, Beatrice shook her head. "I must attend this trial doctor, or lose my life in the attempt. Do not seek to thwart me. You do but drain further by such a course the strength of which I stand in so great need. You must go with me, doctor, or I will go alone! But Bertram Talbot shall not think at such a time I have deserted him!"

"He will not think so, Miss Beatrice. He already knows that you are ill. I will be your messenger to him. Give me what message you will, and I swear to deliver it faithfully."

"I must go, doctor," she said, firmly. "Do you not see that this contradiction is more harmful to me than granting me my own will? Besides, my life is my own, to do with now as I will. I would lose it for Bertie's sake than live on, knowing I might have averted this most cruel wrong. Send Marie to me, please; order the carriage, doctor, for the midnight train! Quick! There is no time to lose!"

. . . .

The noon recess was over, and the judge had resumed his seat. The court room was crowded, and the breathless silence which prevailed during the taking of the testimony showed that a trial of widespread interest was taking place.

A young and handsome man occupied the prisoner's place in the dock.

There was an open, frank look on his face which belied the possibility of any crime.

The great brown eyes, fringed with dark lashes, looked fearlessly out upon his accusers.

The morning session had been occupied by one witness.

Clearly, succinctly, Randolph Chester had related the story of the robbery. He had told how he himself had seen the prisoner enter the room in its owner's absence and steal the bonds from the open safe. He described his subsequent discovery and attempt at escape. The groom, Tyrrell, with his corroborative testimony, was to follow him.

The spectators forgot the favorable impression the prisoner had made upon them as they listened to this damaging evidence of his guilt. That seeming frankness of expression then, was the mask he wore to hide his duplicity.

Now and then, as the testimony proceeded, they could readily fancy his adding murder to his crime, since, so clearly and succinctly Mr. Chester explained how he himself had been a witness to the act, the brown eyes blazed into passionate fire, and the long, tawny mustache failed to conceal the white, even teeth as they met upon his under lip. Beyond this he gave no sign.

When Tyrrell, the second witness, took the stand he relapsed into stony calm—he calm one might characterise as born of withering a contempt that such a tool might wreak him further harm.

The man's testimony was clear and forcible, though he shuffled uneasily beneath the cross-questioning and kept his eyes continually fixed upon the ground, save when he lifted them, as if for encouragement, to Randolph Chester's face.

The prisoner then was permitted a few words in his own defense. They fell, weak and meaningless, as opposed to the burden of proof against him.

"I am in the hands of perjurers and false witnesses," he said, in conclusion. "I can only solemnly asseverate and declare my innocence of the charge. I returned, it is true, to Mr. Markham's house and entered his library. He had been my best and warmest friend until a viper had crawled between us and planted the sting of suspicion in his breast. We had parted in anger. I was about to make a long journey, to be absent an indefinite time, and I had gone back to ask Mr. Markham to give me his hand"—here the prisoner's voice broke, and he resumed with difficulty—"and bid me godspeed. As I neared the house, I saw a man stealing along by some bushes. It was Tyrrell, the groom. The library windows were wide open, and the room itself deserted. I wondered what he had been about, for his actions denoted guilt. I soon was enlightened. I entered the library through one of the windows as Mr. Markham entered the door. He had been absent, it seems, but a few minutes. He was surprised and, I fancied, glad to see me. His sudden anger had died against me. He listened to my story and extended his hand to me. Thank God, he grasped mine in friendship once more before he died! At that moment his eye fell upon the safe, and his face grew very pale.

"'I have been robbed!' he cried. 'My God, Talbot, this is not your work?'

"'As God is my judge, no!' I replied; and then in a few rapid words, I told him what I had seen.

"'It is that scamp, Tyrrell!' he exclaimed. 'I discharged him to-day from my service!'

"And then he fell back, white and gasping, in his chair.

"I forgot all then but his need of succor. I feared to alarm his daughter by arousing the household, and so hastened to bring a physician to him, believing it to be the quickest way, and intending, meantime, to send him some assistance from the lodge. Ere I could reach it I was arrested as a thief—arrested at the instance of the man who to-day has perjured himself before God and man. But before heaven and earth, I swear that I am innocent of this crime!"

The faces of the jurymen wore absolutely a smile of incredulity as he finished speaking. Was ever defense so weak against proof so strong?

The judge occupied but a few minutes in his charge. The trial had occupied but one day. Scarcely half an hour were the jury absent from their places when they sent in word of their agreement and were brought back into the court room.

At that moment a new sensation was apparent. Winding their way through the dense throng was an elderly man, and leaning on his arm was a young girl, dressed in deep mourning, her features wholly concealed from view by the long veil of black crepe.

Involuntarily the crowd made way for them as the foreman of the jury stood up in his place to deliver the verdict of himself and his eleven comrades.

"Do you find the prisoner guilty or not guilty?" asked the judge.

"Guilty, your honor!" was the firm reply.

A low cry broke upon the answering silence.

"God in heaven, I have come too late!" she murmured.

With a quick gesture the newcomer threw back her veil. The prisoner turned his head and saw her. A quick wave of crimson flushed his face; but it was the flush of pride, not of shame. She pressed close to him.

"I will save you yet, darling!" she whispered. "Put your faith in me, as mine is anchored in you!"

Then he was remanded back for sentence to his cell.

Truly, Beatrice had come too late!

CHAPTER VII.

Back to Grey Oaks! Its luxury, its splendor, all were painful, for they brought to her more forcibly the contrast of a bare cell in the Tombs, where her lover awaited sentence for an uncommitted crime.

Three days had passed since Dr. Lovel had almost carried her from the court room and brought her back to her home; three days, during which she had been able to do nothing, not even to think—when sleep had been bought by anodyne, and wakefulness tortured by hideous nightmare.

She knew that she must act, but the power to do so had forsaken her. She had placed too heavy a tax on her newly-tried strength, and thus she had paid the penalty. But on the evening of the third day youth and strength were slowly exerting themselves.

To-morrow she would send for Mr. Arnold, her dead father's counselor and friend. She would reveal to him all her suspicions, and would put her cause and Bertie's in his hands.

A table was drawn close to her couch, and on it were scattered books and writing materials. She took a pen in her hand to summon him to her, when the door opened and, unannounced, unheralded, Randolph Chester entered the room.

Her face crimsoned, then paled. She threw back her head with a haughty, impulsive gesture he knew so well.

So had he seen her express her transitory anger as a little child, when some one had opposed her will.

But would she be as easily appeased now as then? ? He believed not; but he was not dismayed. Did he not hold firmly in his hands the weapons for her subjugation?"

"Pardon my intrusion, Beatrice," he said, gently, "for such I am, unhappily, sure you will deem it. But it is quite necessary that I should see and talk with you, and I feared to send my name lest you should deny me."

"You are quite right," she answered, icily. "There is nothing you can have to say to me which I must be forced to hear—nothing which I will hear. I was about writing to Mr. Arnold to come to me to-morrow. You can make him the messenger between us."

"No, Beatrice. No man can be my messenger in what I have to say to you. You only must hear. From your lips alone can I receive my answer. My child, will you not let the tie of blood between us teach you to look more kindly upon me? Will you not believe that I am not your enemy, but your friend—your cousin? Gladly would I urge a closer claim. I love you, Beatrice—love you with all the passion and ardor of my soul! I would be your friend, lover, protector, husband, all in one. O, Beatrice, do not look so white, so stern, so hard! Let me teach you to love me, to give me some little fragment of hope for my heart to feed upon!"

All the subtlety of his fascination was in his manner and his words as he made his plea. His eyes blazed with passion, his voice quivered with feeling; but he was gentle, as though pleading with a little child. But no softening crept into the pale, beautiful face of the girl, who listened and shivered.

"You force me to answer you?" she said, at last, between her firmly-set teeth, while her hands instinctively clenched. "Is it, indeed, necessary that I should let you know, in words, the utter hopelessness of such a plea to me—a plea which, coming from you, is an insult? Yes, it is well no other ear heard, no other mind conceived, this last crowning humiliation to which you have subjected me. You ask me to marry you—you, who swore away my love and life; you, who perjured yourself in your false witness against him; you, who conceived and fastened on the world a lie, so base, so cruel, that its black reflection should shut out all future sunlight from your life! Well, you have spoken and I have heard. Will my answer suffice? If not, let me make it more clear. Let there be no mistake between us. If choice were given me between going to your embrace or accepting the death embrace of the glittering, sinuous reptile folds of the venomous cobra, I would choose the latter as less poisonous than yours."

She spoke with panting breath, her words low-voiced but clear, distinct, though suppressed by the feeling that bore her beyond her own control.

Chester's face grew red.

One day she should wipe out in her heart's blood every syllable which had burned itself upon his revengeful memory—one day!

But, conscious of his power, he could afford to wait.

And so, by almost superhuman effort, he nerved himself to control, and when at last he spoke, his voice gave no evidence of the fearful external conflict.

He seemed rather a man stricken by some great sorrow than mediating a great revenge.

At any cost he must make this woman his wife—ah, he would teach her then!

"Beatrice," he said, "I little knew the child who used to sit upon my knee, and talk to me her childish prattle, could ever deal me such a blow. What better proof can I give you of my love than in granting you an instant pardon? One day you will see and recognize your own bitter injustice. But, Beatrice, there are reasons why I must, for your own sake, force my suit, unwelcome as it is to, you. My child your father's will cannot be found, and, in its absence, there may be some difficulties in your assuming control of the property."

"These are matters for Mr. Arnold, not yourself," she interrupted. "Sir, I will listen no further to your plausible manner. Leave my presence and my house, or I will ring for my servants to eject you!"

The scorn in her tone rather than her words broke down the last barrier of his control.

He sprang, white and trembling, from his chair to his feet.

"May I ask whose house this is, Miss Markham, that you should issue orders to your servants to have me thrust from its doors?"

"There can scarcely be doubt, sir, as to Grey Oaks' mistress!"

"Grey Oaks has no mistress," he replied, taking one step nearer, and fastening his glittering eyes full upon her, as he watched to note how, blow by blow, each stroke would tell. "Grey Oaks owns a master. It is you, Miss Markham, who are indebted to my courtesy for your shelter here."

"Are you mad?" she said. "I your guest? My household not my own to command? May I call even my name my own?"

"No;" he exclaimed, drawing himself to his full height, and folding his arms across his chest. "No! Your mother never was your father's wedded wife! Now, my fair cousin, will you still reject my suit, or will you listen to the further terms on which I offer it?"

WALLERT IS HANGED

PAYS THE PENALTY FOR A FIENDISH CRIME.

Killed His Wife and Four Children in a Most Atrocious Manner—Small Crowd of Spectators Witness His Execution in the Sibley County Jail Yard—Maintained His Stoicism Until the Last—Expresses No Sorrow for a Crime Almost Without a Parallel in the Criminal Annals of Minnesota.

Henderson, Minn., March 30.—Franz Theodore Wallert, slayer of his wife and four stepchildren, was hanged in the Sibley county jailyard this morning by Sheriff August Gaffke.

The execution was witnessed by about 125 spectators, who had been sworn in as deputy sheriffs by Sheriff Gaffke. The spectators included about twenty sheriffs from other Minnesota and upper Iowa counties.

Wallert spent the day shrouded in the same cloak of stoicism that had marked his conduct since his capture the day following the murder. Shortly after noon August Wallert, a brother, and Joseph Gersch, Gustave Steinmann and August Pream, brothers-in-law, bade the prisoner a short and Unimpassioned Good-Bye.

Wallert talked with them without emotion and assured them that he was ready to meet his fate. Although professing deep religious convictions Wallert declined to express to his brother, as he had previously declined to express, any sorrow for the commission of a murder which, for fiendish deliberation, is almost without parallel in the criminal annals of Minnesota. Fr. Kersy spent several hours in the condemned man's cell yesterday, and he was with Wallert when Deputy Sheriff Beecher came to warn him that within an hour he must die. It was then for the first time that there was the slightest indication of a break in he had preserved since his arrest. The last sacrement was administered by Fr. Kersy, and Wallert, rapidly approaching the stage of collapse, was prepared for the death march. He was dressed in a cheap suit of black and wore a white shirt, without collar or cravat. Preceded by Sheriff Gaffke, Wallert, supported on either side by Deputy Sheriffs Charles Beecher and Frank Bame, was escorted to the scaffold. Fr. Kersy followed the doomed man, who was half-led, half-lifted up the thirteen steps leading to the scaffold. Sheriffs Wagner and Schwaler fastened the bands which bound Wallert's arms and legs and adjusted the black cap. Sheriff Gaffke, standing almost immediately in front of the trap, gave the lover a quick jerk. Wallert's form shot through the trap, bounded back, and after a few convulsive struggles was still.

The Stolid Front

Wallert's Crime.

One night last August Wallert fired the house in which his fife and her five children were sleeping, then calmly took his post at the foot of the stairs leading to their sleeping apartments to butcher them as they attempted to escape from the flames. Mrs. Sophia Wallert and four children—Justus, Helena, Reinhold and Annie Steinborn—were stabbed to death with a butcher knife. Otto Steinborn, the ten-year-old son of Mrs. Wallert, was severely wounded, but subsequently recovered. Wallert had been estranged from his family for some time prior to the tragedy and had been employed as a farm laborer at different places in the vicinity of his own home. The sole reason Wallert gave for the commission of his crime was that he thought he was being defrauded of his property.

Severely Injured by Train.

Grantsburg, Wis., March 30.—Charles Lind, eighteen years of age, was stealing a ride on a train out of here. The train stopped to do work at a switch two miles west. After they left the wood leaders heard groaning and investigated. They found young Lind lying on the track, his right leg crushed and the left leg broken. He was brought to town. It is doubtful is he will live. The boy says he was going west in search of work. His home is at Doctors' Lake, fifteen miles east of here.

Drowned in the Trempealeau.

Winona, Minn., March 30. — Joseph Stoler and son Nicholas, residents of Arcadia, Wis., were attempting to cross the Trempealeau river when the boat which they were in was overturned and the father was drowned. The son caught an overhanging bough of a tree and saved his own life with the utmost difficulty. A searching party was immediately formed but the body has not yet been found.

No New Trial.

Dows, Iowa, March 30.—Judge Weaver of Iowa Falls has denied the motion for a new trial in the case of the state vs. Jamison and Crone of this city, accused of having used false weights in the grain and produce business. The case was carried through the courts three different times and had a hearing in the supreme court. A fine of $500 was assessed against the men and they asked for a new trial.

Deed of an Insane Man.

Mayville, Mich., March 30.—In an insane fit yesterday Christian Leix, aged thirty-five, cut the throat of Jacob Mooth, aged sixteen, and then ended his own life with the same instrument. Mooth was employed by Leix on his farm and was dead when found. Leix, who leaves a wife and three children, lived about three hours.

School Teacher Drank Laudanum.

Helena, Mont., March 30. — Minnie Doyle, a Maryville school teacher, drank laudanum and died shortly after arriving here. She was a former resident of Ellensburg, N. Y., and twenty-seven years old. Cause unknown.

Enlarging a River Steamer.

Dubuque, Iowa, March 30.—Workmen are busily engaged in completing the extensive improvements being made on the steamer Quincy, of the Diamond Jo line, in winter quarters in this city.

NEARLY A RIOT.

Rough House in Denver Caused by an Unpopular Fight Decision.

Denver, March 31.—At the end of a ten-round go before the Colorado Athletic club last night between Dave Barry of Toronto and Kid McPartland of New York Referee Floto, who is also manager of the club, awarded the fight to McPartland. Floto immediately left the ring amid the jeers of the entire audience and followed by Pat Early, manager for Barry. When they reached the office of the club Early struck Floto several times in the face, and was proceeding to pound him when bystanders separated them. The police cleared the house and prevented what threatened for a time to be a riot. The fight was even up to the fifth round, when Barry began pounding McPartland's heart with his right. He blocked nearly all of the Kid's leads, and landed his right in return invariably. An old wound over the right eye was opened in the eighth, and bled profusely till the finish. McPartland was weak in the ninth from Dave's persistent punching over the heart, and Barry seemed to be the stronger at the end.

COUNTERFEITERS CAPTURED.

Raid by Secret Service Officials Results in Two Captures.

Chicago, March 31.—The recollection of a type of counterfeit coins which bothered him fifteen years ago served Chief of Secret Service Porter well yesterday. It also proved the undoing of Henry Racke and Charles Brickwell, who are now locked up, charged with having made and passed coins of the same pattern. The counterfeit money consists of half-dollars, quarters and dimes which are so carefully made that Capt. Porter pronounces them the most dangerous that have appeared in many years. In a raid on the rooms of the men a box full of these coins and a complete counterfeiters' outfit were discovered. The prisoners admitted their guilt after being arrested, and, after waiving examination, were held to the federal grand jury in $1,000 bonds each.

BY ASSASSINATION.

Russian Students Decree the Death of Two Officials.

Berlin, March 31.—Death by assassination is the decree which the Russian students' secret organization has pronounced upon the czar's ministers of war and the interior, and the sentence has been transmitted to the condemned men. Advices from St. Petersburg say that similar sentences were communicated to M. Bogolepoff and M. Pobiedonbstzeff just before the murder of the former and the attempt on the life of the latter. The minister of the interior has forbidden the newspapers of Russia to mention the court proceedings arising out of the student outbreak. Grand Duke Vladimir, the czar's uncle, is organizing a mediation commission to inquire into the students' complaints and try to induce them to discontinue further revolt.

FILIPINO CIVIL SERVICE.

Educated Natives to Be Employed in the Coast and Geodetic Survey.

Washington, March 31. — The civil service commission has decided to request the Philippine civil service board at Manila to hold regular classified service examinations to secure well educated Filipinos between the ages of eighteen and twenty-five for service as aides in the coast and geodetic survey, which plans to press its work in that archipelago, beginning about June 1. One of its officials is already at Manila. The prospective Filipino appointees will receive $720 a year salary to begin with, and must have qualifications that include the higher mathematics, astronomy, physics, surveying, geography and two modern languages.

INSULT IN THE SOUTH.

Tennessee Lawyer Shot and Killed by Angry Husband.

Nashville, Ten., March 31.—Richard Darnell, one of Tennessee's most prominent lawyers, whose home is in Tiptonsville, was shot and killed by a man named Beazley. The shooting, which was the outgrowth of an insult offered by Beazley to Mrs. Darnell over the telephone, has caused the greatest excitement in Tiptonsville and a lynching is expected. The men met in a drug store. Beazley, without a word of warning, opened fire and shot Darnell through the stomach and back. The lawyer died within half an hour.

FLOOD IN TEXAS.

Six to Twelve Feet of Water in the Basements of Dallas.

Dallas, Tex., March 31. — A terrific rain and considerable hail fell over Northern Texas. The damage at Dallas will probably reach $100,000. There is six to twelve feet of water in basements. Many small bridges were destroyed. One wholesale whisky house has $200,000 worth of whisky under water, and it is estimated the actual loss at not less than $25,000.

Guests Lose Their Clothes.

Newport News, Va., March 31.—Fire damaged the Augusta hotel, Hampton, to the extent of $2,000 yesterday, the loss being confined chiefly to the furniture and fixtures. The house was well filled with guests, all of whom escaped without injury, but several lost all their belongings. The blaze started in the dry goods store of Mrs. C. W. Betts, on the ground floor of the building. The loss is covered by insurance.

Serious Result of a Duel.

Budapest, March 31.—In a duel resulting from a debate in parliament between Deputies Gyoerffy and Rakovszky, the former was wounded in the thumb.

Ball Pierced the Brain.

Burlington, Iowa, March 31. — Jake Decker, night flagman in the employ of the Burlington road, was instantly killed by Morris Dowling while passing his revolver to him for examination. The ball passed through the brain.

Attempted Criminal Assault.

Washington, Iowa, March 31. — Thomas Wilson, an aged farmer living near here, was indicted by the grand jury for attempted criminal assault on a twelve-year-old girl who had been assisting with his housework.

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

THE THIEF RIVER FALLS NEWS.

VOL. XVIII.—NO. 1[illegible] THIEF RIVER FALLS, RED LAKE COUNTY, MINN., THURSDAY, APRIL 11, 1901. $1.50 PER YEAR.

RAZE ALL THE FORTS

ALLIED COMMANDERS REACH AN AGREEMENT.

All the Forts at Taku, Tien-tsin, Peitang and Shanhai-Kwan and Along the Railroad From Tien-tsin to Pekin Will Be Destroyed—Camps and Arsenals Will Also Be Destroyed—Gen. Chaffee Announces That the Americans Will Evacuate China at the End of April.

Pekin, April 9.—The commanders of the several foreign contingents met yesterday at Count von Waldersee's headquarters and decided to raze all the forts at Taku, Tien-tsin, Peitang and Shanhai-kwan and along the railway within 2,000 meters of the line. It was also decided to destroy all the camps and arsenals except the west arsenal at Tien-tsin, which will be used as a barracks for the permanent military guard. Ten posts will be established between Pekin and Shanhai-kwan, which will be garrisoned by 6,000 men. Two thousand troops will be stationed at Tien-tsin, but 6,000 will remain there temporarily. The number to remain in Pekin has not yet been decided upon.

American Evacuation.

Gen Chaffee has announced that the American troops will evacuate China at the end of April. He hopes that he may induce others to consent to an early withdrawal.

Additional confirmation has been received here of an incipient rebellion in Mongolia. It is feared that Gen. Tung Fuh Siang and Prince Tuan are at the bottom of the trouble.

Messengers who have just arrived from Singen-fu confirm the reports of the ravages of the famine in that province. It is estimated that 3,000 persons are dying daily from starvation. Sixteen public soup kitchens have been established, but they are utterly insufficient to relieve the hunger. The court appears to be very little distressed by the sufferings of the people. It is still indulging in amusements. It has received supplies of silver and rice from the southern provinces.

AGUINALDO WORKS FOR PEACE.

Sends an Agent to Insurgent Leaders to Treat for Their Surrender.

Manila, April 9.—Trias, the Filipino general who recently surrendered, will shortly leave here for Lipa and Batangas, bearing credentials from Aguinaldo with which to treat for the surrender of the insurgent generals, Malvar, Tinio and Lucban. Generals Alejandrino, Lacuna and Cailles have been outlawed for violating the rules of war, and the remaining recalcitrant rebel chiefs are of no importance. Gen. Trias also will go to the Southern islands on a similar errand. The following surrenders have been reported officially: The insurgent Gen. Arejola, with 30 officers and 600 men, at the town of Nueva Caceres, in the Province of South Camarines, Southern Luzon; the remainder of the command of Maj. Pablo Tecsen, consisting of 19 officers, 173 men and 133 rifles, at the town of San Miguel de Mapumo, Bulacan province, Central Luzon, and 16 officers and 70 men in Bulacan province and at other points.

STREET CAR DROPS INTO CANAL.

Bridge Across James Street in Syracuse, N. Y., Gives Way.

Syracuse, N. Y., April 9. — While a car on the East Side Suburban line of the Syracuse Rapid Transit company was crossing the James street bridge over the Oswego canal in the heart of the city the bridge suddenly gave way, dropping the car and its forty passengers to the dry bed of the canal thirty feet below. Several persons who were crossing the bridge at the time went down with the car, while a horse and loaded lumber wagon piled on top of the heap. Thirty persons were injured. It is not believed that any deaths will result, although there are reports of several of the worst injured being dangerously hurt.

He Guards Aguinaldo.

Cannon Falls, Minn., April 9.—Lieut. Gilbert A. Youngberg, whom the Manila dispatches report as being one of the officers selected to guard Aguinaldo, is a Cannon Falls boy and was sent to the Philippines last fall. He graduated last summer at West Point, standing well up toward the head of his class.

Murderer Gets Life Sentence.

Terre Haute, Ind., April 9.—Charles Rogers, who shot and killed his father-in-law, Milburn Baty, and seriously wounded his wife on March 10, was given a life sentence by a jury yesterday.

Kruger Leaves Utrecht.

Utrecht, Holland, April 9.—Mr. Kruger has started for Hilversum, where he will stay for some time. The burgomaster and a big crowd bade him farewell at the railroad station.

Michael to Study Russian Methods.

St. Petersburg, April 9.—It is stated that Grand Duke Michael, the heir apparent, will soon begin a tour of the empire for the purpose of studying administration methods.

Schooner a Total Loss.

Gloucester, Mass., April 9.—The three masted schooner Hyenia of Calais, Me., went ashore at East Gloucester and is a total wreck. Capt. H. B. Dix and Steward Fuller were lost. The other two members of the crew were saved.

ROBBERS USE DYNAMITE.

Blow Up a Safe and Escape After a Running Fight.

Frankfort, Ind., April 8.—Burglars at Michigantown, east of this city, early yesterday morning wrecked the safe in a brick building occupied by C. A. Marshall, a merchant, and after a desperate running battle with citizens in which Marshall was slightly wounded and one of the robbers probably fatally shot, escaped with a small amount of booty. The safe contained several hundred dollars in cash and many valuable papers and all was practically destroyed by the force of the explosion. The big steel vault was blown out and across the room, and a drawer containing a package of bank bills was blown in an opposite direction and the bills torn into a thousand pieces. It is not thought the robbers succeeded in getting to exceed $50 in cash, the other money being so destroyed that it could not be found or taken. The property damage will probably reach $3,000.

GEN. CLAY BELIEVED SHOT.

Defiant Kentuckian Remains in Barricaded House.

Richmond Ky., April 9.—Hostilities at Whitehall between Gen. Cassius M. Clay and the officers whom he resisted have ceased. The parties who caused the writ of possession to be issued against the general have withdrawn the suit. Deputy Sheriff Collyer, who had a narrow escape during the fight, believes some of the shot he fired struck Gen. Clay. There is no way to get reports from the barricaded Whitehall, as there is danger awaiting any one who approaches the house to make inquiries. The deputies arrested a man of the name of Bowling, one of Gen. Clay's armed guards, handcuffed him and took his gun from him. The gun is now in possession of the sheriff. The officers could have killed Gen. Clay, but would not do so.

FOUND IN DEATH CLASP.

Two Cubans Fight Deadly Combat With Machetes and Knives.

Santago, Cuba, April 9.—Stench and buzzards revealed the bodies of two Cubans in the mountains sixteen miles from this city Friday night to a native coffee train which arrived here Saturday. The men fought to the death with machetes and knives. One man had his hand on the other's throat; the other man had his knife in his opponent's breast. They were both terribly mutilated. The men were recognized by neighboring countrymen who were returning from the city with mule loads of merchandise. The fatal quarrel occurred while they were camped by the side of the trail.

Little Girl Assaulted and Murdered.

Butte, Mont., April 9. — Evelyn Blewitt, aged nine years, daughter of Mrs. Blewitt, a widow of Walkerville, was assaulted and murdered in the cabin of John Warne, seventy-one years old, watchman at the Walkerville reservoir; and the place is then believed to have been set on fire with the purpose of concealing the evidence of the crime. Warne is under arrest, charged with the murder.

Flood Interferes With Shipments.

Pittsburg, April 9.—From present indications the Monongahela and Allegheny rivers will be close to a flood stage to-day, the rain of yesterday being general at all points and reports from various stations are to the effect that the streams are rising. The Monongahela River Consolidated Coal and Coke Company has decided to postpone the shipping of coal until Tuesday or Wednesday.

Reduction in Money Order Rate.

Washington, April 9.—In addition to the arrangement already effected with Canada it is expected a reduction of the postal money order rate between the United States and both the Philippines and Cuba will be put into operation July 1.

MINNESOTA LEGISLATURE.

Attempt to Censure Representatives Washburn and Jacobson.

St. Paul, April 8. — Resolutions of censure aimed at Representatives Washburn and Jacobson, who preferred charges of bribery in connection with the gross earnings bill, were introduced by Representative Laybourn of St. Louis Saturday, but went over without action of the house under notice of debate by Representative Allen. Mr. Laybourn will, unless the pressure brought to bear upon him prevails, force his resolutions to a vote to-day. The report of the investigation committee, which found that the charges could not be sustained, laid over from Friday night, came up before noon Saturday, and although a fight had been expected, was adopted without a dissenting vote.

The Younger brothers' hopes of liberty after imprisonment for twenty-four years, raised almost to the point of realization by the passage of the Deming bill, providing for the parole of life prisoners, was suddenly dashed to earth by the action of the house in indefinitely postponing the bill recalled from the governor for the purpose of correction.

Representative Whitford's memorial to congress praying for the establishment of a national park in Northern Minnesota to include the Leech Lake, Cass Lake, Winnibigoshish and Chippewa Indian reservations, was recommended to pass by the house.

In the Senate.

The debate promised over the passage of the Johnson memorial instructing the attorney general to bring action against the Great Northern to test title to 271,565.94 acres of Northern Minnesota lands, did not occur in the senate, and the resolution was adopted and sent to the house.

Halvorsen's second anti-cigarette bill was killed after short debate.

FIGHT TO A FINISH

BOERS WILL NEVER GIVE UP THE STRUGGLE.

British Government Warned Not to Be Confident of an Early Termination of Hostilities, Nor to Believe Stories That the Boers Are Tired of the War—Boers Must Be Completely Crushed Before a General Surrender Is Possible—Real Fighting Men Will Not Give Up.

London, April 9.—Lord Kitchener has informed the war office that eighteen volunteer companies freed by reliefs are coming home and that arrangements are in progress for the speedy relief of many more volunteers. He proposes that in order to meet the demand fresh troops be sent to the front to replace the stale men.

The Pretoria correspondent of the Morning Press warns the government not to be confident of an early termination of hostilities, nor to believe the stories that the Boers are tired of war. He says: "It becomes daily more evident that the Boers intend to fight to a finish. Many are surrendering, but they are men of no standing. The real fighting men are still on commando, and although the recently successful British operations tend to bring the end nearer, it is evident that the Boers must be completely crushed before a general surrender is probable."

It is reported from Brussels that Acting President Schalkburger has removed the seat of government to Leydsdorp.

According to a dispatch to the Daily Mail from Hilservum Mr. Kruger has expressed an intention to go to the United States in June and visit Washington, New York, Chicago and Boston.

"It is stated," says a dispatch to the Times from Kroonstad, "that Gen. Dewet and Gen. Botha met at Vryheid."

MILLIONS KILLED BY PLAGUE.

Census Returns From India Show Serious Loss in Population.

London, April 9. — The depopulation of India through famine and cholera is assuming alarming proportions. The latest advices from Simla say the census returns of the central provinces show a decrease of over 1,000,000 since 1891, when under normal conditions an increase of 1,500,000 might have been expected. It is estimated that 5,000,000 of persons have died in India since 1896 from causes directly due to the famine. In Western India things are even worse. The Oodeypoor State returns show a decrease of 84,000, or 45 per cent of the population; the State of Bhopaul shows a decrease of 808,000, and the District of Banda shows a decrease of 124,000. In Bombay city the population has diminished by 50,000. The localities which escaped the plague show a satisfactory though uncompensating increase. For instance, Madras has gained 8 per cent over 1891.

WYOMING OIL DECLARED BEST.

Experts Pronounce It Highest Grade Ever Found.

Cheyenne, Wyo., April 9.—An analysis by New York experts of oil discovered recently near Evanston, in the extreme southwestern part of Wyoming, shows it to be the highest grade of illuminating oil ever discovered in the world. There is great excitement here over the report from New York, and although 1,000 acres have been filed upon during the last few weeks there will be a big rush to the district. Oil was first discovered in Southwestern Wyoming twenty-five years ago, but little attention was paid to it until a month ago, when railroad men, while sinking a well in what is known as Pioneer Hollow, struck a flow of oil. Local experts pronounced the oil high grade and a rush set in.

THEN SHE FAINTED.

Telephone Girl in Kentucky Displays Much Heroism.

Ashland, Ky., April 9. — Miss Ella May Wilson, night operator at the Citizens' Telephone exchange here, displayed much heroism during a fire which destroyed the exchange. While the switchboard was on fire and miniature forks of lightning were darting from the board she stuck to her post and called up the manager and had the current shut off at the light plant, although her hands were badly burned in the operation. After performing her duty Miss Wilson fainted and was found lying on the floor when the manager reached the office.

A Persistent Fire.

New York, April 9.—During Saturday night a fire which broke out at different times did damage to the extent of $175,000 to stock of the Sudhaus Paper Box company and the machinery belonging to the company, as well as to the stock of Swetzer, Pembrook & Co.; both firms occupying the building at 83 and 85 White street. The fire broke out at 10 o'clock at night and was supposed to have been overcome in a short time with a small loss, but at 3 o'clock Sunday morning flames again broke out in one of the upper floors which was occupied by the Sudhaus company.

Fargo Artist Honored.

Fargo, N. D., April 9.—The pleasing information comes from Buffalo that the art judges of the Pan-American exposition have accepted two miniatures painted by Miss Male Douglas of Fargo. The artist is a daughter of Col. Douglas of this city. She is studying in the East.

MOTHER AND CHILD DROWNED.

Frightened Horse Plunges Over an Embankment Into the River.

Milwaukee, April 9. — Mrs. Michael Hart of the town of Lake and her seven-year-old daughter Mary were drowned in the Kinnikinnic river at the Kinnikinnic avenue bridge in this city at an early hour yesterday morning. Mrs. Hart, accompanied by her husband and daughter, had been visiting friends and started for home at about 3 o'clock in a light top buggy drawn by a young nervous horse. As they neared the bridge, which was closed for repairs, the horse became frightened by a passing train and ran away, plunging over the embankment, dragging the buggy and its occupants with it. Hart, who had been thrown out of the buggy as it went over the embankment, was saved, a policeman throwing a rope to him and hauling him ashore, but the mother and daughter were caught by the buggy top and carried to the bottom of the river and were drowned, as also was the horse. The bodies have been recovered.

SHOT BY THE SHERIFF.

An Alleged Horse Thief Rounded Up by a Posse.

Dickinson, N. D., April 9.—One McPeak, alias Jim McCarthey, an alleged horse thief, was arrested yesterday morning by Sheriff John Goodall and a posse of deputies, and in attempting to get away was shot. He was brought here last night. Walter Y. Barnet has been convicted of horse stealing after one of the hardest fought trials in Western North Dakota. Barnet shipped stolen horses to Lake City, Iowa, and when detected and arrested attempted to shield himself with a bill of sale purporting to have been given by some unknown party, but which the state reasoned was written and signed by himself after his arrest. No case in court for many years has so interested stockmen as this one. Wholesale thieving has been going on for many months. Barnet will likely get the maximum sentence of five years.

PERISHED IN THE FIRE.

Woman's Body Found in the Ruins of Her Store.

Ada, Minn., April 9. — Miss Maggie Riggers, a milliner and dressmaker who has operated a millinery establishment here for a number of years, was burned to death yesterday. She roomed in the back of her store building, a small frame structure on the principal business street in the village. All efforts to rescue Miss Riggers from the flames were of no avail. Her charred body was found lying close to the door opening onto the street, and the supposition is that when she reached the door she was overcome with smoke and heat and swooned before she was able to unlock the door. The fire was confined to the one building. The origin is unknown.

DIVIDES $30,000 BOODLE FUND.

Treasurer Gives Each County Share of Money for School Fund.

Helena, Mont., April 9.—The last act in the history of Montana's famous $30,000 boodle fund that grew out of the Whiteside bribery exposure in the sixth legislative session was played Saturday, when, in accordance with a law passed by the late legislature, State Treasurer Barrett sent a check to different county treasurers of the state for amounts in proportion to the number of school children in the several counties. Silver Bow county, on account of its large population, received one-fifth of the $30,000.

QUARREL OVER A WOMAN.

Albert Lea Citizen Stabbed by a Morristown Man.

Faribault, Minn., April 9. — Fred Schultz, son of Albert Schultz, was stabbed by Charles Hoffmeister of Morristown. The wound, which narrowly missed the jugular vein, required five stitches. He also received two wounds in the arm. The quarrel was over a woman. Hoffmeister is under arrest. Schultz will probably recover.

Loggers Ready for Driving.

Bemidji, Minn., April 9.—The spring rains have carried away most of the snow, and the ice is rapidly rotting away from the lakes and streams. The loggers are all busy getting ready for the drive. The logging operations now being carried on are by the companies near railroads. The loggers who own their own horses are making contracts for their use to the railroaders for the summer. Many of them will be used in the construction work on the Minnesota & International railroad, which is being extended north of here.

After Horse Thieves.

Sioux Falls, S. D., April 9.—Officers are on the track of what appears to be a regularly organized band of horse thieves who for several months have been operating in Sanborn and adjoining counties. It seems to be their practice to run stolen animals into North Dakota, where they are disposed of. Suspicion strongly points to certain individuals as being the chief members of the band, and their arrest will doubtless follow in a short time.

School Teacher Makes Money.

Miller, S. D., April 9.—Edith Campbell, a young school teacher here has just cleaned up $250 on a land sale. She was undecided some time ago whether to invest her savings in a quarter section of land or in a piano. She bought the land and sold it for a $250 advance. The has since entered the Huron college, where she will finish her education.

Killed by a Tooth.

Milwaukee, April 9.—Mrs. Annie Oleson, a cook, inhaled a tooth which lodged in the lower lobe of the left lung, causing her death.

FLOODS IN THE EAST

REPORTS OF LOSS OF LIFE AND PROPERTY.

Various Points in New England in Great Danger—Rivers Swollen by Recent Rains and the Unusual Amount of Snow in the Mountains—Police Sound the Flood Alarm Along the Merrimac, and Business Men Make Energetic Efforts to Protect Their Property.

Boston, April 9. — The intermittent rains of the past week will result in floods in various parts of New England, where streams of the extensive watersheds are in freshets higher than for a number of years. It is not known yet if there has been any loss of life or property, but associated Press reports from various points of New England indicate great danger. There is an unusual amount of snow and ice in the mountains of Vermont and Maine so the great rivers that drain them are overtaxed to carry off the extra water. The Penobscot river, fed by manifold tributaries from the great chain of mountains, the Merrimac river, fed by its main arteries which find their source in New Hampshire and the other great waterway, the Connecticut, which gathers together the waters of about all the rest of New England, are all very high.

-o-

Haverhill, Mass., April 9.—From the Pemigawasset valley on the north to the confluence of the Merrimac river with the sea, the freshet reports received here last night indicate that the Merrimac river is likely to burst its banks at many places with a volume of water that will exceed that for many years. The police sounded the flood alarm last night and business men on the river front began energetic efforts to protect their property. At a late hour the levee water was within 2 1-2 feet of the street, and as high tide comes to-day it is expected that streets on a lever with the levee will be flooded. All day long communication was kept up with cities on the Merrimac and its tributaries, Plymouth and Lincoln reporting a rainfall during the night of 1.73 inches. At Manchester the water was 6 feet 5 inches on the dam and the rise on the Lawrence dam was 5 inches hourly. The more active volume of water which last night was overflowing the lowlands at Concord and Manchester, will not reach here until to-day noon, so that the greater part of the damage will not be done until that time. There were all sorts of reports during the day of bodies being found in the river, but none could be intercepted. A woman's body is known to have floated down from Lawrence and it was understood that a man's body and one of an infant had been seen below Lowell.

ATTACKED THE PREACHER.

Drunken Rowdies Raise Cain in a Church.

Elwood, Ind., April 9. — Saturday night during a convention of the members of the Holiness church which is being held in this city, Rev. Hass, in the midst of his discourse, was attacked by a gang of drunken rowdies, their ages ranging from seventeen to twenty years. Rev. Hass was knocked down and trampled upon in his pulpit. A general scrimmage took place, the women and children fainting and screaming. A riot call was sent in and the police arrested three members of the gang. The church after the riot resembled being struck by a cyclone instead of being a house of worship.

HULK OF MERRIMAC DESTROYED.

Collier Sunk at Santiago to Bottle Up Cervera's Fleet Blown Up.

Santiago, Cuba, April 9.—The collier Merrimac, which was blown up and sunk in the harbor by Constructor Hobson while Admiral Cervera's fleet was inside in 1898, was successfully destroyed by a ton of dynamite Saturday. Hitherto it has been extremely dangerous for vessels to attempt the narrow entrance to the harbor, but now that this wreck has been destroyed it is perfectly safe. A great crowd of people on shore witnessed the blowing up of the old hulk.

ACTION INFURIATES MOB.

Demonstration Against Russian and Italian Consulates at Geneva.

Geneva, Switz., April 9.—A serious demonstration against the Russian and Italian consul occurred Friday evening in connection with the extradition of Juffel, an alleged accomplice of Gaetano Bresci, the assassin of King Humbert. The mob tore down and shattered the coat of arms at the Russian consulate, but were prevented by the police from doing material damage elsewhere.

Cubans Desire to Send a Commission to Washington.

Havana, April 9. — The convention held a private session to consider the proposed replies of Senores Quilez and Giberga to the Platt amendment. Both were rejected. There was a special session Saturday night to consider the question of sending a commission to Washington to discuss the matter.

Killed by His Brother.

New York, April 9.—Pietro Paglini was shot and killed in Paterson, N. J., last night by his brother Sabbata. The latter, who also wounded his father, is in the hospital with his head badly injured by a blow delivered by the man now dead, who attacked Sabatta with an axe. The brothers quarreled over a game of cards.

THIEF RIVER FALLS NEWS

By John W. Eastman.

THIEF RIVER FALLS, - MINN

The Mexican army of more than 25,000 men is supported upon a trifle more than 1,000,000 Mexican dollars a month. The Mexican congress does not cost $1,000,000 a year.

Captain Richard P. Leary, U. S. N., who, as governor of the island of Guam, won laurels which have not yet had time to fade, is hobbling around on crutches. His leg was injured a few weeks ago in a fall at the League Island navy yard.

Mr. Justice Brewer, of the United States Supreme Court, said in a recent address that he who calls a mob into being cannot be pronounced wholly guiltless of that which the mob may do. The remark is both seasonable and full of sound sense.

Army recruits are scarce in England as well as in this country. In order to stimulate the laggard military spirit among British yokels a genius of the war office in London has devised what he calls a "recruitograph." This is a moving picture machine which shows all sorts of attractive views of army life.

During harvest last year Edward Pallas of Maysville, Kan., was caught in a machine and terribly injured. While he was still laid up his wife deserted him. In October he secured a divorce, which under the state law did not become final until the expiration of six months. He died before that time and now his divorced wife claims his estate.

Mexico knows nothing of the dilatory court methods so common in this country. A California prospector had a case involving some mining property in Sinaloa. It came up first in February, 1900, and went against him. It has since been appealed three times, all four decisions having been secured in eleven months. Three of the courts favored the American.

It is estimated that if Mr. Carnegie continued to give away money at the rate at which he has been distributing it for the past fifty days his entire fortune would be gone in the course of the year 1903. But as he is in good health and has a reasonable expectation of life of at least twenty years he will probably so arrange his benefactions as not to deprive himself of the pleasure of passing them around at such an early date.

Former Chief Justice Logan E. Bleckley of Georgia, greatly to the surprise of his friends, has matriculated at the state university for a special course in mathematics. The judge is now seventy-six years old. He is writing a book in which he treats of mathematics, but finds that he is somewhat rusty on the subject. It is for the purpose of "brushing up," as he says, that he is attending college.

An enormous quantity of fruit is going to waste in southern California, for lack of cars to convey it east. The crop was the greatest on record, being estimated at from 22,000 to 25,000 car loads. There are from 3,000,000 to 4,000,000 boxes of oranges there just now, worth under favorable conditions about $5,000,000, but owing to delay in shipment it is questionable whether it represents much value. No remedy is in sight.

The chancellor of the exchequer in England has asked the speaker of the house of commons to punish the London Times for printing official secrets by excluding its representatives from the house. The Times is something of a national institution itself, although it has been badly treated by its editors, and it is just about as essential to parliament as parliament is to it. A good many English public men might as well not talk at all as not to have their speeches reported in the Times.

A complete list of the things named in honor of Queen Victoria would not only show the esteem in which she was held, but would also suggest how much of the world's progress had taken place during the period covered by her reign. The great Australian state bearing her name recalls the history-making developments in that quarter of the globe; the Victorian triumphs of exploraton are typified by the discovery of great lakes in Central Africa, one of which commemorates her name. The famous bridge at Montreal, the beautiful park on the Canadian side of Niagara Falls, and some at least of the sixteen Victorias in the United States are among the interesting North American memorials. It is a good advantage for a sovereign to possess a name not identified with anybody else, for then things named in her honor will indicate to all the future about the time in the history when they came into being.

Under the national bankruptcy law many curiosities in litigation have appeared, but Frank R. Wessa of Cincinnati, takes the prize. He owes $100 for rent, provisions and medical attendance; assets, nil. He drew up the papers himself, thus saving a lawyer's fee, and included the United States among his creditors, entering the country as entitled to the $25 fee for making him a bankrupt, although Uncle Sam must go empty-handed with the others. The court clerk refused to file the petition without the $25 fee and Wessa filed it himself.

WITH THE LAWMAKERS

Doings in the State Legislature.

In the House.

St. Paul, March 30.—The 4 per cent gross earnings tax bill met only a show of opposition in the house yesterday and was passed by a vote of 79 to 24. The only feature of the concluding stage of the fight was Representative Dobbin's effort to carry out the plan for its defeat framed several days ago, and change the rate to 5 per cent in hope of a deadlock. His own and one other vote went on record for the change, while 116 representatives declared against it. The debate that preceded the roll call on the passage of the bill was perfunctory.

The bill received a stormy reception in the senate and after being referred and recalled several times was finally sent to the committee on taxes and tax laws.

The house passed a concurrent resolution asking the president to name one of the new battleships "Minnesota."

Representative Walter Nelson has introduced a bill requiring railroad companies to accept bicycles as baggage without additional charge and issue checks for their transportation.

In the Senate.

The only advantage the direct primary bill obtained in the senate debate yesterday was a vote for reconsideration of the former action, by which a committee, yet to be appointed, was instructed to redraft its first section to include state officials. Another delay was secured and the bill will not come before the senate until Tuesday morning, when it will be taken up as a special order at 11 o'clock.

Senator Stockwell introduced a bill providing for local option in methods of levying taxes.

Senator Brower introduced an appropriation bill carrying $109,525 for the St. Cloud reformatory.

A bill from Senator Knatvold increases the term of the superintendent of public instruction from two to four years and fixes his salary at $2,500.

Senator Sivright introduced a bill providing for the appointment of two inspectors of normal schools.

In the Senate.

St. Paul, April 1. — After a spirited and lively debate the Umland divorce bill was recommended to pass. The measure provides that no marriage of either party shall occur until six months after divorce.

After a scrimmage in the senate Saturday the two bills from Senator Young, providing for the compromise of the Little Falls & Dakota land grant litigation, were recommended to pass.

The farriers of the state scored a victory in the senate and secured a recommendation for passage of their bill, introduced by Senator Benedict, providing for liens on horses and other animals for the cost of shoeing.

In the House.

The Peterson bill making telegraph companies peculiarly liable for damages incidental to mental anguish caused by delay in the delivery of messages was, after a debate of an hour, taken from the table and placed on the house calendar.

The Sikorski bill permitting the taking of fish for food purposes with nets from the Mississippi river below St. Anthony Falls was passed by the house. The bill provides that the mesh of the nets used shall not be smaller than two and one-half inches.

In the Senate.

St. Paul, April 2.—Senator Daly introduced a bill which provides a method for contesting the election of state officers. At present there is no such provision in the statutes.

The Halvorsen anti-cigarette bill has been reintroduced. Minor changes have been made to avoid the bar against the introduction of bills identical with defeated bills.

Minnesota may have a third state asylum for the insane, established on the cottage plan, at Grand Rapids, in its northern pine woods. A bill from Senator McCarthy sets aside $75,000 for the purpose.

The Hurd resolution requesting the president to name one of the new battleships "Minnesota" passed the senate under suspension of the rules.

Senator Horton's bill codifying the insurance laws of the state was passed by the senate.

After a sharp debate the McGill bill providing for teachers' retirement fund was voted down, then reconsidered and finally placed at the head of general orders for amendment.

In the House.

Representative Ofthaun of Pope introduced in the house a bill arbitrarily to fix the maximum rates railroads may charge for the transportation of cereals, potatoes and coal within the state.

Yesterday was the last day for the introduction of bills. The last bill received by the house was No. 732, introduced by Representative Sweet of Hennepin. The bill provides that cities authorized to maintain sinking funds may invest such funds in their own city bonds if a rate of 3 1-2 per cent may be insured.

The governor's veto of the Sweet bill for a uniform system of accounting was yesterday received by the house, and, on motion of Mr. Roberts, laid on the table, pending an investigation as to the alleged conflict between the provisions of the Sweet bill and the board of control bill.

In the Senate.

St. Paul, April 3.—Victories for the Dunn direct primary election law marked every stage of its progress through a fierce all-day fight in the senate yesterday. Its important sections have been passed on, and the upper house will pass the bill to-day, amended only in unimportant features. The scope of the law is unchanged. The amendments attached yesterday are of no special importtance, with one exception. Elective park, library and school board officers in cities of 50,000 or less are excepted from the operation of the act by an amendment from Senator Barker. An amendment from Senator Schaller provides that candidates for offices affording no compensation shall not be required to pay nomination fees.

In the House.

The house yesterday, after a brisk debate passed the bill permitting pensioners, inmates of the soldiers' home, to retain from their pensions for personal use the sum of $8 per month in lieu of $4 per month, as under the present law.

The house bill authorizing the state auditor to draw his warrant for $19,847 to liquidate claims against the state accruing under the law of 1895 offering a bounty of 1 cent per pound on beet sugar manufactured in the state, was lost by a vote of 55 to 55.

The house passed the Alford bill for the restoration of full rights of citizenship to persons who have served sentences in Minnesota jails or prisons under conviction of felony.

Representative Pennington's bill authorizing county commissioners to allow county superintendents of schools receiving not more than $1,200 a year $250 for traveling expenses was passed.

Representative Riley's bill giving blacksmiths a first lien on horses and oxen in security for unpaid shoeing bills was passed.

In the Senate.

St. Paul, April 4.—After the hardest fight the senate has witnessed during the session the Dunn direct primary law was put upon its final passage at 12:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon and passed by an overwhelming majority. Forty-five out of the sixty-three votes in the upper house were cast for it, and only twelve against it. Three of the six senators absent or not voting had declared for the bill and would have recorded their votes had they been present. This was the result of four days of the hardest kind of parliamentary warfare, that continued in and out of working hours without cessation. A few additional changes were made in the bill yesterday, but none of them will stir up opposition in the house. The action of the lower branch will make it a law and Gov. Van Sant has indicated that he will sign it as soon as presented. The bill goes back to the house with few changes of importance. The Ives amendment eliminates the declaration of previous political affiliation upon oath, but provides, as did the original bill, that the primary voter must signify the party he wishes to vote for and can receive but one ballot. The Schaller amendment remits nomition fees of candidates for offices offering no compensation.

As the Dunn bill now stands it includes all offices except those of the state government. Congressmen, judges of the district court and members of the legislature and all city and county officials will go through the next campaign under its provisions.

The pressure of bills yet to be acted upon became apparent in the senate for the first time yesterday. A dozen measures against which there is no opposition were lifted from general orders and placed on the calendar to expedite their passage.

In the House.

The Bush tax ferret bill was recommended for indefinite postponement by the house in committee of the whole. The bill turned down was a substitute for the original tax ferret bill introduced by Mr. Bush early in the session.

Senator Buckman's bill making it a misdemeanor for an employe to secure railroad transportation to be thereafter paid for in labor and then refusing to perform the labor was yesterday passed by the house.

The Shell national guard bill was passed by the house. The bill provides that the governor may from time to time change the formation of the several organizations to make them more nearly conform with the formations prescribed by the United States army regulations.

In the Senate.

St. Paul, April 5. — The Jacobson gross earnings bill, to raise the tax on railroads from 3 to 4 per cent, was passed by the senate yesterday morning by a vote of 53 to 8. The vote was taken after a spirited debate. The bill only becomes a law after being submitted to the people at the next general election.

The Phillips bill, amending the "truant act" of two years ago, has passed the senate and will go to the governor for his signataure.

By a vote of 26 to 5 the Dorsey bill providing for the publicataion of a history of the Minnesota volunteer troops in the Spanish war was lost. It lacked six votes of the majority required. The measure carried a heavy appropriation.

The finance committee substitute for the Daugherty sanitorium bill for consumptives passed the senate yesterday. It was redrafted to carry an appropriation of only $1,000 and then submitted in place of the former bill that asked $10,000.

In the House.

The house refused to concur in the senate amendments to the Dunn primary election bill. Messrs Dunn, Roberts and Schutz were named as conferees on the part of the house.

Representative Berg's bill authorizing boards of supervisors to collect a portion of road taxes in cash and use the same for the purchase of road building machinery was killed in the house.

Senator Smith's bill for the establishment of municipal employment agencies in St. Paul, Minneapolis and Duluth was passed by the house.

NO LONGER A MENACE.

Stray Submarine Mine Has Been Discovered and Blown Up.

Norfolk, Va., April 6.—S. H. Mitchell of the United States artillery department reports having successfully blown up a stray submarine mine near Sacketts Harbor, Va. The mine was one that had been planted during the Spanish war at Port Royal, S. C., or some other point in that vicinity. The mine had broken loose and since that time had been drifting at sea. Some farmer discovered it a few days ago thrown up by the tide.

Resulted in a Farce.

Hot Springs, Ark., April 6. — What was to have been a twenty-round bout between Bobby Dobbs and Young Peter Jackson resulted in a farce and it was declared a draw in the twelfth round.

PARDON FOR M'KENZIE.

Concerted Move to Secure His Release.

Washington, April 7. — A concerted movement for the pardon of Alex McKenzie of North Dakota, who is now serving a year's imprisonment in San Francisco for contempt of the federal court of appeals of that city, is under way, and the president, to whom it is being directed, is expected to take the application for pardon up in a short time and decide it in McKenzie's favor. Soon after the decision was announced a petition was presented to the president for pardon on the grounds that sentence was unjust and excessive according to all usage of courts. The petition was referred to Attorney General Griggs, who unhesitatingly approved it and returned it to the president last Friday when he attended his last cabinet meeting. The president has had it on his desk since that time, having been unable to spare time for its consideration. It is stated that the president will review the case carefully before he takes any action, and it is likely to be some time before he takes any action on the petition.

THE PANAMA SCHEME.

Hill and Lamont Said to Have Talked to McKinley About It.

Washington, April 7.—James J. Hill, president of the Great Northern, and Daniel Lamont, vice president of the Northern Pacific, who are associated with Mr. Morgan in the latter's scheme to purchase the rights of the French Panama Canal company and finish that ditch with capital furnished by an American syndicate, called on President McKinley yesterday afternoon. The ostensible purpose of the visit of these two railway presidents was to consult the chief executive about the details of his trip across the continent from the Pacific coast via their respective lines. If the subject of building the canal with American capital was taken up neither Mr. Hill, Mr. Lamont or anybody in authority to speak for the president would talk about it. Inasmuch, however, as the original story about the intention of Messrs. Hill, Lamont and Morgan to call on the president in regard to the canal fixed the time of their visit Thursday, it is believed that the subject was discussed at some length.

APRIL FOOL JOKE.

No Truth in the Rumor of a Big Railroad Combination.

New York, April 7. — There is no truth in the report that J. P. Morgan, William K. Vanderbilt, James J. Hill, Edward H. Harriman, George J. Gould, John D. Rockefeller, Jacob H. Schiff and James Stillman are planning the formation of a New Jersey corporation to take over the control of the stocks of the Burlington, Northern Pacific, Erie and Great Northern roads, nor is there any truth in the further report that this relatively insignificant transaction is the precursor of a plan to bring all the railway systems of the country under one control. Two of the interests mentioned above reported the rumor as preposterous. Some of the others refuse to discuss it at all on the ground that it was simply a wild hoax, put out on all fool's day in New Jersey, and was a trifle belated in reaching this city.

CURIOUSLY AFFECTED.

Woman Whistles Operatic Air While Under Influence of Chloroform.

St. Louis, April 7. — A remarkable thing occurred at the city hospital last night while the surgeons were operating upon Mrs. Ida Knight of 651 School street. While under the influence of chloroform and while the surgeon's knife was busy in an operation for a tumor, she suddenly began to whistle, although to all practical purposes she was thoroughly under the influence of the anaesthetic. She whistled the "Miserere" from "Il Trovatore" distinctly and without a flaw, and at the completion of the tune became quiet. At intervals during the operation she would whistle sketches from the opera. After regaining consciousness she said that she could not remember having thought of the opera or anything while under the influence of the chloroform.

A MOTHER'S AWFUL DEED.

Holds Her Child in a Fire Until Its Head Was Burned Away.

Parkersburg, W. Va., April 7.—Held in a fire by its mother until its head was literally burned away and its body a charred mass of flesh, the year-old son of a man named Morris was found dead yesterday. No other cause than insanity can be assigned for the deed. Mr. Morris lived with his family in the southern part of the city. Seemingly the woman had been content until a few days ago when she began to evince a dislike for her youngest child. The woman upon the discovery of her crime was sulled and would give no reason for what she had done other than she was weary of the care of the child and thought that it would be better dead.

TOLSTOY AT HOME.

The Report of His Banishment Appears to Have Been Erroneous.

Moscow, April 7.—Despite the various rumors to the effect that Count Leo Tolstoy had been banished from Russia, the famous novelist is still at his home busily engaged on a new novel entitled "Who Is Right?" Countess Tolstoy gave a charity concert here which was a great success.

KNOX SUCCEEDS GRIGGS.

Pittsburg Lawyer Accepts Position of Attorney General.

Washington, April 7.—President McKinley announced this morning to the members of the cabinet that Philander C. Knox of Pittsburg had accepted the position of attorney general.

Danger of Flood Past.

Pittsburg, April 7. — The Monongahela and Allegheny rivers are both falling at points above and the Ohio here at the dam has reached only 17.7 feet and is stationary. All danger of a flood is passed for the present.

The Ophir at Aden.

Aden, April 7.—The steamer Ophil, with the duke and duchess of Cornwall and York on board, which arrived here yesterday, received the usual salutes and the customary official visits were exchanged.

AGGIE TAKES OATH

SWEARS ALLEGIANCE TO THE UNITED STATES.

Will Issue a Proclamation Advising His Followers to Follow His Example—He Will Not Be Released, but Will Probably Be Given Liberty Under Parole—Matter Will Be Left Largely to MacArthur and the Philippine Commission—Aguinaldo Favorably Impresses MacArthur.

Washington, April 4.—Aguinaldo has taken the oath of allegiance, and it is expected that he will also issue a proclamation to his followers advising that they follow his exaxmple by accepting the authority of the United States.

The insurrection collapsed months ago. This action by the insurgent leader is only the dramatic climax, giving the stage center to Aguinaldo again before the establishment of civil authority throughout the islands. Gen. MacArthur's full dispatch, containing recommendations, was read to the cabinet, but was not made public. It is said that the general recommends that Aguinaldo be released, but kept under surveillance until it can be established whether he has violated the laws of war and also whether he intends to follow the example of Mabini, who took the oath of allegiance and then violated it. Mabini was sent to Guam. Aguinaldo would follow him to that island should he now he has taken. The war department will leave the handling of this question largely to Gen. MacArthur and the Philippine commission. They are on the ground and can judge as to the sincerity of Aguinaldo better than can officials in Washington. But in allowing Aguinaldo to take the oath of allegiance it is assumed that Gen. MacArthur considered him as qualified to come within the proclamation of amnesty and that he would not keep him a close prisoner, but give him liberties under parole.

It is considered probable, however, that Aguinaldo would for a time prefer the protection of the palace, where he is a prisoner, to the full liberty of looking out for his own safety among the miscellaneous classes of Manila. Gen MacArthur has hopes that a great deal may be accomplished through Aguinaldo. During the time he has been a prisoner he has made quite a favorable impression upon Gen. MacArthur.

STOPPED BY BOERS.

Steamer Loaded With Mules for the British Is Held Up.

New Orleans, April 4. — Proceedings were brought in the United States court here yesterday by representatives of the Boers to prevent the sailing of the steamship Anglo-Australian, loaded with mules assigned to the British in South Africa. Judge Parlange, after reading the petition, issued an order requiring the defendants in the case to show cause on April 8 why a preliminary injunction should not be granted. The suit is brought by Samuel Pearson, a citizen of the South African republic, residing at Barberton; Edward Van Ness, a citizen of New York, and Charles D. Pierce, consul general of the Orange Free State, and is against Capt. Pearson of the steamer; Elder, Dempster & Co., owners of the steamer, and Messrs. Robert and Matthew Warriner, who represent Elder, Dempster & Co. here.

Result of Battle in Doubt.

Newcastle, Natal, April 4.—The Boers derailed and wrecked a train near Mount Prospect. Subsequently Gen. Campbell's column attacked them and heavy fighting ensued, Gen. Campbell being at a disadvantage. Owing to the mist on the hills the result is not known here.

REVOLUTIONARY SONGS.

Thousands of People Are Singing Them in Russian Poland.

Berlin, April 4.—The Vossische Zeitung prints a special dispatch from Lemberg in which, based upon information received from Warsaw, it is said that the Russian minister of the interior, Privy Councillor Sipiaguin, was recently shot at, but the plot to kill him failed. The students of the University of Warsaw have been preparing a great demonstration as a mark of respect to their Russian comrade, Espoulavy. The astronomic institute has been closed because the students have engaged in riots. In Bialystok, Russian Poland, a socialist funeral occasioned big riots. Thousands of persons paraded the streets singing revolutionary songs and shouting "Long live liberty." The military finally quelled tthe disturbance but not without considerable bloodshed.

CALIFORNIA TO ENTERTAIN.

Interstate Commerce Commission and State Railroad Commissioners to Meet at San Francisco.

San Francisco, April 4.—The interstate commerce commission and the members of the various state railroad commissions are to meet here in joint convention on June 4. The delegates and members of their families will number about 300. The California commissioners are arranging for the entertainment of those from the East.

FOR THE SINKING FUND.

Purchase of Short Term Bonds by Treasury Department.

Washington, April 4.—The secretary of the treasury has bought in New York $2,000,000 of short term bonds for the sinking fund.

Boy Held by Kidnappers.

New York, April 4. — After vainly running out every clue the police have become convinced that Willie McCormick, Jr., a ten-year-old Highbridge boy, who disappeared last Wednesday night is the victim of a kidnapping plot.

New Lecturer at Stanford.

San Francisco, April 4. — Charles Sumner Hamlin of Boston, assistant secretary of the treasury under Cleveland, has accepted the position of lecturer on international law at Stanford university.

STOCK COMPANY HOTEL.

Luverne Business Men Furnish the Capital of $25,000.

Luverne, Minn., April 6. — As soon as the frost is out of the ground G. O. Kessler of Sioux Falls, for the Luverne Hotel company, will begin the erection of a three-story brick and stone hotel building on the block opposite the present hotel. The new building will cost upward of $25,000. Two months ago business men of Luverne, impressed with the need of a first-class hotel, organized a stock company and subscribed liberally for stock. It was not expected that the hotel would render a profit, but the object was to provide a hotel corresponding to the needs and size of the town. A desirable location has been secured, and the contracts were to-day signed for the construction of the building. Philip McGraw of Mankato has the contract for the plumbing at $1,700, and H. Kelley & Co. of Minneapolis for the heating at $2,000. The building is to be ready for occupancy by Sept. 30.

ANTI-TRUST LAW INVOKED.

Defense in a Civil Action at Sioux City, Iowa.

Sioux City, Iowa, April 6.—For the first time in local courts the Iowa anti-trust law is invoked as a defense in a lawsuit. In the answer of defendants in the case of the Fullerton Lumber company vs. Leonora J. Gravelle et al., an action to collect a lumber bill of $282, it is asserted the plaintiff is in a pool, combine or trust with other companies for the purpose of carrying out a conspiracy to regulate prices of lumber and building material. It is expected some interesting evidence will be brought out as to the agreements of lumber dealers of this section and their combinations as to prices of building material.

GILFILLAN'S LIBERAL GIFT.

Former Congressman Gives the University $50,000.

St. Paul, April 6.—Former Congressman John B. Gilfillan visited upon the regents of the state university yesterday morning a very agreeable surprise. Mr. Gilfillan makes the university a straight gift of $50,000. The giver simply provides that the fund be controlled by the regents and its income be used in assisting poor but worthy young men and women to avail themselves of the splendid educational advantages offered by Minnesota's first institution.

TEN YEARS NOT TOO MUCH.

Confessed Criminal Seeks the Limit to Avoid His Wife.

Belle Fourche, S. D., April 6.—John Everts of this city raised a check for $8.50 to $80.50 and got it cashed at the Butte county bank. He was arrested, pleaded guilty and sentenced to five years in the penitentiary. Judge Moore, in giving the sentence, said he would help Everts get a pardon in a year or two. Everts replied that he did not want a pardon. He asked the court to give him ten years, saying he wanted to get away from his wife, who abused him.

FARMER'S SUICIDE.

Mortgage Foreclosure and Destitution Are the Supposed Causes.

Devils Lake, N. D., April 6.—Herman Schroeder, a farmer living fifteen miles northeast of the city, killed himself by shooting late last night. He was born in Germany fifty years ago, and had been in this country two years. He recently lost all his property under mortgage foreclosure and was almost destitute. It is supposed these facts caused him to commit the act. His wife left him some years ago and lives in New Jersey. Schroeder had no children.

MRS. HOSSACK ON TRIAL.

Iowa Woman Charged With Murder of Her Husband.

Des Moines, Iowa, April 6.—The trial of Mrs. Margaret Hossack of Indianola for the alleged murder of her husband has been begun. The case is one of a sensational nature. Several months ago John Hossack, a well-to-do farmer living near Indianola, was murdered in his bed, his head being cut open with an axe. Suspicion fastened on his wife, who, though living with him, had not been happy. The taking of testimony has begun.

Head Severed by Car Wheels.

Iron River, Wis., April 6.— An unknown man was run over by a Northern Pacific freight train. His head was severed from his body and was crushed and torn. It is thought he was a lumberman trying to steal a ride.

Mill Repairs Nearly Done.

Winona, Minn., April 6. — The Bay State mill, which was shut down last week on account of the blowing out of the cylinder head of its big engine, expects to resume flourmaking next week.

Burned by Carbolic Acid.

Jefferson, Iowa, April 6.—Mrs Edward Woodard of this city attempted to commit suicide by taking carbolic acid. Family difficulty is assigned as the cause. She was terribly burned.

Farm Residence Burned.

Mora, Minn., April 6. — The new farm residence of S. W. Whitford, together with contents, was burned to the ground about midnight. Loss, $2,500, with insurance of $1,000.

Seeding Near New Paynesville.

New Paynesville, Minn., April 6. — Seeding in this vicinity began in earnest on Tuesday. Fully one-half of the farmers in this township have begun to put in the seed.

Rain and Snow.

Miller, S. D., April 6.—Rain is being followed by a snowstorm, the like of which has not prevailed here during the winter. It is quite cold.

Accidentally Killed.

Faribault, Minn., April 6. — George Rodd of Circle Lake, eight miles from here, well known throughout the county, was killed by a slab of wood from a circular saw which struck him in the chest, killing him instantly.

Snow in Dakota.

Aberdeen, S. D., April 6.—A driving northeast snowstorm began at noon yesterday. Several inches of snow has fallen. Stock will suffer to some extent, but farm and grass lands are freely benefitted.

A COLONIAL ROSE.

De Rochambeau came riding down
On his prancing charger through the town;
With careworn wrinkle and weary frown
His brow was shaded;
And she, with a gesture debonair,
Threw him a rose from her powdered hair—
The fairest maid of Washington Square,
In gown brocaded.

Fled for a moment war and wile
As he caught the rose with courtly smile,
And thought of a maid of France, the while
His glance had met her—
A maid of France, of an ancient race,
A master painted her then, a face
Whose piquant charm and dainty grace
Let none forget her.

And again he saw the old chateau
Where the roses hung in garlands low
When he rode away, long years ago—
She died soon after.
Ah, roguish maid of Washington Square,
When the gray old Frenchman saw you fair,
You little knew why he lingered there
To hear your laughter!

A Saintly Sinner.

BY ELIZABETH M. GILMER.

(Copyright, 1901, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

When handsome Jack Orton announced his engagement to Marian Harding to his sister, she being a discreet woman, only lifted an eyebrow, and asked him if he was quite sure his choice was a wise one. The girl belonged to a very different world from the gay, fashionable, pleasure-seeking one in which they were such conspicuous figures. Still, Jack was old enough to know his own tastes and mind, and when all is said, a man marries for himself and not his sister. So she forbore to say any of the nasty things a man's people usually do when he marries out of his set, and merely laid a very tender hand upon his shoulder as she asked over again if he was sure it was for the best.

"She is an angel," he had cried enthusiastically, and his sister had made a mock gesture of despair.

"My poor boy," she exclaimed, "is she so bad as all that! Don't. Only fancy having to live in the house with an angel. You could never possibly do it in peace. You are not keyed up to the situation."

But Orton laughed with the fatuous self complacency of the newly engaged, and went off to his demure little Puritan sweetheart.

In truth the girl's unlikeness to all the other women he knew had been the first thing that attracted him to her. He had met at a big crush at a fashionable house, where she had been present by virtue of being a far away cousin of the hostess, and in her simple white frock, among all the glitter, and spangles, and flash of jewels, and bold display of white, bare shoulders and arms, she had made him think of a wild flower suddenly transplanted amidst the overblown roses in a conservatory. Then somebody had asked her to sing, and she had startled even that blase assemblage with a voice so pure, so sweet, and true, and with such a passion of expression in its tones that it had made the simple ballad she sung seem like a cry from heart to heart. There was a minute's silence when she was done, and then a woman standing near Orton exclaimed.

"Fancy any one with a voice like that hacking it out teaching miserable little children. They say she had fabulous offers from opera managers to go on the stage, but that horrible old Puritan of a father of hers has brought her up to believe that the theatre is the very door to perdition."

"Go on the stage," repeated Orton, still with his eyes on the pure little face, "God forbid."

The woman raised her lorgnette and gave him an amused stare. Jack Orton, and after all that story about him and the little comic opera prima donna! Really men were too absurd!

"She is an angel!"

After that evening the acquaintance between the demure little music teacher, and the fashionable man of the world, had flown smoothly enough, and soon ripened into love. To Marian, Jack with his gay ways, his elegancies, and extravagancies, was like a being from a different sphere, and one of whose moral standard she was not a little doubtful. She had been brought up in a hard, and narrow school, and it seemed to her almost pagan for one to enjoy things frankly and openly, while to love life and laughter, the delights of a good dinner, and a glass of sparkling wine, and the smile of a woman's fair face, seemed to her nothing less than a sinful pandering to the lusts of the flesh, as her stern old father called it.

It is, however, the province of earthly angels to always judge their fellow creatures hardly, and Marian delivered many a sermon to Jack on his worldiness and wickedness, which the big hearted, loving, generous fellow received with outward meekness, and inward mirth. She really looked very delicious with that little earnest frown on her face, and it pleased him to think she was considering his soul instead of the diamonds he would give her. After all, though, one does not care to be always spoken to from the heights of superior spirituality, and there begun to be jarring notes. He discovered that Marian was provincially prejudiced against things of which she knew nothng, and that in many ways she was intolerant and bigoted. Her own life had been so removed from all temptation she had no sympathy, as wiser people have, with those who have been sore pressed, and have failed.

Finally they quarreled about some question about a woman whom Jack defended, and the girl had given him back his ring, quoting self righteously something about being unequally yoked with an unbeliever.

It takes a saint to be unforgiving. Jack, who loved the girl with all his great soul, would have kissed, and made up, but Marion refused to see him the next day, and after making various fruitless efforts he buried himself and his troubles in the depths of a winter hunting camp.

"Yes, a blooming angel!"

After he left evil days fell on the little household. The old father became ill, and nurses and doctors ate up Marion's little bank account, and her cheek grew wan and thin trying to make one dollar do the work of three. It had always been her custom to go on Sunday afternoons to the hospital to sing to the patients, and it chanced, at this time, there was a little lad there in whom she took a great interest. He was a jockey who had been badly hurt in a hurdle race and who was slowly recovering from his injuries. To him, Marian with her pretty face and glorious voice was the one bright spot in the dreary days of convalescence, and he literally lived upon her visits.

One afternoon just as things were at their worst with her, when she had only ten dollars left and the numberless importunities of the home and sick room were calling for it she went to see him, and he greeted her with shining eyes.

"Say miss," he said, "Ben, he's me side partner, he was here yesterday, an' he give me a dead straight tip, an' I'll put yer next. Anita's just got a walk over."

"Anita, who's she?" inquired Marian vaguely.

The boy gasped. "Youse don't know Anita? By gee, she's a race mare, an' say, de talent ain't on to her. Say, it's goin' to be a hundred to one shot. Gee, don't I wish I was out of dis," and he moved impatiently.

"Hundred to one shot," repeated Marian, "what's that?"

"Shucks," he cried, and then talking very slowly as if explaining things to a child: "Youse puts up one dollar, an' de boodles pays you one hundred ef youse win out."

"A bet," Marian exclaimed, "but doesn't somebody lose?"

"De bookies dis time, sure," replied the boy with conviction, "but deys dead lousy wid boodle, an' it's a charity to relieve 'em. Say, gimme a ten, an' let Ben put it up for you. Dis ain't no graft. It's a lead pipe cinch."

In the end Marian did. On the way home she told herself that it was because the money was to use for others, but in her soul she knew she had been tempted, and had fallen, just like every other sinner, but all her miserable self-righteousness was swept away, and she understood, and pitied, and loved, as she had never done before, all the great sinning, struggling, suffering brotherhood of mankind. As the boy had predicted Anita won, and the next time she went to the hospital he put in her hands a great roll of bills, but for answer she only gathered him in her arms.

"Oh, Tom, Tom," she cried, "I am nothing but a common, wicked gambler!"

"Naw yer ain't," the boy returned disgustedly, "yer ain't got de nerve. Yer ain't nothing but a bloomin' saint."

That night a very humble letter went to Jack's club, and being forwarded brought that gentleman in a few days to Marian's door.

Somehow, in the new light that had come to her, she knew that a fellow sinner would understand and forgive, and that it is only the wrath of the righteous we have to fear, so without one word she fled to Jack's arms and sobbed out her story on his breast—her temptation, her sin, and her yielding. When she was done he looked at her with a very grave smile in his eyes.

"Sweetheart," he said, "you were very earthly as an angel, but you are simply heavenly as a sinner," and for the first time in her life Marian understood.

Earth is here (in Australia) so kind just tickle her with a hoe and she laughs with a harvest.—Douglass Jerrold.

Old-Fashioned Names in Vogue.

A Presbyterian minister, who is in charge of a church in a fashionable section of Philadelphia, says he is gratified to observe that the plain, old-fashioned names are once more coming into vogue. "My attention has been called to this in christening babies," he said. "The fancy names for girls are now very seldom used. The Marguerites, Maries, Babettes, Maybelles—you know the style—have given way to the good old names our mothers and grandmothers used to bear. Still, there may be a danger in going to the other extreme, although as yet there has been no indication of coupling two names, such as Sarah Jane and Mary Ann, which used to be done. But of late a great many girl babies have been christened with such good old names as Ruth, Martha, Maria, Jane and the like."—Philadelphia Record.

SEMINOLES IN FLORIDA

The remnant if the once-powerful tribe of Seminole Indians comes in for a deal of sympathy among the people who have taken up their homes in Florida, writes a Miami, Florida, correspondent of the Chicago News Record. Those who are supposed to know say there are not more than 600 of them left, and they are hidden away in the everglades, very seldom making their appearance among the white settlers. That they do not increase in number is owing to the fact, so it is said, that the ravages of disease among children have sadly thinned their ranks. They are unable to understand the nature of many of their afflictions, do not know how to treat them, and in consequence the race in Florida threatens to become extinct.

The tribe was originally a vagrant offshoot of the Creeks. They gave great trouble to the early settlers of Georgia and Florida, and after a tedious war an attempt was made to remove the remains of the tribe to Indian Territory. This, however, was an undertaking never fully accomplished. For years they hid themselves in the dense foliage of the everglades. In recent years the interior department has endeavored to get title to some Florida land with a view to turning it over to the Seminoles, but up to a few months ago the abstracts of the tracts offered were not considered satisfactory by the department. The matter is still under consideration. The legislature of Florida at one time had before it a measure to turn over some land to the red men and their families but this has not yet been done, so that to-day they are running as wild as at the time their warrior fathers set foot in the region.

J. S. Frederick, a civil engineer of Miami, tells interesting stories of his experience with the Seminoles and their families. He has occasion once in awhile to make his way by boat far into the interior of the southern part of the state. The boat is tied up to the banks of some stream while explorations of the everglades are being made. Frederick has some knowledge of the Seminole tongue and has been able to gather small numbers of them about his campfire. On one occasion, he relates, his wife, who accompanied him on the trip, was so much taken with the bright faces and sparkling eyes of the little Seminoles that she induced him to invite a company of them into the sloop to take dinner with the surveying party. The commissariat was well stocked and about a dozen of the little red boys and girls sat down at the table. Frederick says they came near cleaning him out—in fact, the larder was empty when the young guests took their departure.

Frederick says the Indians live mostly from the products of the hunt and the gathering of roots and herbs, which they trade at the stores within reach of their homes. Like all Indians, they are fond of colored goods and showy articles, and buy liberally of such things. He says that while lingering about the trading places they are scrupulously honest.

The Atom Still an Abstraction.

A writer in McClure's Magazine says that the atom of today is still a scientific abstraction. Many facts have been brought to light that make it appear certain that matter is not continuous—is not capable of infinite subdivision. Dalton, the Quaker schoolmaster of Manchester, was the first one to bring the atom down to earth and make it a useful idea. The atomic theory, proposed by Dalton in the early years of this century, lives today, and is stronger than it has ever been, notwithstanding the efforts that have been made to show that it is built upon sand. It has been and is today an extremely useful theory. Whether it will always continue to be so is another question and one that need not bother us.

Henry M. Stanley's Associates.

When Henry M. Stanley was a reporter on a Chicago newspaper he was associated in that work with Eugene Field, Stanley Waterloo, the novelist, and Stanley Huntley, afterwards well known as the author of the "Spoopendyke Papers." Ernest McGaffey, now a promising writer of verse, was then an office boy.

The Devons.

The peninsula which forms the southwestern portion of England is the home of a thrifty and attractive race of deep-red cattle, which take their name from the elevated region in the north of Devonshire, where they have been brought to the greatest evenness and fixity of type. If solid color throughout and resistance to variation in all particulars be accepted as evidence of antiquity in a breed, the Devon must be regarded as among the oldest and purest. It certainly is one of the best defined of British breeds of cattle, although little is known of its origin. It was undoubtedly very gradually developed, but its greatest improvement since the record began has been at the hands of the brothers Quartley, Messrs. John T. and James Davy, and Mr. Coke of Holkham, afterwards Earl of Leicester.

It is believed that Devons were among the very first cattle brought across the Atlantic, reaching New England on the ship Charity in the year 1623. Importations of some consequence were made in 1800, and to New York soon afterwards, but the first herd to be brought to this country and maintained pure, so that breeders can still trace to it, was a present of a bull and six heifers from Holkham, sent directly to Mr. Robert Patterson of Maryland and arriving at Baltimore June 10, 1817. This Patterson herd has been kept up during the greater part of the century. Other importations occurred in 1818, 1820, 1835, 1855, and frequently in later years.

The characteristics of the Devon are compactness and general beauty, hardiness, activity, intelligence, docility, aptitude to fatten and quality of milk. The prevailing red varies from a dark, rich color to pale chestnut, but no black or white is admissible excepting a little white patch on and in front of the udder, which sometimes extends forward on the belly, and white hair in the switch of the tail. The skin is yellow and unctuous, its richness being shown in an orange ring around the eyes and more or less of the same encircling the muzzle. The hair is soft, fine, and often curls closely on the necks, shoulders, and faces. "The head is adorned, in the case of the female, with particularly elegant, creamy-white, sharp-pointed, black-tipped horns of medium length, having a good elevation at the junction with the head and curving upward. In the bull the horns are shorter in proportion to thickness, straighter, and less raised."

Dairy Notes.

Experiments have been made to demonstrate the possibility of cooling refrigerator cars by means of liquid air, and the experiments proved successful. Dairymen and creamerymen are interested in the matter, as it affects the transportation of all kinds of dairy products. But there is little reason for believing that this generation will see liquid air used for such a purpose, for the reason that no way has been found of producing it cheaply.

Professor Conn is well known as a scientist that has devoted a good deal of time to the isolation of bacilli for milk ripening. Just how valuable this work is has yet to be demonstrated, and experiments with the cultures has not been at all one way. At the time of the Columbian Exposition a good deal of milk came to Chicago from distant parts of the world. Even far-off Uruguay made a consignment of the lacteal fluid. Prof. Conn investigated some of this milk and found it excellent. The cream from it ripened with a flavor superior to most of the butter made in this country. From this cream he isolated the bacillus that gave the flavor and made cultures from it. Once started the production of bacilli went on indefinitely, and a company was formed to sell it under the title of "B. 41," which means "Bacillus No. 41." In relation to its value of the ordinary methods of ripening butter we quote from "Milk and Its Products": "A series of investigations by Profs. Farrington and Russell in which a large number of samples of butter were made from cream ripened by the use of B. 41, and in the ordinary way, or normally, and submitted to the judgment of several experts who were ignorant of the process of manufacture, led to the conclusion that the Conn culture, B. 41, did not improve the flavor of the separator butter ripened for one day at a high temperature, or of that ripened for a longer time at a lower temperature; on the contrary, the score of the B. 41 butter, by the various judges, was, in the majority of cases, materially lower than that of normal butter. * * * With separator butter in cold storage there was but little difference in flavor between these two butters, although the normal butter when fresh scored higher." We have to add that clean cream from clean milk seldom needs assistance to develop a good butter flavor.

Poultry Briefs.

How much age affects the laying qualities of some fowls is yet an unsolved problem. An experiment was carried on at the West Virginia Experiment Station for the purpose of gathering some data relative thereto. About 300 pullets were pitted against 100 old hens, and the contest was kept up for 210 days. During that time the pullets laid 6,209 eggs, and the old fowls 6,349, or a difference in favor of the old hens of 140 eggs. The breeds were white and brown Leghorns, and the old hens were three and four years of age. This seems to demonstrate that the notion of killing off old hens over two years of age is not a good one. But the lesson is not perhaps of general application for the reason that Leghorns are said to continue dropping eggs in large numbers long after most breeds have ceased to lay. One poultryman says he keeps his Brown Leghorns as long as they will lay, and that he kept one hen till she was nine years of age. A good many experiments will have to be made before we can get much definite light on the subject.

The advisability of not sending chickens to market in a lean condition is borne out by about all the experiments undertaken along the line of fattening fowls for market. One year the Maine Experiment Station secured a considerable number of fowls to be used in a test of this kind. The chickens were 130 days old at the beginning of the test, and the feeding was continued for thirty-five days. The 40 weighed 147.9 pounds at the beginning of the test and 237.1 at its close, and gained a total of 89.2 pounds during the period, an average gain of 2.22 pounds per chick. The quantity of dry meal required to produce a pound of gain was 5.53 pounds. When sold, the birds brought 18 cents net each more than they would have brought if sold at the former weights. Of course this advance was made in a state where retail prices for poultry are high, but the cost of food is correspondingly high. The quality of the well-covered, soft-fleshed chickens, if they are not too fat, is so much superior to that of the same birds not specially prepared that they will be sought for at a higher price.

Chicken Cholera and Roup.

This is an exceedingly fatal contagious disease, which is widely distributed over this country, and causes enormous annual losses, especially in the central and southern sections.

The first symptoms of the disease are, in the majority of cases, a yellow coloration of that part of the excrement which is usually white, quickly followed by violent diarrhea and rise of temperature. Other common accompanying symptoms are drooping of the wings, stupor, lessened appetite and excessive thirst.

Since the disease is due to a specific germ, it can only be introduced into a flock by direct importation of this germ, generally by fowls from infected premises. As soon as the symptoms of the disease are observed the fowls should be separated as much as possible and given restricted quarters, where disinfectants can be freely used. As soon as the peculiar diarrhea is noticed with any of the fowls the birds of that lot should be changed to fresh ground and the sick ones killed. The infected excrement should be carefully scraped up and burned, and the inclosure thoroughly disinfected with one-half per cent solution of carbolic acid, which may be applied with an ordinary watering pot. Burn dead birds.

The germs of the disease are taken into the system only by the mouth, and for this reason the watering troughs and feeding places must be kept thoroughly free from them by frequent disinfection with one of the solutions mentioned.

"Treatment of sick birds is not to be recommended under any circumstances. The malady runs its course, as a rule, in one, two or three days, and it can only be checked with great difficulty."

Roup is one of the most dreaded of diseases. It is sometimes spoken of as the winter disease. The symptoms are hoarse breathing, swolled eyes, discharge at the nostrils and sometimes a fetid breath. Treatment is not generally satisfactory. The affected birds should be removed, the house cleansed and disinfected. Damp, foul air and cold drafts in the poultry houses should be carefully avoided whenever fowls are subject to roup. A decrease in the proportion of corn and an increase in the proportion of meat food in the daily ration is held by some to be highly beneficial in warding off this disease.

In general the treatment of the common diseases of fowls is not so satisfactory as preventive measures. Nowhere more than in the poultry business does that old adage apply, "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure."—Agricultural Department Bulletin.

Shetland Sheep Wool.

The wool of the pure native Shetland sheep is generally compared to merino on account of its fine texture. Like the Shetland pony, the pure Shetland sheep is a small and very active creature, often to be seen moving with the swiftness and agility of a goat or chamois among the cliffs and crags of the shore. For the first few months the lambs live on the hill pastures with their mothers, but toward the close of summer they are taken in from the hill and tethered, usually in pairs on the grass inside the dikes that separate the hill pasture from the crofts. This is done to give them a better chance of standing the winter, but when bad weather really sets in they are shut up in snug and comfortable little folds every night, and regularly fed. In spring they are again allowed to run free on the hill pastures.

The wool of the native sheep is not generally clipped or shorn. On the big farms where cheviot and black-faced sheep are kept shearing is, of course, the practice, but the Shetlanders leave the sheep's fleece intact till the wool is ripe, so to speak, and just about to come off itself; then it is rooed or pulled off carefully, so as not to hurt the creatures, and any part of it that does not come off readily is left till later.—Chamber's Journal.

Itching Manes and Tails.

Owners of horses are often at a loss to understand why their animals so persistently rub their tails and manes about this time of the year, and in fact during the entire winter season. So bad do some of the cases alluded to become that the tail is rubbed free of hair, and becomes sore and covered with scales and scabs. The mane as a rule is not so badly affected but the horse also finds it itchy and rubs it occasionally. There is a corresponding irritation of the legs in heavy draft horses having "feather" from knees and hocks to hoof. Almost invariably we find on examining into the causes of this condition that the animal afflicted has been fed heavily upon corn or other grain while resting and at the same time is receiving too little work or exercise. It is also found that when horses are idle during the winter season and fed as mentioned that the owner neglects to curry and comb and brush the skin as he would do were the animal working during summer and spring. The skin at the roots of the tail and mane exfoliates more freely and rapidly than the other portions of the body, but the products of exfoliation, viz., dandruff, etc., are not got rid of as they are at the other parts of the anatomy. The roots of the hair become buried in this sloughed-off cuticle, filth adds to the condition and the part becomes itchy or even the seat of a parasitic skin disease. If at the same time, and this is frequently the case, the horse be infested by pin worms of the rectum the itching becomes intense and it is not to be wondered at that the idle horse forms the bad habit of tail rubbing. It should also be remembered that when an idle horse is heavily fed upon corn or other grain, the products of which it cannot work off in exercise, sweating and repair of wasted tissues, the blood becomes sluggish and filled with impurities which would otherwise be thrown off. When this condition is induced by feeding corn, lack of exercise and cleanliness the skin trouble is aggravated and the animal is laid open to an attack of lymphangitis or grease. When it is found then that a horse is commencing to rub its tail and mane it is necessary, not only to treat the seat of the trouble but to set right the errors of diet and management, which have given rise to the condition of the blood, favoring the appearance of skin disease. The horse is to be first cleaned very thoroughly from head to foot and this should be done at least once daily afterwards. The hair and skin at the tail and mane are to be well scrubbed with soap and hot water and it is well to add a little bicarbonate of soda to the water. The parts should then be dried thoroughly with sawdust and when this has been done it is time to apply a healing lotion to control the itching and soothe the inflamed condition. For this purpose an excellent wash is made by mixing flowers of sulphur and raw linseed oil to the consistency of cream and then to each pint of the mixture add an ounce of chloro-naptholeum. This lotion is to be freely used to drench the affected parts, working the mixture well down to the roots of the hair. It is not to be washed off but is to be repeated in three days and is to be applied to all other parts of the skin affected by irritation. The writer has had occasion to wet a horse from head to tail with this lotion where the condition of the entire skin was aggravated and found that two or three applications effected a cure. For the treatment of the pin worms a rectal injection night and morning of a warm decoction of quassia chips will be found effective. Another good injection is tobacco infusion, made by pouring boiling water upon tobacco stems. Of this a pint should be added to a half pailful of hot soapy water and this is to be injected into the rectum by means of a large syringe or a two-foot length of one inch rubber hose with funnel attached.

Dairy Notes.

Spray your house plants often enough to keep them reasonably free from dust, but do not shower them into general debility.

In order for a hen of a certain weight to produce an egg of a certain size or weight, she must have just enough wholesome food; her system must not be overtaxed by too much, or starved by too little. In fact everything must be conducive to the comfort of the hen if a continuous yield of eggs is expected.

Everywhere is seen an increasing interest in poultry raising. Investigations relative to a good many things are being carried on at the various experiment stations. Out of these experiments have come the elucidation of a few great principles, which are no longer subjects of experimentation. The reading poultryman will find out the established truths and build upon them.

The establishment of an export trade in pork from Victoria, Australia, is being seriously considered. Mr. Crowe, government dairy expert, reports that for some months past trial consignments of frozen pork have been shipped to South Africa through the agency of the Australian agricultural department. The result evidently proved satisfactory to the exporters, as there is an increase in the size of the shipments now being prepared.

Senator on Belgian Hares.

The Belgian hare fad seems to have had quite a run in Jefferson City, Mo., during the legislative session there. One of the state senators was heard to express the opinion that the craze had not been productive of any great benefit there. "In fact," he said, with conviction, "it don't taste a bit better than rabbit."

THE NEWS,

By John W. Eastman.

The country tributary to Thief River Falls is receiving a large number of new settlers this spring They are all welcome.

There were 829 lumber camps in Minnesota during the past season, with 15,886 men and 8,285 horses employed. The cut of logs was over a billion feet, and this causes the Pioneer Press to ask how long is this great industry to continue if nothing is done for forest reproduction?

Senator A. J. Beveridge contributes a brilliant article to the April number of the North American Review entitled, "Cuba and Congress," in which he explains and defends the legislation relating to Cuba recently enacted by congress. Senator Beveridge lays emphasis upon the fact that, from the very foundation of the American government, the defined national policy of the United States, as indicated by the utterances of our leading statesmen, has been to regard the control, if not the actual possession, of Cuba, as essential to the safety of our own country.

SCHOOL MATTERS.

Ably Discussed by Prof. Jas. A. Wilson.

The time is now at hand when we must take definite steps toward the extension of our cource of study in the public schools and this means that we must have more room and more adequate facilities for carrying on this work.

There are twenty-five young people now enrolled as students who will be ready for high school work next year. A number of these are doing the first year's work of the high school course now, and next year will be taking up work that will require laboratory and library facilities. Of course I take it for granted, fellow citizens, that we are all united in the opinion that we must build a new school building; that we will not permit the summer to pass and allow another school year to begin without having made substantial provision for our rapidly growing needs. You are all aware that we are now using a store building for a school room. This of course is unsatisfactory, and it is a wasteful process to pay rent for school room.

Now the question is, what are we going to do about it, or where shall we build this new building and what sort of a building shall be built? I am quite sanguine regarding the bright future of this city. We have a good soil here and this is a section of country with great natural resources agriculturally. Its lumber interests are also extensive and will be for some years. People are coming here daily form Iowa, Wisconsin and Southern Minnesota looking for lands; and openings in business. One of the first questions asked by these new-comers is, what kind of a school system have you here? And let me say right here that upon the answer to this question will depend very largely, in many cases, the decision of these desirable citizens who are seeking homes for themselves and families. The electric lights are useful, economical and attractive; we need sewerage and water works to drain our streets, carry off filth and make our surroundings more healthful and pleasant; a public library is much to be desired and would fill a much felt need in our city: but from the fullness of my heart and with a high appreciation of the importance and necessity of all these things, let me plead the cause of public education—a factor in our civilization which kindles lights in the human mind and heart far more brilliant and far reaching than the incondescent lamp; the exponent of health and beauty and cleanliness in the home; and the great feeder and trainer which creats the demand for public libraries and all other public institutions of a noble and useful character.

Shall we not then, friends, join hands in this matter and call a special school meeting and make substantial provision for the cause of education in our midst? I am positive that if we do not make these substantial provisions now it will be but a very few years before the people of Thief River Falls will regret it. I can site many older towns in this state that have lived to regret the fact that they made only short-sighted provision for public schools and spent large sums of money for small unsatisfactory buildings, built on half blocks and quarter blocks in different parts of the city. Under the circumstances I think that this city has done remarkably well for her schools and do not wish to be understood as casting any reflection upon any of those who have labored against heavy odds to reach the present status. But I do insist that now is the time to secure a large and suitable grounds, and upon it build a substantial six or eight room brick building planned for both high school and grade work.

The little town of Sandstone just across on the eastern border of this state, has just voted bonds for the purpose of building an eight room school building to be built of brick and stone at a cost of $12,000. This town was entirely burned up only a few years ago in the Hinkley fire, and they are surrounded by a wilderness of burnt pine stumps, while their few tillable fields are covered with a soil far inferior in character to that found in the Red River Valley.

It is grately to be desired that the whole city take a part in this new enterprise. In fact it is the only way to establish the system properly. It seems too bad that the city should be divided against itself in this important matter. Let us not permit a little stream of water that an all wise Creator intended for a blessing to mankind to be a hindrance to our progress in education. Dear friends, forgetting those things that are behind, let us exercise our reason and common sense. Let us get in line with every other city and town in this fair state of ours by forming an independent school district and having things as they ought to be, and with smaller expense than is incurred under the present system. Then can we have uniformity in grading and supervision; then can we receive $600 or $800 as state aid instead of $300; then can we look with pride upon our public school system and reap the glory and satisfaction of them who choose the best things and press forward to the mark for the prize of the high calling which awaits the strong young man and the noble young woman who stand upon the threshold of life peering into the mysterious future with trained and cultured minds and sympathetic hearts which are the fruits of a broad and liberal education.

BOUGHT A BANK.

Scandia State Bank Changed Hands.

An important business deal was consumated in this city last week whereby L. C. Simons and other Red Lake Falls parties, who owned practically all the stock of the Scandia State bank, disposed of their interests to W. W. Prichard, of Spirit Lake, Iowa. The new owner has been elected as cashier of the bank and will become permanently identified with the business interests of Thief River Falls, removing with his family to this city as soon as a suitable location can be found.

The bank will be incorporated as a national, the capital stock being increased from $10,000 to $25,000, and an improvement company, which will deal in farm lands, conduct an abstract business, etc., with a capital of $25,000 will also be organized. The stock of the two companies will be owned mostly by Iowa parties, many of whom will become residents of this city, but at the present time we are unable to give a full list of the men, as Mr. Prichard has not definitely decided whom he will take in, and desires to get only men who will act in perfect harmony. While the stock of the two companies will be owned largely by the same parties, they will be separate and distinct institutions. A brick banking building will be erected during the summer.

If you want to file on a piece of government land it will not be necessary to go to Crookston. Make your filing in Thief River Falls before L. G. Browning, U. S. commissioner for the district of Minnesota.

Miss Ella Farnsworth, who has been in the city during the winter, the guest of Mr. and Mrs. James Meehan, Jr., will return to her home in Chicago next week.

Rev. Crawford McKibbin, of East Grand Forks, will occupy the pulpit in the Presbyterian church both morning and evening. All are invited to attend the services.

Ex-Chief Benzie was assessed $5 for breaking a revolver that cost the city $10 by the council at a meeting held last Friday night. The revolver was broken last summer.

The Scandia State bank was awarded the $7,500 worth of bonds by the city council Saturday evening, they offering to take them at 4½ per cent and pay a premium of $175.

The mayor has been authorized by a resolution passed by the city council to appoint a special police who will have authority to serve legal documents in the absence of the chief.

Peter Eberhardt and Hank Beaulieu left last week for the Red lake where they will remain during the summer in charge of the Thief River Falls Lumber company's tow boat.

A. C. Smith has rented the Cleveland hotel of James Wright, and the latter will act as cook during the summer on one of the Thief River Falls Lumber company's steamboats.

Rev. Finch was in the city Sunday and held Easter services in the Presbyterian church. Rev. Finch will return to this city in a few days and install a minister to have charge of the work here.

The base ball boys will give a dance in the Odd Fellows hall tomorrow evening. The indications are that Thief River Falls will have the best base ball club this season of any since its existence.

Robert Fairbanks, the veteran fur buyer at White Earth, died the first of the week at the advanced age of 78. He was personally known to nearly every Chippewa Indian in Northern Minnesota.

Swan Anderson, a member of the first board of county commissioners for Red Lake county, has disposed of his Wylie farm of 400 acres and has gone to Washington on a tour of inspection, where he may locate.

A committee has been appointed by the city council to ascertain the cost of having the Great Northern removed to the old planing site. If the cost is found to be reasonable, it is said, the council will take action.

Miss B. M. Remmen has returned to this city from St. Paul with a full stock of spring millinery goods, and invites the ladies of this city to call and examine her stock. At E. S. Alnes' building, North Main Ave.

James Meehan, Jr., last week purchased B. Wold's farm in the town of Rocksbury, giving him a house and lot in Meehan's addition together with a money consideration for the same. Mr. Wold will remove to this city.

All people interested in the establishing of a public library in this city are requested to make out a list of books that they desire to see the library board purchase and send it to Miss May Vaughan at the earliest possible convenience.

A. L. Himle last week sold 2,100 acres of land located north of here to James and John Montgomery, of Esterville, Iowa. These gentlemen will remove to this city during the summer and become actively engaged in business here.

The News has just received a tip that a mass meeting of the citizens will soon be called to consider the matter of a Memorial Day celebration. The object is worthy and no doubt the projectors of this enterprise will be accorded the support of the entire population.

C. N. Bourdon and Mike McNamara, of Red Lake Falls, have purchased the Gooding mill property in that city, including the waterpower and plant. It is possible that the mill will be moved to another location, where electricity will be used as a motive power.

Wm. Ballman, who has been in charge of one of the Thief River Falls Lumber company's camps at the Red lake during the winter, returned to this city last Saturday. He succeeded in banking a total of 5,790,700 feet of logs with a crew of about 80 men and hauled the entire amount a distance of from six to seven miles.

The city council has purchased of Lars Backe, agent, three acres more of land adjoining the one acre purchased for the pest house, and it will hereafter be used as a dumping ground. The price paid for the four acres was $250. The property is situated west of the railroad track, and south of the city.

Turville & Robinson, the liverymen, have offered to give the city the services of one of their teams free, for the purpose of hauling gravel upon the streets, providing the city will hire another team to assist them. It is also stated that other dray and liverymen will do their share gratis. Such liberal offers should be accepted by the council.

A new law has been passed by congress, abolishing the fee system of deputy United States marshals. The fault with the old fee system, it is argued, was that deputies made arrests without sufficient evidence simply to swell their incomes. Under the new law they are all paid a regular salary, and the marshal is allowed three regular deputies.

Geo. F. Whitcomb, who has one of the best claims in the Thief lake country, was in the city the first of the week. He brought with him a car load of wire fencing and farm implements which will be used in making improvements upon his land, and states that in company with his brother he will buy a number of sheep and cattle and place them upon the claim during the summer.

F. H. Kratka has returned from a trip to Grand Rapids, where he went to look over the records of Itasca county, for his sister, Mrs. Caldwell. Years ago Mrs. Caldwell's husband was heavily interested pine lands, but met with financial reverses, and when he died some few years ago, it was not thought that he left any estate. It now transpires, however, that there are several valuable tracts of pine land which belong to the heirs and a thorough examination of the records of St. Louis and Cook counties will also be made, as Mr. Caldwell was at one time heavily interested in pine lands in these counties. Mr. Kratka found thirteen 40-acre pieces which stand in Mr. Caldwell's name in Itasca county.

Easter Sunday was observed in the Methodist church by the rendition of a very interesting program. The day was a model one, and the church was well filled for the morning service, the entire program as advertised being carried out. The church was beautifully decorated with flowers, and several cages of canaries helped to swell the glad praises of the congregation. At the close of the morning serman, four new members were received—one in full connection and three on probation. In the afternoon the pastor, Rev. W. Allen Sterling, preached to a large congregation of children, the music for this service being furnished by the Junior League Chorous Choir, and was well rendered. In the evening the church filled long before the the time of service, and a large number were unable to gain admission. The music was especially pleasing and the pastor preached a strong sermon. Taken all together it was a red letter day for Methodism in Thief River Falls.

THE BIG MILL

Started Up for the Season Today.

The Thief River Falls Lumber company's big saw mill in this city started up today for the season. Next week the mill will commence running nights and will not be closed down until it freezes up next fall, as the company has a large supply of logs. The men employed will be paid off every two week, and thousands of dollars will thus be poured into the business channels of Thief River Falls.

DIAMOND STORE.

Sold to Messrs. Hay, Mason and Ward.

J. H. Hay, of Sandstone, Minn., was in the city last week and made arrangements with M. V. Evenson and O. P. Johnson for the purchase of the Diamond store. C. A. Nasen and J. D. Ward, of Barnum, will be associated with Mr. Hay as members of the new firm, and they will conduct an up-to-date general store.

The new firm takes possession about April 20.

STORIES FROM OUR EXCHANGES

The career of Jonathan Prentiss Dolliver, the mountain boy who became a senator, is entertainingly described by Cyrus Patterson Jones in Success for March. The senator's love of humor is thus described:

"His wit is one of the most attractive of his gifts. He can tell a story with wonderful effect. His keen sense of humor would have made him a comedian if nature had not cast his other faculties in a more serious mold. Therefore his fun only crops out at times.

"When I asked him when and where he first began to consider himself famous he said:

"'My first term in congress gave me my first sense of exaltation. The people up in the Iowa hills had a little lake, and they named it after me. Then a new postoffice was named in my honor, and a colored woman named her baby after me. I began to think of engaging a niche in some temple of fame.

"'But, in my second term, I was disillusioned. A climatic disturbance dried up the lake, free delivery wiped out the postoffice, and the child died—and I found myself back at the very place whence I started!'

"A few years ago Mr. Dolliver was invited to deliver a lecture in St. Paul and Minneapolis, Minn., before the Young Men's Christian association lyceum. In each city the hall was crowded, some 1,500 young men attending. His topic was 'Chances for Young Men.'

"'That,' said he to me, 'was a favorite topic with me. As in the case of your own publication, I believed in young men, and liked to talk with them, knowing full well that if one can stir them up to energy and ambition he is doing a grand work in the world.

"'Well, I have not changed my opinion since the delivery of that lecture, but, when I got back to Washington to resume my congressional duties, a week later, I began to hear from those particular young men. Letters began to pour in on me. They came in bunches of two and three, then in dozens, and finally in basketfuls. Every St. Paul and Minneapolis young man who had heard me declare that this is the young man's age wrote that he fully agreed with me—and asked me to get him a government job!'"

INDIAN GIRL IN ROME

"She is the brightest, most winsome little tot of a girl that we've brought across the Atlantic in many a day," said Commander Englebart of the North German Lloyd liner Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse yesterday morning, reports the New York Times. The object of his praise was a 9 year old Indian child from the Rocky mountain region of Montana. Kolinzuten, which in the court language of the Flathead Indians means "child of God," is the name of the diminutive maiden, who, when she landed, promptly informed an admiring coterie that surrounded her on the pier that she was just returning from Rome, where, with KOLINZUTEN.

Mother Provincial Mary Amandeus of Helena, Mont., she had gone to see Pope Leo.

Kolinzuten is an inmate of the convent of the Ursuline nuns at Helena, Mont., an institution where nearly 500 Indian children are being educated.

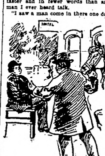
"This little girl," said Mother Amandeus yesterday, "accompanied me as the representative of the 500 Indian children who are being educated in the diocese of Helena by the Ursuline nuns. Dressed in the costume of her people, with her gay feathers and bright-colored dress, she was presented to the holy father. When she appeared his holiness exclaimed in his eagerness, 'Who is this child? Who is this child?' blessing her several times during the audience. Kolinzuten is a member of the Flathead tribe—a tribe that boasts of never having shed the blood of a white man."

COULDN'T FIND THE MAN

One of those drummers who does a good deal of driving about the country delights in telling about an old-time boniface who runs a country hotel within a day's drive of Detroit, says the Detroit Free Press.

"Sharp as a tack," declared the drummer. "Always as smooth as oil until some one tries to make a run on him, and then he can get back harder, faster and in fewer words than any man I ever heard talk.

"I saw a man come in there one day



"WHERE'S THE MAN?" ASKED THE OLD CHAP."

from the city. He is all right at home, but was feeling his oats that day, and opened up on the old landlord by saying: 'Hello, granddad, get your frame into circulation. Don't set around here like a bump on a log. I want accommodation for man and beast.'

"'Where's the man?' asked the old chap, in a flash."

TRAIN YOUR BOYS.

Sons Should Be Orderly and Systematic in the House.

A wise mother will impress upon her sons, as well as upon her daughters, the importance and comfort of being orderly in the household. It is usual for the mother to strive to make her daughter systematic and tidy, to induce her to keep her bureau drawers, her closet and her room in order; to put away her clothes carefully, and to make her bed properly; but the boy has all these things done for him, and, consequently, never learns orderly habits, unless they come to him by nature. There is no sense in this distinction between the boy and the girl. Neatness and orderliness in regard to one's room and surroundings are as essential to a well-bred man as neatness of person, and the boy is at a disadvantage in whose home-training these points have been neglected. Mothers know that their sons are liable, after they are grown, to be away from their care for years before establishing homes of their own. It is a positive unkindness, therefore, to allow them to grow up with slovenly habits, which will cause them to be regarded as ill-bred by persons of refinement, and which will be a source of discomfort to themselves. It is becoming much more common than formerly for men to have a knowledge of domestic affairs. Many men would feel it as much of a disgrace to live in the midst of dirt and disorder, when thrown upon their own resources, as a woman would under similar circumstances. It is not unusual to find cultured men who take pride in being competent to perform the ordinary duties of the household. A knowledge of these duties is most convenient to any man, for in every home emergencies come in which his own comfort, and that of others, will depend upon his ability to do the necessary things in the right way; but if such proficiency as this is too much to expect from every man, mothers should see to it, at least, that their sons, equally with their daughters, are taught to take that care of their rooms and personal belongings which the requirements of refined living demand.—New York Weekly.

Congressman's Trouble About a Shave.

Congressman Mondell of Wyoming had an engagement with a theatrical party in Washington the other evening and at the last moment dashed out to get shaved. He found the barber shops closed and, having no razor of his own, borrowed one from a friend. He almost sliced his left ear off and now swears that at the next session of congress he will introduce a bill compelling barber shops to keep open all night.

BEGGAR'S BANK ACCOUNT.

Faithful Dog Earned $25,000 for Its Master.

For the past ten years theater-goers and other pleasure seekers who walked on the Broadway of New York's Tenderloin after dark were wont to glance aside to the curbing at the attenuated harmonies of a hand-organ, says the New York Times. The glance showed them a ragged old man, grinding out the wheezy greeting of age to youth, but it also showed a grizzly-haired dog hard by, with a basket half full of coin in his mouth. The men who saw it merely grumbled: "Pshaw! Only a hand organ beggar. Probably worth more than I am." But their feminine companions were not to be put off in that wise. "But look at the faithful dog," they would cry. And the result was that the dog's basket became heavier every moment that he was on duty. It was the tribute of woman to the dog.

"Now, mind," the male escort would say, "I do it simply out of regard for the dog. Several days ago Broadway missed the dog. Broadway wondered and then speedily forgot all about it. The dog's home was in the tenement house, 402 West Thirty-eighth street, where a week ago he died. His master, since dead, the neighbors say, starved both himself and the dog to death. The dog is dead and the neighborhood knows not his name, but there is left to guard his memory a noble monument. The savings of the master that the dog earned amount to something over $25,000.

Timothy McGrath was the dog's master. For years he lived in a small room in the tenement in Thirty-eighth street. Of late, since the death of the dog he himself had been ailing, and James Brown, a tailor, who had his shop on the ground floor, had been accustomed to do the meager shopping of McGrath.

Yesterday morning, as usual, Brown went up to the top floor, but could get no answer to his knockings. A policeman finally broke in the door. McGrath was dead. The ambulance surgeon said that lack of proper nourishment was the cause. In a tin box secreted in the room they found two bank notes, one on the Emigrants' Savings bank, and one on the Bank for Savings, showing to McGrath's credit $15,000. There was also the deeds for a house on Fortieth street, off Fifth avenue, a life insurance policy, and deeds for a lot and monument in Calvary cemetery.

CURIOUS HONDURAS PIPES.

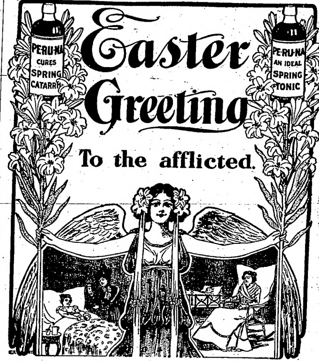
Spanish and Aztec Implements Retain Historic Designs and Color.

this country many of the odd implements and curios of those lands. The Spanish population has a large admixture of Aztec or other aboriginal blood, and preserves many of the implements as well as customs which prevailed in the time of the Montezumas. One of the queerest survivals in this regard is the long pipe which is still employed in the rural districts of both republics. It is made from a shrub or a sapling which grows somewhat like the elder. The bush is cut down and the pith extracted from the stem, which is afterward peeled, polished, dried and painted with primary colors in barbaric style. The simplest form is a straight stem from three to six feet in length. A more expensive kind is made from a stem with two terminal branches. This demands much more care in extracting the pith, and enables the owner to offer a friend a mouthpiece on one branch while he is enjoying another upon a second. Three-stemmed sticks are also made, and, very rarely, four-stemmed ones. These are kept as curios rather than as useful articles, and are supposed to have been employed upon especial occasions in the days of the Incas. The bowl is of red mouthpiece may be of bone, or horn or decorated silver and amber. The length of the stem causes the tobacco smoke to cool appreciably in its passage from the bowl to the lips, and gives a taste almost as mild as that produced by the oriental nargile. The tobacco used with it is of rich red brown color, about intermediate in flavor and appearance between Virginia and Havana leaf. These pipes make very pretty ornaments for a mantel or for a wall, being much more pleasing to the eye than the "church warden" familiar to all smokers. They are strong and durable, but, unless oiled and varnished now and then, they are apt to split in a dry climate. Collectors make it a rule to oil them on the inside once a year.

Strange Railway Wreck.

Frank Fisher awakened from sweet dreams a few days ago to find himself perched high on the top of a wrecked locomotive, amid the ruins of a far worse wrecked caboose. The sudden change from scenes of pastures green and babbling brooks to a winter landscape, full of twisted iron, splinters and hissing steam was so unpleasant that Fisher lost no time in climbing down from his high seat, but not before he had been painfully scalded. This remarkable incident occurred during the wreck on the Schuylkill bridge, on the Perkiomen railroad. Fisher's escape was miraculous. He had charge of a car of eleven horses, and was dozing in the gig top of the caboose when the locomotive plunged into the rear end of the train. The horses were all killed.

Imitations of American products are being sold in Sweden in large quantities. One wholesale hardware dealer has disposed of a big lot of forks, which are represented as American manufacture, and which are sold at a very low price.



If every one in the world were healthy and happy what a glad day Easter would be. But the sun rises every Easter morning on a multitude of sick and afflicted. The Easter lilies gladden the hearts of the sick and well alike.

But to the sick something more than the Easter lily is necessary to bring that hope and cheer which every one expects on Easter day. The well need no physician, but the sick need a remedy.

Nearly one-half the people in the United States are suffering from some form or phase of catarrhal ailment. These ailments take different forms at different seasons of the year. In the springtime catarrh assumes a systemic form, producing nervousness, lassitude and general languor.

Systemic catarrh deranges the digestion and through deranged digestion it impoverishes or contaminates the blood. Thus we have blood diseases and nervous derangements through systemic catarrh.

Peruna is a specific for these cases. No other remedy yet devised by the medical profession is able to successfully meet so many phases of spring ailments as Peruna.

Men and women everywhere are praising Peruna as follows:

A First Class Tonic.

Wm. A. Collier, Assistant Paymaster U. S. N., writes: "I have taken Peruna and recommend it to those needing a first-class tonic."

A Great Tonic.

Hon. M. C. Butler, Ex-U. S. Senator and Ex-Governor of South Carolina, writes from Edgefield, S. C.: "I have been using Peruna for a short period and I feel very much relieved. It is indeed a wonderful medicine and besides a great tonic."

Splendid for the Nerves.

Robert B. Mantell, the famous actor, writes from New York City: "Peruna is splendid and most invigorating—refreshing to the nerves and brain."

For General Debility.

Hon. Jno. V. Wright, of the Law Department, General Land Office of Tennessee, writes: "I wish everyone who is suffering with general debility or prostration could know of Peruna."

A Spring Tonic.

Mrs. D. W. Timberlake, Lynchburg, Va., says: "There is no better spring tonic than Peruna, and I have used about all of them."

A Good Tonic.

Captain Percy W. Moss, Second Arkansas Volunteers, writes from Paragould, Ark.: "I find Peruna a very good spring tonic, and will readily recommend it at any time."

Builds Up the Entire System.

Miss Jennie Johnson, 3118 Lake Park avenue, Chicago, Ill., is Vice President of Chicago Teachers' Federation. She writes: "Peruna restores the functions of nature, induces sleep and builds up the entire system."

Makes Steady Nerves.

D. L. Wallace, Charter Member International Barbers' Union, 15 Western avenue, Minneapolis, Minnesota, writes: "I now feel splendid. My head is clear, my nerves are steady, I enjoy my food and rest well."

The Best of Tonics.

Hon. W. C. Chambers, Chief Justice of Samoa, says: "I have tried one bottle of Peruna and I can truthfully say it is one of the best tonics I ever used."

A Grand Tonic.

Mrs. Gridley, mother of Captain Gridley, of the "Olympia," writes: "I used Peruna and can truthfully say it is a grand tonic."

For Overwork.

Mr. Tefft Johnson, a prominent actor of Washington, D. C., writes from Fourteenth and "I" streets: "In the effort to improve a condition impaired by overwork, I have found nothing that has done as much good as Peruna."

For a Worn-out System.

Mrs. Catherine Toft, President "Valkyrien Association," 3649 Cottage Grove avenue, Chicago, Ill., writes: "I often advise Peruna in cases of a worn-out system and a broken down constitution."

Another View of Charity.

"What is true charity, but giving with a liberal and willing hand?"

"By no means. When you know some things about another fellow, the charity might consist in giving nothing away."—Philadelphia Times.

DEERING AT PARIS IN 1900.

The Famous Chicago Harvester Company Received More and Greater Honors than Were Ever Before Accorded an American Exhibitor in the History of Expositions.

America may well feel proud of the interest which her citizens took in the Paris Exposition and the elaborate exhibits which were prepared with consummate skill and displayed in a manner not excelled by any other country. Those of Harvesting Machinery in particular were most complete and interesting. The Deering Harvester Company, of Chicago, America's foremost manufacturer of this line of goods, was accorded the position of honor, having contributed more to the advancement of the art of harvesting than any other manufacturer, living or dead, and with a greater array of important inventions to its credit than any other company in the world.

Visitors to the Exposition were prompt to accord the Deering exhibits supreme honors, and it only remained for official mandate to ratify the popular verdict, which was done in a manner as substantial as it was well-merited. Each one of the seven Deering exhibits secured the highest award in its class.

In addition to four high decorations, the Deering Harvester Company received twenty-five awards, or twenty-nine in all, as follows: Decoration of Officer of the Legion of Honor, Decoration of Chevalier of the Legion of Honor, Two Decorations of Officer of Merite Agricole, a Special Certificate of Honor, The Grand Prize, Six Gold Medals, Six Silver Medals and Eleven Bronze Medals, including Deering Collaborator Medals.

The Decoration of the Legion of Honor was instituted by Napoleon Bonaparte when First Consul in 1802, and is only conferred in recognition of distinguished military or civil achievements. It is the highest distinction in the gift of the French Republic.

The Decoration of the Merite Agricole is an honor of but slightly less importance, which is conferred upon those who have contributed greatly to the advancement of agriculture.

An Official Certificate of Honor was accorded the Deering Retrospective Exhibit, which showed the improvements in harvesting machinery during the past century, and excited the highest praise of the French Government Officials who had entrusted to the Deering Harvester Company the preparation of this most important exhibit. By special request this exhibit has been presented to the National Museum of Arts and Sciences at Paris, where it has become a permanent feature of that world-famed institution.

The Deering Twine Exhibit and Corn Harvester Exhibit, both of which received the highest awards, have by request of the French Government been presented to the National Agricultural College of France.

There was no field trial, either official or otherwise, in connection with the Paris Exposition, but the most important foreign contest the past season was held under the auspices of the Russian Expert Commission at the Governmental Farm of Tomsk, Siberia, August 14th to 18th. All the leading American and European machines participated and were subjected to the most difficult tests by the Government Agriculturist. The Expert Commission awarded the Deering Harvester Company the Grand Silver Medal of the Minister of Agriculture and Domain which was the highest award.

The Deering Harvester Works are the largest of their kind in the world, covering eighty-five acres and employing 9,000 people. They are equipped with modern automatic machines, many of which perform the labor of from five to fifteen hands.

This Company is also the largest manufacturer of Binder Twine in the world, having been first to produce single-strand binder twine, such as is in general use today, making over a third of the product of the entire world. The output of its factory for a single day would tie a band around the earth at the equator, with several thousand miles to spare. The annual production would fill a freight train twenty miles long. Made into a mat two feet wide, it would reach across the American continent from ocean to ocean.

Deering machines are known as LIGHT DRAFT IDEALS, consisting of Binders, Mowers, Reapers, Corn Harvesters, Shredders and Rakes.

This company exhibited at the Paris Exposition an Automobile Mower, which attracted much attention, and exhibitions were given with one of these machines in the vicinity of Paris throughout the season.

EXTRAVAGANCE IN HOME.

Too Little Economy by People of Small Incomes.

There is too little economy at home. People should live moderately if their income is small. In the last Good Housekeeping, Edith Dickson talks very sensibly on extravagance in the home.

The widest range in the estimate of twenty families was found in the table expenses. On incomes of from $1,600 to $2,000, two or three families of three persons each reckoned their table expenses at $5 a week. One family of two adults and two children gives $26 a month, as the average cost of their table during the year. In other families of the same size and income, table expenses are computed at from $40 to $50 a month. There is no other department of household expenditure which requires so much constant care and good management as the providing for the table. In an impromptu symposium of a dozen women upon the subject of domestic finances, it was decided that out of an income of $1,000, $400 should be allowed for incidentals, including savings, benevolence, life insurance premiums, etc. Some families having this salary do better. I know of two or three cases where on this income about $400 a year is saved, leaving $1,200 for the total family expenses. An ideal division has been suggested by Mrs. Ellen Richards for different incomes. On $2,000 a year for a family of two adults and two or three children the proposed expenditures is as follows: Food, $500; rent, $400; fuel, wages, etc., $300; clothes $400; higher life, savings, etc., $400. The last head must be understood to include incidentals such as amusements traveling expenses, books, etc. On $1,000 a year for a family of the same size, the allowance for food is $300; rent, $200; clothes, $150; fuel, wages, etc., $100; higher life savings, etc., $250. Whether rent needs to be so much as the allowance here made depends entirely upon the locality. Outside of the large cities it should be less. Many families of five or six with $2000 a year spend less than $500 for food. Another housewife testifies that her husband's salary amounts to $939 a year. There are three in the family and their expenses are as follows. Rent, $216; fuel, $75; table $425; the remaining $223 covers clothing, church contribution of $40, life insurance and all other incidentals.

LETTERS FROM BABYLON.

British Museum Contains Kingly Epistles of 4,300 Years Ago.

Two series of curious Babylonian tablets have recently been placed in the Assyrian room of the British museum. The characters inscribed about 2400 B. C. on the first series give lists of measurements and statistics of a number of estates. They have been drawn up with a care that indicates they formed part of a large survey of the country's cultivable land, and doubtlessly formed the data upon which the system of taxation employed by the kings and priests was based. It is strange that the Babylonians, who, like the Egyptians, had no deep theoretical knowledge of arithmetic and mensuration, should so readily have made these very practical calculations. The system by which they dated the tablets was peculiar. Each year was called after some important event that had taken place in it. But as in time this system proved cumbrous, it was superseded by another, in which the regnal years of the king were used. The second series comprise the oldest group of Babylonian letters known. These tablets were inclosed in clay envelopes, and addressed by kings to high officials. Both the letters and envelopes were baked, being prevented from sticking together by powdering the tablets with fine clay. In a style terse, but generally clear, the letters contain orders referring to matters of social administration. One decrees that an intercalary month be inserted in the calendar; while another refers to the punishment of bribed officials. A stranger at the museum said they resembled dog biscuits.—London Express.

Origin of St. Valentine's Day.

The origin of St. Valentine's day is obscure. Saint Valentine was a priest of Rome, who was martyred in the third century. Douce says that it was the practice in ancient Rome, during a great part of February, to celebrate feasts in honor of Pan and Juno. At these times, amid many ceremonies, the names of young women were put into a box, from which they were drawn by men. The pastors of the early church, striving to eradicate pagan superstitions, often substituted the festival of some Christian saint for that of a heathen deity. In this case they probably chose that of St. Valentine, which occurred at nearly the same time, but though the name of the day became Christian, relics of the old pagan ceremonies still cling to it.—Indianapolis News.

Moss for Purifying Syrup.

Besides the thousands of pounds of Spanish moss sent annually from Florida and other Southern states to Northern upholsterers, the plant has various other uses. One of these, a use that has recently been discovered, is that of a strainer and purifier of cane syrup. It has been found that a finer syrup can be made by straining the cane juice through moss than through any other material.

The Twentieth Century.

The twentieth century began January 1st, 1901, and will end with 2000. People did not begin to reckon time from A. D. 1, but waited until about the 550th year of the Christian era. People who begin to take the great health restorative, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, immediately after the first outbreak of dyspepsia, malaria, rheumatism, constipation, nervousness or kidney trouble will date their cure immediately from them.

Boil Eggs in Cold Water.

"This egg tastes as if it had been boiled in hot water," said the emancipated young woman with the short hair. "I can always tell in a minute if an egg has been cooked in that way."

Her companion had not learned quite so many things, and was quite satisfied with her egg. She only murmured, softly:

"I never heard of an egg being boiled in cold water, did you?"

"It is high time you were introduced to this institution," her wise friend continued, "and I am delighted to illuminate you, even at the risk of arousing more or less sarcasm. An egg to be boiled properly for human consumption should be put into cold water and then placed over the fire. Then it cooks with the water. The egg cooks, moreover, thoroughly and from the inside.

"Ask a physician or a trained nurse how to boil an egg so that its greatest nutriment and flavor shall be preserved. Either of them will tell you to put it in cold water. The old way of dropping an egg into boiling water has long been given up. It used to cook the egg suddenly and destroy its flavor.

So don't be sarcastic because you haven't heard of the century's advance."—New York Sun.

A WOMAN'S HEART.

Mrs. Samuel G. Dyer Tells a Harrowing Tale of Suffering.

M'Carron, Mich., April 8.—(Special.)—Mrs. Samuel G. Dyer of this place has given the following interesting letter for publication:

"For years I suffered intense pain in the region of the heart. I doctored with the best physicians. Some of them would relieve me for a short time, but the pain always returned. My heart was so bad that I would have to sit up in bed for hours to get relief. I would lie awake almost all night. I am 62 years of age, and no one can understand how much I suffered with this Heart Trouble.

"About a year ago I heard of Dodd's Kidney Pills and commenced to use them. From the first my condition improved. The pain in my heart gradually grew less, and my general health much better, and now I can say positively that I am entirely cured. I can sleep all night, and enjoy almost perfect health. I thank God for the cure that has come to me through the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"I have thought long over the matter of giving this letter for publication, and am doing so now without any solicitation whatever, and simply because I feel it my duty to express the profound gratitude I feel for my recovery, and to let others, who may be suffering as I was, know how they may find a cure. I know that nothing else but Dodd's Kidney Pills cured me, because I have taken no other medicine for over a year. I feel better now than I have for many years, and it is all due to the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills."

Mrs. Dyer's case and its cure has attracted a great deal of attention, and her letter is a splendid tribute to the curative properties of Dodd's Kidney Pills.

THE BEST HE EVER SAW.

A Missourian Pronounces on the Farming Possibilities of Western Canada.

Just at present considerable interest is being aroused in the fact that a few new districts (of limited acreage) are being opened out by the Canadian government in Saskatchewan and Assiniboia (western Canada), and any information concerning this country is eagerly sought. Mr. W. R. Corser, of Higginsville, Lafayette Co., Mo., was a delegate there during last summer, and writing of his impressions he says:

"I found surprising yields of grain of all descriptions. One farmer I visited threshed of 175 acres:

"800 bushels of wheat from fifteen acres, 40 bushels to acre.

"600 bushels of barley from ten acres, 60 bushels to acre.

"15,000 bushels of oats from 150 acres, 100 bushels to acre.

"The samples were all No. 1.

"I also saw a considerable number of stock. Swine do well and there is no disease amongst them. They are a good source of income to the farmer. The cattle on the range beat anything I ever saw. Fat and ready for beef, fully matured and ripened on the nutritious grasses of the prairie. I am firmly convinced that this country offers better facilities for a poor man than any I have ever seen."

Information concerning these lands can be had from any agent of the government whose advertisement appears elsewhere in this paper.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address

ACCEPTED BY CUBA

YIELDS GRACEFULLY TO THE PLATT AMENDMENT.

Gov. Wood Reports the Result of a Conference With the Cuban Committee — Information Received With Evident Pleasure by the President and His Cabinet—Gov. Wood Explains the Attitude of the Administration Toward Cuba to the Satisfaction of the Committee.

Washington, April 7. — Cuba has practically accepted the Platt law. That is the substance of a cable communication received by Secretary Root from Gen. Wood of Cuba, giving the details of a conference with the committee on relations appointed by the constitutional convention. This information was communicated to the cabinet and congratulations were exchanged that Cuba will now yield gracefully to the conditions imposed by congress.

The committee which called upon Gen. Wood included the radicals, who have hitherto protested against the Platt amendment. When Gen. Wood unfolded to them the real intention and magnanimous attitude of the administration toward Cuba the committee retired, expressing faith in the pledge of this government.

BLIZZARD IN KANSAS.

Causes Considerable Suffering in Many Towns.

McDonald, Kan., April 7. — Another terrific blizzard has been experienced in Northwestern Kansas and has increased the suffering in the towns along the lines of the Burlington & Missouri river railway. The storm started at 8 o'clock Thursday night and lasted ten hours. Burlington train No. 171, with twelve days' mail, express and freight for the beleaguered towns of Bird City and St. Francis, was caught half a mile east of here and every effort to bring in the train has proven futile. Burlington officials ordered a snow plow with a double header that had already reached St. Francis, to turn back and relieve the train. The plow had gone but a short distance when it was stalled and the train is still in a drift 500 feet long and four to five feet deep. The train just missed being caught in the Blakeman cut, which is seventy feet deep, and if it had been stalled there the entire train would doubtless have been completely buried in snow. Much suffering exists at half the small towns within a radius of forty miles, many of the people having been short of fuel and provisions for twelve days.

LARGE TOBACCO CARGO.

Shipment Held Back in Cuba Until Export Duty Was Abolished.

New York, April 7.—The Ward line steamer Mexico has arrived from Havana, where she was detained for more than two days beyond her usual sailing day in order to take the earliest advantage of the new law abolishing the export duty on tobacco and cigars. Very little tobacco or cigars were shipped from Cuba during the month of March, shippers holding back for April 1, when the export duty was taken off. The Mexico, the first ship from Havana on April 1, was loaded to her fullest capacity, and brought 13,984 bales of tobacco and 1,190 cases of cigars and cigarettes, said to be the largest cargo brought by any one steamer from Havana to this port.

LEAVES MANY MEN IDLE.

Burning of Two Large Plants of the American Radiator Company.

Detroit, April 7. — One of the two large plants of the American radiator company located outside of the city limits on Joseph Campau avenue, was almost completely destroyed by fire which started shortly after 9 o'clock last night. After the fire had burned about two hours three large buildings were in ruins, namely, the warehouse, the pattern shop and the machine shop. Frederick W. Hodges, manager of the company, estimated the loss at $150,000, and said it was fully covered by insurance. There were between 500 and 600 men employed by the company who will be temporarily thrown out of employment. The cause of the fire is unknown.

SLEDGE-HAMMER BLOW.

Chicago Boy Charged With Killing a Woman With His Fist.

Chicago, April 7.—With a single blow of his fist a fifteen-year-old boy named James McKay is accused of having killed a full-grown woman. McKay was passing the house of Mrs. Annie Palmiere, when he quarreled with Mrs. Palmiere and her two small boys. Mrs. Palmiere ran out into the street to help her children and McKay is said to have struck her one blow with his fist. The woman dropped to the ground as if in a faint. When she was picked up and carried into the house a doctor was called and he at once pronounced her dead. McKay was locked up.

MENACE TO ENGLAND.

France to Strengthen Her Force in the South Pacific.

London, April 7.—A dispatch to the Times from Wellington, N. Z., says that France, after establishing a naval station in the Pacific, will increase her warships there to five within a few weeks. She is now strengthening the land defenses of the station. Her action is regarded in Wellington as a menace to British interests in the South Pacific.

Warehouse Destroyed.

New Orleans, April 7. — The warehouse on the South Side plantation, containing a large quantity of sugar, was destroyed by fire. Loss, $200,000; fully covered by insurance. The plantation is on the bank of the river a few miles above this city.

Carleton College Wins First Place in the Oratorical Contest.

St. Paul, April 7.—For the third consecutive year Carleton college won last night the first place in the annual oratorical contest, in which Carleton competes with Macalester college, Hamline university and the University of Minnesota. Carleton also won second place last night. Hamline came third. The winner of first place was J. A. Burnquist, who spoke of "The New National Ideal." F. O. Leonard, the winner of second place, spoke on "The Value of National Precedents." George R. Babcock's subject was "Daniel O'Connell. Mr. Burnquist will represent Minnesota at the interstate oratorical contest at Des Moines May 2. The states heard there will be Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Minnesota, Iowa, Colorado, Nebraska, Wisconsin, Missouri and Kansas.

SHOT SISTER AND BROTHER.

The Former at Dead and the Latter Is Dying.

Grand Forks, N. D., April 7.—Charles Boecher, aged sixteen, the son of Herman Boecher, a farmer living five miles southwest of Blanchard, Traill county, last evening shot his sister, aged ten, and his brother, aged six. The girl is dead and the boy is not expected to live. The shooting is supposed to have been accidental, but this does not appear to be certain, as only the children were present at the time and the boy who did the shooting has disappeared. As nearly as can be learned, Mr. and Mrs. Boecher had gone to church, leaving their children and several neighbors' children in charge of the oldest son, Charles. The boy had been getting his gun ready to go goose hunting, and in some way the weapon was discharged.

FEDERAL INDICTMENTS.

A White Man and an Indian Must Stand Trial.

Sioux Falls, S. D., April 7.—In the United States court the grand jury returned indictments against Frederick Benedict, an old resident of Bon Homme county, for selling liquor to Indians, and against George Campbell, a pupil in the government Indian school at Chamberlain, for criminal assault on a young Indian girl, also a pupil in the school. The cases against Michael O'Shea, ex-postmaster at Running Water, and William Crook of Egan were dismissed. The latter was charged with selling liquor to Indians while the former, who is a justice of the peace, was accused of acknowledging a signature to his wife's bond as postmistress at Running Water when the party had not personally appeared before him.

AUGUSTA'S LOSS.

Sixty Thousand Dollars' Damage in a Business Section Fire.

Helena, Mont., April 7.—Almost the entire business portion of Augusta was destroyed by fire. The loss is estimated at $60,000. The fire originated in the Odd Fellows' hall and soon spread until it had consumed every building on Main street except the Hotel Augusta. The chief losers are J. C. Adams & Co., general store, $40,000, insured for half; three saloons, averaging $2,500, and Smith's store, none of whom were insured. It is thought the fire originated in the acetylene plant in Adams' store.

Exterminating Gophers.

Fargo, N. D., April 7.—Some of the counties intend to take advantage of the gopher law this year and make an effort to exterminate the pests. Under an act passed in the '99 legislative session the commissioners of any county are authorized to levy a tax not exceeding 4 mills on the dollar of assessed valuation upon all real estate in the county, the proceeds of which shall be used for promoting the destruction of the little pests.

Wahpeton and Breckenridge United.

Wahpeton, N. D., April 7.—The new steel bridge between this place and Breckinridge has been opened to traffic. It has 150 feet span, clear over the Bois de Sioux river. The roadway is twenty-four feet wide and has a footway six feet wide on each side. It took 100 tons of metal, six car loads, cost $9,000 besides the water wall and high grading at each end. The contractors were Schuler Bros. of Wahpeton.

Crashed Into the House.

Winona, Minn., April 7.—An unusual fatality occurred at Fountain City. A large rock became loosened from the bluff's side and crashed down through the residence of Henry Robler. It struck Mrs. Robler, who was in bed with her husband, and carried her down, causing her death. Mr. Robler was injured only slightly.

Funds for Epworth League.

Sioux Falls, S. D., April 7.—Rev. J. O. Dobson, presiding elder of the Sioux Falls district of the Methodist Episcopal church, has charge of the collection of funds for caring for the Epworth league assembly at Canton the coming summer. He reports that he has now nearly $6,000 raised.

Snow and Rain.

Huron, S. D., April 7. — Thursday night's rain and snowstorm covered the entire Jim river valley. Thus far the precipitation for April exceeds that of any April for three years, and farmers report ample moisture for seeding. In some localities the ground is too wet.

Despondent Strikers' Suicide.

Helena, Mont., April 7.—George H. Connors, a striking Anaconda machinist, committed suicide at that place by shooting. He was despondent because he was out of employment. He had opposed the strike, but went out with the others. He leaves a wife and three children.

Aberdeen, S. D., April 7.—The board of county commissioners has awarded the contract for five steel wagon bridges to the Gillette-Herzog Company of Minneapolis. The contract price is $4,975.

MAKES WORSE MIX

CHINA'S REFUSAL TO SIGN THE TREATY.

Whole Chinese Question Is Complicated by the Attitude Assumed Toward Russia—Manchuria Will Not Be Evacuated by Russia Until the Other Powers Withdraw Their Troops From China Proper —Other Powers Cannot Help China Even by Moral Support.

Washington, April 6.—Diplomats here fail to see what China is to gain from the rejection of the treaty with Russia. It will simply delay the evacuation of Manchuria by the Russian troops. It is not believed that Russia will retire without some treaty assurances of protection to her great property, as no other government would do so.

The other powers cannot help China even by moral support, for not one of them, except the United States, is preparing to withdraw their troops from China. England and Germany have made no move toward the withdrawal of troops, but on the contrary are planning to permanently garrison the route from Pekin to the sea, so that they can always be in reach of the capital. It is not probable that Russia will evacuate Manchuria while the other powers keep their troops in Pekin and China proper, so China has nothing to gain and something to lose by refusing to sign any treaty with Russia by which evacuation was to be accomplished. The whole Chinese question is complicated by such an act, if the report is true that China has refused to sign.

SHOT AT THE CZAR.

Doubtful Story of Attempt to Assassinate the Russian Ruler.

London, April 6.—A special dispatch from Vienna says a report is published there that an officer of the guards entered the czar's study yesterday and fired at him with a revolver. His majesty was not hit, the dispatch adds, and the officer committed suicide. The story is doubted, and is evidently a resuscitation of the report contained in a dispatch to the Morning Leader of this city from Kieff, April 1, which said that an officer of the czar's household had attempted to assassinate his majesty by firing at him, missed the czar and then shot himself.

MUCH TO ANSWER FOR.

Parson Who Has Married Seven Hundred and Fifty Couples.

Chicago, April 6.—The Rev. W. L. Meez, the "marrying parson" of Auburn, Ind., performed his seven hundred and fiftieth marriage ceremony last night. He officiated at the wedding of his grandson, W. L. Eaton, and Miss Esther M. Gauger, daughter of J. A. Gauger of 4241 Drexel boulevard. The Rev. Mr. Meez is the originator of the "Meez Matrimonial association," whose members are those he has joined in wedlock in his forty years' experience as a marrying parson. The association was formed Aug. 20, 1896.

CONFIRMED BY STICKNEY.

Chicago Great Western Will Build Into Omaha and Sioux City.

Chicago, April 6. — President A. B. Stickney of the Chicago Great Western confirms the report that his road will build into Omaha and Sioux City. An underwriting syndicate has been formed to provide $3,000,000 to build the 274 miles of road. Surveys for the line to Omaha were made some years ago. The line will run from Fort Dodge due southwest to Omaha, and from Clarion west to Sioux City. The lines purchased and to be constructed cover 134 miles, making the total additions of the system 408 miles.

WOMEN FIGHT A DUEL.

One Is Dangerously but Not Fatally Wounded.

Newkirk, Okla., April 6.—Mrs. Ella Seiglin and Mrs. Daughson, living near this city, fought a duel with revolvers at twenty paces yesterday and Mrs. Seiglin is now in a hospital, dangerously, but not necessarily fatally wounded. Two of her opponent's shots lodged in her breast, but she is able to talk volubly, and is anxious to recover that she may again fight Mrs. Daughson. The duel grew out of a long standing feud between the women, jealousy being the original cause.

BREAK DOWN BOER DEFENSE.

Kruger's View of Capture of Zoutpansberg.

London, April 6.—News comes from Brussels that Mr. Kruger thinks that the occupation of Zoutpansberg will finally break down the Boer defense. Zoutpansberg is the Boer seat of government and contains supplies of stores and ammunition, and it is understood to be in imminent danger as a result of Lord Kitchener's northern campaign. Prisoners that have recently arrived at Pretoria, however, are said to have expressed opinions that the war will last for three years longer.

Death for Kidnappers.

Springfield, Ill., April 6—The kidnapping bill, enacting the death penalty for those who would steal children for ransom, passed the house almost unanimously. The measure was drawn to fit such a case as that of the kidnapping of Eddie Cudahy.

Largest in the World.

Belfast, April 6. — The White Star steamer Celtic, the largest in the world, was launched at Queen's Island in the presence of thousands.

Incendiaries Unsuccessful.

Richmond, April 6.—It was discovered yesterday morning that during the night an attempt had been made to burn Science Hall, one of the new buildings at Richmond college. The fire went out of itself.

Resulted in a Farce.

Hot Springs, Ark., April 6. — What was to have been a twenty-round bout between Bobby Dobbs and Young Peter Jackson resulted in a farce and it was declared a draw in the twelfth round.

LOSS BY PRAIRIE FIRE.

A Dozen Farlers Burned Out in South Dakota.

Huron, S. D., April 5.—Prairie fire swept over a stretch of country east of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway, starting a few miles southeast of Virgil and traveling north from ten to twelve miles. The burned district is two miles wide, and several farmers have suffered heavy loss. Frank Wood lost his house, barn and contents, together with hay and corn. Arthur Thompson lost his barn and contents, and the immense sheep sheds and buildings on the J. H. Cone ranch are burned. Thousands of tons of hay were destroyed in the track of the fire, and a dozen farmers have lost heavily. The fire was driven by a forty-mile-an-hour wind.

THE MYSTERY IS SOLVED.

Instead of Murdering, Poole Tried to Save His Partner From Storm.

Helena, Mont., April 5. — The dead body of Robert M. Poole, aged twenty-three years, was found in a field near Great Falls yesterday, thus solving a long standing mystery over his disappearance. Poole evidently died in an effort to save the life of his partner, James Smith, who was also found dead Feb. 19, in the same vicinity, with marks of violence on his person. In some quarters it was suspected that Poole had murdered his partner, but it now appears that both froze to death in a severe storm.

STOCKMEN'S MEETINGS.

Dates Announced and Cheap Railroad Rates Secured.

Helena, Mont., April 5. — The Montana Stock Growers' association will meet in Miles City April 16 to 20, and the Northern Montana Round-Up association at Fort Benton April 22, according to announcements sent out by the executive committee. Both the Northern Pacific and Great Northern have announced a round-trip rate of one fare from all points in Montana and North Dakota. A large attendance is expected at both meetings.

MISTAKE IN MEDICINES.

Iowa Woman Uses Carbolic Acid for a Gargle.

Mason City, Iowa, April 5. — By a mistake in medicine used for a gargle Mrs. M. Carroll, living four miles south of Burchinal, nearly lost her life. Thinking to gargle her throat with camphor, she got carbolic acid instead, but by good fortune none of the poison reached her stomach and her life was saved. Her throat and mouth were badly burned, but no serious results are apprehended.

CONCEALED ASSETS.

Crookston Bankrupt Accused of Concealing $11,000 in Merchandise.

Fergus Falls, Minn., April 5. — The grand jury in the United States court returned an indictment against Spiro Bisazza, the bankrupt merchant of Crookston, charging him with concealing about $11,000 in merchandise and cash at the time he went into bankruptcy. Bisazza was arraigned and pleaded not guilty. Trial will probably occur the last of the week.

Clark Goes After More Land.

Helena, Mont., April 5.—Negotiations have practically been completed whereby Senator Clark will secure the Brooke tract in the new Helena copper district on a two-year $50,000 bond. Clark will pay down $12,500 within a few days, as soon as the bond can be prepared. The Brooke claim adjoins the property now being developed by the Clarks, who have great faith in the new district.

A Billings Shooting Scrape.

Helena, Mont., April 5.—A shooting affray occurred in the tenderloin district of Billings. In a quarrel between Mattie Harris and May Rivers the former attempted to draw a razor, when the Rivers woman drew a revolver and fired, the bullet taking effect in the thigh, inflicting a painful wound. The Rivers woman was arrested.

Mad Swine.

Faribault, Minn., April 5.—The board of health ordered six hogs belonging to Caesar Chappuie of French Lake killed, as eight of them had been bitten by a mad dog three weeks ago, and the two heads which Chappuie cut off and sent to the state board of health in St. Paul were pronounced to be infected with hydrophobia.

Because He Was Refused Beer.

St. Paul, April 5.—Albert C. Weber was refused a can of beer yesterday afternoon at a saloon near his home. A couple of hours later his body was found dangling at the end of a clothesline in his room. Weber had been out of work for about a year and was despondent.

Settled by Arbitration.

Beaver Dam, Wis., April 5. — The strike of the employes of the Malleable Iron company was settled by the state board of arbitration. The men were granted the increase of wages demanded and other concessions. The works will start at once.

Aberdeen Selects Library Site.

Aberdeen, S. D., April 5.—The city council has agreed to accept the site for the Carnegie library building offered by C. H. Prior of Minneapolis. The tract is well located, being one block from Main street and near the center of the city.

Ground Under Car Wheels.

Boone, Iowa, April 5.—A. T. Davis, a miller of Madrid, was killed by a train which he tried to board. He fell beneath the wheels and his body was terribly mangled.

Indian Commits Suicide.

Grinnell, Iowa, April 5. — Winfield Scott, a young Indian on the Iowa reservation near Tama, committed suicide by shooting with a shotgun. He was nineteen years old. Jealousy is said to have been the cause.

Work to Begin Next Week.

Faribault, Minn., April 5.—Work on the Burlington, Cedar Rapids & Northern will begin probably next week. The steam shovel will be put in operation and work commenced here, as it was left off last season.

AGGIE IS SURPRISED

AMERICAN SYSTEM OF GOVERNMENT EXPLAINED TO HIM.

Circumstances Leading Up to and Attending the Ceremony of His Taking the Oath of Allegiance Are Described — Filipino Leader Exclaimed: "I Never Thought the Americans Would Be So Fair and Liberal"—Aguinaldo Willing to Visit the United States, but Wants No Office.

Manila, April 5.—Chief Justice Arellano, who administered to Emilio Aguinaldo the oath of allegiance to the United States government, described to a representative of the Associated Press the circumstances leading up to and attending the ceremony which was semi-private.

Aguinaldo, still detained in an apartment of the Malacanan palace, and awaiting orders from Washington, had expressed himself as anxious to learn more regarding the American system of government, and had asked Chief Justice Arellano to enlighten him. The chief justice carefully explained the various measures passed by the Philippine commission headed by Judge Taft, and showed him what provisions were made for education and progress and for municipal and provincial self-government. Listening with deep interest, Aguinaldo finally exclaimed:

"I never thought the Americans would be so fair and liberal."

Before the conversation was over he agreed to take the oath of allegiance and this was immediately administered. Continuing, Arellano said:

"Aguinaldo's action will induce many insurgents to capitulate, and I predict the islands will be completely pacified by June. Aguinaldo had expressed a willingness to visit the United States, but when I questioned him in respect to holding office he said he had no desire in that direction, but intended to retire to private life."

It is said President McKinley has invited Aguinaldo to visit the United States, and the insurgent leader may sail for the United States April 15. Gen. MacArthur, when questioned concerning the rumor said he had absolutely nothing to communicate.

Instruction for MacArthur.

Washington, April 5.—After a consultation with the president, Secretary Root last night sent a cable message to Gen. MacArthur giving him instructions regarding Aguinaldo and the views of the administration of some recommendations as to Philippine affairs made by Gen. MacArthur. The contents of the cablegram will not be made public for the present. It was stated at the war department that Gen. MacArthur had made no communication relative to Aguinaldo yesterday, and that the attitude of this government toward the insurgent chief has not changed. He is yet held as a prisoner, and while he will be treated with kindness, there is no disposition to allow him liberty unless it is demonstrated that he intends to comply fully with the amnesty terms and his oath of allegiance.

FRAUDS NOT GRAVE.

Gen. MacArthur Says Press Reports Were Inexact and Misleading.

Washington, April 5.—The following cablegram was received at the war department from Gen. MacArthur:

"Brig. Gen. Robert P. Hughes reports surrender at Banga, Northwest Panay, March 31, 20 officers, 185 men, 103 rifles. Gen. Kobbe reports 21 men and 21 guns surrendered March 31, Northern Mindanao. Commissary frauds being investigated, not sufficient gravity cause concern; apparently due irregularity sales savings. Press reports inexact and misleading."

Accident on the Kentucky.

Washington, April 5.—A second explosion of a 13-inch shell in the bore of a naval gun is having the effect of causing some anxiety as to the safety of this type of ammunition. The accident happened aboard the Kentucky about six weeks ago. The ordnance officers are very reluctant to talk about these mishaps, but assert that in this case the projectile burst just as it left the gun, doing little damage.

Liquified Gas Motor.

London, April 5.—The Paris correspondent of the Daily Mail credits a Frenchman with inventing a motor worked with liquid gas. The inventor says the gas is three times as powerful as steam. A vessel propelled by the cold gas might remain at sea for years without needing to refill her bunkers.

Killed by an Insane Patient.

Sunbury, Pa., April 5. — Dr. John Johnson, of the state hospital for the insane, was stabbed to death yesterday by an insane patient. The doctor thought he was not seriously hurt and started for the doctors' room, but before he proceeded far, fell to the floor dead.

Navigation Opens at Chicago.

Chicago, April 5.—The lake navigation season opened yesterday. There are no new features to the engineers' strike, and many of the owners of the big vessels look for a settlement within a week or ten days.

Quarrel Ends Fatally.

Springfield, Ill., April 5.—In a quarrel over a land boundary R. B. Caldwell, a prominent land owner near Manchester, was struck on the head by I. N. Swartwood, a neighbor, dying a few hours afterward.

Plague Cases Concealed.

Cape Town, April 5.—Several plague corpses have been found in the streets and houses, indicating efforts to conceal contact with the disease. The total number of deaths is 107, including 22 Europeans.

Struck Gas.

Beaumont, Tex., April 5. — Borers of wells struck a heavy flow of gas and it caught fire from the torch in the hands of one of the workers. The works were destroyed and machinery burned.

ELECTIONS IN WISCONSIN.

Nearly All the Cities and Towns Elected Tickets.

Milwaukee, Wis., April 4. — County elections were held throughout the state yesterday and nearly all the cities and towns elected tickets. As a rule party lines were eliminated. Justice Eric Dodge was elected to the supreme bench without opposition. Four non-partisan judges were elected in Milwaukee county. Oshkosh went Democratic by 250 against a Republican majority last year of 500. At Madison W. G. Zimmerman, Republican, was elected county judge by about 800 majority and Prof. Storm Bull, Democrat, was elected mayor. Racine and Fond du Lac elected Democratic mayors and Republican councils. Janesville and Waukesha went Republican. Following is a list of the towns and cities and the way they went:

Republican — Amherst, Waupaca, Sparta, Fairchild, Baraboo, Hayward, Darlington, Black River Falls, Pewaukee, Delevan, River Falls, Unity, Viroqua, Park Falls, Monroe, Marshall, Janesville, Bloomer, Evansville, Hudson, Waukesha.

Democratic—Hartford, Ashland, Kenosha, Oshkosh, Fond du Lac, Fox Lake, Clyman, Jefferson, West Bend, Marinette, Muscoda, Two Rivers, Boyd, Juneau, Elroy, Pardeville.

Citizens or Non-Partisan — Grand Rapids, Shawano, Weyauwega, Royalton, Bloomfield, Fremont, Wolf River, Osceola, Phillips, Elkhart Lake, Augusta, Wiocena, Tomahawk, Britton, Shell Lake, Kildrun, New Lisbon, Algoma, Arcadia, Colby, Thorpe, Horicon, St. Croix Falls, Rhinelander.

No License — Oconto and Granttsburg.

License — Deerfield, Lodi, Spring Green.

HARRISON RE-ELECTED.

Will Serve Chicago as Mayor for the Third Term.

Chicago, April 4.—Carter H. Harrison has been re-elected mayor of Chicago and will next week commence his third term as mayor of the city over Judge Elbridge Hanecy, the Republican nominee, will be in the neighborhood of 28,000 votes. The total vote of the city with eight precincts to hear from is Harrison, 155,275; Hanecy, 127,202. Harrison's plurality, 28,073. It is impossible at this time to predict the exact formation of the new council, but indications are at present that the Republicans will have a working majority.

ENGLAND BUYS HORSES.

Two Thousand Sent From Montana to South Africa Since Jan. 10.

Helena, Mont., April 4.—Robert H. Walsh, an agent of the British government who is in this city, says that since Jan. 10 2,000 Montana horses have been purchased for the English cavalry service in South Africa. The horses are shipped from various parts of Montana to Sheridan, Wyo., and from that place sent to New Orleans where they are loaded on boats for Cape Town.

SHOT FOR MUTINY.

Leader of Trouble in a West African Regiment Promptly Executed.

Cape Coast Castle, Gold Coast Colony, April 4.—The leader of the men belonging to the West African regiment who recently mutinied because they were not returned to Sierra Leone at the time they understood they were to be sent home, has been court-martialed and publicly shot. The rest of the mutineers have been shipped to the Island of Sherbro, forty miles from Sierra Leone.

HERO OF PEKIN.

First Soldier to Scale the Wall Is Appropriately Rewarded.

Washington, April 4.—The president has appointed Calvin T. Titus to be cadet-at-large at the United States military academy at West Point. Titus was the first soldier to scale the wall at Pekin. Adjt. Gen. Corbin has cabled Gen. MacArthur at Manila to send young Titus home on the first available transport in order that he may take the entrance examination to the academy.

POPE PREPARES TO CONTEST.

Objects to Bill in French Legislature Prohibiting Education by the Church.

Rome, April 4.—The pope is preparing a letter of protest and instructions to the French bishop concerning the bill which forbids religious associations to continue the education of Catholic youths. The impression here is that there will be strong opposition to the bill in the French senate.

KILLS MOTHER AND BROTHER.

Man's Crime in a Village in Pennsylvania.

Sunbury, Pa., April 4. — At Kline's Grove, a small village a few miles from this city, John Gulick, aged thirty-two years, killed his mother, Mrs. Amy Gulick, aged sixty-eight years, and his brother Philip, aged twenty-seven. What led to the shooting is not known.

Killed in a Mine.

Crossville, Tenn., April 4.—In the Crab Orchard Coal and Coke company's mines here Tom Brawley and Alfred Aremood were killed and Louis Bohannon fatally injured by being crushed by a loaded car, which broke away on a steep incline.

Business Houses Destroyed.

Fulton, Ark., April 4.—The business portion of this town, with the exception of four stores, was burned yesterday, entailing a loss of $50,000, with $16,000 insurance.

Accidentally Killed.

Grinnell, Iowa, April 4. — Charles McFarland was accidentally stabbed and killed by his friend, Will Albright. They were scuffling and Albright held an open knife in his hand. In some way it was buried in McFarland's lung.

Welcome Cattle for Chicago.

Welcome, Minn., April 4.—Fourteen cars of beef cattle were shipped from this point for Chicago. Nine were by Welcome buyers, Bagley & Co. shipping seven and the other five were shipped by Sherburne parties.

THE THIEF RIVER FALLS NEWS.

VOL. XVIII. NO. 15. THIEF RIVER FALLS, RED LAKE COUNTY, MINN., THURSDAY, APRIL 18, 1901. $1.50 PER YEAR.

EMPEROR'S RETURN

FOREIGN MINISTERS DEMAND HIS PRESENCE AT PEKIN.

Chinese Envoys Are Notified That the Emperor Must Give an Immediate Answer to the Request for His Return to Pekin — His Presence of the Highest Importance as Connected With the Integrity of the Empire — Every Courtesy Will Be Shown Him—Prince Tuan Still at Large.

Pekin, April 16.—The request for the return of Emperor Kwang Su to Pekin having been ignored, Li Hung Chang was yesterday told that the emperor must give an immediate answer.

The emperor was assured that every courtesy would be shown him, and it was pointed out that his return was of the highest importance as connected with the integrity of the empire. It was suggested that he bring with him 20,000 men with which to assist in restoring order in Manchuria.

The Germans have chastized three villages near here where Capt. Bartsch was recently killed. They have also arrested three local officials.

It is reported that the notorious Prince Tuan has not been banished to the frontier as agreed upon, but is still at large with Gen. Tung Fu Hsiang and a Mongol prince, who is a relative of his, in the Province of Kansu. The court has not decided whether to of these people or to give up opposition to them. The court appears to be constantly wavering in its policy. Some days it seems to favor foreigners and reformers, and on others it resists them.

There was an explosion yesterday at the German military post near the residence of Li Hung Chang. Earl Li was greatly frightened. The explosion broke the glass in the windows of his rooms and some guests he was entertaining fled in terror.

The conduct of the ministers of the powers over the negotiations with the Chinese plenipotentiaries causes much adverse comment among the military authorities. Their dilatory tactics have prevented what might have been accomplished two months ago. Even now the meetings of the ministers are postponed for the most trivial causes.

CARNIVAL OF CRIME.

Reply of the Mafia in Sicily to a Threat of the Authorities.

Rome, April 15.—At the beginning of the year word was sent from Rome that the Mafia and other societies in Sicily must be stamped out at any cost, and the local authorities were threatened with degradation if they should any longer ignore their duty. The Mafia promptly took up the challenge, with the result that there has been a carnival of crime in the beautiful island. Since the beginning of February no fewer than fourteen men have been murdered and each corpse has been found with a paper thrust between his teeth bearing the words: "Thus the Mafia punishes its traitorous members." The victims were suspected of having given information to the police.

BRITISH VITAL STATISTICS.

Nearly 40,000 Illegitimate Births Recorded in One Year.

London, April 16.—Some interesting points are found in the annual report of the registrar general of births, deaths and marriages of the United Kingdom. In 1899 the marriages reached the highest number recorded since 1876, aggregating 262,334, or 16.5 per thousand. The births numbered 928,646, equal to 29.3 per thousand. There were 37,124 illegitimate children born; the deaths numbered 581,799, equal to 18.3 per thousand, and there were 2,844 suicides. This is the first year on record that not a single death from hydrophobia has been reported.

RUMORS ABOUT KRUGER.

One Report Says That He Was Stabbed.

London, April 16.—There have been unconfirmed rumors in circulation for the past few days that an attempt was made to assassinate Mr. Kruger. One story is that the man who intended to kill the former president of the South African republic was arrested before he could carry out his purpose. Another yarn, printed in Paris, is that the attempt to kill Mr. Kruger was actually made. The Paris Estaffette says Mr. Kruger was stabbed and that his assailant has been arrested. The story is discredited.

BURNS HIMSELF.

Aged Insane Man Meets a Horrible Death.

Lincoln, Ill., April 16.—Saturday afternoon Carl Marsh, an old settler of Logan county about seventy years old, set fire to his home in Hartburg, a village near here and burned himself alive. He had some time ago suffered a stroke of paralysis and since has had fits of insanity. While the rest of the family was away from home he scattered straw over the floors of the house and set fire to it, locking himself in.

Finds Treasure on Kaiser Wilhelm.

Bremen, April 16.—It is officially reported that the three gold bars stolen from the specie room of the North German Lloyd line steamer Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse during that vessel's last trip from New York were discovered by a steward during the cleaning of the ship near the second cabin.

GIRL'S ESCAPADE.

She Dons Boy's Clothing and Hires Out as a Sheep Herder.

Yankton, S. D., April 16.—Edith Kellogg, the fourteen-year-old daughter of Charles Kellogg, who lives south of Pukwana, left her home last Friday and made her way to that place. She wore a boy's coat and cap and carried a bundle containing a shirt and pair of trousers. On arriving there she went to a barber shop and had her hair cut short. From there she wandered out south of town and changed her clothes, putting on boy's apparel. Proceeding on her journey, she arrived at Fred Kenna's house, where she hired out as a boy to herd sheep this summer. Mr. Kellogg came into town Monday afternoon looking for his daughter, and although he made diligent search he could find no trace of her. He started home and on his way stopped at Mr. Kenna's place and there found his daughter. Mr. Kellogg says the girl's mind must be affected, as she had never attempted to leave home before. The Kellogg family have sold their farm and are about ready to leave for Canada.

MONTANA'S CAPITOL.

State Commission May Have to Complete the Building.

Helena, Mont., April 16.—P. J. Donohoe, a Butte architect who was engaged by Gov. Toole to investigate the work done upon the capitol building in Helena, yesterday filed a sensational report, in which he says that the state building commission will undoubtedly be compelled to complete the structure. He says that the specifications in many important particulars have not been followed, and although there remains to be finished 40 per cent of the work, the Montana Building company, which has the contract for the building, has been allowed and received all but $70,427 of the original contract price of $289,891. Architect Donohoe advises a "complete and untrammeled investigation at an early date." Gov. Toole and Secretary of State Hays and the state architect are now in the East examining the furnishings of public buildings, with a view of letting the contract for furnishing the new state house.

Held in Iowa.

Sioux Falls, S. D., April 16. — Contrary to expectations Quincy H. Edwards, son of the postmistress at Nemo, S. D., who was recently indicted by the federal grand jury on the charge of issuing fraudulent money orders and forging the name of his mother to the letters of advice, will not be tried during the present term of United States court here. Edwards is in the custody of the United States authorities in Iowa, and Judge Shiras, of the federal court of that state has refused to grant an order for the transfer of the prisoner to Sioux Falls.

Fox River on a Rampage.

Kaukauna, Wis., April 16.—Fox river is higher than ever. Word was received here from Capt. Mann of the United States engineer department at Oshkosh last night that another section of the sluice would be opened on the Menasha dam. Preparations were made to receive the water. The long trestle bridge of the Northwestern Railroad company was weighted down with a train load of pulp wood and all mills situated on the government canal has watchmen protecting the banks. Serious damage was averted by the precautions taken.

To Prevent Floods.

Fargo, N. D., April 16.—The Midland Canal company, which was organized some time ago under the laws of New Jersey, will hold an adjourned regular meeting in Fargo April 20. Mayor Johnson of Fargo is president and Dr. Kelsy of White Rock, S. D., is secretary. A number of prominent Minnesotans and Dakotans are interested in the company, which was gotten up for the purpose of having the Red River valley drained and the waters at its source controlled to prevent the damaging floods that occur from year to year.

Many Applicants.

Luverne, Minn., April 16.—Prof. C. E. Young of Henderson, Minn., has been elected superintendent of the Luverne public schools to succeed Prof. F. E. Dean, resigned. There were thirty-five applications by letter and in person, some coming from as far west as Utah and east as far as Pennsylvania. The salary is $1,200 per year. Prof. Young did not apply in person, but sent the strongest array of recommendations ever presented to this school board. He is a graduate of the state university.

Arrested on Suspicion.

La Crosse, Wis., April 16.—Detectives Lyman and Cody arrested three men in La Crescent, Minn., whom the local police suspect of being professional clothing thieves and all-around crooks, and who are probably wanted by authorities in several places. They are Charles Johnson, Dave Bachous and Ed Powers, and when arrested were loaded down with a variety of clothing of fine grade which they had been trying to sell at ridiculously low prices. All the men were well dressed.

Militia Company for Redfield.

Redfield, S. D., April 16.—A militia company of seventy members has been organized here and the organization has been accepted by the adjutant general. The officers are H. E. Johnson, captain; G. P. Squire, first lieutenant, and Clay Carpenter, second lieutenant. The organization will be known as Company G.

New School for Balaton.

Balaton, Minn., April 16.—At a special school meeting this city voted to bond the district for $10,000 to erect a six-room brick school building. It is expected to have the work completed by Sept. 1.

SIX MEN BREAK JAIL

SENSATIONAL EPISODE AT THE ST. CLOUD JAIL.

Men Make a Murderous Assault Upon the Turnkey, but the Plucky Jailer Succeeds in Recapturing One of the Men — Father of the Turnkey Captures Another—Four Men, Two of Them Said to Be Desperate Criminals, Are Still at Large — Police Expect to Capture Them.

St. Cloud, Minn., April 16.—The most sensational jail delivery ever effected in this section of the state was successfully accomplished in this city last night, when six men assaulted the jailer of the Stearns county jail and gained their freedom, two of them to be recaptured within a few moments and returned to their cells, four to escape capture, though probably one of them was wounded by the bleeding but still plucky jailer.

The delivery occurred at 10 o'clock, when the turnkey, Frank Griven, went into the jail corridor upon hearing suspicious noises from within. He had no sooner opened the iron door than he was struck several savage blows by the prisoners and felled to the floor. Over his prostrate form the men jumped and ran through the office of the jail and into the street. The turnkey regained his feet, and, although blood was flowing from the wounds on his head and shoulders, he ran to the door and emptied five shots from his revolver after the fugitives. He then gave chase and overtook Julius Miller, who was charged with burglary, and, assisted by another man, returned him to the jail. Ignatz Greven, father of the turnkey, captured close by the jail John Stephens, an Indian sent up from Kanabec county on the charge of assault, and he was also returned. The other four, two of them said to be desperate criminals, escaped and have thus far eluded capture. The sheriff and police, however, are hard at work, and it is probable that two of them will be taken early this morning. The sixx men were all the occupants of the main cell house in the jail and were awaiting the sitting of the grand jury early in May. They had evidently had outside assistance, as they had secured tools and sawed off two bars of the steel cage, thus gaining the corridor, from which vantage point they assaulted the turnkey.

IDOL OF THE WOMEN.

Judge Gaffey Gives Them the Benefit of the Doubt in Divorce Cases.

Miller, S. D., April 16.—Judge Gaffey will open court here on the 16th. The judge is the idol of every woman in the Sixth circuit, though comparatively few of them have seen him. He has gained their admiration by always giving the woman in the case the benefit of the doubt when divorce proceedings are instituted in his court. The judge also won the esteem of the women when he settled a dispute in court as to whether a criminal had sold liquor or pop by tasting it and deciding it was the former. He is admired also by the attorneys, as he treats them all with fairness—in fact all classes except criminals, admire him.

SHOT BY HER HUSBAND.

Woman Is Wounded at Crookston and May Not Recover.

Crookston, Minn., April 16.—Joseph Beauchane shot his wife at her mother's residence here yesterday. The couple were married in Duluth, but had separated, and the wife returned home. Beauchane followed, arriving Saturday. His wife refused to live with him, claiming that he was not able to support her. The ball entered the woman's stomach and passed out under the shoulder blade. After being shot the woman walked five blocks to a livery stable and procured a team to take her to the residence of a sister in the Fifth ward. She is very low and it is believed that she cannot recover.

FOUND FORTUNE.

Wisconsin Woman Receives $1,000 for Pearl Taken From Mississippi.

Prairie du Chien, Wis., April 16. — While cleaning shells Mrs. John Lowe of Lansing found a beautiful pearl. It is double saucer shape, weighs sixty-four grains and is perfect in every respect. The pearl was purchased by P. O. Heide of this city for $1,000. It measures three-fourths of an inch in diameter and is the finest gem taken from the river up to date.

Hope of the Jews.

Milwaukee, April 16. — Fifteen hundred Hebrews held a meeting yesterday in the interest of the Zionistic movement and demonstrated approval of the plan which it is hoped will restore with ancient prestige of the Jews as a nation. The plan is to raise a fund sufficiently large to purchase the land of Palestine from the Turks and make it a haven for the oppressed Jews of every land.

Strike Spreads.

Anaconda, Mont., April 16. — Six weeks ago sixty members of the machinists' union employed by the Anaconda Copper Mining company at this place went on strike for a nine-hour day at 45 cents an hour. There are 600 men affected by the trouble with indications pointing to a protracted struggle.

Dropped Dead in Church.

Grinnell, Iowa, April 16—Mrs. Harvey Bliss, a prominent woman of this city, dropped dead from heart disease during service in the Congregational church

RAW RECRUITS RUN AWAY.

Over One Hundred and Fifty Desert Regiment at Leavenworth, Kan.

Leavenworth, Kan., April 16.—Over 150 newly enlisted soldiers of the Fourteenth cavalry regiment, recruiting here, have deserted. The only reason assigned is they were disappointed, believing that since Aguinaldo has been captured the new regiment would not be sent to the Philippines on account of the possible termination of the war. The missing soldiers are nearly all young recruits and were all from companies of the new regiment, which now numbers about 805 men. Friday was their first pay day and the deserters came to the city. A number purchased tickets to near-by cities and it was learned several passed through St. Joseph, Mo. A detachment of regulars has been sent out to bring them back. It is said the officers will promise not to try the recruits for desertion if they return within ten days. The exact number of the men missing is not known, but it is known to be in the neighborhood of 160. Telegrams have been sent in every direction to locate the missing men. It is believed all of them will be found and returned to the post.

CARRIE NATION ARRESTED.

Kansas City Police Jug Her for Obstructing the Streets.

Kansas City, April 16.—Mrs. Carrie Nation was arrested in this city last night on the charge of obstructing the street and hauled to the police station in a patrol wagon. She was released in a cash bond of $6 and will be tried in the police court this morning. Mrs. Nation lectured in Kansas City, Kan. Saturday night and came over to the Missouri side yesterday morning. She started on a tour of investigation among the down town saloons in the evening. A crowd of a thousand men and boys followed her, and at Twelfth and Walnut streets, where there are saloons on three corners, she was arrested because the crowd following her blockaded the street. She roundly lectured the saloon men whom she visited.

KIDNAPPING PLOT.

Sons of Wealthy Clevelanders Are Threatened.

Cleveland, Ohio, April 16.—It has developed that a plot was recently on foot to kidnap the sons of two wealthy East End residents. Letters of a threatening nature have been received by the families of the boys, and every effort is being made to guard them from harm. Two of the boys, Cyrus and David Ford, are sons of H. Clark Ford, a lawyer and real estate man who lives at 2464 Euclid avenue, and the third boy is the ten-year-old son of B. F. Whiteman of No. 2473 Euclid avenue. Mr. Whiteman is treasurer of the East End Banking and Trust company. Both families are wealthy, and it is thought that the boys were to be held for ransom. Detectives are at work on the case.

WHERE IS VIRGINIA LAKE?

Feared That Mishap Has Occurred to Sailing Steamer.

St. John's, N. F., April 16. — It is feared that mishap has occurred to the sailing vessel Virginia Lake, which sailed five weeks ago and should have arrived before this, having secured a good number of seals. Only two alternatives are tenable—either she is frozen up at some remote point on the northern coast, far from telegraphic communication, or else she has been driven ashore on some outlying island as the steamer Hope was a fortnight ago, and is unable to wire details. The Virginia Lake has on board 270 men, largely from this place.

WAS A BLOODY BATTLE.

Two Killed and Four Wounded at Boone's Fork, Ky., Fight.

Whitesburg, Ky., April 16.—Further particulars of the big battle between Sheriff John Wright and his posse and the outlaws headed by Creed Potter and John Reynolds at Boone's Fork last Thursday, were received and another fight is anticipated in a few days. In the encounter Thursday Willie Wright and Isaac Millard, members of the posse, were killed outright, and four others, two on each side, were wounded.

Famous Bandit Killed.

Silver City, N. Mex., April 16.—Red Weaver, a well known border character and a reputed member of the famous "Black Jack" gang of bandits, has been killed at Alma, a mining camp seventy miles northeast of here. Weaver had threatened to kill Tod Hollman who had previously called him to account for certain remarks against a young woman's character. Later they met again and fired at each other simultaneously. Weaver fell dead with a bullet through his head. Hollman was exonerated.

Killed by a Deputy Sheriff.

Wallace, Idaho, April 16.—Jack Powell was shot and killed at Mullen Saturday night by Deputy Sheriff Williams. Three men fired from ambush at Deputy Sheriffs Rose and Williams about midnight, wounding Rose twice in the right arm and once in the right thigh. Deputy Williams fired six or seven shots in the direction of the flashes and fatally wounded Jack Powell. Powell was seen running away after the shooting and his body was not found until yesterday morning.

Big Coal Combination.

Springfield, Mass., April 16. — Lewis F. Newman of this city has successfully engineered a big coal combination with a capital of $5,000,000. The company will control 30,000 acres of undeveloped coal land in southeastern Ohio. George D. Duy, New York city, has filed an attachment of $150,000 against Mr. and Mrs. Lewis F. Newman in an action of contract to recover a claim for alleged services in connection with the coal combination.

CUBAN OCCUPATION

IS PROLONGED BY REJECTION OF PLATT AMENDMENT.

Military Government in Cuba Will Continue and the Date of Inaugurating a Cuban Government Is Indefinitely Postponed — Suggestion Comes From Cuba That the Convention Be Dissolved and Another One Called—President Has No Desire to Increase Friction.

Washington, April 16. — It is now clear to the administration that the Cuban convention does not intend to take definite action on the Platt amendment or adopt an ordinance providing for relations the Cuban government must hold to the government of the United States.

The plan adopted to send a commission to Washington and yet give the commission no power to make agreements, shows how inexperienced these Cuban delegates are in political affairs. The commission will be unable to accomplish anything. The president cannot modify the plan already before the convention as defining the position of this government. The result will be that the military government in Cuba will continue and the date for inaugurating a Cuban government be indefinitely postponed. The suggestion has been made to the president that he command Gen. Wood to dissolve this convention and call another. This suggestion has come from Cuba. Its purpose is to enable the Cubans to adopt a constitution and also provide for the between Cuba and the United States. Cubans who are anxious for independence claim that the convention in session in Havana does not represent the Cuban people. They assert that a new election should be held and that the people of Cuba would accept the Platt amendment and elect delegates who would work in harmony with the views of the American congress.

The president has no doubt as to his power to call a new convention, but he has no desire to increase the friction in Cuba. The administration of Gen. Wood has been clean and able. It is accomplishing more for Cuba than could any civil administration under a new government. The business men in Cuba are well satisfied to have the convention haggle over the Platt amendment and delay the departure of the American soldiers because they fear the consequences of a change. The president is impressed with this view and will allow the Cuban convention to take its own time in discussing the Platt amendment or other propositions.

DOUBLE LYNCHING LIKELY.

Result of the Murder of a White Man in Florida.

Hastings, Fla., April 16. — Julius Eskew, manager of the Armstrong Turpentine company, near here, was shot and killed by Jim Kirby, a negro, Saturday night. The motive was robbery. Kirby escaped into a swamp, where he was captured with the aid of bloodhounds. While Sheriff Perry was waiting in the depot with the negro to take him to St. Augustine unknown parties fired through a window and put five bullets into Kirby's back. He thought he would die and made a confession, implicating Robert Lee, another negro. Bloodhounds are now after Lee. Eskew was well and favorably known in Florida. The crime has caused intense excitement in St. Johns county, and there may be a double lynching.

TORONTO BANK LOOTED.

Clever Swindler Makes a Heavy Haul.

Toronto, Ont., April 16. — A clever bank swindler made a heavy haul in Toronto Saturday, the total amount of which will not be known until the tellers of the various banks check up business to-day. A stranger claiming to live in Halifax opened an account in the Imperial bank Saturday morning, depositing $50. Shortly afterward he presented a check for $20, which was marked by the ledger keeper. Shortly before 1 o'clock, during the rush preceding the close, this check, raised to $2,445, was presented to the teller and cashed. The same procedure was adopted at the Bank of Commerce, where a check raised from $20 to $2,900, was cashed. It is believed several other banks were similarly victimized.

RENOUNCES HOME FOR STOLSTOY.

Ex-Capt. Diterix, Whose Sister Is Wife of Writer's Son, Gives Up Nationality and Religion.

Paris, April 16.—M. Diterix, an ex-captain of the Russian army, whose sister is the wife of Count Leo Tolstoy's son Andrew, has written an open letter to M. Pobiedonostzeff, chief procurator of the Holy Synod, which will be published in the Aurore of Paris. In this letter M. Diterix says he renounces his religion and nationality on account of the excommunication of Count Leo Tolthoy. M. Diterix is now residing in England.

WOMAN FLAGS A TRAIN.

Mrs. Anthony Roy Prevents Serious Wreck by Heroic Act.

Louisiana, Mo., April 16.—Mrs. Anthony Roy, living in the Snilbottom, prevented a serious wreck on the Chicago & Alton railroad Friday. She found that a bridge was on fire, and waded through a pond of water three feet deep and flagged a freight train with a red hood. She sent her daughter on the other side of the bridge with a red skirt to flag trains from that direction. The bridge was destroyed and her action saved the train.

THIEF RIVER FALLS NEWS
By John W. Eastman.
THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN

The twenty Mexican banks reported in the government reports show a combined capital of $70,000,000.

The tonnage of the mercantile navy of Great Britain is almost equal to the tonnage of the combined mercantile navies of all the six other largest powers.

It is quite likely that the most interesting political contest in the coming November will be that over the mayoralty of New York. The city has a population of half a million more than that of the thirteen colonies which fought for independence in 1776; and the character of its government is a matter of concern to all Americans.

Bulldogs and terriers have doubled in price since the Madison Square show ended. Like any other society fad the fashion in dogs varies, and as society has decreed this year that bull pups and terriers are in style, therefore those breeds are the only ones to be considered by any member of the 400 or those who would like to be.

The brilliant young novelists, with their astounding records of 100,000 or 250,000 copies sold, need not be too confident that they have outstripped their elders even commercially. That stanch old favorite, "East Lynne," has just passed the 500,000 mark for copyright sales, not to speak of pirated editions, and no fewer than four stage versions are extant and popular.

There is a hint to Carrie Nation and her followers in the action of the W. C. T. U. women of Fulton, Mich. Charles Sherman established a pool room there and the temperance people purchased his outfit, he signing a contract not to go into the same business there. Everything in the place was destroyed and it has been given out that if another "joint" is started in Fulton it will be smashed and not purchased.

The defeat of a bill appropriating $50,000,000, by a single senator, exercising his right of unlimited debate, was a striking incident of the closing hours of the session of congress. It is not even without a certain amusing aspect. He will be a wise statesman who can find a way to establish a mean between the system which permits, to one member, such power of obstruction, and the unlimited power of a majority to prohibit all debate under the operation of the "previous question."

Several weeks ago an abscess developed in the stomach of William Thorpe, a resident of Quantico, Md. The growth so weakened him that physicians feared to use the knife and the patient was slowly dying. A few days ago he saw a Philadelphia paper, in which there was a certain cartoon making fun of Senator Quay of Pennsylvania. Thorpe laughed and immediately a stream of blood gushed from his mouth. The doctor happened to call just then, and after examining Thorpe declared that the abscess had broken and that the patient would now get well. All of which goes to show what Philadelphia cartoons are good for.

A paragraph in an American paper the other day estimated the number of British troops in South Africa at 290,000. A London newspaper just at hand furnishes material to correct these figures, for, making a careful summary of all available forces, it finds that, with the re-enforcements sent out a month ago and the new Australian contingent, the total British armed strength in South Africa is 400,000. The forces under Generals De Wet and Botha being estimated at from 2,000 to 4,000 men, it appears that the British are able to surround each fighting burgher with from 100 to 200 men, a disparity of strength probably without precedent in the history of warfare. The end of the war continues to be in sight—in London.

Hay lozenges are the popular confectionery among army horses in the Philippines and South Africa. The food, or rather the form of it, is a Yankee invention called into existence by the circumstances of war in a country lacking good roads. Hay put up in the ordinary bale cannot be transported on horseback because of its weight and bulk. It is therefore compressed by powerful machinery into diameter and two inches thick. The disks are packed in rolls like the lozenges the train-boys sell, and hung in slings from the horse's back, one on each side. A single lozenge, when broken up and opened out, makes a meal for a horse or mule, and will cure him of that hungry feeling as quickly as a mangerful of fresh hay. The compactness of the new bale also means a great saving in freight.

Dr. Jarre of Paris has announced his discovery of a remedy for the foot and mouth disease to the Academie de Medicine. It consists of a 33 per cent solution of chemically pure chromic acid applied as a caustic. The cure is rapid and there is no inflammation.

The city of St. Petersburg has assumed control of three of the street car lines within its limits, and will soon take possession of the remaining lines. When all the roads are secured the city will establish an electrical system of transit.

The journeyman painters and decorators compromised on their strike, and it is announced that all the men will return to work. They demanded 35 cents an hour, but agreed to accept 32 1-3 cents.

By the will of Mrs. Ella McPherson the greater part of the fortune accumulated by the late Senator John R. McPherson, estimated at about $1,000,000, is eventually to go to Yale university.

Firemen of the entire system of the Lake Shore railroad have been granted a material increase in wages and, the action taken by the management has averted what threatened to cause serious trouble.

All the miners in the Springfield (Ill.) subdistrict have resumed operations, with the exception of the North shaft, where the drivers refused to work because they were not furnished cotton and oil free.

Bishop Henry M. Turner, of the African Methodist church, who is conducting services among the negro churches at Macon, Ga., openly advocates the banishment of negro criminals to Africa.

A syndicate has been formed to control the five leading wire grass companies in the United States. The combined capital of the companies represents $1,500,000. It will be known as the Mississippi Grass company.

The torpedo boat Perry, built by the Union Iron Works of San Francisco, failed to meet contract speed requirements on her recent official trip. The vessel will probably be accepted, subject to a slight deduction from the contract price.

The failure of the torpedo boat destroyer Perry to attain the contract speed of twenty-nine knots an hour has led the Union Iron works to postpone changes in the design of the four similair vessels now in the course of construction.

The United States court of claims has rendered a judgment in favor of Admiral Sampson for $3,320 as a bounty growing out of the engagements at Manzanilla and Nipa Bay, Cuba, during the Spanish war. The court also rendered a judgment in favor of Fleet Capt. Chadwick, who participated in those engagements.

UNIVERSITY EXHIBIT.

Wisconsin Will Make a Display at the Buffalo Exposition.

Madison, Wis., April 13.—The University of Wisconsin will have an educational exhibit to be held at Buffalo this coming summer. As a rule universities that do not charge any tuition do not care to advertise to any great extent. For this reason Wisconsin will not make a great effort. The exhibit that the university board had at Paris will be transferred to Buffalo and that will probably be the extent of the educational exhibit of this institution, except one will be sent by the dairy department.

FOOTBALL PROHIBITED.

Radical Action Taken by a Wisconsin School Board.

Marinette, Wis., April 13.—The school board decided to prohibit football in the public schools. Resolutions were passed prohibiting the game on any of the school grounds in the city and denying the high school boys the right to use the name of the high school in designating their team. The action was the result of popular prejudice against the game. The team has been one of the strongest in Wisconsin. A resolution prohibiting dancing in the high school was also adopted.

MURDER MYSTERY.

Charred Remains of Unidentified Man Found in Montana.

Helena, Mont., April 13.—The partially cremated body of a man was found yesterday in a gulch near Dillon. It had laid there three or four months. Fire had been built in a circle all around the body, showing that an effort had been made to consume it entirely. In the ashes some small silver coins and an old silver watch were found. A coroner's jury returned a verdict of murder, but the identity of the victim or his slayers is absolutely unknown.

RETURNS TO FIRST LOVE.

Much-Married Man Seeks First Wife After Thirty Years.

Jackson, Minn., April 13. — Thirty years ago P. W. Hill left his family here, a wife and two children, and returned East. He was divorced and remarried, and raised a family of six children. He lost his second wife by death and married the third time and was again divorced. He returned to this place last week, courted his first wife and married her.

LIFE NOT WORTH LIVING.

Supposed Reason Why Hiram Cranson Committed Suicide.

Red Wing, Minn., April 13.—Penniless, sick and despondent, Hiram A. Cranson decided that life was not worth living and took carbolic acid at the Merchants hotel last evening and died. He leaves a sister at Goodhue and a sister and mother at Jackson, Mich. He will be buried here in the potters field.

Injured by Dogs.

Sioux City, Iowa, April 13.—The five-year-old son of G. W. McCormick of Hawarden, Iowa, was attacked by a bulldog and two greyhounds belonging to a neighbor. His mother heard his cries and ran to his assistance, but before she could beat off the dogs the boy was quite badly chewed and lacerated about the arms, limbs and neck. The wounds are not considered dangerous, although serious. A physician cauterized them in the hope of preventing poisoning.

Nebraska Cattle Losses.

Deadwood, S. D., April 23. — Albert Malterner has just returned from Lakeside, Neb., where he owns a large cattle ranch. He says that during the last blizzard the losses to cattlemen were very large. One man lost a drove of 100 cattle out of a herd of 400. Many cattle were driven against barb wire fences in the blinding storm and were trampled under foot. Most of the cattle perished for want of food.

The Oldest Native Born Iowan.

West Union, Iowa, April 13.—A man who died recently at Burlington was said to have been the first white person born in Iowa. He was born at Burlington in 1836. Mrs. T. C. Barclay, now living at Oelwein, was born in Iowa in 1835, and there is little doubt that she is the oldest native-born resident of the state.

Ten Years for Murder.

Helena, Mont., April 13.—The jury in the Patton murder case at Kalispell returned a verdict of murder in the second degree, and fixed the penalty at ten years' imprisonment. James Patton killed Patrick Carroll last October during a quarrel at the Tinkel electric plant on the Big Fork river. The sentence is regarded as very light.

Sent to Prison.

Vermillion, S. D., April 13.—Deputy Sheriff Whiteside has taken Clarence Kinney and Villah Melrose to the state penitentiary for one and two years respectively. Melrose was sentenced on two charges, grand larceny and burglary, getting a year for each offense.

Two Men Fatally Stabbed.

Ottumwa, Iowa, April 13. — Peter Crips, proprietor of a livery stable, and Bert Houston, a cab driver, were probably fatally stabbed last night by gamblers who were celebrating heavy winnings. The assault was unprovoked.

Charged With Wife Beating.

Redwood Falls, Minn., April 13—Morgan had a rather sensational case of wife beating on trial. Henry Kopischke of that town was placed under $1,000 bonds on a charge of assault and battery upon his wife, to whom he has been married only a few months. A suit for divorce will undoubtedly be one of the results.

Will Deepen Copper Shaft.

Helena, Mont., April 13.—F. August Heinz, Butte's copper king, has let a contract for sinking a shaft 100 feet deeper on his claim in the Helena copper district. It will cost $6,500, and must be completed in sixty days.

Anaconda Strike to Be Settled.

Helena, Mont., April 13.—The strike of machinists and molders at the Anaconda works in Anaconda is in a fair way to be settled. President Scallon has gone there to hold a conference with the men.

WITH THE LAWMAKERS

Doings In the State Legislature.

In the House.

St. Paul, April 8. — Resolutions of censure aimed at Representatives Washburn and Jacobson, who preferred charges of bribery in connection with the gross earnings bill, were introduced by Representative Laybourn of St. Louis Saturday, but went over without action of the house under notice of debate by Representative Allen. Mr. Laybourn will, unless the pressure brought to bear upon him prevails, force his resolutions to a vote to-day. The report of the investigation committee, which found that the charges could not be sustained, laid over from Friday night, came up before noon Saturday, and although a fight had been expected, was adopted without a dissenting vote.

The Younger brothers' hopes of liberty after imprisonment for twenty-four years, raised almost to the point of realization by the passage of the Deming bill, providing for the parole of life prisoners, was suddenly dashed to earth by the action of the house in indefinitely postponing the bill recalled from the governor for the purpose of correction.

Representative Whitford's memorial to congress praying for the establishment of a national park in Northern Minnesota to include the Leech Lake, Cass Lake, Winnibigoshish and Chippowa Indian reservations, was recommended to pass by the house.

In the Senate.

The debate promised over the passage of the Johnson memorial instructing the attorney general to bring action against the Great Northern to test title to 271,565.94 acres of Northern Minnesota lands, did not occur in the senate, and the resolution was adopted and sent to the house.

Halvorsen's second anti-cigarette bill was killed after short debate.

In the Senate.

St. Paul, April 9.—The omnibus bill, carrying with it total appropriations of $2,737,000, prepared by the senate finance and house appropriations committees, was yesterday introduced in both houses and made a special order for 10:30 o'clock to-morrow morning. The appropriation for 1901, which is to cover the expenses for 1902 and 1903, is larger by about $600,000 than the omnibus appropriation of 1899.

The two house bills to compromise the litigation over the Little Falls & Dakota land grant were passed in the senate yesterday. A determined effort was made to encompass their defeat, but after a long debate the measures passed without amendment.

An amendment was attached to the Umland divorce bill in the senate yesterday making the remarriage of any divorced person at a point outside of the state within the six months' limit provided an act in contempt of court. The offense is punishable, however, only when the remarried party takes up his or her residence in the state again and within the same time limit. The bill was then repassed and will go back to the house for concurrence.

The senate devoted some little time yesterday to the consideration of house bills and twenty-five of them were recommended to pass.

In the House.

The Pennington bill providing for contests of the election of state officers was yesterday passed by the house.

The house passed the bill substituted for the Laybourn bill for the reconstruction of the insurance commissioner's office, which reconstruction involves the creation of four official positions.

The house yesterday passed the Larson reapportionment bill, which, if it meets with similar treatment in the upper house, will create one new senatorial district—the Sixty-fourth—and increase the membership of the house from 119 to 122.

In the House.

St. Paul, April 10.—The house yesterday reconsidered its action of Saturday in indefinitely postponing the Younger parole bill and returned it to the governor, legal authorities having decided that the bill was improperly recalled from the executive office. The governor at once transmitted it to the office of the secretary of state where it will become a law without his signature.

The Johnson bill distributing $32,300 of the state internal improvement fund to the several counties was passed.

The house passed the Roberts bill providing for detention hospitals for alleged insane in Ramsey, Hennepin and St. Louis counties. The bill provides for the maintenance of separate wards in city and county hospitals for the detention of persons awaiting examination under information of insanity and those persons who are only temporarily deranged or in whose case doubt exists.

In the Senate

The memorial to congress asking for immediate action toward the establishment of a park in the Leech Lake region, was passed after a one-sided debate, by an overwhelming majority. Only five senators, all but one from northern counties, voted against it.

The Washburn inheritance bill met strong opposition yesterday, but was finally passed by a vote of 33 to 11.

The bill to buy gold medals for Minnesota buttermakers who won them at the Paris exposition was passed.

In the Senate.

St. Paul, April 11.—The rate of tax levy for state revenue for 1902 will be 1.3 mills, the lowest rate in the history of the state. The Thirty-second legislature has dealt more liberally with state and public institutions than any of its predecessors, and at the same time established the lowest tax levy for state revenue in the history of the commonwealth. The existing conditions, it is believed, will make possible a further reduction of one-tenth of a mill when the levy for 1903 is fixed.

Mr. Swanson, chairman of the house ways and means committee, yesterday introduced a bill, passed under suspension of the rules in both houses, carrying with it an appropriation of $760,000 for state expense for the biennial period ending July 31, 1903. This appropriation, together with the appropriations of the omnibus bill and the standing appropriations for state institutions, bring the estimated expense for the biennial period up to a total of $5,800,000. The estimated revenue for the same period is $6,200,000, which will permit of a decrease of one-tenth of a mill in the next levy and still leave a surplus estimated at $200,000.

The Chilton marriage bill, one of the most widely talked of measures of the legislative session, has passed both houses and gone to Gov. Van Sant for his signature. It was taken up in the senate yesterday and on Dr. Chilton's motion the amendments attached by the house were concurred in and the bill given its passage.

Senator Wilson's bill appropriating $19,973.56 for the Minnesota Beet Sugar company was lost after a hard fight.

The senate passed the bill distributing $32,000 among the different counties for road and bridge purposes.

In the House.

The omnibus bill with the injection of two amendments carrying appropriations aggregating $7,000 was yesterday passed in both houses. The total amount appropriated is $2,744,000.

Mr. O'Neil, chairman of the house committee on parks, attempted to secure an amendment calling for an annual appropriation of $15,000 to be used by the attorney general, as provided by the park law, for the purchase of timber lands within the boundaries of the Itasca State Park. The amendment was summarily defeated, and later a similar one offered by Mr. Babcock appropriating $10,000 annually for the same purpose.

The house yesterday afternoon, by a vote of 62 to 40, passed Sherman Smith's bill to increase the compensation of legislators to $750 for the biennial period.

St. Paul, April 12.—Crowds filled the galleries and visitors thronged the floors of both houses last night and witnessed the closing scenes of the thirty-second legislative session. The rush of bills began at 8 o'clock and continued in an unending stream of roll calls, conference reports and minor debates until 10:30 in the house and until after midnight in the senate. In general interest and excitement, however, the closing session fell short of that of two years ago.

All the important measures of the session had been previously passed upon and that fact lessened the public interest in last night's session.

The remaining hours of the senate session were mildly disorderly. Lieut. Gov. Smith rapped for order repeatedly, but the noise was so great that much of the time the chair could hardly be heard. Waste paper, blotters and wads of newspapers assailed senators who rose, and the roll calls on bills became little better than a farce. Before 11 o'clock senatorial dignity vanished and the proceedings approximated a "rough house."

In spite of the confusion, the greatest of any "last night" in years old members assert, several measures of general public interest were put through, among them the Pennington house bill proposing a tax levy to be created by a constitutional amendment for a state road and bridge fund.

The national park memorial was killed for lack of two votes. The house and senate both passed memorials, but neither branch had acted upon the bill of the other. Senator Underleak called up the house bill and moved its passage under suspension of the rules. Forty votes were cast for it, but it needed forty-two to make the necessary two-thirds.

The log lien bill was killed in the senate.

The bill to prevent the spread of contagious diseases among domestic animals was passed.

The house finished its deliberations very abruptly after two hours' wrangling, in which nothing of importance was accomplished.

Both houses will meet this morning, approve the minutes, grant gratuities to employes and at noon adjourn sine die.

EX-MAYOR DRUGGED.

Dies From the Effects of Knock-Out Drops Administered by Unnown Persons.

St. Louis, April 13.—John P. Smith former mayor of Fort Worth, Tex., died yesterday morning at 10:30 o'clock, the victim of "knock-out drops," administered late Friday night or early Saturday morning by unknown persons in a saloon near the union station. Mr. Smith was taken from the Planters hotel to St. Mary's infirmary Sunday in an unconscious condition. His tongue was swollen to such proportions that he could not retain it inside his mouth. His son and daughter arrived from Texas Sunday and were at his bedside until death came. He did not speak after being found. The body was expressed to Fort Worth. The police are at sea as to who drugged Mr. Smith. He had a wide acquaintance throughout the Southwest and in this city.

CUNARD DIVIDENDS.

Stockholder at Annual Meeting Makes Sensational Statements.

London, April 13.—The annual meeting of the shareholders of the Cunard Line Steamship company was marked by an unusual incident. A shareholder demanded that a committee of independent shareholders be appointed to inquire into the policy and position of the company, declaring that the profits were made solely from transport work, and that another war and more butchering will be required to assure future dividends. The motion was not adopted, but the report recommending a 5 per cent dividend and a 3 per cent bonus was adopted.

Hilarious Students Scare Woman.

Chicago, April 13.—Seventy-five students of the Armour institute wearing nightgowns outside their other garments took possession of a South side elevated train last night and before they were ejected by the police they caused several women passengers to go into hysterics and otherwise created pandemonium in general. The students were celebrating the gift of $1,000,000 to the institute by Mrs. P. D. Armour and J. Ogden Armour.

IN THE WEB OF A SPIDER............

BY...... LILLIAN GILLIN.

"I have proved nothing, Beatrice, nor have they given me my freedom," he replied. "I escaped to-day from jail. How, matters not. I am here, but every moment is fraught with danger. Beatrice, I would have stayed and stood my trial, secure in my innocence, but that I was in the hands of perjurers. You know your cousin's testimony. What chance had I in my innocence to stand up against it without proof? And how could I gain proof shut up in a prison's walls? How could I pay my debt to him when my hands were tied? So I have untied them. Beatrice, I am a free man, and they shall never take me back alive Listen to me, my dear, and don't tremble nor be afraid. I am not going to leave my place unfilled in the cell I have left vacant; I am going to provide a substitute. It may be one year, or two, or three before I am able to do this; but it shall be done. And that substitute is Randolph Chester. As bitter and implacable as he has been to me, so will I be to him; but my weapons shall be truth—his have been perjury and false witness. In open combat, let us see which will win. I only came here, darling, to see and to tell you this—to swear to you, if you needed the oath, that you were not more innocent than I; to hold you once in my arms, to press you to my heart, to taste once again the sweetness of your lips, and then to disappear, as Bertram Talbot, from the world; but ever, like the sleuth-hound, to follow on Randolph Chester's track, to double on his doubling, to ferret every purpose, every motive of his life, until, mesh by mesh, I have woven about him a web from which there is no escape."

He had spoken so hotly, so impetuously, she could not have checked him if she would; but as she realized that he was again to leave her—that his coming had only been to bid her once more farewell—she clung to him with weary desolation.

"Bertie, Bertie!" she pleaded, "I, too, distrust and fear him. Do not leave me, dear!"

"My child, I am powerless. Sweet as is my dream of winning you, I would not to-night claim you were the power given me; nor ever until I can prove to the world and to you, sweetheart, who need no proof, that I bear the burden of another's guilt. But, my darling, you are protected from him and all others. This is your home. It rests with you whether I shall be admitted to its doors."

A bitter cry burst from her lips. Her home! So he believed, little dreaming that she had no home. From her he must hear the sad story. As it had been told to her, unfalteringly, she repeated it to him.

"Sometimes I think we wrong him, Bertie," she concluded. "See, dear! by marrying me now he gains nothing. I am penniless. The money is all his. Why should he want to link his life with a nameless girl? And yet, at the sound of his voice, I shudder—at his touch, I instinctively recoil. His very beauty repulses me. You know why I was about to end it all when you came—why death was sweeter to me in its calm chill than life spent with him. For my sake, when dead, he would have spared my mother's memory. The lawyer said my death would make all things easy. Oh, Bertie, it is not yet too late! See, half the contents of the bottle still are here. Pour them out, and let me drink them with your arms close-wrapped about me."

For the first time during her story she uplifted her eyes to his face. She was terrified at the change which had taken place there.

Pale before, he was now livid, and his breathing was labored and painful. His eyes, too, wore an expression she had never seen there before.

As she finished speaking, he reached out his hand for the bottle, still standing uncorked upon the table.

She thought he was about to obey her command, and smiled wearily, as though glad to throw off life's heavy burden; but instead, his fingers closed about the fragile glass until it snapped within them, and its dark contents spilled themselves at his feet, with here and there a drop of blood, where the sharp edges had cut into the flesh.

He seemed unconcious of it all, and still held the broken fragments fast until a faint cry from Beatrice aroused him.

"Bertie, you are hurt! The glass is cutting you! Let go of it."

He unloosed his hold then, and shook it from him.

With her hankerchief she wiped the blood away, and bound the linen about it. As she finished, he caught her once more to him in a grasp that fairly hurt, while one great sob rent his frame.

"Thank God! thank God! I came in time!" he said. "My child—my little girl! Swear to me that whatever befall, you will never again attempt your life. And listen, Beatrice! If I have needed nerve and courage for my coming struggle you have supplied me with both. All—all that this villain has told you is false, and told to serve some purpose of his own. My darling think of your father, his honor, his rectitude, and imagine him always, always under the shadow of this lie. Look at your mother's picture! Recall that he venerated her memory of a saint. Was ever face more pure than hers? And think you, if this story had been true, your father would not have provided so carefully for your future as to put it beyond the reach of chance? Ah, darling, I have not only myself now to avenge, but you, as well. Fear nothing in asserting your bold claim to your own name and your own rights. If there is no will, then Randolph Chester has stolen it. It needs no paper for you to know that the name upon your mother's tombstone is forever hers, beyond the petty pilfering of man. Poor, little, fluttering bird! Must I leave you in this cruel serpent's power for a little longer? But be brave, be strong, my Beatrice, and remember, though you lose all sight, all trace of me, I am on the villain's track, and will yet confront him with his villainy."

A new light stole into the lovely eyes as she listened to the reassuring words. A blush of shame mantled her cheek, at the remembrance of how short a time before she had hovered on the brink of self-destruction.

Something like horror of herself overwhelmed her that she, for one fleeting moment, had doubted her father's honor, her mother's purity.

"You are right, Bertie," she said. "You need not fear to leave me now. I will be strong and brave, not only for both our sakes, but that we may wipe away the stain from the dead. Only, Bertie, I am a poor, weak girl, and this man is so strong and so merciless! Take me with you, dear! Do not force me to meet him alone!"

"I cannot, I dare not take you, Beatrice. Remember, in the law's eye I am a criminal. I cannot tell you when its pitiless arm will be outstretched to seize me. With you, I should be powerless to elude its grasp. As it is, to-night, I leave with you my identity. I go out from you in a disguise I hope to make impenetrable, let it assume what shape it will. I shall be often near you, dear, when you neither know nor suspect it. Have faith in me, darling, for a little while, until I dare tear off my mask and meet Randolph Chester, as I have sworn, once more face to face! My love," his voice softened to inexpressible tenderness, "farewell! I must say good-night, for it is late. God knows, my darling, when we may meet for our good-morning; but share my faith, that already the dawning of that perfect day is scattering the night's black clouds. Be strong, be brave, my love—my love! Farewell!"

He took her in his arms and held her, close-strained to his heart.

When should he hold her thus again? God alone knew—the great God who had made of him that night His humble messenger.

Beatrice was the first to unclasp her clinging hold and push him gently from her.

"Go, Bertie!" she whispered. "You may incur fresh danger by delay. But stay! Have you money? Take this."

And, opening her desk, she took from it a roll of notes.

He placed them in the breast pocket of his coat.

"They may serve us both, dearest," he said. "I will not refuse, like the beggar, to receive your alms."

Again he held her in his arms, then broke away.

The window still stood open. The branches of the tree waved in the night wind. But, hark! what was that sound which mingled with it?

He leaned over the balustrade of the little window. A light streamed from the room beneath and threw the shadow of two men upon the grass—two men watching and waiting.

Quietly he stole back into the room. "Beatrice," he said, "I am discovered. Escape is cut off by the window. Is there no other way?"

Her lovely face paled; but there was no longer cowardice or fear, only the light of a great resolve.

Before, however, she could open her lips to answer, a sudden knock sounded on her door.

"Who is there?" she called, instinctively, motioning Bertram to stand behind her.

"It is I, Beatrice," answered her cousin's voice. "Burglars have entered the house. Let me come in."

"There are no burglars here," she replied, "and I can admit no one to-night."

"Let me in, Beatrice!" he persisted. "I must see and speak with you!"

"No one enters my room to-night!" was the reply.

A few moments' silence followed, then the voice spoke again, but this time the accents had lost their pleading, and rang out, stern and clear:

"Open your door!" it said. "There are those here who command it in the name of the law!"

The two standing within the room looked at each other with white lips and despairing eyes.

"There is one way left," said Bertram. "They shall not take me without their life or mine the forfeit!"

And he drew a pistol from his pocket as he spoke.

"Hush, Bertie! It shall never come to that," whispered Beatrice. "God, who has saved me once to-night, will find for us another way."

Then from without rang a sterner, harsher voice—a voice strange to their ears:

"Open!" it called—"open in the name of the law!"

And then followed a heavy blow upon the door. It shivered, but stood firm. A second followed, then a third. Another moment, and those outside would be within the room. The law had tracked its prey. The fourth blow, and the door, with a great crash, fell in!

CHAPTER XI.

But with the sound of the first blow upon the heavy panels of the door, Beatrice had roused herself to action.

She cast one rapid glance around the all-familiar room. It seemed to boast no secret hiding-place, and her heart sank within her. The curtains could be torn down; the closets could be searched. There was no sliding panel in the wall, no spiral staircase leading to liberty, such as the castles of olden time could boast.

The second blow fell. The door trembled.

"God help us!" she murmured.

And then, as though God, Himself, had vouchsafed an answer to that unconscious appeal to His great might, her glance fell upon an article of furniture which in that instant seemed to have been manufactured by the angels.

It was a cushioned lounge, but it served two purposes, for the top could be lifted like a trunk, and within was a long, open space, within which dresses might be laid at length. For the moment it was empty.

She sprang forward, and lifting it, motioned to Bertram to conceal himself.

He hesitated with a man's instinctive hesitation to turn his back upon a foe.

"Quick!" she pleaded; "for my sake and the future. They will overpower you, and then I shall be indeed alone!"

The third blow warned them both that not a moment must be lost. She clasped her hands imploringly upon his arm. Her words bore fruit. It was for her sake and the future.

The fourth blow—and with a great crash the door gave way.

Three men sprang into the room, but paused, bewildered, on the threshold, for, confronting them stood only a young and exquisitely-beautiful girl, her small head haughtily erect and her eyes flashing their scornful questioning at the reason for this base intrusion.

They hesitated, abashed, for though she spoke no word, her silence was more eloquent than speech, and her glance confessed them cowards.

She was very pale—a paleness the more marked by the contrast of her deep mourning dress, its crape folds outlining so perfectly the slender, graceful figure, while the light falling upon her hair converted it into a crown of golden glory on her young head.

At this juncture a fourth man appeared upon the scene. Perhaps fearing violence, he had let the three officers precede him.

He now stepped forward to give them courage, though his very lips were white with disappointed rage.

"Ah, the bird has flown!" he said—"though not so far, I warrant, but that we may overtake and bring him back with pinioned wings."

Regardless of Beatrice, he stepped across the floor and out on the balcony, calling to those stationed below:

"You are sure your man has not escaped?"

"Not this way," both replied.

"Flash your lanterns into the branches of the tree!" he commanded, further.

But the light revealed only the green boughs, and the twittering birds, rudely awakened from their sleep.

"He is within this room, then," he said, turning back. "Search it, and leave no spot unsearched."

The men advanced a single step, when Beatrice, putting up one hand, waved them back.

Instinctively, they obeyed the silent gesture, as though it had been the mandate of a queen.

For the first time she spoke.

"Leave my room instantly!" she said. "No one gives orders here save myself!"

They looked from her to Chester. He reassured them by a quiet smile.

The game was in his hands now. He could afford to have his tranquility undisturbed. For the moment he had been chilled by the fear that the culprit had escaped him.

Reassured by the men beneath the window, and knowing that the apartment offered no other egress for escape, his color returned.

He motioned the men to withdraw, but by a look, indicated that they were to remain within call.

"Beatrice," he said, gently, when they two were alone, I wish to spare you all that it is possible; but, my child, you cannot evade the law. I told you a thief had entered the house. It is useless to disguise from you that I have recognized that thief's identity with Bertram Talbot. Oh, my child, are you not already convinced of this man's unworthiness that you still seek to shield him? Tyrrell saw a man swing himself from the branches of a tree on to yon balcony—saw him enter this room. Scarcely had he made this discovery, and was a bout to arouse the household, when four men entered the grounds. Bertram Talbot had escaped from custody, and, following his trail, it led them here. They appealed to me. I could but promise them all the assistance in my power. One of their number they left with Tyrrell to watch below. The other three are without. They are officers of the law, Beatrice, and armed with its authority. In aiding Bertram Talbot you, too, are putting yourself within its power. If he is a man," raising his voice "he will not let you bear this stigma. He will surrender himself."

Fearful that Bertie might hear and rashly accept this challenge, Beatrice hastened to interrupt him.

"Bid your men enter and search!" she said, scornfully. "I no longer forbid—I invite them. It was only that they forced their entrance that made me take such action. You say that Bertram Talbot is in this room? Your spies saw him enter? Seek and find him, then. He is not invisible. He cannot make himself so. My chamber boasts no secrets, as you well know, since this house is as familiar to you as to me. Only I shall begin to believe in witchcraft, since, perchance, I am told one man enters my room unseen, by the window, and three break down my door in pursuit. Bid your friends enter, Mr. Chester. We will institute a game of hide-and-seek. If you have no objection, I will watch the hunt."

And, smiling, scornfully, she threw herself, as if weary, upon the cushions of her lounge.

Her heart was beating madly, but she maintained her outward calm, and her voice had never rung more sweetly, more clearly, than now that she knew that on its accents hung her lover's freedom, if not his life.

Randolph Chester, standing before her, scanned her narrowly, but no quiver, no tremor, betrayed on her part an instant's fear.

Calmly she returned his gaze, until his own eyes fell.

"Could it be," he thought, "that Tyrrell was mistaken?"

"Beatrice," he said again, "the men must enter! Bertram Talbot, if here, must be found! Will you not voluntarily expose his hiding place?"

Again the swift scorn of her glance took the place of words, as, springing to her feet, she walked toward the shattered door, beyond which the officers were standing in a little group.

"Gentlemen," she said, in the low, quiet tone only a high-bred woman can assume, "I commanded you, a few moments ago, to leave my room, since you had surprised and angered me by entering it by force. I am mistress, not alone here, but of all this house. The house I now place at your disposal for your search, begging that you will begin it here. My cousin, Mr. Chester, is familiar with every nook and corner. You can have no more valuable assistant. To my knowledge, my roof harbors no criminal; but since the spies surrounding my house declare it otherwise, I beg that you will satisfy yourselves."

She motioned with her hand that they should enter, then turned and preceded them back into the room.

They stood, uncertain what to do, but Randolph Chester, livid with anger, and trembling with the fear born of Beatrice's cold and haughty calm, that some strange mistake had been made, roughly ordered that they begin the search.

Once more Beatrice threw herself listlessly back upon the cushions of the lounge, and watched them with quite a smile of inexpressible scorn.

They opened closets and peered behind curtains; ruthlessly invaded possible and impossible places where a man might be concealed; but, at the end of fifteen minutes, they were fain to confess themselves defeated, and to acknowledge that at least in the private apartments of Grey Oaks' young and beautiful mistress no one was in hiding.

"Are you satisfied?" she asked her cousin, in cold, cutting tones.

"Satisfied?" he echoed. "Satisfied that Bertram Talbot is under this roof? Yes; and I am also satisfied that you could disclose his hiding place."

"I thought that you were searching for a thief!" was the reply she deigned.

"Aye, and we will find a thief!" replied Chester.

"You know the house," she said. "I trust you will see that these gentlemen (slightly emphasizing the latter word) will have no cause to complain that any portion of it has been overlooked."

He drew to her as she spoke these words, and leaning over, whispered in her ear, so that only she might hear:

"Take care, Beatrice!" he said. "Do not try me too far. Remember that I am master here!"

"Of Grey Oaks—yes, perhaps," she answered, aloud, the blood rushing hotly to her cheeks. "But of Beatrice Markham—no!"

"Of Beatrice Markham?" he questioned, drawing out the latter name. "Is there a Beatrice—Markham?"

"Coward!" she rejoined, and he winced as though she had struck him with her open hand.

But he turned and led the men from the room.

For two hours, from turret to cellar, the search was carried on without result.

"We must have been misinformed, Mr. Chester," said their foreman; "and we have lost valuable time, I fear. Could the man who first gave you this news have any motive in leading you on a false track?"

"None," answered Chester, gloomily. "I could have sworn that Talbot entered this house; but unless he possesses the power to render himself invisible, it cannot be."

Then, left alone, the search abandoned, and the officers gone in pursuit of some new clue, he gave himself up to black thoughts and baffled anger.

"Again the officer's words occurred to him:

Could the man who first gave you this news have had any motive in leading you on a false track?"

Surely, all Tyrrell's interests lay in serving him; but suppose—suppose he were attempting a double game?

Tyrrell was still (by his orders) holding his vigil beneath the windows of Beatrice's room. Beset by this new doubt, he walked to the window, and gave a long, low whistle, which would indicate to the man that his master wanted him.

The summons was almost instantly obeyed.

With a slow, shuffling step, Tyrrell approached.

"I wish to speak with you," said Chester, noting that the man's eyes sank beneath his gaze. "You gave us false information last night. What prompted you?"

"I told you the truth, sir!" was the half-sullen, half-dogged answer.

"The truth!" repeating his question. "Where, then, is the man you swore you saw enter the house. We have searched in every nook and corner, and can discover no trace of him."

"It's not my business, sir, to know his hiding place; but I saw him, plain enough; I saw him climb the tree, and, as he sprung from it to the balcony outside Miss Beatrice's window, the light streamed on his face and I recognized him, quick enough."

"You are sure there could be no mistake?"

"I'd swear to it, sir."

Chester laughed, ironically.

"I'm afraid your oath would not go for much in a court of law, Tyrrell."

"It 'd be as good as some other men's, sir."

Chester's face flushed hotly.

"What do you mean?" he thundered. "Take care, you scoundrel! Remember that I have a noose about your neck and can make you swing; and, by heaven, if I ever hear of your playing me false I'll do it! Now, go! You need watch no longer. If your story was true, the man has escaped us; if false, it will be the worse for you. Your debt to me is not easily paid, and I'll exact it to the uttermost farthing."

The man silently obeyed him and shuffled from his sight.

But, outside, a swift change passed over his face, and, turning, he shook his fist, in the darkness, toward the room where his master sat.

(To Be Continued.)

He Would Make a Change.

Of course she knew he was a mean man, but she did not think he was as mean as he proved to be.

"I can see," he said, "where woman in politics would make a very gross change."

"Where?" she asked, unsuspiciously.

"Why, if she were given the franchise," he explained, "the proportion of what is known as the silent vote would be considerably lessened."—

Carriage Makers

WONDERFUL ADVANCE MADE IN THEIR WORK.

The rapid strides made by the manufacturers of wood working machinery have changed completely the fitting of the carriage woodshop of the present day, says the Hub. Fifty years ago one of the largest and best fitted woodshops in the country was advanced so far that it was provided with a circular saw, an upright saw hung on the gate method, and a wheel boxing machine, worked by hand power. All timber that was to be planned by machinery was sent to a shop where there was a circular planer and saws, the proprietor of which confined his attention entirely to planing and sawing for carriage, wagon and cabinet factories and carpenters and builders. Three years later an enterprising machinist set up a head knife for dressing up the heavy timbers, and the woodworkers in the cities began to get rid of some of his heaviest work, but he of the country shop sawed out his shafts, poles, felloes, etc., by hand. Then a set of rip and crosscut saws, which saws, small and large, constituted an important part of the woodworker's kit. We recall a prosperous shop in an inland town where there were fifteen woodworkers. Through the center of this shop was a row of fine chopping blocks, with their broadaxes for hewing heavy timbers, spokes, etc. The axle makers (the axles being all of wood), the wheel makers, the body makers and the men of all work occupied benches in the one shop. Not a piece of power machinery was used; even the grindstone had to be turned by the youngest apprentice; men worked eleven and twelve hours a day. The best wheel maker was able to make one set of buggy wheels a week. The man who made a single seat phaeton body of a pattern similar to the "Queen" in one week was looked upon as a marvel of speed, and all other work was accomplished in about the same proportion of time. Wages ranged from $7 to $12 a week, except for the wheel makers; these got $2 to $4 more, according to their skill and speed. The apprentice boy received $25 a year and his board for the first year, and $35, $50 and $85 a year for the three years thereafter.

When the labor hours were reduced to eleven a day the year around employers cut down wages accordingly, and there was a visible reduction in the yearly output. The life of the youngest apprentice was a hard one. He did about al the rough work that no one else would do; after that he got a bench, and then began to "learn his trade," but with all his disadvantages he could, if he would, become an expert workman, although he worked on the "cut and dry" rule. The work, however, was of the hardest kind and his wages small, and these, small as they were, were further reduced by his being compelled to trade at the village store. In this latter respect the journeyman was little better off as he, too, traded at the store, and was fortunate indeed if he received $5 in money each week. We can call to mind the boy who received $1.50 in money during the first year, and the journeyman in the same factory received $3 in cash a week from January until July, and replenished their impoverished pocketbooks by working in the harvest fields for the neighboring farmers. How different then and now! We enter the carriage woodshop of today, and we see nothing of the old-time fittings, neither do we see the apprentice. The wheel maker is missing, and in place of rough plank and thick panel boards we find the workman supplied with his framework timber dressed to a thickness, and not infrequently entirely dressed to pattern, his panel boards all planed to a thickness, and around him all manner of appliances to facilitate his work. We are not referring to the wholesale factory, where machinery fits almost everything ready for gluing or screwing together but in the shop of the custom builder we see power machinery that relieves the workman of much of the heavy labor. The shop is arranged to insure comfort in winter as well as in summer, and the sanitary conditions are such as to protect the health of the workmen. The manufacturer of today has learned the importance of caring for the convenience, comfort and health of the employes. Wages are arranged on a more equitable basis; the store order is a thing of the past; the wages earned are paid in cash, and the workman is free to buy where he will. His hours of labor are reduced and fixed by law. Not only are the wages higher than they were fifty years ago, but the buying power of the individual dollar is, with the single exception of house rent, higher, and in every way the worker is better situated than he was then.

BUFFALOES ALMOST EXTINCT

LITTLE MORE THAN A THOUSAND OF THESE ANIMALS IN EXISTENCE

The American buffalo is fast disappearing from the earth. It is estimated that there are now remaining alive in the world only 1,024 of these noble beasts, 684 of which are in captivity. But it is not possible to be exact in such a statement, inasmuch as the wild survivors cannot be rounded up and counted. In the densely wooded regions between the Saskatchawan and Peace rivers, in British Columbia, are several hundred buffalo; there are twenty or so perhaps in the desert Panhandle region of northwest Texas, and in the Yellowstone national park there are fifty or sixty more, it is believed. There are none at liberty anywhere else.

These few remaining wild bison are being steadily reduced in number. In British Columbia they are being killed off gradually by the Indians, while those in the Yellowstone park are potted by poachers whenever the chance offers. A mounted head of one of these animals is today worth from $150 to $200, and a skin brings a good price. Ten years ago there were nearly 400 buffalo in the park and it is thought that the survivors can be preserved only by corraling them and reducing them to captivity.

C. J. Jones, better known as "Buffalo" Jones, of Oklahoma, has a herd of over 100 full-bred buffalo, which he wishes to sell to the government. Austin Corbin was the possessor of ninety bison, which have been more or less scattered since his death, some of them having been presented to New York city. The animals, when kept in captivity, show a tendency to increase in numbers, and Buffalo Jones has produced thousands of desirable crossbreeds from his herd.

It is stated that there are not 110 pure-bred American bison outside of this country.

MEN OF MIDDLE AGE

MENTAL POWERS ARE STRONGEST BETWEEN THE AGES OF 40 AND 60

Let those who are young cease to vaunt themselves and they who are of middle age rejoice. Research has proved that the human mind is at its fullest power between the ages of 40 and 60. There are, of course, exceptions to this rule, such as Byron, the young Napoleon and Alexander, but taking it "full and by" the prime age of the mind of man is between 40 and 60. Swift was 49 when he wrote Gulliver's Travels, and John Stuart Mill 56 when his essay on Utilitarianism was published, although his Liberty was written three years before. When Waverley came out Sir Walter Scott was 44 years old, and nearly all of those tales which have made his lasting fame as a novelist were written after he was 46. Milton's genius made its loftiest flights when he was between 54 and 59. It was between those years that he wrote Paradise Lost. The Task and John Gilpin were written when Cowper was over 50, and Defoe was within two years of 60 when he wrote Robinson Crusoe. Of all the writing of Thomas Hood, The Song of the Shirt, and The Bridge of Sighs are the best known and will live the longest. Hood wrote these two poems at the age of 46.

Darwin wrote his Origin of Species when he was 50, and was 62 when he gave the world his Descent of Man. Longfellow wrote Hiawatha at 48, and Oliver Wendell Holmes gave us Songs of Many Keys when he had passed his 55th birthday. George Eliot was near 50 when she wrote Middlemarch. Bacon's greatest book took 59 years to mature, and Grote's History of Greece several years longer.

How to Select Guests.

In entertaining small companies do not make a mistake of inviting the same people to meet each other too often. If you have a party of six musical people it will be enjoyable for them to sing, play or talk music to one another once or twice. But remember that many people who can neither sing nor play an instrument enjoy music passionately. Invite these non-musicians to meet one or two of these who make music. If you know two or three people who love books and reading, bring them together some evening. Ask one of them to read aloud a new short story or magazine sketch, or an old but perhaps unfamiliar one. If you have among your friends two good story-tellers, do not invite them to entertain each other, but ask people whom you know will enjoy their stories to meet each from time to time. Everyone loves an appreciative listener, especially one who is free from the uneasy spur of competition.—Ada C. Sweet in Woman's Home Companion.

The people living in the senatorial district north of here should compare the record made by Senator Grindeland with that of his Populistic predecessor. Mr. Grindeland voted right upon every measure, and has certainly paved the way for a higher office than the one he now holds.

If the farmers would only spend a portion of the summer in repairing the township roads, they would double the value of their lands and greatly cheapen the cost of transportation. This city is doing its share towards helping the country, and it is time the farmers took more interest in the matter.

Nat Campbell, mayor of the city of Crookston, wants the Democratic nomination for congressman from this district. Of course it is none of our business, but he is the only Democrat in the Red River Valley that can hold an elective office, and for that reason is entitled to the honor of a nomination.

The Republican legislature can point with pride to the record it has made, among the most important laws enacted being the providing for a revision of the tax laws, the board of control, increase of the gross earnings of railroads and the primary election law. The representatives in the Red River Valley, with the exception of the "senator from Polk" have been a credit to the people who elected them.

One of the greatest disadvantages to our present school system is the lack of supervision. It is impossible for a principal who has from fifteen to twenty classes to teach every day to do much in the way of supervision. To be effective supervision should be vertical—that is the work in every subject should be arranged and conducted right through the grades so that a student may pass without interruption or break through the whole course of study. This condition cannot be brought about unless someone takes up the task and carries it out systematically. Moreover to maintain the higher grades in two different parts of the same city is a waste of means and forces and should not be practiced any longer. It is impossible to meet the demands for public education in a city organized into common districts. The legislature has recently passed a bill making the state aid to high schools $1,000 and that to graded schools $300 per year. Would not a high school and $700 additional aid be a fine thing for us? We can have it if we will. There is an open door of opportunity before us. Let us enter in together and enjoy the privileges that every other city of the state of the size of ours in enjoying.

THE LIBRARY.

It Will Soon Be Established in This City.

The soliciting committee of the Ladies' Library society were at work last Friday and succeeded in securing subscriptions to the amount of nearly $500, a complete set of Chas. Dickens' works, and 100 volumns of standard books. Some very liberal gifts were received from the business men of this city, and the ladies have a right to feel exceedingly proud of the amount they gathered in.

A meeting of the ladies was held at the residence of Mrs. J. G. Ballard last Saturday afternoon, when a constitution and by-laws were adopted and the following permanent officers elected:

Pres.—Mrs. James Meehan.
V. Pres.—Mrs. C. Kretzschmar.
Sec.—Mrs. J. G. Ballard.
Treas.—Mrs. A. B. Helgeson.
Directors—Mesdames. C. C. Jackson, C. J. Knox, C. L. Dobner, F. J. Stebbins, F. H. Kratka, J. Berry, J. J. Crowe and John W. Eastman.

In addition to the liberal sums given by C. L. Dobner and S. F. Staples, these two gentlemen have offered to errect a building on Second street east of the First State bank and give the library free rent for a period of one year.

At a meeting of the city council held Monday night, that body decided to give the Library society the sum of $200. The ladies now have over $700 to be used for the purchase of books.

CITY COUNCIL

Meeting Held on Monday Night.

At a meeting of the city council held Monday evening the following business was transacted:

The ordinance requiring venders of fresh meat to pay a license of $100 was passed.

An ordinance giving the mayor the power to regulate the license fees to be paid by shows, circuses, etc., to be not less than $5 nor more than $250 was passed.

An ordinance placing the employes of the electric light plant under civil service was introduced. It gives the superintendent full power to collect all sums due the city for lights, authorizes him to make a report of the financial condition once a month and to cause the names of delinquents to be published.

The city clerk was authorized to give the Knox school $50, to aid in paying for the East Side building.

Louis French was authorized to act as night watchman, from the hours of 1 to 6 a. m., and his salary increased to $40 per month.

James Meehan was give $75 for the use of the Moose Dung bridge for one year, the city to keep the same in repair.

Side walks were ordered built as follows:

On Superior avenue from Bridge street to Isaac Jubb's residence.

On LaBree avenue along west side of block 30.

On Ninth street from northwest corner block 6 to southeast corner block 21.

From northwest corner block 62 to lot 6, block 11, Porter's addition.

From southwest corner lot 18, block 18, to lot 29, block 18, Porter's addition.

Along block 20, fronting Fourth street.

Attorney Bagley has accepted an invitation to act as judge on thought and composition at the South Dakota State Intercollegiate Oratorical Contest, to be held at Huron, S. D., May 18. The selection of Mr. Bagley by the South Dakota people indicates that they recognize the ability of Thief River Falls' popular attorney.

It is said that fully 100,000 acres of virgin land will make the acquaintance of the plow in the Red River Valley this spring. Much of this land was purchased years ago by speculators, and has but lately been placed upon the market. It has been purchased by small farmers and this year will be included in the ranks of the producing areas.

We are informed that H. E. Massey intends starting a parcel delivery wagon in this city next Monday. Besides delivering goods purchased at the stores he will be prepared to deliver parcels throughout the city. Orders can be left a H. Fant's and they will receive prompt attention at reasonable prices. Patronize the new enterprise.

Twelve years ago C. Huber, of Cochrane, Wis., came to Thief River Falls and purchased two buffalos of Indians near here. These with a few others were taken to his farm in Wisconsin and formed the nucleus of a herd that has been bred to the number of 42 full blooded animals. Mr. Huber was in Crookston last week and stated to friends that he is now selling buffalos to numerous parks in the cities in this country and Europe at a handsome profit.

One of the laws enacted by the late legislature provides for a stay of ten days on bills allowed by cities, villages and towns before the money can be drawn. The bill further provides that any five taxpayers, who take exception to the allowance of a bill by the municipal authorities, on the grounds of irregularity, excessive charge, etc., mayl within ten days, file a petition for an appeal on such bill, and the court will then pass upon its merits.

L. Falske, the veteran steamboat captain, had the honor of running the first boat into Thief River Falls this year. He brought the Thief River Falls Lumber company's steamboat, the Alice, down from the outlet and it will continue to make regular trips in the future. The captain reports that the water is very high, in some places overflowing the banks of the river, and this will cause the lumbermen considerable expense in gathering up the logs that are drifting from the river.

The hog is the mortgage lifter, the sheep the farm fertilizer, the cow the barn builder, and the hen the grocery bill payer. This quartet with a man and woman not afraid of the work of caring for them will insure prosperity on any farm. So says an old and experienced agriculturist and we know he has told the truth in a small space. If the sheep and the hen were more common in this country, our farmers would pile up large bank accounts. For the care bestowed, they pay as well as hogs.

H. M. Hicks last week purchased of F. H. Kratka the lot on the corner of Main avenue and Second street, and it is stated that Mr. Hicks will build a modern store on this corner and occupy it with his furniture store. The building will be 24x140 feet, the entire east and south sides being of glass, which will enable him to better display his goods. Mr. Hicks started in the furniture business here about three years ago in a very small way, but by close attention to business has built up a large trade and now conducts the leading furniture store in the city.

Mayor Johnson, of Fargo, has recently returned from an extended trip to Norway and Sweden. He is greatly interested in immigration, and has devoted considerable time and attention to the development of the northwest through this means. He asserts that 20,000 Scandinavians will come to the United States this year, to make their homes here, many of them being young men who wish to avoid conscription into the army of their native land. This would indicate that they are not in the least fearful of those bogies "militarism" and "imperialism" raised by the Bryanites last year.

IN BANKRUPTCY.

H. Lewin Forced to Make an Assignment.

H. Lewin, proprietor of the Red Star Clothing House, last Saturday went into voluntary bankruptcy for the benefit of his creditors. His liabilities are $6,635 and assets are estimated at $6,126. Most of the creditors are wholesale houses, but there are a few local parties that have claims due them. Mr. Lewin attributes the cause of his failure to the fact that he has been under a very heavy expense during the winter, and has transacted but little business. He has no stated plans for the future, but will continue to make his home in this city.

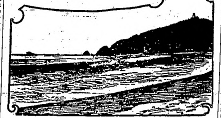
C. KRETZSCHMAR

A RIVAL OF NICARAGUA CANAL.

While the United States is busy discussing and negotiating over the proposed Nicaragua canal the Mexican government, aided by a rich and progressive British company, is working steadily on a route across the isthmus which not only promises to loom up as the Nicaragua canal's most dangerous rival after the canal begins business, but which will be in active operation five or six years before the Nicaraguan route can possibly be opened.



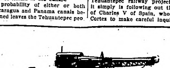
TERMINUS AT SALINA CRUZ ON PACIFIC OCEAN.

A Lively Scheme.

Stated briefly, the new work consists in reconstructing a railway, which already crosses Mexico at its narrowest point, to such an extent that freight can be rushed across it in a shorter time and at a lower rate than would be possible by the Nicaragua canal, the saving of time of vessels through the use of this more northerly route being expected to even up the disadvantage of handling a ship's cargo twice.

This railway is the Tehuantepec line, built by the Mexican government several years ago and used only for local traffic, but never as an interoceanic freight route, being entirely without terminal facilities for its handling. Now, however, harbors are being constructed at both ends of the route—at Coatzacoalcas, on the Gulf of Mexico, and Salina Cruz, on the Pacific Ocean—which will give anchorage to the largest vessels in the merchant service, while the quays and wharves are to be fitted with the most modern machinery and appliances for the loading and discharging of vessels. Meanwhile the road itself is being rebuilt almost entirely and fitted for heavy traffic.

Not Afraid of the Canals.



TITAN IN POSITION AT END OF "BREAKWATER."

The probability of either or both the Nicaragua and Panama canals being opened leaves the Tehuantepec people undismayed. They will have at least five years' start of either enterprise, and they say they will depend on the cheapness of their rates, their celerity in handling cargoes and, above all, their more northerly location, to enable them practically to defy competition. By the Tehuantepec route, they point out, the distance between New York and San Francisco will be 700 miles less than by the Nicaragua canal, and 1,100 less than by the Panama route. For a 10-knot steamer that means a saving of nearly three days in the first case and of four and a half days in the second. From New Orleans to San Francisco they claim an advantage of 1,600 miles over Panama, which accounts for nearly seven days. From Plymouth, England, to San Francisco there will be not only a saving of 7,000 miles over the Cape Horn route, but of 800 miles, or three whole days, over that of Panama.

Nor will they be content to compete with routes on the isthmus alone, for the distance from the Tehuantepec's Mexican gulf terminus—Coatzacoalcas—to San Francisco is a hundred miles less than from New Orleans by way of the Southern Pacific railway.

Almost Five Bridges to the Mile.

The engineering difficulties on the Tehuantepec railway have not been especially great, the chief one being that of obtaining ballast after leaving the coast. The original line in some places skirted the swampy country, and in these places they are diverting it the railway is only 190 miles long, there are more than 900 openings, each of these having formerly been spanned with the old wooden trestle bridges, such as still exist in some parts of the south and west. Every one of these bridges is being replaced with structures of iron or stone.

With only two or three exceptions they are all American made. Likewise away from the marshes. Although they are using American rails. Last year America supplied them with 5,000 tons of them. One feature of the works is a Titan machine for raising and placing in position blocks of stone in building the breakwaters at Coatzacoalcas. It can raise masses of stone weighing fifty tons, and it cost $50,000. It is the biggest thing of its kind in the world, and was built especially for this undertaking. There is one thing that the projectors have learned from Americans—not to be afraid of plant. An American company will establish a big and expensive plant, no matter where their operations will be carried on, if there is the slightest prospect of further business.

Not the least interesting point in the Tehuantepec railway project is that it simply is following out the dream of Charles V of Spain, who directed Cortez to make careful inquiry for a passage through the Isthmus of Tehuantepec "and shorten by two-thirds the route from Cadiz to Cathay."

Swedish Waterfalls to Be Utilized.

Sweden is a country whose inherent powers of nature are worth barrels of gold, writes a Copenhagen correspondent. There are so many waterfalls, which might be utilized as motive powers for works of every description, but want of capital leaves the most of these natural sources of wealth inactive. A few waterfalls have been taken into the service of factories and other works through the application of foreign capital, but too many are left unused. As the waterfalls belong to the crown, a certain reasonable rent is paid. There is a movement on foot to erect a large station for the production of electricity at the waterfalls of Saarikoski and Sauokoski, in Norrbotten. The government will charge about 11s annually for each effective horsepower produced by the falls.

WORK OF AN ANCIENT RACE.

Remarkable Prehistoric Monument Near Lake Mills, Wisconsin.

In many respects Aztalan is among the most remarkable prehistoric monuments in the northwest. It is the only brick-walled town-site found in this country. It is located on the bottom land of the Crayfish river, about two miles from Lake Mills, Wis. The inclosing wall of the townsite is about 700 feet on its flanks and 1,500 feet long. The river served to complete the inclosure of seventeen acres of land. Within and without the inclosure, there were a number of round, truncated and oblong mounds. Just beyond the inclosing walls the land rises abruptly over 20 feet to the rolling table lands of the surrounding country. From the bank above a stone could be tossed into the townsite, within the inclosure, which would seem to be a good reason why this inclosure which has been called a fort, could not have been intended for a defense against any human enemy. Along the brow of this higher land is a row of more than thirteen round pyramidal mounds ranging from three to twelve feet in height. From the top of these mounds, or standing on the tableland above, an enemy could command the whole townsite. It has always been conceded that Aztalan was not inclosed for purposes of defense. It has been supposed that it was walled for protection from wild animals, though the inclosure has never been high or abrupt enough since its discovery to keep out the panther, wildcat, wolf, bear, moose, or buffalo, which were the only dangerous animals of our woods known to us. The purpose of its inhabitants in industriously constructing this great inclosure over a half mile long must still remain a mystery. The most remarkable art of Aztalan is its brick walls and walks. In this it is singular and alone, the only example of bricklaying among all the monuments of the mound builders. These bricks or brickets are not rectangular and regular in form and size, as are the modern brick. They are simply balls of plastic clay wadded by the hand into small brickets of irregular form, about the average size of a snowball. The material used was the glacial yellowish red clay of the vicinity, and the color of the brickets is red or light yellow. Under the glass, scrapings appear like a handful of crystal sand.—Chicago Journal.

Giant Demijohns.

"The giant demijohns that you see occasionally outside of liquor stores?" said the basketmaker. "Why, those are made sometimes of willow, oftener of rattan; sometimes over wooden bottle forms, in some cases not over a form, but with the basketwork strengthened and braced by crossbraces inside, but they are never made over real bottles. This big demijohn is mounted on a low pedestal, to raise it from the ground and so help to keep it dry. Whether it is of willow or of rattan it is always finished painted, because it is a sign that remains out of doors permanently. These demijohns are made in various sizes, ranging in height from six feet up to demijohns of truly gigantic proportions, measuring ten feet in height. A six-footer costs about $25, a ten-foot demijohn somewhere about $50. These great demijohns are not kept in stock by anybody, but made only to order. The demand for them is of course limited, but, still, there is more or less call for them in cities here and in Europe.—New York Sun.

Died Whistling.

Dr. William Krauss (Journal of Nervous and Mental Diseases, January,) describes the case of a Polish herdsman, 27 years of age, weighing 230 pounds, who, some months previous to an accident, had suffered from apoplexy resulting in left hemiplegia, says the New York Medical Journal. He was slowly regaining the use of his arm and leg, when he was struck by a train, and was found unconscious on the track with three scalp wounds. There was a depressed fracture of the skull three inches above and one inch behind the left ear. He was immediately trephined and the depressed bone removed. About 10 o'clock at night he began to whistle, not, however, the "popular songs of the day," but the whistle calls he was accustomed to use in calling or driving his flocks. He would continue whistling for about one minute, then would cease for five or ten minutes, and kept this up at regular intervals until he died, Jan. 3, 1899, at 10:30 p. m. At no time was it possible to distinguish any melody. The sounds were of the same pitch and intensity and of the same character. They were audible throughout the ward and attracted the attention of patients and attendants. To the physicians in attendance it was a strange experience to hear these whistle calls coming from a patient in a state of unconsciousness. It was impossible to rouse the patient at any time before or after the accident, and he died, whistling a few minutes before death.

LONGING.

Of all the myriad moods of mind
That through the soul come thronging,
Which one was e'er so dear, so kind,
So beautiful as Longing?
The thing we long for, that we are
For one transcendent moment,
Before the Present, poor and bare,
Can make its sneering comment.

Still, through our paltry stir and strife,
Glows down the wished ideal,
And Longing molds in clay what Life
Carves in the marble Real;
To let the new life in, we know,
Desire must ope the portal—
Perhaps the longing to be so
Helps make the soul immortal.

Longing is God's fresh heavenward will
With our poor earthward striving;
We quench it that we may be still
Content with merely living;
But, would we learn that heart's full scope
Which we are hourly wronging,
Our lives must climb from hope to hope
And realize our longing.

Ah! let us hope that to our praise
Good God not only reckons
The moments when we tread his ways
But when the spirit beckons;
That some slight good is also wrought,
Beyond self-satisfaction,
When we are simply good in thought,
Howe'er we fail in action.

—James Russell Lowell.

Harry Wauchope's Reprieve.

BY WILLIAM McLEOD RAINE.

(Copyright, 1901, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

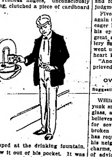
Harry Wauchope came briskly out of the Faculty Room, wearing on his face the boyish, defiant smile that was meant to express supreme unconcern. He stopped for a moment at the drinking fountain in the great hall and the smile died from his face as he filled the cup, emptied it absently, half filled it again, and then turned impatiently away.

Restlessly he wandered over to the bulletin board and read the students' "lost" notices, wondering wearily why people posted the loss of such trivial things as text books and society pins. He read that "if the person who stole a tennis racket marked J. M. K. from the gym. last Thursday evening will return same to 43 Elm street all will be forgiven and no reward will be required," and it did not seem to him a bit funny. Beneath that was the announcement of the football game at Travis Field which was to decide the class championship. He remembered how he had looked forward to playing in it, and talked over the chances of winning, and hoped and feared, until it had become a great thing with him and with all the team that they should win the game and the championship for the class; now it struck him sharply that the game was being played at that moment, and he was not "in it" and never would be again. He could even hear the dull yelling of the crowd on the side lines. Occasionally there came to him the short, sharp, triumphant "X, C, V—I—I," which told him that his class was winning.

Wauchope thought of all he would miss, how the strong bonds of fellowship he had formed on the ball ground and in the societies and at class meetings would be snapped when he went away, and not a soul among them would care anything about him after the first feeling of regret that their reckless, lawless classmate had been expelled. He could imagine them saying to each other, "What? Jack fired! Poor devil! Well, it had to come sooner or later."

He had made few close friends, but he knew a good many who would be glad to see him humbled; and he resolved that they should never know how hard he was hit. He would carry himself with the same jaunty, devil-may-care insouciance he had always worn, so that no man could say he winced. Involuntarily he straightened himself, thrust his hands deep into his coat pockets, and lounged over to the large western windows overlooking the Gym. courts.

His restless fingers, unconsciously working, clutched a piece of cardboard and drew it out of his pocket. It was a programme of the last class hop, and the sight of it gave a wrench to his thoughts that hurt with a sharper pain. He remembered just how Alice had looked, how beautifully sweet and serene she had appeared in that fetching light gray dress of hers, how she had seemed so much less reserved and more friendly than usual. It had swept across his mind at the time that possibly the thing he wanted most in all the world might some day be within his reach, and he had resolved that he would make such a man of himself as would be worthy of her.

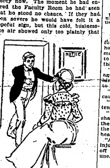


He stopped at the drinking fountain.

But that was nothing now. Ever since he had come to thinking of her in this way he had found himself bent on high achievement. He knew his work in the classroom had steadily improved. He had surprised more than one professor by his sudden keen application. Yet he had been surprised to find how hard it was to drop his old, unthinking, recklessness, even when he had set his face steadily in the other direction. He had never taken himself seriously before. Naturally other people had accepted him as a joke and a lawbreaker, and now refused to consider him seriously. They had thought it was some new "grind" he was getting on them. And when they saw he was in earnest they rallied him about his reform, asking him how long it was since New Year's, until he was forced almost in self-defense into occasional lapses.

Why the deuce was it that he could never keep his fingers out of a bit of tempting mischief? If Gray and Tomlinson wanted to kidnap the president of the Junior class what business was it of his? He might have known that it was just his luck to come to grief over the affair.

He had known from the first that his case was hopeless. His misdeeds had been up for consideration too many times before for him to expect any mercy now. The moment he had entered the Faculty Room he had seen that he stood no chance. If they had been severe he would have felt it a hopeful sign, but this cold, business-like air showed only too plainly that his hearing was a mere formality. They had galled him inexpressibly by their coldness, and he had been in return politely insolent and unconcerned. Yet he would have given anything for another chance, though his pride would not let him ask for it.



"Reprieved! Reprieved!"

They had asked him a question or two, and he had answered them. Then they had permitted him to retire while they made their decision. Wauchope felt that he could foretell just what that decision would be. With the usual lack of perspective which pertains in youth Harry saw a long vista of hopeless years stretch before him, all full of failure and misery. That was in the distance, but the immediate future looked black enough to him. How could he face his father after having dragged their common name in the dust—that name of which they were both so proud? And his mother—ah, he dare not think of her. He might break down if he did.

A wisp of paper floated down to him from the gallery above. Wauchope looked up in time to note the swish of a disappearing skirt. A note was penciled on the scrap of paper.

"I shall be in the Annual office. Come to me as soon as you know the decision. ALICE."

Harry flushed when he read it, and then he groaned. He knew that it meant she was going to stand by him, and he fought with a sudden lump in his throat.

"Oh, you splendid girl, do you think I shall let you sacrifice yourself for a disgraced man? I may be a worthless scamp, but I'm not such a hound as that," he cried to himself, and set his teeth bitterly at thought of the futility of a too-late repentance.

The door of the Faculty Room opened and a professor stepped out.

"Mr. Wauchope, can we see you a moment?" he asked.

"Certainly, sir," answered the lad, and followed him proudly into the judgment chamber.

Five minutes later the door opened again to let out a young man with the eager light of happiness shining from his eyes. He made straight for the great stairway which led to the gallery and the Annual office, and as he went up the steps three at a time his heart kept singing:

"Another chance, Alice, girl. Reprieved! Reprieved!"

OVERCOMING BAD LUCK.

Suggestions of Charms for the Breaking Down of a "Hoodoo."

William Bowerman of West Manayunk smashed an heirloom, a looking-glass, a few days ago, and now fully believes that he will have bad luck for seven years unless the spell is broken by some magic charm. He has requested the colored residents of his neighborhood to furnish him with charms, and has already received a lot of advice. One damsel tells him to hire a livery horse and drive the animal until the shoe of its left hind foot falls off, and then to nail the shoe over the front door. Nelson Harrison told him to stick a three-pronged fork over the door, to take an old broom and fill it full of wood ashes, and then blindfolded, to knock the fork down with the broom. "If the fork sticks up in the floor," said Nelson Harris, "the hoodoo is gone." Another colored man told Bowerman to steal thirteen hairs from the tail of a moon-eyed spotted mare, to paste them over the back of the broken glass, and bury the glass in a cemetery devoted exclusively to colored people. "Carry a rabbit's foot;" "get a horse chestnut from the burr that hangs on the top limb of a tree, and plant it in a graveyard;" throw salt over your shoulder at midnight on the last day of the year and wear a woolen stocking inside out on the left foot for seven weeks." Such are the charms that have been received by Bowerman, and they will be given a fair trial until the spell is broken.—Philadelphia Record.

The Man Was Satirical.

P. P. Haskins of Cincinnati told the following anecdote at the Everett house, to illustrate the phase of human nature which leads people to claim to possess knowledge on any and all things:

"At a dinner party given some time ago in a Western city," said Mr. Haskins, "one of the bachelor guests turned to his very beautiful hostess and asked:

"'Mrs. Blank, do you know what causes the milky way in the heavens?'

"'Why, I did know, but I've forgotten,' was the answer he received.

"'That's a great pity,' said he, sadly shaking his head, 'to think that you, the only person in the world who knew the cause of this phenomenon of the heavens, should have forgotten it!'"

"And he actually had the cheek to feel injured because the woman took him off her visiting list."—New York Tribune.

It Wouldn't Do.

Baron Munchausen had just written a letter to a friend.

He closed it with a flourish, a "yours ruly," and signed his name.

Then, with a melancholy smile, he erased the word "truly."

"It would merely move him to derisive laughter," he said.—Chicago Tribune.

MOTHER AND DAUGHTER.

The Wife and Mother-in-Law of Mr. Charles Keys.

Clarissa, Minn., April 15, (Special.)—No family in this vicinity is better known or more universally respected, than Mr. Charles Keys', the local School Teacher, and his estimable wife and mother-in-law. For a long time, Mrs. Keys has been in ill-health. Recently, however, she has found a cure for her ailments in Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"I cannot speak too highly of Dodd's Kidney Pills, or what they have done for me," said Mrs. Keys.

"My life was miserable, my back always ached, also my head. I was troubled with Neuralgia in the head and face, and suffered extreme pain, but thanks to Dodd's Kidney Pills, all those aches and pains have vanished like the morning dew, and it now seems that life is worth living. I consider Dodd's Kidney Pills a God-send to suffering humanity. They may rightly be named the Elixir of Youth.

"While speaking of my own case and the wonderful benefit I have received, I might also add that my mother, who is now an old lady of 74 years and who lives with me, has been troubled more or less with aches and pains, as is natural with one of her advanced age. When she saw what Dodd's Kidney Pills had done for me, she commenced to use them herself, and she says that they have done her more good than any other medicine she has ever tried.

"This testimony is given in the hope that others who may be afflicted as we were, may see and read it, and be benefited by it."

What Mrs. Keys states in her letter can be verified by reference to any of her many friends in this neighborhood. Dodd's Kidney Pills have already a wonderful reputation in Todd county.

Nothing has ever cured Bright's Disease, Diabetes or Dropsy but Dodd's Kidney Pills.

New England Women

Have an Abiding Faith in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

MRS. MABEL GOOKIN

After years of struggle to attain and merit public confidence, with a firm and steadfast belief that some day others would recognize in us the truth, good faith, and honesty of purpose which we know we possess, what a genuine satisfaction it is to succeed, and to realize the uplifting influence of the merited confidence of a vast army of our fellow beings.

Thus stands the Pinkham name in New England, and all over America, and nowhere is the faith in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound greater than in New England, its home. Merit, and merit alone, can gain this.

ORGANIC INFLAMMATION.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I was troubled very badly with inflammation of the bladder, was sick in bed with it. I had two doctors, but they did me no good. A friend gave me Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it helped me. I have now taken three bottles of it, and I am entirely cured. It is a God-send to any woman, and I would recommend it to any one suffering as I was. I think, if most of the women would take more of your medicine instead of going to the doctors, they would be better off. The Compound has also cured my husband of kidney trouble." MRS. MABEL GOOKIN, Box 160. Mechanic Falls, Maine.

NERVOUS PROSTRATION.

"For two years I suffered from nervous prostration, the result of female weakness. I had leucorrhoea very badly, and at time of menstruation would be obliged to go to bed. Also suffered with headaches, pain across back, and in lower part of abdomen. I was so discouraged. I had read of Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound, and concluded to give it a trial. I wrote to Mrs. Pinkham, and received a very nice letter in return. I began at once the use of her Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier, and am now feeling splendid. I have no more pain at monthly periods, can do my own work, and have gained ten pounds. I would not be without your Vegetable Compound. It is a splendid medicine. I am very thankful for what it has done for me."—MRS. J. W. J., 76 Carolina Ave., Jamaica Plain, Mass.

PAINFUL PERIODS.

"I cannot help but feel that it is my duty to do something in regard to recommending your wonderful medicine. I must say it is the grandest medicine on earth, and have advised a great many suffering with female troubles to take it. I tell people I wish I could go on the platform and lecture on it.

MRS. H. S. BALL

"My trouble was painful menstruation. The suffering I endured pen cannot describe. I was treated by one of our most prominent physicians here for five months, and found myself getting worse instead of better. At the end of the fifth month he told me he had done all he could for me, and that I had better go to the hospital.

"My sister advised me to try your Vegetable Compound, as it cured her of backache. I did so, and took it faithfully, and am now cured of my trouble, and in perfect health, many thanks to your medicine. I cannot praise it enough, and would recommend it to all who suffer from any female weakness."—MRS. H. S. BALL, 461 Orchard St., New Haven, Conn.

$5000 REWARD.—We have deposited with the National City Bank of Lynn, $5000, which will be paid to any person who can find that the above testimonial letters are not genuine, or were published before obtaining the writer's special permission. LYDIA E. PINKHAM MEDICINE CO.

SEEM ALIVE THOUGH DEAD.

Instances in Which Corpses Have Had the Semblance of Life.

Live persons have feigned death with marvelous exactness, but when the dead feign life, or seem to feign life, the spectacle is as gruesome as can well be imagined. Not long ago a Russian cemetery was the scene of as weird a wedding as ever has been witnessed. A young girl who had been bethrothed died on the eve of her marriage and her friends decided that, in spite of the intervening hand of death, her marriage must take place; her wedding ceremony was performed at the side of the grave, and after the marriage the body was returned to the coffin and lowered to its long resting place. It is less than a year ago that a valuable cup was won in a bicycle race in Australia by a man who was dead when he passed the winning post. The race took place at an "electric-light carnival," so-called, in the presence of 10,000 spectators. In the last lap James Somerville, a rider, forged to the front and secured such a lead that his victory was assured. When within twenty-five yards of the finish he was seen to relax his hold on the handle bar and lose his footing on the pedals. He did not fall from the machine, however, and amid frantic cheers dashed by the goal, winning the race by half a wheel. As he passed the finishing post he pitched forward and fell to the ground. When he was picked up he was found to be dead, and what was more, the doctors declared that death had come to him when he was seen to lose his hold of the handle bars. It was a dead body that had ridden the last twenty-five yards of the race.

Since the plague has been prevalent in India searching parties go through the villages inspecting the houses with the idea of seeing that all cases of death by the plague are reported to the authorities. On entering a suspected house one day the inspectors saw a group of natives playing cards. Something in the appearance of one of the players attracted the attention of one of the inspectors, who placed his hand upon the man's shoulder. To his amazement the man swayed and fell to the floor. Upon examination it was found that he had been dead some time, but in order to avoid having the house marked as plague stricken the other inmates had concealed the fact of his death.

STRANGEST OF ALL FISH.

Denizen of the Deep That Angles for the Food It Devours.

Most remarkable of strange fishes is the angler fish, whose very name seems a paradox. The fishing fish is nevertheless a reality, and a stern one to all that approach those awful jaws of his. With a body the color of mud, he generally lies in the shadow of some rock on the bottom of the sea, waiting motionless for the approach of his prey. He is provided with an odd kind of fin just over the mouth, and this is held out in front of him to give warning of the coming of something to be swallowed. One taken alive was experimented on and it was found that if this projecting fin was touched with a stick, even though the stick did not come near the mouth, the jaws closed convulsively. This shows that the fin, by some provision of nature, closes the jaws as soon as it is touched. The mouth is tremendous, growing to the width of a foot, while the whole fish is only three feet long. One of these anglers was caught not long since and, although it was only twenty-five inches long, a fish fifteen inches long was found sticking in its throat. The angler is provided with a peculiar set of teeth, in double or treble rows along the jaws and at the entrance of the throat. Some of these teeth are a foot long. He is not a pretty fish to look at, but he attends strictly to business and will swallow anything that touches his warning fin, whether it be meant for food or not. All kinds of things have been found in the stomach of anglers, from bits of lead and stone to fish almost as large as the angler itself. This is without doubt one of the most peculiar and interesting fish in the whole ocean.

Fisticuffs with a Buffalo.

In "Bullet and Shot in Indian Forest, Plain and Hill," Mr. C. E. M. Russell relates a thrilling adventure which befell Colonel C., a member of Lord Roberts' staff, while he was buffalo hunting in India. The colonel had wounded a buffalo. Reloading as he ran forward he was disconcerted when the animal charged at him from behind a clump of bamboos. Colonel C. interposed a tree between himself and the bull, who cut a piece out of the bark with his horn as he rushed by, and then turned and went at the man again with the same result. C. then thought that he would try to reach a larger tree. He started, but tripped over a bamboo hidden in the grass, and fell prone, upon which the bull overtook and did his best to horn him. The beast ripped the colonel's garments, and at last, getting his horn under him, tossed him several feet and came and stood over him. Colonel C. now did a most unwise thing. He sat up and hit the buffalo in the eyes with his fists, and kicked him on the nose. Fortunately the bull left the man and went off. The hunter's knuckles were terribly skinned, and his gold ring was battered out of all shape. This bull, luckily for the colonel, did not behave at all as one would have expected. The battering of a man's feet and fists would only enrage the ordinary buffalo, and insure a terrible, if not fatal, punishment to the man.—Youths' Companion.

DAN GROSVENOR SAYS:

"Peruna Is an Excellent Spring Catarrh Remedy--I am as Well as Ever."

HON. DAN A. GROSVENOR, OF THE FAMOUS OHIO FAMILY.

Hon. Dan. A. Grosvenor, Deputy Auditor for the War Department, in a letter written from Washington, D. C., says:

"Allow me to express my gratitude to you for the benefit derived from one bottle of Peruna. One week has brought wonderful changes and I am now as well as ever. Besides being one of the very best spring tonics it is an excellent catarrh remedy." Very respectfully, Dan A. Grosvenor.

Hon. John Williams, County Commissioner, of 517 West Second street, Duluth, Minn., says the following in regard to Peruna: "As a remedy for catarrh I can cheerfully recommend Peruna. I know what it is to suffer from that terrible disease and I feel that it is my duty to speak a good word for the tonic that brought me immediate relief. Peruna cured me of a bad case of catarrh and I know it will cure any other sufferer from that disease."

Miss Mattie L. Guild, President Illinois Young People's Christian Temperance Union, in a recent letter from Chicago, Ill., says:

"I doubt if Peruna has a rival in all the remedies recommended to-day for catarrh of the system. A remedy that will cure catarrh of the stomach will cure the same condition of the mucous membrane anywhere. I have found it the best remedy I have ever tried for catarrh, and believing it worthy my endorsement I gladly accord it."

Mrs. Elmer Fleming, orator of Reservoir Council, No. 163, Northwestern Legion of Honor, of Minneapolis, Minn., writes from 2535 Polk St., N. E.:

Mrs. Elmer Fleming, Minneapolis, Minn.

"I have been troubled all my life with catarrh in my head. I took Peruna for about three months, and now think I am permanently cured. I believe that for catarrh in all its forms, Peruna is the medicine of the age. It cures when all other remedies fail. I can heartily recommend Peruna as a catarrh remedy."

The spring is the time to treat catarrh. Cold, wet winter weather often retards a cure of catarrh. If a course of Peruna is taken during the early spring months the cure will be prompt and permanent. There can be no failures if Peruna is taken intelligently during the favorable weather of spring.

As a systemic catarrh remedy Peruna eradicates catarrh from the system wherever it may be located. It cures catarrh of the stomach or bowels with the same certainty as catarrh of the head.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

BOTHA SEEKS PEACE

REOPENS NEGOTIATIONS WITH THE BRITISH.

Report Says That He Discovered That Dewet's Intellect Had Been Weakened So That He Was Not Responsible for His Actions and He Therefore Concluded to Negotiations for Peace—Story Comes Through British Channels, and Nothing Can Be Learned Officially.

London, April 12.—For weeks past reports have been current that Gen. Christian Dewet has lost his reason in consequence of his incessant anxiety, his inability to rest or even sleep, owing to the unrelaxing pursuit of his men by the British columns.

Although these stories have been attributed to reliable Boer prisoners and have been accompanied with considerable details, it has been impossible to accept them as entirely convincing, as they all came through unofficial British channels, which, however well their intentions may be, are in no wise always reliable. To-day there comes a statement from Cape Town reaffirming these tales of Dewet's mental collapse and asserting that Gen. Botha, the Boer commander-in-chief, having satisfied himself of their truth, has reopened negotiations with the British military officials for the conclusion of peace. It is known to a virtual certainty that Gen. Botha very lately visited Gen. Dewet in the neighborhood of Heilbron, and there, according to the aforesaid Cape Town dispatch, he discovered that Gen. Dewet's intellect had been weakened to the extent that he was not responsible for his actions and had lost his influence over his followers, who were rapidly forsaking him. These facts, according to this story, convinced Gen. Botha that a continuance of the campaign rested with him alone, and as Gen. Dewet has hitherto been the only opponent of opening negotiations for peace he (Botha) resolved to reopen negotiations looking to that end, and these negotiations are now proceeding. This statement comes from a single source and nothing can be learned officially on the subject.

CHANGE OF TACTICS.

Russia Threatens to Support a Policy of Utmost Severity.

London, April 12.—"M. de Giers demands the return of all communications to the Chinese authorities from the Russian legation regarding the Manchurian negotiations," says Dr. Morrison, wiring to the Times from Pekin, "and he has warned Li Hung Chang that instead of being as heretofore an advocate of the Chinese cause in the conference of ministers of the powers, he will henceforth support the policy of the utmost severity. Russia has still ample means to indulge this spirit. The report is current, but I believe it is premature, that Russia has already prepared a fresh form of convention. Doubtless, however, when the process of intimidation has been carried far enough a fresh attempt will be made to recover the lost ground."

"Dr. Morrison draws a gloomy picture of the situation there and urges the necessity of withdrawing troops before the hot rainy season sets in, adding that unless orders for withdrawal arrive before May it will be almost impossible to move before autumn.

MAY BE AN OLD MAID.

Feature of Suit for Damages by a Girl Against a Railroad Company.

Frankfort, Ind., April 12. — Emma Rader, aged seven years, has brought suit for $15,000 damages against the Lake Erie & Western railroad for the loss of a leg, due to an accident a few months ago whereby she was hurled from a depot platform under the train by being struck by a mail pouch thrown from the train. A feature of the complaint is that, regardless of her extreme youth, she claims the principal part of the damages because the loss of the limb will be a permanent damage and obstacle to any matrimonial expectations and prospects.

FIRE DRILL SAVES LIVES.

Terrible Tragedy Prevented by Heroism and Preparation.

New York, April 12.—The southern division of the children's hospital on Randall's island was destroyed by fire. Ninety-four boys, seven to fourteen years of age, blind or weak-eyed, were rescued through the heroism of the nurses. The pavilion was a fire-trap, and in preparation for just such an emergency the boys had been thoroughly drilled.

KRUGER NOT COMING.

Absolute Denial of Story in Regard to an Immediate Visit.

New York, April 12. — Charles D. Pierce, official representative in New York of the Boers, denies that President Kruger will sail for the United States on May 11. "There is absolutely nothing in the story," he said. "Mr. Kruger may come here in the fall, but not sooner. He is taking the rest he needs so badly."

DRIVEN TO DEATH.

Once Wealthy Broker Could Not Bear Disgrace of Failure.

New York, April 12.—Bernard Frost, for a number of years a member of the Consolidated Stock exchange, once worth 500,000, committed suicide by drinking carbolic acid at the Hoffman house. Soon after taking the acid the announcement was made from the floor of the exchange that Frost had failed.

Wrecked by a Spreading Rail.

Pontiac, Ill., April 12. — The southbound Alton limited train was wrecked at Cayuga, a flag station five miles north of this place. Two persons were injured. Spreading rails was the cause of the accident.

Fire at Richmond.

Richmond, Va., April 12.—The large retail dry goods store of Julius Meyers' Sons was destroyed by fire. The loss is not known. Stock and fixtures are insured for $180,000. There were no casualties.

CONSPIRACY TO KILL GOEBEL.

Sensational Evidence Given by Former Gov. Bradley.

Frankfort, Ky., April 12. — Former Gov. William O. Bradley, who was chief counsel for W. S. Taylor in the gubernatorial contest case before the legislature last year, gave sensational testimony yesterday in the trial of Capt. Garnett D. Ripley, who is charged with conspiracy with others to bring about the murder of William Goebel. Mr. Bradley detailed a conversation which he said he had had with Capt. Ripley while the latter was in charge of his military company during the occupancy of the state capitol last spring by the Taylor troops, in which Ripley told him of frequent conferences with Gov. Taylor prior to the assassination. The witness said that Ripley told him he was in the executive office the day before the shooting and complained to Taylor because he had not called out his (Ripley's) company, and asked him when he should have the company ready. Taylor replied: "My God! haven't you brought them yet? Goebel will not live twenty-four hours," or "cannot live twenty-four hous," I forget which, declared the witness. In response to a question as to whether he (witness) heard of any conspiracy to kill Mr. Goebel, the witness stated that on Jan. 25, the day the train load of mountaineers arrived, some one, he could not now recall who, told him that part of the crowd was waiting in front of the court-house to kill Goebel.

GOLD-BAR THEFT A MYSTERY.

No Clue Has Yet Been Found to the Money or the Thieves.

New York, April 12.—The only definite information received in this city yesterday regarding the theft of three gold bars valued at from $20,000 to $24,000 from a keg in the storage room of the steamship Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse, on her last voyage from this port to Cherbourg, was a cable dispatch from Capt. Engelbart, captain of the ship, confirming the fact of the loss. The cablegram said that the strong room had apparently been entered and that the three bars had been taken from one of the kegs of gold in the room. In default of further information the manager of the North German Lloyd office here was unable to advance any theory of the robbery.

-o-

Bremen, April 12.—The directors of the North German Lloyd Steamship company have apparently learned nothing definite as to when and where the theft of the gold bars from the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse took place. Capt. Engelbart is of the opinion that the gold was stolen at either New York or Southampton. The police here as a result of their inquiries think the robbery was probably committed in New York.

CUBANS START FALSE RUMORS.

Banditti Said to Be Operating in Country Districts.

Havana, April 12. — Many reports have appeared in the Havana newspapers recently that bandetti are operating in the country districts throughout Cuba. These reports have been printed for some time and they are ascribed to various causes. Some people say they are intended as indirect attacks on the chiefs of the rural guards; others believe they come from an element which is opposed to the establishment of a Cuban government, and is desirous that the Americans shall remain here, while others still think the reports emanate from those who wish to attack the administration of Gen. Wood and are anxious to make it appear that there is no security on the island. Gen. Wood says there are no reports of disturbances in the country districts with the exception of a few cases of robbery. Outside of this the conditions are normal, and the robbery cases are those that are usually reported at certain times.

PORTER IN LUCK.

Probably the Biggest Tip Received by a Pullman Car Attendant.

New York, April 12. — A "tip" of nearly $100,000 is the reward George W. Thurston, a negro Pullman car porter gets for the attention he paid Mrs. Eliza Jane Evans, who was frequently a passenger on his car. Mrs. Evans died on March 18, and Thurston is named as the principal beneficiary of an estate estimated at between $75,000 and $100,000. Her husband is disinherited and relatives are remembered with $1 legacies. The will will be contested.

PENAL SERVITUDE.

Sentence Imposed on a Would-Be Assassin in Russia.

London, April 12.—A dispatch from St. Petersburg announces that Lagowski, the provincial official who recently attempted to assassinate Privy Counsellor Pobiedonostseff, procurator general of the Holy synod, has been sentenced to six years' penal servitude, with deprivation of civil rights.

GASOLINE LAMP COMBINE.

It Is Said to Include Nearly All Manufacturers in the Country.

Chicago, April 12. — Representatives of thirty-five concerns manufacturing gasoline lamps and fixtures have perfected an organization said to represent nearly all gasoline lamp manufacturing interests in the country. C. R. Gillett was chosen president and J. B. Linsley secretary.

BACK TO JAIL.

Escaped Horse Thief Rounded Up at Osceola, Wis.

Osceola, Wis., April 12.—Robert Carlson, a horse thief who broke jail at Webster City, Iowa, in July 1900, was captured here by Sheriff William Johnson. B. H. Sutton, a deputy, is here with extradition papers to take him back for trial.

In the Czar's Honor.

The Hague, April 12.—A desire has been expressed by several members of the international arbitration court to hold the first meeting of that body May 17, that date being the anniversary of the czar's birthday.

Woman Takes Her Life.

Monmouth, Ill., April 12.—Mrs. S. H. Lyons, wife of the president of the Monmouth college, committed suicide yesterday by hanging herself in the attic of her house. She had been an invalid for some time.

NO DANGER OF WAR

JAPAN ACCEPTS THE ASSURANCES OF RUSSIA.

Means That War Has Been Averted Through the Indorsement of the Position Assumed by the United States That Russia's Assurances as to Manchuria Should Be Accepted in Good Faith—Other Powers Likely to Follow the Lead of Japan and the United States.

Washington, April 12.—War between Russia and Japan over Manchuria appears to have been averted through the action of the Japanese government, communicated to the state department yesterday, in accepting Russia's assurances to the powers that she would not insist on the Chinese plenipotentiaries agreeing to the Manchurian convention, and would give pledges that the Russian troops would be withdrawn from that part of China as soon as order had been established there. Mr. Takharu, the Japanese minister, called at the state department yesterday afternoon to inform Secretary Hay that the Russian assurances were accepted by Japan and were entirely satisfactory. The course of Japan is particularly gratifying to this government because it means that war has been averted through the indorsement of the position assumed by the United States that Russia's assurances should be accepted in good faith.

While the action of the other powers has not been disclosed, it is believed here that the action of two strong nations like Japan and the United States will have the effect of inducing those governments that have not determined the character of their response to Russia to adopt the conservative view that has been taken in Tokio and Washington.

PLAGUE STILL RAGES.

One Hundred and Thirty-Five Deaths Thus Far at Cape Town.

Cape Town, April 12. — Up to the present time there have been 366 cases of the bubonic plague, of which 85 were Europeans. There have been 135 deaths from the disease, and as only about 100 have as yet been discharged as cured, it is anticipated that the death rate will reach nearly 60 per cent. Investigation shows that rats have been the source of infection in nearly every case.

FIRE IN INSANE HOSPITAL.

Patients' Good Behavior Prevented Any Loss of Life.

Indianapolis, April 12.—A fire started in the central hospital for the insane, but was under control in an hour. The patients behaved admirably and none were injured. The women in attendance displayed great coolness and prepared the inmates for removal. The flames originated in a linen closet in a ward where the most violent female patients are confined.

Insulted the Russian Minister.

Paris, April 12.—The Patrie publishes a dispatch from St. Petersburg which says the Chinese minister there, Yang Yu, gravely insulted Count Lamsdorff, the Russian minister of foreign affairs, during a discussion of the Manchurian question, whereupon the count ordered his lackeys to put the Chinese minister out, and Yang Yu was thrown down stairs and fatally injured in the head.

Cripple Kills Himself.

Houghton, Mich., April 12.—Michael Hillstrom, aged thirty and single, committed suicide at Dollar Bay by gashing his throat from ear to ear with a razor. He was an industrious young man, but broke his arm last winter and had since been unable to work. Fearing he would become a charge upon friends he killed himself.

Charged With Infanticide.

Fargo, N. D., April 12.—The preliminary hearing of Herbert Robertson, charged with infanticide, was begun here yesterday afternoon. The testimony of the attending physician at the birth of the child was taken. Mrs. Emma Baamer, a widow, said to be the mother of the child, will be one of the witnesses.

Stands by the Miners.

Indianapolis, April 12.—A report from Hazleton, Pa., that John Mitchell, president of the United Mineworkers of America, had resigned to accept a position with an Eastern life insurance company, was denied at headquarters here. Mr. Mitchell, it was stated, had no idea of resigning as president of the miners.

Increase in Postal Receipts.

Washington, April 12. — The gross postal receipts for last month for the fifty largest postoffices in the country show an increase of 11.4 per cent over the corresponding month of last year. The most remarkable increases are 60.5 per cent at Indianapolis and 41.5 per cent at Louisville.

Detective Convicted of Bribery.

Memphis, Tenn., April 12. — W. I. Richardson, one of the best known detectives in this section of the country, was convicted yesterday on the charge of bribing Juror John Walker in a big damage suit and sentenced to a term of two years and three months in the penitentiary.

Chief of Artillery.

Washington, April 12.—The president has appointed Col. Wallace Randolph chief of the artillery corps, under the provisions of the army reorganization act. He formerly was colonel of the First artillery and was stationed at Sullivan's island, S. C.

Preacher Suicides.

Van Alstyne, Tex., April 12.—Rev. C. W. Pritchett, pastor of the Christian church, was found dead from a gunshot wound in his neck. He had been suffering from grip and it is thought he committed suicide.

Killed by Boiler Explosion.

Norfolk, Va., April 12.—At an early hour yesterday morning the boiler at the plant of the Builders' Manufacturing company blew up and wrecked the building. Two men were killed and several injured.

CUBANS MAY COME

But the President Would Rather They Accepted the Platt Amendment.

Washington, April 12. — Information was received at the war department to the effect that the Cuban constitutional convention is contemplating sending a committee here to consult the president and secretary of war regarding the Platt amendment and the relations of the United States with Cuba. While it is known that the administration would much prefer to have the constitutional convention accept the Platt amendment instead of sending such a commission, it would rather the commission would visit this country and discuss the subject than that the Platt legislation should be rejected. Flat rejection would leave matters in a strained condition. The commission will visit this country upon its own responsibility, as an invitation to come might imply a disposition on the part of this government to make concessions. It has been suggested that some of the most radical opponents of United States control be members of the commission in order that they might ascertain definitely what the situation is in the United States.

ARMY TRANSPORT SUNK.

Catches Fire and So Much Water Is Pumped Into Her That She Sank.

New York, April 12. — The United States army transport Rawlins, which was to have sailed yesterday afternoon for Havana, Matanzas and Cienfuegos, is lying with her saloon deck awash in thirty feet of water to the south of the army pier at the foot of Pacific street, Brooklyn. Fire was discovered aft of the Rawlins' main engine room yesterday morning. Two alarms brought to the pier six engines, two trucks and three fire boats, and in a short time thousands of gallons of water had been pumped into the transport's hold, so that she keeled over and with water rushing in through her open ports settled slowly until her keel touched bottom. Four men were overcome by smoke. The property loss will not exceed $50,000. It will cost perhaps $20,000 more to pump her out and raise her. The Rawlins was being loaded with miscellaneous cargo consisting for the most part of horse feed for army use. She was also to carry a quantity of mixed supplies which had been piled on the piers for loading. Apparently the blaze had been smouldering all night long.

ROBBED BY MASKED MEN.

Inmates of a House Bound and Robbers Get Away With $500.

Oil City, Pa., April 12.—Early yesterday five masked men drove to the residence of J. D. Harris, a wealthy business man near Sugar Run, a hamlet in Warren county. The men forced an entrance and bound and gagged the inmates of the house, consisting of Harris, his wife and an Indian servant. The robbers then forced open a safe and secured $500 in cash, two watches and some jewelry. After looking over some papers and ransacking the room, searching for more money, the robbers securely fastened their bound victims and escaped. After an hour's hard work Harris succeeded in liberating himself and the others and gave the alarm. No arrests have been made yet.

POISON AND BULLETS.

Rum and Cigarettes Cause a Man to Destroy Himself.

Indianapolis, April 12.—W. B. Carrow, a traveling representative for Bell & Co., manufacturing chemists of New York city, committed suicide at the Stubbins hotel in South Illinois street some time Tuesday. His body was found lying on a bed yesterday and everything indicated that he died from the effects of poison and bullets. A note on the dresser read: "I go to seek the hereafter. Tell Carrie Nation that rum and cigarettes are a damnation. Wire T. L. Carrow, 1145 South Broad street, New York, and if he refuses, the potters field is good enough for me."

Dead in a Bath Room.

New York, April 12.—Edward Stevens, forty-seven years old, was found dead in a bath room at the Hotel Dore on Twenty-eighth street yesterday afternoon. He was a graduate of West Point and served for several years under Gen. Miles on the Western frontier, rising to the rank of captain in the regular army. About fifteen years ago he resigned to go into the real estate and insurance business with his father in this city. He had been suffering from heart ttrouble and it is supposed that this was the cause of his death.

To Remove the Maine.

Havana, April 12.—M. T. Chamberlain of Chicago secured the contract to remove the wreck of the United States battleship Maine, agreeing to give the government 3 per cent of the sales of the material. The time for carrying out the contract will be extended to March 1, 1902, if sufficient reason is shown for an extension. The government insists upon a bond of $25,000 before the work of removal begins. This question has not yet been settled.

Exposition Bonds.

Buffalo, N. Y., April 12. — The full amount and more of $100,000 issue of second mortgage Pan-American bonds (exposition) recently authorized by the legislature has been underwritten. Subscriptions were first called for Saturday and yesterday it was announced that they amounted to $510,600.

Booth's Birthday.

London, April 12—Gen. William Booth of the Salvation Army is celebrating his seventy-second birthday by attending a series of meetings at which he is receiving the congratulations of "the force." Telegrams from all parts of the world are coming in. The general is in good health.

Two Burned to Death.

Vancouver, B. C., April 12. — The Royal City, a small steamer plying on the Frazer, was burned at the wharf at Mission Junction, B. C. Two of the crew were burned to death. The value of the steamer was $15,000.

Fire at Baltic Mine.

Houghton, Mich., April 12.—The engine house at No. 3 shaft burned. The hoisting and air compressing machinery was only slightly injured. The principal loss will come through a reduction in the output.

Peculiar Fishing

PEARL FISHERS OF THE FRESH WATERS.

Not all pearl fishers dive into the sea. In fact, some of them have never been so far out to sea as Sandy Hook. These peculiar pearl fishers confine their operations principally to the fresh waters in the neighborhood of New York. But they make it pay them well, and the only fear they have is that others will take up the same industry and reduce their profits. This fear is well-grounded, for the pearls are secured in ponds and brooks within twenty-five miles of the city, and there is a steady demand here for them. Rockland county, New York, and Bergen county, New Jersey, afford a large field of operations for the pearl fisher. These counties adjoin, and through both runs the humble and prosaic Hackensac creek. From this insignificant stream two men, working as partners, fished out $1,500 worth of pearls last summe.r. The greater number of these were sold to New York jewelers, and the prices paid for them ranged from $2 to $35 each. The average price was $5. The best pearl of the season, and the only one that brought $35, was found at Eastwood, N. J., in a small body of water known as Collignon's pond. The pond had been drained, and one of the pearl fishers heard of it. He went over there, walked to the bank, and before him lay the pearl. Within a few minutes he gathered several other pearls, and none of them brought him less than $5. A certain pair of fishers live in the lower part of Rockland county, and their names are withheld because they do not desire publicity. They usually get pearls out of mussels found along the banks of creeks or ponds. When they find the pearls out on the banks it is because the mussels have become tired of carrying so much valuable property around with them, and have thrown them away. Ordinarily the men have to do some hard raking and clawing to get what they are after. Attired similar to a trout fisherman, the pearl fishers, having previously located a bed of mussels, either rake or pick the mussels out. It all depends on the depth of the water. The men seize the mussels and break them open, for the mussel is a wise fish, and keeps his mouth shut after he has had to leave his happy home. If he has no pearl in him the mussel is thrown out, and if he has a pearl for his captor, the pearl is removed and he is thrown away, anyhow. Often the men get into a big bed of mussels where there are no pearls at all. They clawed into one bed last summer during a hot spell, and when they had pulled open 30,000 mussels they gave up in despair. Chancing to go by the same spot a week later one of the men thought he would pick up one of the mussels for fun. It had a $7 pearl in it. The fishers have secured the largest number of pearls in the Hackensack creek, north and south of Orangeburg. It was in that vicinity that they dug out $1,500 worth of pearls during last season. They tell many queer things about mussels, which they have learned in the four or five years they have been following the industry. One of the queer things they say mussels will do is to run away and hide if they get a chance. The men have more than once disturbed a bed of mussels late in the afternoon, only to find when they returned early the following morning, that the musels had shifted to parts unknown. In such an event the fishers wait for a couple of weeks, and then they are apt to find the mussels all back again in their proper places. The pearl fishing lasts throughout the warm weather, and if it is not good in one place it is in another. It is a comparatively new industry and is not growing rapidly, because pearl fishers keep very quiet about their business. Nor is it confined to any one locality. The men referred to make trips on the Columbus river, in Ohio, for pearls. They procure a camping outfit and a boat at Columbus and cruise around on the river for weeks at a time. There are not so many pearls out that way as in the Hackensack creek, but they are finer and bring higher prices. They have secured pearls on the Columbus river that were worth $100. But the finest of the fresh-water pearls found in this country come from Tennessee. The Tennessee pearls are particularly fine specimens, and for some of them $500 has been paid.—Exchange.

The Twinkling of the Eye.

When we speak of a thing happening in the twinkling of an eye, we mean to convey that the action was practically instantaneous. That this is not the case has recently been demonstrated by a capable investigator. He used a specially arranged photographic apparatus, and affixed a piece of white paper to the edge of the eyelid for a mark. He found that the lid descends quickly, and rests a little at the bottom of its movement, after which it rises, but more slowly than it fell. The average duration of the downward movement was from seventy-five to ninety-one thousandths of a second; the rest with eye shut lasted variously, the shortest durations being fifteen hundredths of a second with one subject and seventeen hundredths with another; and the third phase of the wink, the rising of the lid, took seventeen hundredths of a second more making the entire duration of the wink about forty hundredths, or four-tenths of a second.

SWINGING ROUND the CIRCLE

A Business and Pleasure Trip for the President and Cabinet

Safely re-elected and inaugurated the president will shortly start to "swing around the circle." Accompanied by the members of his cabinet and a considerable office force, he will start west over the southern route, touching the Gulf of Mexico and reaching the Pacific coast at southern California. Up along the coast line the journey continues to Puget Sound, and then eastward through Idaho, Utah, Colorado and Kansas. Turning northward again the party will reach the great lakes at Duluth and journey eastward to Buffalo, reaching there some time after the Pan-American Exposition is opened. It will be in many ways a remarkable journey. The president and his party will visit about half the states in the Union before he returns to the capital. Though on what is ostensibly a pleasure trip, the president will be a busy man. As stated, the members of his cabinet will accompany him and also a force of clerks to transact routine business. The itinerary for the trip has been so carefully arranged that the officials remaining on duty in Washington will be able to communicate directly with the president at almost any hour. Cabinet meetings will be held as they are in Washington. Routine matters will be left with the subordinates at the capital, but all matters of importance will be referred to the traveling capital, as the special train will practically be. It is only within the past few years, and only by reason of American inventions, that such a trip is possible. Thousands of miles from Washington, McKinley will be almost as much in touch with the business of the nation as though he were in Washington. And but very few rulers can get so far away from their capitals without going outside the limits of their territory.

THE KAISER'S TALISMAN.

In the personality of the kaiser there is a strain of superstition. Military precisian and disciplinarian as he is, he is at the same time a believer in omens and in certain talismanic virtues. On the middle finger of his left hand the German emperor always wears a large ring—a square, dark-colored stone set in massive gold. The ring is an heirloom of the Hohenzollern family, dating from the time when the ancestors of the kaiser—the Margraves of Nuremburg—followed their leaders to the capture of the holy city from the Moslems. The ring came into the Margrave Ulrich's possession after a hard-fought battle under the walls of Jerusalem. It belonged to one of Saladin's successors, and, in some unexplained way, came to be owned by the German knight. The ring is a prized possession of the kaiser, who regards the relic with a greater interest than that which pertains to its mere monetary value.

Looked Like Advance Agents.

Lord Minto, governor general of Canada, attended the presidential inauguration in Washington, and while there presented Ambassador Pauncefote with an overcoat lined with the most costly of Canadian furs. Secretary Hay has a similar garment, and the two diplomats met the other day, each wrapped in his splendid coat. A profane observer remarked that they looked like advance agents of rival minstrel shows.

Convict Literature.

One of the curiosities of journalism is a weekly newspaper run by convicts for convicts, writes an Australian correspondent. This unique publication circulates among the unfortunate residents in the French penal settlement at New Caledonia, in the South Pacific. Its editor was formerly responsible for a Parisian review, but is now undergoing ten years' "hard" for a serious misdemeanor. In consideration of his good conduct in the island various privileges have been extended toward him, among them being that of running a newspaper. Fiction and poetry are the chief features of the weekly, which is extremely popular with the convicts.

His Leg Cut Off Six Times.

Mr. Edward Conrad, a railroad gateman of Allegheny, Pa., suffered an injury some years ago which made it necessary to amputate one of his legs. Since then he has had five accidents, in each of which his artificial leg was cut off.

GUILTY BANKERS DIE

FEARING DISGRACE THEY TAKE THEIR OWN LIVES.

President and Cashier of the First National Bank of Vancouver Use the Same Weapon Upon Themselves—Bank Examiner Found a Shortage of $81,000, and Both Men Admitted Their Guilt—Their Bodies Found Together in a Clump of Trees — Speculation in Stocks at the Bottom of It.

Vancouver, Wash., April 22.—Charles Brown and E. L. Canby, president and cashier respectively of the First National Bank of Vancouver, which was closed Saturday by the controller of the currency, committed suicide Saturday night two miles from this city by shooting themselves with a revolver. Their bodies were found yesterday morning lying together in a small clump of bushes about one-half mile north of the Columbia school, which is situated on the outskirth of the town. They both used the same weapon, and Canby evidently died first as the revolver was found in Brown's hand. It is evident that Canby put the muzzle of the revolver in his mouth and the top of his head was blown off. Brown then took it and shot himself exactly the same way, falling over Canby's body.

The fact that Brown's bicycle and an umbrella belonging to Canby were found a short distance out of town Saturday night led to the belief that the two bank officials had taken their lives. Early yesterday morning a searching party started out and after severel hours' hunt the bodies were found in the clump of bushes.

Friday evening Canby, upon being told by Bank Examiner J. W. Maxwell that the bank would not be permitted to open Saturday, went out in the yard behind the bank and attempted to shoot himself. His revolver failed to explode, although all five chambers were loaded. After failing to shoot himself Canby came back into the bank and he and President Brown left together later, taking his revolver. When Examiner Maxwell confronted the bank officials with the shortage of $81,000 which he had discovered, both men admitted their guilt. It is said that both Brown and Canby had been speculating in stocks. Beside Brown's body there was found a package containing $25 and a note saying that the money belonged to his daughter. Upon Canby's body the following brief note was found:

"My Dear Wife: I feel what I am about to do is for the [illegible]. Forgive me if you can and try to live for our dear children. God bless you all. Good-bye. —"Ned. April 19."

BEATS RECORD.

J. J. Hill's Special Train Goes 1,823 Miles in 45 Hours and 50 Minutes.

St. Paul, April 23.—resident Hill and party arrived in St. Paul Saturday at 12:54 o'clock p. m., after a record-breaking run from Seattle. The distance of 1,823 miles was made in 45 hours and 50 minutes, which, it is claimed, is the fastest time ever made anywhere in the world, for that distance. This run, including stops and necessary delays, makes a speed of 39 7-9 miles per hour for the whole distance. By bursts of speed the train also made a record, covering a large run in Montana at the rate of 84 miles per hour. The round trip from St. Paul to Seattle was made in five days. The party consisted of A. N. French, New York; James Tuck, Paris; James J. Hill and Gairus Mailler. President Hill refused to be interviewed by reporters, but it is understood that he will speed at once to New York, where there are some important matters to be taken up which was the cause of the great speed with which the train was sent over the rails.

THREE PERISH IN THE FLAMES.

Sad Fate of a Widow and Her Two Children.

Galesburg, N. D., April 23. — Two miles west of here the home of Mrs. Hannah Kjoren, widow, was burned. The only inhabitants of the house—herself and two boys, aged six and ten, were burned to death. The woman's body was found with its flesh nearly all burned off, clasping the young boy in her arms. The body of the oldest boy was almost incinerated.

Charged With Murder.

Sioux City, Iowa, April 23. — Henry Steffen and William Beaver are in jail at Le Mars, Iowa, charged with murder, and Peter Peterson is also under arrest, charged with being accessory to the crime. John Jensen was shot and killed at Steffen's farm, about eight miles from Le Mars. The men under arrest claim self-defense. Jessen and his wife kept house for Steffen, and Beaver is a hired man. Jessen came home drunk and abused his wife. The other men interfered, and two shotguns were used in the melee. Steffen admith that he fired the fatal shot.

Stolen or Lost in Transit.

Sioux Falls, S. D., April 23.—During the past few weeks considerable grain shipped from Flandrau has been stolen or lost in transit. One firm lost 10,000 pounds of wheat from one car, while another firm lost 11,000 pounds of barley from two cars. It is believed that thieves raid the cars while temporarily in railroad yards after leaving Flandrau. Litigation will probably result to determine whether the shippers or the commission firms to which the grain was consigned shall bear the loss.

CAPT. RIPLEY ACQUITTED.

Jury in Kentucky Finds Him Not Guilty of Conspiracy to Kill William Goebel.

Frankfort, Ky., April 24.—The jury in the case of Capt. Garnett Ripley, charged with being in a conspiracy which resulted in the assassination of William Goebel, returned a verdict of not guilty after being out only a short time. The jury was composed exclusively of Democrats. The matter of a requisition for the return of ex-Gov. W. S. Taylor from Indiana for trial is again a theme of popular speculation, but Commonwealth's Attorney Franklin refuses to discuss it, and up to the present writing no application for extradition papers has been filed.

KING VICTOR AS AN AUTHOR.

Italy's Ruler Completes First Volume of His History of His Country's Coinage.

Rome, April 23. — King Victor Emmanuel has just completed the first volume of his history of Italian coins and medals, upon which he has been engaged for a long time. The book contains no fewer than 12,000 illustrations, and it is estimated it will cost $100,000. It will be published about the end of September.

MAD MULLAH OUT WITH ARMY.

Is Said to Be at Lassidar, Down the Hugdayr River, With Forty Thousand Men and Arms.

Aden, April 23.—The Mad Mullah is now at Lassidar, four days' march down the Tugdayr river. It is understood he has 40,000 followers, including 8,000 horsemen and quantities of ammunition obtained from an unknown source. A British force will shortly be concentrated at Burno, preparatory to a general advance in conjugation with the Abyssinians.

NEW RAILROAD RUMOR.

Hill May Extend His Interests to Southern California.

Salt Lakt, Utah, April 23.—The Tribune says that the present activity in railroad building in Southwestern Utah and Southeastern Nevada by interests representing Senator William A. Clark of Montana and the pushing of the Burlington surveyors toward Salt Lake involve the practical co-operation of Senator Clark and President Hill of the Great Northern system in a scheme to extend President Hill's great interests to the Pacific coast in Southern California, thus introducing a formidable rival to the Harriman interests in that region.

TELEPHONE COMBINE.

All the Companies in the Country Said to Be in It.

San Francisco, April 22. — News has been received here of a big combination of all the telephone interests of the United States, with John I. Sabin, president and manager of Pacific States Telephone company, with headquarters in this city, as president at a salary of $35,000 a year. The presidency and management of the Pacific States Telephone company will be retained by Sabin, who will reside in the East for a period, until he has placed the systems there upon a basis comparable to that of San Francisco.

NEW BRITISH LOAN.

Half the Amount Has Already Been Subscribed.

New York, April 23.—The prospectus of the £60,000,000 British loan was issued Saturday from the office of J. P. Morgan & Co., who announce that their firm, Baring, McGoun & Co. of this city, Drexel & Co. of Philadelphia and Kidder, Peabody & Co. of Boston are authorized to forward applications for allotments of the loan to the Bank of England. The bank announces that £30,000,000 has already been subscribed for.

Attempted Poisoning.

Denver, April 23. — An attempt was made to poison Joseph Haennelt, a prisoner in the county jail, charged with having assisted in robbing Mrs. Flora Betts of $7,000 worth of diamonds in August last while driving with her. An apple pie and some cheese were left at the jail for Haennelt by an old man who is unknown. After nibbling at the cheese the prisoner became sick. An emetic was administered which saved his life. An examination disclosed that the pie and cheese contained a great quantity of arsenic and other poisons.

Killed by an Explosion.

Pittsburg, April 23. — As a result of the explosion of a water heater in the Hotel Anderson yesterday John Brown, the engineer, was killed and Abner Moore, a machinist, was so badly scalded that he will probably die in a few hours. No cause is known unless it is that the sewers in the vicinity were so clogged by the flood that the pipe through which the surplus from the heater should have flowed into the sewer prevented the usual operation and the extreme pressure caused the accident.

Heavy Damage by Fire.

Reno, Nev., April 23.—The hotel and bath house at the historic Steamboat Springs, which in the palmy days of the Comstock mines was a watering place where more money was squandered in a night than at most any other resort on the coast, have been destroyed by fire. The loss is heavy, and it is said no insurance was carried.

To Bury the Past.

Vienna, April 23.—The Official Remdenblatt says the friendly approachment between Austria and Mexico in consequence of the erection of the expiatory chapel at Iquero Taro, where Emperor Maxmilian was executed, will result in an early resumption of diplomatic relations, interrupted since 1867, the year the emperor was shot.

AGGIE IS FOR PEACE

CALLS UPON HIS COUNTRYMEN TO GIVE UP THE STRUGGLE.

Issues a Manifesto Saying That a Termination of Hostilities Is Not Only Desirable but Essential to the Welfare of the Philippines—Acknowledges and Accepts the Sovereignty of the United States Without Reservation — Filipinos Will Find Protection and Liberty Under the American Flag.

Manila, April 21.—The following is Aguinaldo's address to the Filipino people, made public last evening:

"I believe I am not in error in presuming that the unhappy fate to which my adverse fortune has led me is not a surprise to those who have been familiar with the progress of the war. The lessons taught with a full meaning and which have recently come to my knowledge, suggest with irresistible force that a complete termination of hostilities and lasting peace are not only desirable, but absolutely essential to the welfare of the Philippine islands. The Filipinos have never been dismayed at their weakness, nor have they faltered in following the path pointed out by their fortitude and courage.

The Time Has Come,

however, in which they find their advance along this path to be impeded by an irresistible force, which, while it restrains them, yet enlightens their minds and opens to them another course, presenting them the course of peace. This course has been joyfully embraced by the majority of my fellow countrymen, who have already united around the glorious sovereign banner of the United States. In this banner they repose their trust and in its protection the Filipino people will continue in those liberties which they are beginning to enjoy. They are unmistakably in favor of peace. So be it. There has been enough blood, enough tears and enough desolation. This wish cannot be ignored by the men still in arms if they are animated by a desire to serve our noble population which has thus clearly manifested its will. So do

I Respect This Will,

now that it is known to me. After mature deliberation I resolutely proclaim to the world that I cannot refuse to heed the voice of a people longing for peace, nor the lamentations of thousands of families yearning to see their dear ones enjoy the liberty and the promised generosity of the great American nation. By acknowledging and accepting the sovereignty of the United States throughout the Philippine archipelago, as I now do, and without any reservation whatsoever, I believe that I am serving thee, my beloved country. May happiness be thine."

To signalize this important step in the pacification of the country, Gen. MacArthur orders the release, on swearing allegiance to the United States, of one thousand insurgent prisoners.

Will Have Good Effect.

Washington, April 21.—It is believed by the administration that the manifesto of Aguinaldo will have a decidedly good effect both in the Philippines and in this country. It will take some time for its dissemination among the Filipinos, but it is expected to be of considerable service and to make more rapid the improvement in the situation which set in some time ago and has become quite marked of late. Especial gratification is felt at the unreserved tone of the document and the full acceptance it indicates of American rule.

WITHOUT AN OFFICER.

An Old Man Returns to Prison to Serve Life Sentence.

Metropolis, Ill., April 21.—An unusual thing happened here yesterday in the return of John Lemley to the Southern Illinois penitentiary to complete a ninety-nine-year sentence for murder, wholly unaccompanied by an officer. Lemley, who is past eighty, has been here since November on a writ of habeas corpus, waiting the action of the court. When the order that he must return was issued he requested that he be allowed to go alone, and Sheriff Evers, who had the utmost confidence in him, granted the request.

MAY END WAR.

Renewal of Peace Negotiations Between Kitchener and Botha.

London, April 21.—The Sun, confirming the report that the peace negotiations between Lord Kitchener and the Boer generals have been renewed, suggests that something is likely to be effected during Sir Alfred Milner's absence. The paper also says the government is divided as to who will fill Sir Alfred Milner's place. Mrs. Botha is again acting as a go-between.

LIKE AN EARTHQUAKE.

About 70,000 Tons of Rock Moved by One Blast.

Vancouver, B. C., April 21.—Australian advices report that in the New Deviation works, Tarana, 79,000 tons of rock were moved with one blast. Gentnite was combined with dynamite and powder, the total weight of the explosives being over four tons.

BULL FIGHTS AT OMAHA.

Attractions at a Street Fair to Be Held Next July.

Omaha, April 21—At a meeting of the Commercial Club of South Omaha and a committee of citizens, it was decided to hold a street fair from July 2 to July 13. It is proposed to have one or more bull fights as attractions.

COMPETITION FOR STEEL TRUST.

Company Formed to Construct Immense Steel Mills at the Soo.

Detroit, Mich., April 21.—After an all-day conference with contractors at the Russell house here, A. R. Hervey, president of the Commercial Development Corporation Company of Liverpool, London and New York, a deal was closed yesterday which will result in the formation of the International Steel, Iron and Pipe company, which will locate immense steel mills at Sault Ste. Marie, on both the Canadian and United States sides of the Soo canal, with a capacity of 600,000 tons annually and employing 10,000 men. The Consolidated Lake Superior Power company, of which Mr. Clergue is vice president, it is understood, will take a large block of the $30,000,000 stock of the new company. As an outcome of the establishment of the steel works at the Soo it is said that a blast furnace will be established in Detroit with a capacity of 1,000 tons of pig iron per day, employing 1,000 men. It was intimated by those interested that the new company would be an active competitor of the recently formed steel combine in the United States.

THREATENED WITH DESTRUCTION.

Hamlet in Pennsylvania in Danger From a Landslide.

Pittsburg, April 21.—Newton, a mining hamlet containing 100 houses near Turtle Creek, Pa., inhabited largely by foreigners and negroes, is threatened with destruction by a landslide. The town is located on the brow of a steep hill overhanging the Pittsburg & Cleveland Gas Coal company's railroad. The rains of Thursday night and yesterday have weakened the treacherous soil under the houses and as there is no rock foundation under them they are liable to go down at any time.

FAKE SUSPECTED.

Two Hundred Deaths From Exposure and Freezing in Alaska.

Seattle, Wash., April 21.—The Skagway News of April 13, which arrived yesterday, contained dispatches from Dawson of that date. The most important says: "Two men, names unknown, who arrived yesterday from Nome bring sensational reports of wholesale deaths by freezing along the coast. They report that 200 persons had died from exposure or freezing before the middle of January at various points up and down the coast. Their stories are not credited."

UNEARTHED A TREASURE.

Old Spanish Coin and Bullion Dug Up by Workmen in Mexico.

El Paso, Tex., April 21.—One of the largest treasure finds ever made in Mexico was made yesterday when workmen unearthed $12,000 in old Spanish coins and silver bullion, weighing out over $100,000. The coin was dated 1808, and was found with the silver bullion at the bottom of an old well. The discovery was made by a workman excavating for a building being put up at Guadalajara by the Standard Oil company.

DEMANDS GRANTED.

Chicago Great Western Adjusts Differences With Its Machinists.

Chicago, April 21. — The Chicago Great Western has conceded all the demands made by the International Machinists' association, thus ending any possibility of a strike. The demands included a nine-hour work day, a minimum wage scale of 29 cents an hour and several concessions in connection with apprentice regulations. Under the old system the minimum scale varied from 26 to 27 cents.

TROUBLE IN CHEKIANG.

Chinese Angered by the Suspension of Literary Examinations.

London, April 21.—A dispatch to the Standard from Shanghai says that trouble is reported in the Province of Chekiang in connection with the suspension of the literary examinations. Threats have been made to burn the official yamuns and to expel the mandarins. The movement will probably spread. The students deny that they are responsible for the trouble.

ROTHSCHILDS WILL DISSOLVE.

Change Is Expected in the Famous Banking Firm.

Frankfort-on-Main, April 21. — It is announced here that the original Rothschild banking firm of this city will be dissolved. Ever since the death of Baron Wilhelm von Rothschild in January there have been rumors of changes in this old established institution.

Gift to College.

Chicago, April 21.—Students of Rush Medical college hereafter will do their first two years' work at the University of Chicago. President Harper has just received a gift of a large sum of money with which to provide the additional facilities needed to accommodate the 300 students who will be transferred in a body by the new arrangement.

Good Will Not an Asset.

Chicago, April 21.—Good will as an asset for a partner in a board of trade commission firm was decided to be of no value in an opinion handed down by the Illinois supreme court in a case in which the estate of Daniel B. Butters tried to recover from F. G. Logan & Co. $60,000 as the defendant's share in the value of the firm name.

Disabled Steamer.

London, April 21—The disabled Hamburg-American line steamer Bulgaria, from New York, April 6, for Hamburg, which was reported having lost her starboard propeller and fractured the shaft on April 12 at sea, passed Prawle Point in the English channel, slowly proceeding under her port propeller to her destination.

MEETS WITH FAVOR

AMERICA'S ADVICE REGARDING EVACUATION OF CHINA.

Foreign Powers Give Evidence of a Distinct Veering Around to the Advice of the Washington Government That the Powers Clear Out of China as Soon as Possible —Threatened Battle Is Avoided by the Chinese Withdrawing From the Threatening Positions.

Paris, April 21. — The French foreign office declares that the Franco-German expedition to the borders of the province of Chili, China, has been abandoned owing to the fact that Li Hung Chang has assured the ministers that the emperor has ordered the Chinese generals to withdraw from the threatening positions they held. It is also stated that it has been decided that the foreign contingents to remain shall consist of 2,000 troops to each nation. This number will be further reduced when the forts have been razed and the road from Pekin to Taku thoroughly safeguarded.

After inquiries in diplomatic circles your correspondent is convinced that there is a distinct veering noticeable in favor of following the advice of the government at Washington—that is, for the powers to clear out of China as soon as possible.

The foreign office states that Dr. Mumm von Schwartzenstein, the German minister at Pekin, has made some reservations in regard to the proposals of his colleagues for the reduction of the effective fighting force to be maintained in the country.

M. Pichon, the French minister at Pekin, has induced his fellow members of the diplomatic corps to agree to a proposition that the provisional government at Tien-tsin shall be handed over to native authorities before the evacuation of the place by the allies.

May Build to Aberdeen.

Aberdeen, S. D., April 21. — There seems to be no further doubt that the Soo line fully intends to build into Aberdeen this summer. Private advices are to the effect that the surveyors have laid out the "Y" track connecting the grade toward Aberdeen with the line now operated from Oakes nearly to Bismarck. The grade is being levelled up and it is a well assured fact that the ties and iron have been already ordered with which to close the gap between this city and Bismarck. There is every assurance that the Soo line trains will soon be running into Aberdeen.

Preparing to Celebrate.

West Superior, Wis., April 21.—The members of old Company I, who served in the Spanish-American war, are preparing for one of the biggest blow-outs they ever had, to celebrate their leaving the city for the South in 1898. The boys left on April 28, 1898, and hold a banquet each year. This will be the biggest of them all. Letters are expected from several who are now in the Philippines, among them being Capt. Newton, who took part in the capture of Aguinaldo, the former and much respected commander of Company I.

Chance for Jeffries and Ruhlin.

Cleveland, Ohio, April 21.—The Leader says that Billy Madden has accepted the offer of Representative Groom of the National Sporting Club of San Francisco of 65 per cent and $500 for training expenses to secure a match between Gus Ruhlin and James J. Jeffries. It now depends on Jeffries whether or not these two boxers meet in a contest. The same proposition made to Madden has been submitted to Jeffries' manager. The proposed contest will probably occur in July in San Francisco.

Sawmills Begin Operating.

Washburn, Wis., April 21. — The Akeley & Sprague saw mill started its season's run yesterday. The John A. Jacobs mill has been in operation for three weeks, and the A. A. Bigelow company and Thompson Lumber company will begin sawing next Monday. The output of the mills this season will likely be about 200,000,000 feet. The outlook for a good season in the lumbering industry is very bright.

Dead in New York.

New York, April 21.—George Coppell, senior partner of the firm of Maitland, Coppell & Co., president of the Wisconsin Central, and a financier prominent in many railroads and other corporations, is dead at his home in this city. He was fifty-four years old.

Religious Riots.

Rio de Janeiro, April 21.—Serious religious riots have occurred at Nichteroy as a result of an evangelical campaign against the Catholics, and of violent demonstrations consequent upon the presentation of the Spanish drama "Electra."

Gives Up Cool Job.

New York, April 21.—It is reported that Charles W. Moore has resigned as president of the American Ice company, and that sweeping changes in the management of that concern will be effected.

Buried by a Cave-In.

Guthrie, Okla., April 21.—While playing in a sand bank near Durant, Ind. T., five boys were buried in a cave-in. Four of them are dead. The other one worked his way out.

Corn Salve Causes Death.

Marshalltown, Iowa, April 21.—E. J. Couer used a box of corn salve and is now in his grave. The sore produced caused such pain that the patient was taken with lockjaw.

ARREST OF OUTLAWS REPORTED.

Majority of Reynolds Band Said to Have Surrendered.

Middlesboro, Ky., April 23.—A report has reached here that a majority of the Reynolds band of feudalists intrenched on Boone's Fork, in the vicinity of Whitesburg, Letcher county, defying arrest, have surrendered. The outlaws held out until a small-sized army under Officer Wright, the Fleming boys, and others, was sent against them. Then they threw down their arms. A man named Mullins and one or two others are said to have escaped. The outlaws were supplied with up-to-date rifles and ammunition.

FATAL ACCIDENT IN A TUNNEL.

One Man Suffocated and Twelve Others Are Overcome.

Wellington, Wash., April 23.—J. M. McDonald was suffocated to death and twelve others overcome by smoke and gas in the Great Northern Cascade Tunnel. The men belonged to a section gang working in the tunnel, and were found about midway by a track-walker an hour after a freight train had passed through. McDonald was lying in a pool of water. The other men recovered after being brought out on a special engine sent to rescue them. This is the third fatal accident in the tunnel.

THIEF RIVER FALLS NEWS

By John W. Eastman.

THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN

The Cape to Cairo railway is at present being extended from Buluwayo to Wanki, a place about 200 miles further north, where a great coal discovery has just been made. It has also been found that the Zambesi can be much more easily crossed at this point than at the point originally selected.

When a popular young author came to see William M. Evarts, while he was secretary of state, in behalf of a consulship for which he was an applicant Mr. Evarts congratulated him on the fame which he had acquired, but hastened to add: "Although you have laurels on your brows, I suppose you can't browse on your laurels."

Baron Wilhelm von Rothschild, who recently died at Frankfort, was one of the few rich men who make it a rule of their lives to give away one-tenth of their income in charity. He was not only a religious observer in all respects of the ancient Mosaic law, but he was a profound Talmudic scholar, having devoted a great part of his time to careful and systematic studies of the Talmud.

A queer instance of improper influence said to have been exerted upon a juryman comes from New Haven. The jury in a certain civil case went to Fairhaven to visit the house of the defendants. There, according to the counsel for the plaintiff, one of the parties to the suit gave one of the jurors a piece of pie. This piece of pie is the ground upon which a motion to set aside the verdict is founded.

There was a substantial increase in the traffic through the Suez canal in 1899. Three thousand five hundred and three vessels passed through the canal in 1898; in 1899 the number was increased to 3,607, representing an increase of 104 vessels and a gain of 557,017 tons. The average time consumed in passing through the canal in 1899 was eighteen hours and thirty-eight minutes, about half an hour longer than was necessary during the previous year.

Kansas City, Mo., is claiming to be a great fruit distributing point, and in proof of the same "points with pride" to these two consignments: In one day 1,000,000 bananas were received from the tropics and on March 4 2,000,000 oranges came in, the shipment being made from Los Angeles, Cal. This orange train was composed of twenty-eight cars and a caboose. There were 364 boxes of oranges to the car, making 10,192 boxes in all.

Off Cerigo, the island at the southern end of Greece, divers are bringing up art treasures that were sunk 200 years before Christ. Lucian tells of a ship laden with art spoils that went down on the voyage from Athens to Rome, and it is believed that the wreck has been found now. Besides many bronze statuettes a life-size bronze statue resembling the Hermes of Praxiteles, has been brought up. Some objects are excellently preserved, but others are corroded.

Three children, a boy and two girls, brother and sisters, have had a terrible avalanche experience at Ornon. The children, neither of whom was more than 10, were overwhelmed, and the brother was carried over a precipice 300 feet high and buried under tons of snow, ice and rocks, his body not yet having been recovered. One of the girls was thrown into a shallow crevasse, whence she managed to extricate herself. The other girl caught at a tree as she was falling and managed to hold on to it. For half an hour she clung to the branches, with a drop of 300 feet below, until her sister succeeded in obtaining assistance. When she was ultimately rescued by a man who was lowered over the precipice by a rope, she was in an exhausted condition, and collapsed on being brought to solid ground.

The insurance companies have come to a new decision with regard to the granting of policies to the crowned heads of Europe since the death of King Humbert. They are willing to insure them against all risks, save that of assassination, at a slightly higher rate than that exacted from ordinary individuals. This higher rate is presumably demanded in view of the fact that royal blood is supposed to be vitiated and impoverished. Kinng Milan, about four months ago, endeavored to insure his life. But although he was a mere ex-king, the companies to which he applied would only consent to give him a policy with the special assassination clause, which he declined, and his son, the present king, when he attempted a short time ago to insure his life in favor of Queen Draga, failed to come to any understanding with the company, owing to the same stipulation.

By the will of the late Franklin H. Bishop of Russell, Mass., the State of Massachusetts is made his residuary legatee. The will reads: "As I have no relatives on whom I care to bestow my goods and estates, after the payment of my just debts and funeral expenses I give all the residue of my estate to the Commonwealth of Massachusetts to its sole use and behoof forever." The executor says that when the estate is settled the Commonwealth will receive about $7,000. Mr. Bishop was a prominent citizen of Russell and an ardent admirer of his state.

COMPETITION FOR STEEL TRUST.

Company Formed to Construct Immense Steel Mills at the Soo.

Detroit, Mich., April 21.—After an all-day conference with contractors at the Russell house here, A. R. Hervey, president of the Commercial Development Corporation Company of Liverpool, London and New York, a deal was closed yesterday which will result in the formation of the International Steel, Iron and Pipe company, which will locate immense steel mills at Sault Ste. Marie, on both the Canadian and United States sides of the Soo canal, with a capacity of 600,000 tons annually and employing 10,000 men. The Consolidated Lake Superior Power company, of which Mr. Clergue is vice president, it is understood, will take a large block of the $50,000,000 stock of the new company. As an outcome of the establishment of the steel works at the Soo it is said that a blast furnace will be established in Detroit with a capacity of 1,000 tons of pig iron per day, employing 1,000 men. It was intimated by those interested that the new company would be an active competitor of the recently formed steel combine in the United States.

THREATENED WITH DESTRUCTION.

Hamlet in Pennsylvania in Danger From a Landslide.

Pittsburg, April 21.—Newton, a mining hamlet containing 100 houses near Turtle Creek, Pa., inhabited largely by foreigners and negroes, is threatened with destruction by a landslide. The town is located on the brow of a steep hill overhanging the Pittsburg & Cleveland Gas Coal company's railroad. The rains of Thursday night and yesterday have weakened the treacherous soil under the houses and as there is no rock foundation under them they are liable to go down at any time.

PALLIUM FOR KEANE.

Investment of the New Archbishop With the Insignia of Office.

Dubuque, Iowa, April 19. — In the presence of princes and high priests of his church, and before an audience that occupied every foot of space in St. Raphael's cathedral and overflowed into the surrounding streets, Archbishop John J. Keane was invested with the pallium, the insignia of the high position he occupies in the Roman Catholic church. The scene was one of great brilliancy and the ceremonies characteristic of that splendor and magnificence for which the Catholic church is noted. While the absence of Mgr. Martinelli was marked, it detracted none from the grandeur of the scene, which was far beyond that occasion of Sept. 17, 1893, when Mgr. Satolli, now a member of the sacred congregation, Rome, conferred the pallium upon the late Archbishop Hennessy in this same cathedral. Cardinal Gibbons was here yesterday as he was then; archbishops and bishops from all parts of the United States were here again and the number of priests present was fully double that on the other occasion. The attendance of laymen from abroad was very large, and but few states in the Union were unrepresented. It was a remarkable tribute to Archbishop Keane. Archbishop Ireland delivered the sermon.

INTERSTATE WARFARE ON.

Minnesota Farmers Crossing Into South Dakota Are Arrested.

Brown's Valley, Minn., April 19.—An interstate warfare growing out of smallpox conditions at Sisseton, S. D., is on at this point. More than one hundred cases of the disease exist at Sisseton, and Brown's Valley authorities forbid persons from there who have been exposed from entering this village. This enraged the Sisseton authorities, and under the pretense of having quarantined Roberts county they placed armed guards on the state line one-half mile from Brown's Valley, who forbid farmers from this side to come across. Many of the farmers have broken the guard line by running their horses, while some have been arrested, handcuffed and taken into Sisseton, fourteen miles distant. There is great excitement over the affair, and unless the state authorities of the two states take a hand and bring about an adjustment of the matter there will undoubtedly be serious trouble.

IOWA BANKER IN DISGRACE.

He Absconds, Leaving a Shortage and a Sick Wife.

Le Mars, Iowa, April 19. — The Le Mars National bank did not open yesterday morning. Thomas F. Ward, vice president and manager of the institution, is a self-confessed embezzler to an amount of from $25,000 to $30,000. He has also absconded. Ward departed Monday night and yesterday Cashier Frank Koob received a letter from Ward, beginning:

"Dear Frank: I leave to-night for God Almighty knows where. This board of trade business has ruined me. Save me from indictment if you can. I will pay back every cent I can."

Cashier Koob closed the doors, posting a notice that an examiner would be placed in charge.

A GRANDMOTHER SEEKS DIVORCE.

Over Seventy Years of Age She Asks a Separation.

La Crosse, Wis., April 19.—The novel spectacle of a divorce suit in which the principals are each over seventy years of age, is pending in circuit court here. Parties to the action are John Brophey and Honorah Brophey, a couple residing on a farm near Galesville, Trempealeau county. They have lived together for thirty-five years and have several children and grandchildren. Mrs. Brophey applies for the divorce on the grounds of cruel and inhuman treatment.

OLD DIGGINGS REVIVED.

Another Gold Rush in the Boundary District of British Columbia.

Vancouver, B. C., April 19.—Another gold rush is now causing some excitement in the boundary district of British Columbia. During the past few days Rock creek and its tributaries have attracted more placer gold hunters than can stake claims. In the early sixties the Rock creek placer diggings yielded large returns.

Bisanza Gets Eight Months.

Fergus Falls, Minn., April 19.—Judge Amidon sentenced Spiro Bisanza to eight months in jail in this city. Bisanza was convicted of concealing $10,000 worth of goods from his creditors, but the jury recommended mercy. The prisoner may have further difficulty on the expiration of his sentence, as there are proceedings pending against him on the charge of contempt of court.

Nothing for Unsecured Creditors.

Woonsocket, S. D., April 19. — Clarence H. Van Tassel had examination in bankruptcy. Some secured claims will get a dividend, but there will be nothing for the others. Mr. Van Tassel was at one time a deputy United States revenue collector for South Dakota.

Strict Smallpox Quarantine.

Milbank, S. D., April 19.—On account of the alarming increase of smallpox in Roberts county the Milbank board of health has ordered a strict quarantine against Sisseton, Peever, Goodwill and Sisseton agency.

CONSUL DAVIDSON'S RETURN.

Minnesotian Who Has Had an Interesting Career in Foreign Lands.

James W. Davidson, United States consul for Formosa and the Loochoo Islands, arrived at Carrington a few days ago from the Orient. The gentleman will be recalled as the Minnesotian who was an officer in the Peary Arctic expedition of 1893-4. On the return of the expedition he departed at once for Japan as war correspondent, to witness the struggle between Japan and China, then in progress.

Soon after his arrival in the Orient he went to Formosa, which promised to be the scene of much warfare. He followed the Chinese forces for three months, and was then attached to the victorious Japanese for two years, witnessing all the important engagements between the armies of the two countries.

Mr. Davidson made a hazardous trip on one occasion, through the heart of the rebel country, reaching the Japanese lines in time to bring their advance forces into the capital, thereby saving the city from complete destruction. For this service he was decorated by the emperor of Japan, receiving the order of the Rising Sun, a distinction few foreigners enjoy, which is a sufficient passport to admit Mr. Davidson into the highest society anywhere.

Our interests on the island of Formosa became of sufficient importance at this time to require a consulate, and the office of consul was tendered this young hero.

During the six years he has lived in Formosa he has devoted his spare time to literary work, and has written many valuable articles on topics of interest in connection with his work. He has written quite a lengthy article on "Camphor," which is one of the most valuable products of the island, and has written a large volume on Formosa, which he intends putting on the market in the near future, and which promises to be very interesting and instructive. He has prepared some maps, in which line he is an adept, and carries with him a store of relics which he has collected in his travels through different countries. Among them is a large painting of the ship Falcon, as she appeared in the Arctic seas surrounded by ice, and a copy of her log-book, which contains many off-hand sketches in pencil of scenes in the Far North.

In 1898 he was elected a Fellow of the American Geographical society and this year of the Royal Geographical society of Great Britain.

He is a brother of C. H. Davidson, Jr., president of the First National Bank of Carrington, and a son of C. H. Davidson, Sr., president of the Austin National Bank of Austin, Minn.

It is his intention to spend a few days in the Twin Cities, Austin, Chicago and Hot Springs, Ark., before returning to Formosa.

RURAL SCHOOL CONSOLIDATION.

Matter Attracting Considerable Attention in North Dakota.

The question of rural school consolidation is being vigorously agitated in this state just now. The matter has been under consideration in some form for some time, but in an open letter by Prof. Kennedy, of the state university, recently published, has attracted attention to the subject all over the state. The plan suggested is, in a general way, similar to that in operation with some measure of success in several of the older states. It is proposed to merge a number of organizations—by towns being considered the most satisfactory —and to erect, in the most central spot, a school house capable of accommodating all the pupils of the district. The pupils will be carried to and from the school house in conveyances provided for that purpose and operated under contract.

It is urged in favor of the plan that it would permit the carrying on of school work for ten months of the year, instead of from three to six months, which is the rule under the present system; that classification could be adopted, that the expense would be much lighter, and that school could be carried on in bad weather, whereas it cannot be done now.

On the other hand it is argued that the state is too sparsely populated to make such a plan a success, and that while it may prove useful in the older and more densely-settled states, it would be a failure here. Then there are those who dread the introduction of city methods into the country schools, as they believe that most of the city schools are suffering from over-grading and over classification, as it is, and that even the loose methods of the country schools are to be preferred to the artificial forcing which seems to be inseparable from the highly-organized schools of the large centers.

The discussion is becoming quite animated, and is watched with a good deal of interest. One of the champions of the change is Supt. Alexander of Pembina county. In his county experiments are to be made in the near future, and also in Traill county. The present law makes few provisions for changes of this kind, and it is likely that the matter will be one of the important subjects upon which the next legislature will be called to take action.

MRS. MORRIS WILL NOT CONTEST.

Long Litigation Over a North Dakota Estate Settled.

The long litigation over the Morris estate at Fargo, has been adjusted by an agreement of all interests. T. R. Morris was a contractor. In 1897 he made a will, which divided his estate equally between his wife and four children, with certain conditions dependent upon his widow's re-marriage. In 1900 Mr. Morris died in the insane asylum, after an illness of a few months. Mrs. Morris contested the will on the ground that he was incapable of making the will in 1897, and fought its probation. After much litigation an agreement was arrived at by which the court refuses to probate the will, while on the other hand Mrs. Morris agrees to drop further contest and accept one-fifth of the estate as her share. The estate is not to be divided until the youngest child reaches the age of twenty-one, and in the meantime Mrs. Morris will be appointed guardian.

CHAPTER XI. (Continued.)

"Ye have a noose about my neck, have ye, my fine gentleman? It's true enough; but take care that I don't slip in yours with it before we're done with each other! You can trate a man like a dog, can you? Well, dogs have been known to turn and bite before now. They shoot the dog, but the bite makes a worse death than the gun. I never liked ye, Master Randolph Chester, and I hate ye now; and if ye doubted my word to-night, maybe another time I'll give yo fine cause."

But of the menacing fist, the muttered threats, Chester knew nothing, as once again alone he sank back in his easy chair.

Yet his face was pale and his eyes troubled.

"I let my anger master me," he pondered, with a vague prescience of regret. "But—pshaw! The cur is in my power. He dare not stir hand or foot against me!"

And, abruptly rising, he crossed the hall to his own room, his words already forgotten, and all unconscious that—that they had sown the seed for the harvest to be reaped by—Nemesis!

CHAPTER XII.

Not until another hour had passed did Beatrice venture to uplift the lounge, and whisper to her lover that the road was free for his escape.

"My brave darling!" he exclaimed, "you have saved me, that I, in turn, might save you from the power of that dastardly villain. How can I leave you here? Are you sure, my love, that you will be strong enough to resist his machinations—his toils?"

"The memory of this night will give me strength," she answered. "Besides, Bertie, you have restored to me my faith in my father's honor, my mother's purity and my right to my own name. Yet that faith must be proven before the world. With such an incentive, can I let any obstacle weakness may impose be a stumbling block to my feet? No! They may be bruised, and torn and bleeding, but they will ever press on to the goal where you and I, dear, are to meet!"

"My noble girl, I will not fear for you, and always, though months should pass, and I should give no sign, remember that I am not far off. This man is playing a desperate game. He has tied my hands at the very outset, so far as open warfare is concerned; but I will meet him with his own cunning. We play for the same stake. We battle for the same prize. If necessary, I will borrow his weapons. Cunning alone can meet cunning. I dare trust my cause to no man but myself. Only, my darling, if most unexpectedly at times you should find me near you when you imagine me far away, be very careful that you do not let surprise master you; that you do not betray us both by an incautious word or glance. Be ever prepared—ever watchful!"

"I will, Bertie—I will. But you must not lose another moment here. My door is unfastened. At any moment Randolph may return. If he should find you, all would be lost. Go, darling, and may my love, which goes with you wrap itself around you in links of steel, against which, by day or by night, sleeping or waking, the weapons of your enemies will find themselves foiled and blunted."

With rare unreserve, she threw her arms about his neck as she spoke, and of her own sweet accord, lifted to his her fragrant lips.

He stooped to meet them.

"My love, my love!" he whispered, low, as he strained her close to his heart.

For a moment the world was forgotten by them both. The ecstasy of love's passion enchained them. Past and future alike here merged in the exquisite and intoxicating present.

"Good-night!" she murmured.

"Good-night!" he answered, once more catching her to his heart, and raining mad kisses on her eyes, lips and hair.

A minute later the branches of the tree beyond her window rustled as if some sudden breeze had moved them; but Tyrrell's master had summoned him from the watch, and as a dark figure glided down its trunk and disappeared in the darkness, there was no one to question or intercept its retreat; and only a girl's sob followed it as one of the echoes of the quiet night—an echo caught by God's listening angels and carried by them to the great white throne as a wordless prayer.

The next morning, pale, but calm and composed, Beatrice met her cousin at the breakfast table. It was the first meal she had taken with him since her father's death, and already seated, he sprang up, surprised at her entrance.

"An unexpected honor, dear Beatrice!" he exclaimed, courteously.

She bent her head in silent recognition that she heard, and moved to her place beyond the urn.

His own face looked haggard and gray in the clear morning light; but its expression had lost no whit of its relentless and implacable resolve.

When the meal was ended, he motioned the servants to withdraw.

"I wish to apologize to you, Beatrice," he said, when they were alone, "for my enforced entrance into your room last night. Knowing, however, your infatuated belief in Bertram Talbot's innocence, I could well imagine you furthering his escape from justice. The result did not warrant my zeal, but I was evidently falsely informed. As I am ready to forget the bitter words you addressed to me in your anger, so, I trust, you will forgive the cause that inspired them."

"It is so small a portion of my debt to you, Mr. Chester, (that we need scarcely put it down in our reckoning," she answered, icily.

"Am I, indeed, so far removed in your eyes, Beatrice, from any claim of kinship that you address me thus?" he asked, in tender reproach.

"You forget that it is you who asperse your own claim, and render it impossible, since you deny my title to my father's name. But listen to me, Randolph Chester. All—every word—that you have told me I believe to be false; and though I am a weak helpless girl, I will prove it false!"

"You are wrong, Beatrice, and you misjudge me," he answered, quietly. "If you will use your reason, you will understand that I could scarcely invent such a tale, or support it without truth as its foundation. If it were not so, you could bring a hundred witnesses to combat it. You could prove your father's marriage, bring forth his wedding certificate, and attest your own legitimacy of birth. As it is, you naturally refuse to believe the painful story necessity has compelled me to unfold to you. Beatrice, I offer you once more peace between us. Will you still choose war? Once again I ask you to become my wife, and thus forever put an end to any questioning. Why should you hesitate? I will not force my love upon you. I will leave it to time and my own earnest effort to slowly win it. Oh, Beatrice, must you always hate, always distrust me?"

Genuine feeling rang in his tone. It was a new phase to her in his character—that of pleading and self-humiliation.

Could it be that she had wronged him? she asked herself. Could it be that his horrible tale was true—that she, indeed, only held the birthright of a father's dishonor, a mother's shame?

The night before she had been buoyed up by Bertram's faith. But, like herself, he had no proof to sustain it.

Again the terrible doubt came creeping in to palsy her strength and chill the life-blood in her veins.

But, resolutely, she nerved herself against the betrayal of any sign of its existence.

"What you ask me is impossible," she answered, gently. "I can never marry you. I do not love you. If I have misjudged you, you can prove it to me now by letting the matter rest. So far as the money is concerned, take it all. Only—I beg—I implore you, let the dead rest in their graves. Do not dishonor them. I will not dispute your claim."

"But, Beatrice, what you suggest is impossible, else I would gladly accede to it. The world believed you to be my uncle's daughter, born in wedlock, and, as such, his heir. I can not step in and take possession of this property without proving it otherwise. One way, and only one, lies out of the difficulty—and that the way I have just suggested. Become my wife, and the world need never know. Beatrice, could your dead mother speak, what, think you, would she plead? Can you not guess, too, the reason now your father was so anxious for this marriage?"

"Oh, God, send me a sign!" burst from the tortured girl's lips.

And, as she spoke, unconsciously raising her eyes, they rested on a portrait of her father, hanging against the wall of the room.

The gaze of the portrait seemed directed toward her; the clear eyes, frank and honest, and true, appeared to her imagination to hold an expression of reproach; the lips about to open, as if to ask:

"Beatrice, can you doubt me?"

Impulsively, she sprang from her chair and knelt beneath it, extending her arms toward it.

"Papa, give me strength!" she cried. "Almost have I doubted you, but never again—never again! You hear me swear it! Let him wreak his worst, papa. You and mamma are dead—it will fall on me rather than on you. Only forgive me that I could ever listen to so cruel and foul a lie against your honor and my mother's purity!"

Then, rising to her feet, she turned toward Randolph.

"Do your worst!" she said. "The only alternative you offer me I refuse. What else is left me?"

"Shame, poverty and the world's scorn!" he answered.

"Then I accept them all. There could be no shame like that of an unhallowed marriage, no poverty so great as that the starved heart knows, no scorn of the world to equal the lashing of an accusing conscience!"

"You are brave!" he said, sarcastically. "Will you always be so? Nursed in luxury, do you dream what terrible definition the word want can hold? You are beautiful. Do you know the curse that beauty unprotected may prove to you? You have lived in the sunshine of the world's smile! Can you imagine the blackness of its frown?"

"I look at you—I listen to you—and, looking and listening, I need no imagination to see the picture you so graphically paint."

His face grew paler as she spoke.

"I refuse to accept your decision as final until you have had twenty-four hours for reflection," he replied, with forced calm. "If, by then, you still refuse the offer I have made you you will understand that you are living under my roof and on my bounty. I shall always be most happy to offer and secure to you the charity of both."

His words did not fail of their effect. White and trembling, Beatrice moved toward the door.

"I take not one minute—not one hour—for thought!" she said. "You say that it is owing to your charity that I am here—here, in my father's house! Oh, God, you may be right; but only in my ignorance have I accepted it. If you turned me from your doors the world might censure you. Is this your fear? So, you entrench yourself behind your charity, and bid me stay? The world, then, will applaud your generosity. Ah, you drop your mask soon. A little moment ago and I was ready—weak, credulous girl that I am—to believe that some strain of real feeling and honest truth lay beneath the surface of your cruel, stony heart. To-day, Randolph Chester, is yours. But there may be a to-morrow. You put your faith in the devil, whom you serve—I, mine, in God! Remember this and good-bye!"

She moved toward the door, but, quickly placing himself before her, he intercepted her passage.

"Listen, Beatrice! Do not act rashly! Take the time I have allotted you for thought. What would you do, alone and penniless, in the world?"

"Sir, your interest in charity—your charity, insult! What will I do? When the mask is torn from your face, you will see the fruit of my work. I go to rebuild my father's honor, which you would wreck; to re-establish my mother's purity, which you would assail; to prove good my right to the name of which you would rob me. Ah! smile in your stronghold of security! A mouse has been known to gnaw away the stoutest rope. It is my weakness pitted against your strength. Yet heaven will one day accord me the victory. Will you now permit me to pass?"

Mechanically he moved aside, and she swept by him and from the room.

He stood motionless a moment, as if weighing her words.

"I can afford to be patient," he murmured to himself. "I can afford to wait. The world is on my side. When poverty has bowed her proud spirit, and the world's lash scarred her flesh, she will sue where now she scorns. Besides, am I not learning to hate where once I loved? I would make her my wife, that she might call me master—that I might make her slave? Ah, my haughty cousin, you yet shall wear my chains! And whether they prove heavy or light, rests with yourself."

CHATER XIII.

Like some hunted thing, Beatrice flew to her rooms, as if their very walls might give her protection.

But, on the threshold, the door, shattered of its fastenings, met her as sad proof that not even here could she be secure. Indeed here as elsewhere, she was no longer mistress.

Hastily she made her preparations to leave Grey Oaks, to return never again, unless with her disputed right established.

Not until all was in readiness did she remember that she had given to Bertram the evening previous, all her reserve of ready money, excepting a few dollars in her purse. Her valuable jewels were locked in the bank vault.

For a moment her heart grew sick with this new and unexpected obstacle; but her courage soon returned.

Taking in her hand her little satchel, filled with a few needful things, she made a movement as if to touch the bell.

Then she remembered the servants were no longer hers to command; and so, drawing her crape veil over her face, with one low, stifled sob choking its way upward in her white throat, she turned from the rooms which she might never see again.

The house seemed deserted as she descended the broad staircase. The door of the library stood ajar. She shuddered as she passed it.

No one met her as she opened the great hall door and glided swiftly down the avenue, between the grand old oaks, which were donning themselves in their brilliant autumn garb.

Suddenly from behind one of these shuffled the unexpected figure of a man.

He touched his hat with awkward deference.

Again she shivered, as she recognized Tyrrell.

Was it an evil omen that, at the very outset of her new life, again he crossed her path?

He started perceptibly as his glance rested on her bag.

"You'll let me carry it for ye, Miss Markham?" he said, stretching out his hand to relieve her of its weight.

But she shook her head and walked swiftly on. To her surprise, he followed her.

"You're not l'avin Grey Oaks for good, miss?" he added, with a certain deferential anxiety in his tone.

But Beatrice vouchsafed to the question no reply, save in a single haughty glance.

The man stood still, looking sullenly after her retreating figure.

"She has her father's eyes," he muttered. "And her father dismissed me from his service—to starve, for all he cared. It's her turn now. Why should I care? We all have our turn. The next one, my fine gentleman, will be yours!"

And, with a swift change of expression he glanced toward the stone turrets of Grey Oaks.

An hour later, alone and unprotected, Beatrice, with her veil still tightly drawn over her face but the elegance of the slender, youthful figure clearly apparent through its folds wended her way through the busy throng pouring from the Central Depot of the great metropolis.

The afternoon had not yet waned, and the sun was shining brightly.

The year previous she had graduated as Madame Clair's pet pupil from Madame Clair's well known and fashionable school. How could it be otherwise, when Madame Clair's bills, let her swell them to what amount she would, were ever undisputed, and when the mere fact that she numbered among her scholars the heiress of Grey Oaks made many desirous that their own daughters might also enjoy the same privilege of a residence beneath her roof.

It was to Madame Clair that Beatrice's thought now turned. She well remembered that lady's honeyed smiles and whispered flatteries. Let there be as little of sincerity as there might be in either, she would not refuse to receive her now—at least until she might be able more clearly to decide upon her future course.

From the depot she had but a few blocks to walk; but as she mounted the steps of the elegant brown-stone mansion, she staggered with weakness. Scarcely recovered from her recent illness, the terrible excitement of the night previous and to-day's fatigue began to tell upon her exhausted frame.

A strange servant opened the door in answer to her ring, but made no effort to take her bag from her tired hands, as, murmuring Madame Clair's name, she tottered across the threshold and sank down on a chair in the hall.

Leaving her sitting there, the maid disappeared, to return in a moment followed by his mistress. The latter gave one quick glance at the motionless figure, draped in its heavy black, then, with a little cry, sprang forward.

"Beatrice—my dearest Beatrice! Is it you? Ah! mon enfant, ma chere enfant! what has happened?"

The retreating servant, conscious by his mistress' effusion that, spite of the fact that the young lady had come on foot and carrying her own luggage, he had made an error of calculation concerning her, zealously stepped forward to officiously lift the small bag and ask madame's orders concerning it.

"To my own apartment, Eugene," she commanded, throwing her arm about Beatrice's trembling figure and assisting her into the reception room, the door of which she carefully closed.

What rare fortune, she thought, had brought the young mistress of Grey Oaks to her? Her father, she knew, was dead. Perhaps his daughter had come to ask her to preside over her home, and act as guide and chaperone to her youthful inexperience. Well, her love for Beatrice—her pure, disinterested love—might prompt her to accept such a post. It would be far less arduous than her school, and, of course, her future would be properly provisioned against any emergency.

But her speculations were cut short as Beatrice wearily threw back her veil, and the young, haggard face, all colorless save for the great gray eyes, burst upon her as a revelation, that no such errand had brought the girl hither.

"My poor child, you are ill!" she exclaimed. "It—it is nothing contagious?" the latter question inspired by a sudden fear.

A mere ghost of a smile touched Beatrice's lips.

"I am not ill," she answered, "but I have been very, very ill. Poor papa! You knew, madame?"

"Ah, yes; I knew—so noble, so generous, so handsome a man! Ah, my dear how well I remember the first time I saw him! I could not believe when I heard that he was dead. But you came alone to-day, my dear Beatrice! Ah, you impulsive American girls—you do such strange things!"

"I came to you for protection, madame. I—I am homeless! Grey Oaks is my home no longer!"

"Homeless, my child? But with your wealth, you can make a home where you will."

"This is my wealth, madame—all that I have in the world. Will it buy me a home?"

"I—I do not understand!" stammered the Frenchwoman, thinking regretfully of the effusiveness of her welcome.

"My father died, madame, without a will, or at least, we have been able to discover none. Therefore my cousin, as the next heir, succeeds to the property. I am disinherited."

"Your cousin is the next heir? My child, you do not know the law. There is some strange mistake!"

"A mistake, indeed, madame, but not such a one as by any stretch of imagination you could guess. From you I must conceal nothing. You shall know all, and you will understand then my unhappy position. Ah, madame, it is not alone of my money that they would rob me, but of my name! They are wicked enough to say that my mother never was, in reality, my father's wife! That I—that I am but the heritage of their dishonored shame!"

Madame Clair's grasp of the little, cold, gloved hand relaxed.

She threw up her own in horror, while visions of this story getting afloat, and the effect produced upon the public by the knowledge that such a spot should have blemished the reputation of her school, fairly chilled her blood.

"My dear," she remonstrated, "your illness has affected your brain. Young girls should not even dream of the existence of such wickedness, yet you calmly confess yourself to be a child of shame!"

"Am I calm, madame?" asked the girl, wearily. "When heaven launches its thunderbolts with stunning force, and they fell to the earth their unhappy victim, do you call him calm because he lies where he has fallen, careless where the next bolt may strike? If so, then am I calm. But you knew my father. You like myself, can know that this story is a lie—a false, foul lie! As false, as foul, as he whose brain gave it its hideous birth. It remains for me, madame, to prove it so; and so I have come to you, to ask you, for a little while, to give me home and protection, until I can expose the truth."

Madame Clair hesitated. If there should be a mistake—if Beatrice's faith should not be misplaced—it would serve her well to befriend her; but if, on the other hand, she had no right or title even to her name, how could she allow her to breathe the same atmosphere with those young, tender lambs, consigned to her special care and guidance? For a little while longer she must rest neutral and glean all the truth.

"Does your cousin in no way substantiate his assertion, Beatrice?" she asked.

"Only by his story. He says that papa met mamma abroad: that—that she had just gone on the operatic stage. He fell in love with her, and wished to marry her; but she was already married, and so he ran away with her and brought her to America as his wife. Oh, madame, it is false—false!"

But the wily Frenchwoman could not echo the sentiment prompting the girl's belief. To her the story suddenly assumed a most natural and probable aspect. Moreover, who would dare fabricate such a tale without foundation?

"But, surely, Beatrice, you have some proof of your parents' marriage—the certificate, legal or religious—as well as that of your own birth?"

"None, madame—nothing! Together with the will, nothing can be found. But my mother was a saint. As such my father even regarded her; as such, he has always taught me to revere her memory."

"What do you propose to do?"

MANS WORKS SHALL FOLLOW

'Tis truth that painter, bard, and sage,
Even in earth's cold and changeful clime,
Plant for their deathless heritage
The fruits and flowers of time.

We shape ourselves the joy or fear
Of which the coming life is made,
And fill our future's atmosphere
With sunshine or with shade.

The tissue of the Life to be
We weave with colors all our own,
And in the field of Destiny
We reap as we have sown.

Still shall the soul around it call
The shadows which it gathered here,
And painted on the eternal wall
The Past shall reappear.

Think ye the notes of holy song
On Milton's tuneful ear have died?
Think ye that Raphael's angel throng
Has vanished from his side?

Oh, no! We live our life again:
Or warmly touched or coldly dim,
The pictures of the Past remain—
Man's voices shall follow him!

A Spot of Ink.

BY LOUIS FARAN.

(Copyright, 1901, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

This is a very simple story, almost a commonplace one—hardly a story at all in fact—of the history of a spot of ink. Listen.

I was twenty-four years old at the time and blessed with a good figure, at least neither better or worse than the next man's. I was very much in love with Laurence Preval, one of our third rate actresses, who in real life as on the stage was a great coquette.

Who has not lived through a like experience?

I was what is generally called a happy man, when one day we had a violent discussion, and in spite of the thousand follies I had committed for her, the pretty comedienne declared that she would never see me or hear my name again.

My heart was broken but I did not wish to show my grief and calling all my pride to my aid, I feigned perfect composure. In order to simulate complete indifference I determined to leave Paris for a time. I would go to my grandmother's where my room was always ready and waiting for me. I counted on my departure to soften Laurence's feelings and I was sure that after two or three days of absence I should receive a tiny perfumed note telling me to return.

I had told no one of my plans and it was quite by chance that I entered our patriarchal mansion the evening of a family reunion.

You can imagine how surprised they were! My grandmother, my aunts, my cousins—of whom the eldest Yvonne had worn short dresses the last time I had seen her—all pressed around me; they all embraced me quite turning my head. If I had not left Laurence behind it would have been wholly charming.

The first few days though I enjoyed the delights of country idleness, at bottom I was impatient and nervous. I sent for my Paris mail; letters and papers of all kinds came, but the letter I was waiting for did not appear. Day after day passed without bringing me any news.

Decidedly Laurence sulked well and I began to fear that she was obstinate about our falling out. After fifteen days I lost hope. She had not recalled me. What should I do?

My pride was gone. I made up my mind to beg her pardon, although she was the one in fault. This decision made I shut myself up in my room to write to her.

What did I say in my letter? Heavens! All that a young and foolish head like mine could think of! My despair, my love, my regret; excuses, promises; vows! It all flowed like a single stream from my fevered pen, and it was not until I reached the last page that I thought of stopping. With a firm hand I signed my name, when, oh misery! My pen agitated by too much emotion gave a little start and threw a great blot of ink on the white paper.

I could not think of sending this lovesick epistle illustrated by a spot like this. There was nothing to do but to write it over again. Instead of following this simple method, however, it came into my head to try to erase the blot. It seemed to me that this letter written in a fever, was so fiery hot and so convincing that it would touch the hardest heart. In copying it I might change it in some way and make it less powerful!

How could I get this cursed spot out? I did not find anything on my table that I could use for this purpose and I thought of my cousins. Careful little girls are always well provided with such articles. I raised my voice: "Yvonne!" I cried.

My door partly opened and my cousin's head appeared.

"Have you an eraser or a knife? Something to take out a spot?"

"Spot?"

"Yes, on this letter—to a friend. I have just made a huge blot."

"Just wait and I'll bring you what you want."

She ran to her room and came back a minute afterwards with a collection of scrapers, knives and blotting paper which she deposited on my table. Glancing at the spot she said, half mocking, half serious: "You must not be stupid, cousin."

"Really?" I replied laughing. "Is it then so difficult to remove an ink spot?"

"There are spots and spots," she answered. "This one is already more than half dry. It will be very hard to get it out."

"How I ever could have admired Lawrence."

She said this with a little learned air that proved that she too, knew what it was to make blots. After a moment's hesitation she added timidly: "Would you like me to try to remove it?"

I had no doubt that the blot was much more likely to disappear under her hands than under mine, and I gladly consented, moving back to make room for her. She passed lightly in front of me and leaning her slim figure on the table began her delicate task.

The sun which shone in through my window fell on her, turning to gold the little ringlets on her white neck. As I looked at these blond curls I wondered in spite of myself how I could ever have admired Laurence's hair—dyed hair, the shades of which now seemed to me so vulgar!

Yvonne had turned her back to me and I could see nothing but her delicate silhouette, her little ear lost in a wealth of golden tresses. By leaning to the side I could get a climpse of her profile. Her long brown lashes falling over the eyes busy with my task, threw a gentle shadow on her pink cheek.

For the first time I noticed that my cousin Yvonne was very pretty. There was already something of the woman about her, but there also remained much of the child and the mixture was delicious.

"See," she exclaimed, "Without blotting paper you can do nothing!" Her fresh firm voice had a penetrating charm.

She was so pure, so sweet, it was as if a perfume of candour disengaged itself from her person. The sun made a golden nimbus of her curling locks. The back of her soft throat attracted me irresistibly. I had a mad desire to kiss her there, but an instinctive feeling of respect stopped me suddenly. Yvonne was decidedly no child and, strangely enough, I was much moved by this thought.

This spot of ink had turned my head!

Laurence now seemed very far away. I realized that Yvonne was eighteen years old; that she would soon fall in love; some one would love her; they would marry. Oh, I did not wish these moments flying so swiftly now to come to an end!

Yvonne was certainly pretty, very pretty. Why had I never noticed it before? I had been treating her as if she was still in short dresses! As I looked at her I was filled with uneasiness, an uneasiness that was full of charm! I do not know how long I was plunged in this vague, sweet reverie, but suddenly something brought me back to myself. I leaned over Yvonne's shoulder to see how she was getting on.

My ink spot was effaced, no, drowned by a tear, a pearly drop that had fallen from Yvonne's eyes.

She had read, she had understood, and she wept!

The letter was never sent. I never saw Laurence again!

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY.

$1.50 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE.

The laws enacted by the late legislature are published in supplement form by the News today. It contains the most important legislation enacted by any legislator in the history of the state, and should be preserved.

Frank M. Eddy told the people of Thief River Falls that he would do all in his power to secure the opening of the reservation near this city, and he is keeping his promise—the statements made by the local Democrats last fall to the contrary notwithstanding.

Twelve reasons for forming a union of our common school districts and establishing and independent district:

1. It will make possible a good public school system.
2. It will tend to unify the interests of the city generally.
3. It will insure greater economy by combining the work in the higher grades.
4. It will make possible a uniform system of grading.
5. It will establish better management through a new board of education composed of six members, which board is by law given legislative powers.
6. It will make us a unite in educational affairs as in matters of material concern.
7. It will insure the establishment of a high school.
8. It will provide a chance for higher education for our young people, thus saving expense and inconvenience incurred by their having to leave home to get a high school education.
9. It will secure $1,000 as state aid instead of $300 as at present.
10. It will put us in line with all other cities and towns in the state, thus making of us a strong link in the chain which binds us together.

It will encourage desirable citizens, who will help to build up our city in every way, to come and locate in the community.

12. It will make possible systematic supervision of the work all along the line, from the primary department to the senior class in the high school. This is the only way in which we can secure unity and thoroughness in our course of study and soundness in scholarship.

GERMANTOWN.

'RAH FOR EDDY

He Is Working to Open Up the Reservation.

The following dispatch to the St. Paul Pioneer Press from its Washington correspondent would indicate that Congressman Eddy is determined to fulfill the promise made to the citizens of Thief River Falls last fall, and secure the opening of that portion of the reservation situated in Red Lake and Marshall counties at the earliest possible date:

"Washington, April 18.—In connection with the consideration of plans for the opening of the ceded Indian lands on Chippewa reservations, the attention of the secretary of the the interior has been directed to unceded portions of the Red Lake reservation, for the opening of which a demand comes from that section surrounding Thief River Falls, Minn. Representative Eddy has been in conference with Secretary Hitchcock on this subject and the secretary seems to be favorably disposed toward the idea. The land referred to embraces eleven townships on the Red Lake reservation. It is adjacent to Thief River Falls and while the title is vested in the Chippewas, the secretary of the interior is authorized in a general provision of the last Indian bill on the recommendation of Representative Eddy, is to the effect that the secretary of the interior may negotiate through an inspector for the purchase of unallotted Indian lands. The townships embrace an area of more than 253,000 acres of very desirable agricultural lands."

We have unlimited money to loan on improved farms. Will loan on final receiver's receipt. Interest reasonable. No delays. Northern Real Estate & Mortgage Co. Office over First State Bank.

The Presbyterians are determined to build a church in this city and Rev. Finch, of Fergus Falls, is soliciting subscriptions for that purpose this week.

New buildings are being erected in all parts of the city, evidence of the fact that confidence has not been lost as regards the city's abundant resources.

O. P. Johnson leaves this week for the Twin Cities. Mr. Johnson is not fully decided as to where he will locate, but will probably go to the Pacific coast.

The Ladies of the Presbyterian church will give a shingle social in the church this Thursday evening, April 25. Admission 10 cents. All are invited.

A number of farmers from the town of New Solum were in the city Monday after a large bell which had been purchased by a church society in that town.

Frank Purdy and wife left last week for Glindon, where they will visit for several days and then proceed to Everet, Wash., where they will make their future home.

If you want to file on a piece of government land it will not be necessary to go to Crookston. Make your filing in Thief River Falls before L. G. Browning, U. S. commissioner for the district of Minnesota.

C. A. Nason, one of the members of the Central Mercantile Co., has rented the Jerome residence on the East Side, and will remove his family to this city in a few weeks.

Services at the Presbyterian church will be conducted next Sunday morning and evening by the Rev. W. F. Finch. A cordial invitation is extended to all to attend.

Benj. Walker left Tuesday for the Twin Cities, where he will purchase a complete outfit for a bath room which he will establish here. This is something Thief River Falls has long needed and it should be liberally patronized.

Postmaster Richardson last week received new fixtures for the postoffice and has had them placed in position. They are a great improvement on the old ones and are by far the best fixtures of of any postoffice in Red Lake county.

The Minneapolis Journal's Cass Lake correspondent last week reported that Dellos Douglas, of this city, would go to Cass Lake this summer and play in the base ball club there. Dellos denies this, however, and states that he will remain in Thief River Falls.

The Red Lake Falls base ball club has organized an announces that no games will be played on Sunday during the season. It is almost impossible for the club in this city—owing to the fact that many of the players are employed at the mill—to play on any week day.

Sheriff Sampson started for the Red lake Sunday to place a lien on logs gotten out in the Moylan camp this winter to satisfy the claim of Joe DeMontette for wages alleged to have been earned in the camp this winter and which he is unable to secure.—Red Lake Falls Gazette.

A mass meeting of the citizens of Thief River Falls is called for Monday evening, April 29, at 8 o'clock sharp. The object of the meeting is to form plans for the observance of Memorial Day, May 30. Every patriotic citizen should make it a point to be there. Don't forget the date and hour.

The progressive residents of Excel township are to be congratulated. By a vote of 17 to 57 the people up there decided to issue bonds to the amount of $3,000, the money to be used for ditching purposes. Next year they propose to gravel their roads. Other townships around here should follow this example.

Julius Ploth, the St. Hilaire land boomer, is of the opinion that corn can be successfully raised in this section. He has purchased 50 bushels of dent seed corn—"Pride of the North"—which will ripen in 90 days, and offers to give it to the farmers of this section free of charge. In order to induce them to cultivate it, he offers to pay to the farmer raising the ten best ears, $75 in gold, the second ten, $50 and the third ten, $25.

C. Retallick is building a small steamboat that will be used to run on the Thief river to haul supplies from this city to small stores and to settlers up the river. The engines will be three horse power and together with the boilers will weigh only about 600 pounds. The capacity of the boat will be about five tons, and if it can successfully make the trips it will prove a money maker for the owner, as all the settlers will be glad of an opportunity to patronize this convenience.

The Central Mercantile Co. Ward, Nason & Hay, proprietors, is the name of the firm that on Monday took control of the Diamond Store, and will conduct the business in the future. The new firm is composed of business men, who have had years of experience in progressive cities and will give Thief River Falls an up-to-date store. They have the required means, are close buyers and will be in a position to offer the people of this section bargains in their line.

The local lodge of Odd Fellows will on Sunday celebrate the 82d anniversary of the founding of this order in America, by attending the Methodist church in a body on the morning of that day. The members will meet at the lodge hall at 10:30 and march in a body to the church where the pastor, Rev. Sterling, will preach a sermon in commemoration of the occasion. The Odd Fellows is one of the strongest secret organizations in the United Sates, and has accomplished a great deal of good.

Several exchanges are agitating the scheme to name all country roads as streets are named and to number the houses along the road. The plan is a good one and should be adopted by county boards. At present the roads have no designation except as incidentally fall to them, and it is difficult for strangers to find their way without frequent inquiries. Name your roads and let the name appear on each corner. It will then be as easy to find any house in the country as it now is in the city.

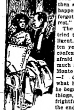
LIFE IN A GREAT CITY

PICKING OUT MONTE CRISTO

The man and the girl settled themselves in their seats just as the orchestra was playing the overture to the first act of "Monte Cristo."

"Now, what is the story of the play?" asked the girl as soon as she got her breath. "I read the first two chapters of the book once and then something happened and I forgot to read the rest."

The young man tried to look intelligent. "I read it ten years ago," he confessed, "and I'm afraid I don't know much about it. But Monte Cristo—er—I don't know what he was when he began to stir up things, but he's frightfully rich in the end and there's an island mixed in with it, and he goes to Paris and all his enemies drop dead at the sight of him or something of that sort."



"All his enemies drop dead at the sight of him."

"Oh, yes," said the girl, doubtfully but smilingly. Sometimes women show real heroism even if it is unnoticed.

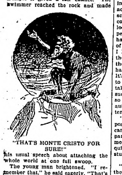
The first act was nearly through when the girl clutched the young man's arm. "Monte Cristo must be that gloomy individual who is plotting," she said triumphantly. "But I don't see what that foolish young sailor is frisking around so for. They talk so fast I can't get the thread of the story."

The young man looked worried. Just then the gendarmes sent by Villefort snatched the sailor from his wedding feast and carried him off to the prison. Everybody on the stage promptly fainted.

"Can the sailor be Edmund Dantes, afterward Monte Cristo?" asked the girl with puzzled brow. The young man shook his head restlessly. "Perhaps the next act will make things clearer," he cheered her up.

"The program says eighteen years elapse between acts 1 and 2," said the girl as the curtain rose on the gloomy prison scene. "I suppose that is why Dantes has so many white whiskers."

Not till the old prisoner dies, confiding his secret to the young man toying with the rope in the background, did the bewildered couple conclude the whiskered gentleman was not Dantes. The shock unsettled the girl's mind so that she sat spellbound during the terrific storm scene where the body in the sack is tossed into the raging sea, and Dantes, cutting his way out, carelessly swims through waves warranted to knock down the Masonic Temple if given a fair chance. The swimmer reached the rock and made his usual speech about attaching the whole world at one full swoop.



"THAT'S MONTE CRISTO FOR SURE!"

The young man brightened. "I remember that," he said eagerly. "That's Monte Cristo for sure!"

The scene in the wretched inn again plunged them in gloom. "I guess the priest is Dantes in disguise," said the young man comfortably.

The guileful priest immediately began telling young Albert about his brother, the famous Monte Cristo.

"He can't be!" said the girl irritably. "Listen to that! Why don't they wear signs so one can tell? And I wish they didn't have such a rackety storm outside—it's a very bad climate, seems to me!"

The wicked Villefort sends the old woman upstairs to murder a peddler, supposedly Villefort's annoying brother in disguise. The peddler kills her instead and disappears with the glow of the limelights thrown on his righteously noble face, disguise cast off—Villefort cowers in fear.

"Why, the peddler was Monte Cristo!" said the girl in excitement. "Hear him denounce Villefort!"

At that instant the priest bursts in the door and sees Villefort fall dead. "One!" counts the priest dramatically, raising his finger to heaven.

"No," said the young man in disgust, "the peddler must have been Villefort's brother—the priest is Monte Cristo—and he is checking off enemy No. 1."

The girl sat back angrily. "Anyhow," she said, "my head aches."

The young man bought her some chocolates and changed the subject. Surreptitiously he took out a pencil and tried to make a chart of the plot on his programme edge, but gave it up. The play went on. Haughty gentlemen denounced each other, dropped dead occasionally, when there was nothing else to do, were defied and triumphed. Any one of the three or four had the real Monte Cristo air. The girl was counting on her fingers and her eyes had a vacant stare, the young man was plunged in gloom. Finally, everybody well maimed and disarmed, the haughtiest of the Parisian men who had been fooling around the forest of Fontainebleau doing French duel stunts threw down his sword, said "Me che—ild, me wife!" embraced the excited youth who wanted to fight every one and the fainting lady who was walking around in the snow in a ball gown and struck an attitude. The curtain went down.

"Thank heavens," said the young man.

"Thank heaven," said the young man fervently, as rapture broke over his face, "for the first time this evening I am certain which was Monte Cristo! There's no mistake, because the rest are all killed off."

THE GIRL PHILOSOPHER

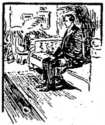
"Strange," said the girl philosopher to the girls in the sewing club, "how twelve hours can change one's point of view! I don't know when I've felt so saintly as I did yesterday morning. And when I found the quotation for the day on my calendar was 'A brother is a friend given by nature' it just set me thinking how many times Bobby posted my letters and ran for special delivery stamps for me. A regular wave of tenderness swept over me and the result was that I nearly paralyzed the boy when I went down to breakfast by patting his shoulder and handing him the money to buy his luncheon. He does so hate to carry a lunch box since he entered high school that nothing could have pleased him more.

"I Nearly Paralyzed the Boy."

"He said I was a brick, and not an ice-cream one, either; and went off whistling 'There's just one girl,' leaving me with sunshine in my heart exactly like a character in a Sunday school book. But last night Fred Bascom came to call. What an elegant-looking fellow he is, anyway! And perfectly stunning in a panne-velvet hat! Why, yes, that's what they are of course, and why men call them 'silk,' I leave it for the ridiculous creatures themselves to answer. And perhaps they could tell, too, how a man so handsome as Fred can be so bashful. It's beyond me. Well, I don't blush to own that I have been wishing he'd take me out, just because he'd make such a fine setting for my new suit, so when he began talking about the automobile show he had my full attention.

"'You've read all about it, I suppose,' he said. 'You bet we have!' came in a loud voice from the back parlor. Fred jumped and looked at me as if he thought I were a ventriloquist, until I explained that Bob was studying there.

"And then, instead of going on about the show, he began to ask all manners of questions about that boy. You'd have thought his only interest in life was Bob's past, present and future, and the merits and demerits of our high school system. After a while he started to go, but in the hall his memory seemed to suddenly bridge the chasm and he began, 'Oh, if you think you'd enjoy going down to the automobile'—but just there Bobby burst wildly into the hall, with his tousled hair hanging down over his eyes, and shouted: 'You'd better jump on that quick, Florrie!'



"SO BASHFUL."

"But I couldn't—not quick enough, anyway, to stop Fred. He simply turned and fled, and I went upstairs and wrote under the quotation, 'A brother is a friend given by nature,' the heartfelt prayer, 'Heaven save us from our friends!' Then I felt better!"—Chicago Daily News.

THE SNOB IN SOCIETY.

Ultra-Exclusiveness of Persons Who Imagine Themselves Social Leaders.

The accepted definition of a "snob," together with its attendant adjective "snobbish," is not the same in America as in England. On the other side it means social pretense of some kind, and Thackeray has shown under that head what a great variety of the species there is. But with us it does not necessarily include pretense. When we call a person a snob the idea intended to be conveyed is that he or she is ultra exclusive and wishes to associate only with persons who are considered very smart. In fact, to be "smart" a person must necessarily be somewhat snobbish, according to the American acceptance of the word, for extreme exclusiveness is even more necessary to the maintenance of a smart set in a republic than in places where the lines are defined by rank. The so-called Four Hundred is, as everyone knows, divided up into any number of sets and cliques, but nevertheless, despite assertions to the contrary, there is always one set that is fashionably paramount. That is to say, invitations from its leaders are more prized than any others, and to be admitted within its limits is a coveted honor. And here we come back to our accepted definition of the word "snob." People who make an effort to get into this society, and by so doing overlook and neglect old friends, are termed snobbish, while the members themselves, who have no desire to enlarge their small coterie or to hide their indifference to the world at large, come under the same classification. Thackeray's people, with their miserable little attempts to pass themselves off for others than they are (and we may safely assert that there are more of that lik in England than America), we would call cads—so that the use of either term by an American does not necessarily convey the same idea as when spoken by an Englishman.—New York Tribune.

FORETELL COMING STORMS.

Telegraph Wires Are Said to Be Unfailing Weather Prophets.

According to Dr. Eydam, a German physician, there are no more reliable weather prophets that telegraph wires. This novel discovery was made by him in the following manner: As he was waiting for a train at a country station he heard a shrill sound, which was made by the wind as it passed through a net-work of nearby wires. At once the doctor remembered that he had frequently heard a similar sound either immediately before or after a storm or a heavy fall of rain or snow, and it naturally occurred to him to try and ascertain whether there was any connection between the sound and such changes in the weather. As a heavy-shower of rain fell within forty-eight hours after he had heard the sound at the railroad station he concluded that there was such a connection, and he then determined to investigate the matter thoroughly. As a result he now maintains, first, that any unusual disturbance in the telegraph wires is an infallible indication of bad weather, and, second, that the nature of the changes in the atmosphere may be learned from the sound which the wind makes when passing through the wires. Thus a deep sound, he says, which is of considerable or medium strength, indicates that there will be slight showers of rain with moderate winds within from thirty to forty-eight hours, and, on thhe other hand, a sharp, shrill sound is the sure token of a heavy storm, which will be accompanied by much rain or snow.—Chicago Chronicle.

Colored Shirts in Black and White.

Colored shirts should open only in front, have two buttonholes, not counting those in the band and cuffs, cut either square or sharply rounded. I advise having them made to open all the way down the front. The cuffs, which should be attached, are about two and one-half inches wide. On colored shirts for ordinary wear the collar is rarely attached, but on negligee shirts used for tennis it is perhaps advisable to have it so. Vertical stripes or lines on bosoms and cuffs are still the most usual(but one need not feel, in the least degree, limited to any one design or maner of arrangement. I may say, however, that at present it looks as if black and white were to be much in vogue during the coming spring and summer. Colored shirts are more usually and, I think, more properly worn only with sack suits or outing clothes, but the rule is not a strict one, and any afternoon at the fashionable hotels and cafes one may see smartly dressed men wearing colored shirts with frock coats and with dark morning coats. I have seen colored shirts worn with frock suits at afternoon receptions and even by the groom and ushers at weddings, but the use can scarcely be called good.—Vogue.

Reading Matter for Soldiers.

There is a great demand for reading matter among the troops stationed at distant posts in the Philippines and in Alaska. The Army and Navy league of Washington is endeavoring to meet this want as far as possible and has invited contributions of books and magazines.

ENGLISH SPARROWS SPREAD.

Present Distribution of This Nimble Bird in the United States.

The agricultural department has recently printed a map showing the extent of country now occupied by the English sparrow. It has been multiplying with marvelous rapidity and is now found in most parts of the country. Only three states (Montana, Nevada and Wyoming) and three territories (Alaska, Arizona and New Mexico)are free from the sparrow. It is found in California both north and south of San Francisco, in the valleys of the Sacramento and San Joaquin rivers, and along the coast. It is scattered among the settlements on the Columbia river and Puget sound. It has spread all over the eastern half of the country from North Dakota to the Mississippi delta. It has, however, avoided the sandy region of Florida and is not found to any extent in our most densely wooded areas. As might be expected, it has given our vast semi-arid region a wide berth, though a large colony has settled in the fertile agricultural region around Salt Lake City. It is only fifty-one years since the English sparrow was first introduced into this country by a gentleman of Brooklyn who sought a remedy for the worms that were destroying the trees of that town. The sparrow has a keen appetite for worms. In the course of time the injury done to the trees by worms was largely abated through this little bird. So it became quite a fad to import sparrows from Europe and turn them loose in our towns. A thousand birds were sent to Philadelphia in a single lot. Many birds also were distributed far and wide from the colonies already started. Thus everything was done to help the sparrow to increase and replenish this part of the world. Undoubtedly the sparrow has destroyed a great many tons of worms. But the remedy has proved worse than the disease. Perhaps the worms have been held in check to some extent; but we have a great many more sparrows than we have use for. They destroy fruit and grain, disfigure buildings in cities and towns, drive away other birds, and in fact are nuisances. The dear little sparrow has come to be regarded as the worst of the feathered pests. Efforts to exterminate it are now making in this country, but it is too late. The sparrow has been naturalized and he is here to stay. Illinois, Michigan, Ohio and Utah in the past few years have paid out many thousands of dollars in the bounties offered for its destruction, but no one has yet observed any diminution in the number of birds.—New York Sun.

HOUSES KEPT TOO WARM.

A Great Singer Talks About Preserving Her Health.

I never wrap anything around my neck, even in the coldest or dampest weather, says Madame Schumann-Heink in Harper's Bazar. I do not confine my throat in any way. I do not wear linen collars, tight ribbons or any kindred abominations. I wear no flannels at any season of the year. Let me hasten to observe, however, that I do not advise this mode of dress for everyone. Some systems require more heat than others, and undoubtedly would suffer if protected only by the cambric underwear which I find sufficient. I am accustomed to it, and should be burdened by any heavier garments. I think that the tendency of the times is to surround us with a greater degree of artificial heat than is necessary to our well-being, especially in American houses, which are much warmer than those abroad. I sleep with my window wide open at all seasons. In fact, I cannot sleep well unless the room is filled with pure, outside air. It is wise, of course, to place the bed so that the wind does not blow directly upon the sleeper. If the room is so small that it is impossible to avoid the draught, then arrange a screen so that the bed is protected. The best way to open a window for ventilating purposes is to lower it a little from the top and raise it a few inches from the bottom. When there is an open fireplace in the room it acts as a fine ventilator in connection with the open window. Should the weather be cold, use more covers on the bed. You can breathe fresh air all night, and yet be as warm as toast. It is not well, of course, to allow yourself to become chilled. Moderation and judgment are needed here as elsewhere.

Rivers Under the Ocean.

A few months ago H. Benest, an English geographer, published an interesting study of streams of fresh water flowing beneath the surface of the sea. Disasters to ocean telegraph cables first called attention to this subject. On several occasions, about 1896, a new and well made cable between Cape Verde and Brazil broke. Soundings were made to discover whether these breakings were due to the state of the sea bottom and it was found that the place in question was near the submarine mouth of a subterranean river; the alluvial material transported by this fresh water stream encountered the cable and finally succeeded in breaking it. The fact is that a river that flows into the lagoons of Yof, on the coast of Senegal, is finally lost in the sand. It undoubtedly has taken its invisible course to the sea, and it is this river that has been discovered in the deep hollow of more than 1,300 meters (4,270 feet) that is traversed by the Brazilian cable. Also while the cable was being repaired at a point twenty-four kilometers (fifteen miles) from the shore the repair shop was surrounded one day by orange skins, calabashes and bits of cloth, which could not have come from the mouth of the Senegal river, 140 kilometers (ninety miles) distant.

"Now Dont Get the Blues."

When a cheerful, brave and light-hearted woman is suddenly plunged into that perfection of misery, the blues, it is a sad picture.

It is usually this way:

She has been feeling out of sorts for some time, experiencing severe headache and backache; sleeps very poorly and is exceedingly nervous.

Sometimes she is nearly overcome by faintness, dizziness, and palpitation of the heart; then that bearing-down feeling is dreadfully wearing.

Her husband says, "Now, don't get the blues! You will be all right after you have taken the doctor's medicine."

But she does not get all right. She grows worse day by day, until all at once she realizes that a distressing female complaint is established.

Her doctor has made a mistake.

She loses faith; hope vanishes; then comes the morbid, melancholy, everlasting blues. She should have been told just what the trouble was, but probably she withheld some information from the doctor, who, therefore, is unable to accurately locate her particular illness.

Mrs. Pinkham has relieved thousands of women from just this kind of trouble, and now retains their grateful letters in her library as proof of the great assistance she has rendered them. This same assistance awaits every sick woman in the land.

Mrs. Winifred Allender's Letter.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I feel it my duty to write and tell you of the benefit I have received from your wonderful remedies. Before taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I was a misery to myself and every one around me. I suffered terrible pain in my back, head, and right side, was very nervous, would cry for hours. Menses would appear sometimes in two weeks, then again not for three or four months. I was so tired and weak, could not sleep nights, sharp pains would dart through my heart that would almost cause me to fall.

"My mother coaxed me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I had no faith in it, but to please her I did so. The first bottle helped me so much that I continued its use. I am now well and weigh more than I ever did in my life."—MRS. WINIFRED ALLENDER, Farmington, Ill.

In Good Quarters.

When King Edward VII. was a busy boy he often went down from Windsor to Eton, where he had more than one friend at the schooll.

It was by the express wish of the queen that when the Prince of Wales visited the college he was to be received with no ceremony. This was literally carried out on one occasion, when the young prince, wandering away from his gentlemen-in-waiting, was suddenly greeted by a boy with the familiar question:

"What's you name? Where do you board, and who's your tutor?

The prince gravely replied:

'My name is Wales; I board at Windsor Castle, and my dame—not my tutor—is the queen."

Then he shook hands with the inquirer, who, far from being abashed, merelly remarked:

"You are in very good quarters, sir."—Chicago Chronicle.

Demand for More Battleships.

When the Secretary of the Navy recently demanded more battleships, Congress considered his recommendations favorably and authorized the construction of several powerful warships. Protection is what our seaports require, and fortifications will not adequately supply this. Defense against all disorders of the digestive organs, such as dyspepsia, constipation, biliousness, rheumatism and nervousness, is adequately afforded by that efficient remedy. WHEN TO PASS THE HAT.

Mark Twain Gives Advice to Those Wishing to Procure Charity.

Mark Twain had wisdom on occasion, as well as wit. He declares that when a man makes an appeal for charity it is a great mistake to get everybody ready to give money and then not pass the hat. 'Some years ago, in Hartford," he said the other day, "we all went to church on a hot, sweltering night, to hear the annual report of Mr. Hawley, a city missionary, who went around finding the people who needed help and didn't want to ask for it. He told of the life in the cellars, where poverty resided; he gave instances of heroism and devotion to the poor. The poor are always good to each other. When a man with millions gives we make much of noise. It's noise in the wrong place. For it's the widow's mite that counts. Well, Mr. Hawley worked me up to a great state. I couldn't wait for him to get through I had $400 in my pocket. I wanted to give him that and borrow more to give. You could see greenbacks in every eye. But he didn't pass the plate, and it grew hotter and we grew sleepier. My enthusiasm went down—$100 at a time—until finally, when the plate came round I stole 10 cents out of it. So you see, a neglect like this may lead to crime."—Chicago Times-Herald.

HUSBAND AND WIFE.

A Veteran of the Civil War Tells an Interesting Story.

Effingham, Ill., April 22.—(Special.)—Uriah S. Andrick is now 67 years of age. Mr. Andrick served through the whole of the Civil War. He was wounded three times by ball, and twice by bayonet.

When he entered the service of his country, in 1861, he was hale and hearty, and weighed 198 pounds. Since the close of the war, however, Mr. Andrick has had very bad health.

For fifteen years he never lay down in bed for over an hour at a time. He had acute Kidney Trouble, which grew into Bright's Disease. His heart, also, troubled him very much.

On Oct. 18th, 1900, he was weighed, and weighed only 102 pounds, being but a shadow of his former self. He commenced using Dodd's Kidney Pills on the 26th of last December, and on Feb. 20th was again weighed, and weighed 146 pounds. He says:

"I have spent hundreds of dollars and received no benefit, until on the 26th of December last, I purchased one box of Dodd's Kidney Pills. I am cured, and I am free from any pain. My heart's action is completely restored. I have not the slightest trace of the Bright's Disease and I can sleep well all night. I was considered a hopeless case by everybody, but to-day I am a well man, thanks to Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"For the last sixteen years my wife has been in misery with bearing-down pains, pains in the lower part of the abdomen and other serious ailments. When she saw what Dodd's Kidney Pills were doing for me she commenced to use them. She now feels like another woman, her pains have all disappeared and her general health is better than it has been for years.

"She is so taken up with Dodd's Kidney Pills and what they have done for us that she has gone to Mr. Cornwall's drug store and bought them for some of her friends for fear that if they went, themselves they might make a mistake and get something else."

There is something very convincing in the honest, simple story of this old veteran and his wife.

Dodd's Kidney Pills are the only remedy that ever cured Bright's Disease, Diabetes or Dropsy. They never fail.

MOST PEOPLE LOPSIDED.

Difference Between Legs, Eyes, and Ears of Man and Women.

The two sides of a person's face are never alike. The eyes are out of line in two cases out of five, and one eye is stronger in seven persons out of ten. The right ear is also, as a rule, higher than the left. Only one person in fifteen has perfect eyes, the largest percentage of defects prevailing among fair-haired people. Short sight is more common in town than among country folk, and of all people the Germans have the largest proportion of short-sighted persons. The crystalline lens of the eye is the one portion of the human body which continues to increase in size throughout life and does not cease with the attainment of maturity. The smallest interval of sound can be better distinguished with one ear than with both. In fifty-four cases out of 100 the left leg is stronger than the right. The bones of an average human male skeleton weigh twenty pounds; those of a woman are six pounds lighter. That unruly member, the tongue of a woman, is also smaller than that of a man, given a man and a woman of equal size and weight. It may be appalling to reflect, but it is nevertheless true, that the muscles of the human body exert a force of over 500 pounds. The symmetry which is the sole intelligible ground for our idea of beauty, the proportion between the upper and lower half of the human body, exists in nearly all males, but is never found in the female. American limbs are more symmetrical than those of any other people. An average head of fair hair consists of 143,040 hairs, dark hair of 105,000, while a red head has only 29,200. Fair-haired people are becoming less numerous than formerly. A person who has lived seventy years has had pass through his heart about 675,020 tons of blood, the whole of the blood in the body passing through the heart in about thirty-two beats. The heart beats on an average of seventy times a minute, or 36,792,000 times in the course of a year, so that the heart of an ordinary man, eighty years of age, has beaten 3,000,000 times. The heart beats ten strokes a minute less when one is lying down than when one is in an upright position.—Chicago Journal.

SKUNK FARMS DO NOT PAY.

Official Report on the Subject to the Secretary of Agriculture.

A newspaper story of the profits made by raising skunks for their skins is giving officials of the agricultural department no end of trouble. It first bobbed up about a year ago. It set forth that the agricultural department had been studying skunk culture, and had found that the beasts were more profitable than a gold mine. As a result of the story the department has received many letters of inquiry. T. S. Palmer, assistant chief of the biological survey, wants to correct this misapprehension. In a report to Secretary Wilson he says: "Misled by the statements about the rapid increase of skunks and the high prices paid for their skins, many persons seriously considered starting skunk farms. For several years a list has been kept of such farms located in various parts of the country, but so far as can be learned, most of them have been abandoned. Raising fur-bearing animals for profit is not a new idea. The industry, however, has apparently never advanced beyond the experimental stage, except in the case of the farms for raising the Arctic or blue fox, established on certain islands of the coast of Alaska. Minks and skunks breed rapidly in captivity but the low price of skins make the profits rather small. Last season the highest market price for prime black skunk skins from the northern states averaged about $1.15 each, but white skins sold as low as 15 to 20 cents apiece. Skins that have much white or which are obtained from the southern states usually bring less than $1 each, a price that leaves little margin for profit after paying the expense of raising the animal in captivity." —New York Sun.

"Lobster Face" Is Not Slanderous.

The slander suit of Foster against Foster was heard yesterday afternoon before Justice William T. Connor, says the New London Telegraph. The suit is for $100 damages. In the complaint it is alleged that the defendant called the plaintiff a "lobster and a lobster face." The plaintiff was under the impression that lobster face was intended as a slur on her character, "and from the said words she suffered great anguish of mind and humiliation." A demurrer to the complaint was entered by the defendant that even if the allegation was true, there was no ground or basis for the claim that the expression "lobster face" carried with it any derogation of character. The demurrer was sustained by Justice Connor, and the case will probably end here.

Pacific Coast Needs Manufactories.

The future of the Pacific coast, if it is to have any worthy of the name, is dependent on the manufacture of the raw material produced within its limits and drawn from outside to supply the wants of its own production and those of the available foreign territory. In other words, the Pacific coast must have such a future as is connected with the history of the industrial, commercial and financial supremacy of Great Britain during the nineteenth century, such a future as is visibly dawning for the United States, with its center on the Atlantic seaboard, during the twentieth century—or it must remain forever in a condition of commercial subserviency. —Engineering Magazine

OF HIS HOME AT GENEVA.

George Graham Tells of the Difference Between Life in America and Europe.

George Graham, in speaking, recently, at the Hotel Victoria, of the difference between living in this country and Europe, said:

"I had a friend who had to put in some time in Switzerland, and so he took a house in Geneva. The house, he was assured, had all modern comforts, but he found by experience that the assurance had to be qualified by the phrase, 'as modern comfort is known in Geneva.' The house was only just completed when he moved in, and he straighway received congratulations from the merest acquaintances because of the fact that his domicile possessed a bath room. The bath was installed after he took possession, at a cost, so he asserted, of the full cost of the bath room being added yearly to the rent. However, its possession made him a marked and important person in the community, so he did not much mind the extra cost. The warm water was supplied from a detachable gas furnace, which finally blew up, and after that they bathed cold. The apartment was lighted by electricity, but there were no fixtures, so he had to purchase them. He said afterward that any man who had a modern apartment to rent, Geneva style, in New York, would be likely to starve to death."—New York Tribune.

How to Signal to Mars.

Take a flag about the size of Europe and mount it upon a staff the length of the circumference of the earth. Then generate sufficient electric fluid to illuminate the material, which should be of a conductive character. Having done this, apply the fluid to the material with the assistance of all the electrical waves of the solar system. Next, change the laws of nature insomuch as to prevent the operation of waving so gigantic a flag as the signal. Select a day when the conditions are favorable and put the apparatus in operation. Then, if the Martians are on the alert they may possibly observe the signal and reply to it, say, in a couple of centuries. If you do not obtain a manifestation, conclude that the inhabitants of Mars are looking another way.—London Punch.

BISHOP HANDY SAYS
"I Cheerfully Recommend Peruna to All Who Want a Good Tonic and a Safe Cure for Catarrh."

Prominent members of the clergy are giving Peruna their unqualified endorsement. These men find Peruna especially adapted to preserve them from catarrh of the vocal organs which has always been the bane of public speakers, and general catarrhal debility incident to the sedentary life of the clergyman. Among the recent utterances of noted clergymen on the curative virtues of Peruna is the following one from Bishop James A. Handy, D. D., of Baltimore:

"I take great pleasure in acknowledging the curative effects of Peruna. At the solicitation of a friend I used your remedy and cheerfully recommend your Peruna to all who want a good Tonic and a safe cure for catarrh."—James A. Handy.

OTHER NOTABLE CURES.
A Husband Escaped the Pangs of Catarrh of the Lungs.
Most Cases of Incipient Consumption Are Catarrh.

Mrs. Edward Stevens of Carthage, N. Y., writes as follows:

"I now take pleasure in notifying you that my husband has entirely recovered from catarrh. He is a well man today, thanks to you and Peruna. He took six bottles of your medicine as directed, and it proved to be just the thing for him. His appetite is good and every thing he eats seems to agree with him. His cough has left him and he is gaining in flesh, and seems to be well every way. I hope others will try your medicine and receive the benefits that we have."—Mrs. Edward Stevens.

When the catarrh reaches the throat it is called tonsilitis, or larnygitis. Catarrh of the bronchial tubes is called bronchitis; catarrh of the lungs, consumption. Any internal remedy that will cure catarrh in one location will cure it in any other location. This is why Peruna has become so justly famous in the cure of catarrhal diseases. It cures catarrh wherever located. Its cures remain. Peruna does not palliate; it cures.

Mrs. Frederick Williams, President of the South Side Ladies' Aid Society of Chicago, Ill., writes the following words of praise for Peruna from 973 Cuyler ave., Chicago, Ill.:

"My home is never without Peruna, for I have found during the past six years that there is no remedy that will at once alleviate suffering and actually cure, as Peruna does. Four bottles completely cured me of catarrh of the head of several years' standing, and if my husband feels badly, or either of us catch cold, we at once take Peruna, and in a day or two it has thrown the sickness out of the system."—Mrs. Frederick Williams.

Mrs. W. A. Allison, of 759 Sheffield avenue, Chicago, Ill., is the Assistant Matron of the People's Hospital. She has the following to say about Peruna:

"I have had frequent opportunities to observe the wonderful curative effects of Peruna especially on persons suffering with a congested condition of the head, lungs, and stomach, generally called catarrh. It alleviates pain and soreness, increases the appetite and so tones up the entire system that the patient quickly regains strength and health."—Mrs. W. A. Allison.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

WITH THE BIRDS

Long years ago, one sunny day—
Alas, how dim and far away
That bright day now appears—
Companionless and lonely, I,
For pastime watched the clouds go by,
As since have gone the years.

I wandered where the brook leaped down
Its rocky channel by the town
In foamy, ceaseless flow;
I saw wild pigeons rise and fly,
Like arrows cleaving the bright sky,
Shot from an archer's bow.

I heard the wood dove's plaintive note,
As softly from her burnished throat,
It melted on the breeze;
I heard the plover's joy-notes ring
Across the pasture, quavering,
And die among the trees.

Two little wrens were building near,
Their downy nest, where every year
They came to build and sing;
They seemed to love the spot, and there,
Their tender song, soft as a prayer,
Breathed welcome to the spring.

The morning long I watched them weave
With patient care beneath the eave,
Their soft and downy home;
I heard them sing their tender lay,
Their song of hope, that some near day
Nestlings would to it come.

And I see now what then I saw
But vaguely, that one common law
Rules birds as well as men;
And glowing warm in every breast
Is that home-love, the first and best,
Which bids us build the dear home nest,
As doth the little wren.

"Hits like dis, Squire," said a big burley "oil mill hand," addressing that functionary in the awed deferential tone of voice which the colored brother scorns to use except when speaking to preachers or administrators of the criminal law, "I'se called to question de arrest of a cullud lady. She have stole my pin. I wouldn't be 'er raisin' all dis san' about dat pin, but I shore lubs it. My brudder paid six bits fer dat pin in Kansas City, Kansas City, Mosourah.

"How I know she stole it?"

"Hits dis way. I went to see a lady what tells fortunes down on de levee. What de fortune teller got to do wid it? 'Squire, if you don't quit 'ruptin' dat way in a generman's cornversations, you will work confusements of speech. Dat fortune teller got all to do wid it. Why dat lady just brought fortune-tellin to dis world.

"I lef my coat with dat pin in the hem when I went off to work. Dere want nobody in dat house ceptin' the two ladies what cooks for me. What a man dat ain't married doin' with two cooks? Well, now. Dare ain't no law, as I knows, 'hibting a generman's havin' as many cooks as he has de wages to pay fer.

"I jes' natcherly gets tired er chompn' grub fixed by the same pusson all the time, and besides the good book says, 'contrariety is the spice of life.' When I 'tuns home for my ovenin's freshmeats I missed dat pin, and I knowed one of dem cooks had done tooken it? But which er one I couldn't say. So I hits the grit for the fortuneteller's studio or rudio, whichsomever dey calls it, down on the levee.

"As soon as ever I gets my hoofs on dat white woman's carpet, she up and 'lows:

"'You'se in trouble.' Now, how she know I in trouble cepen she were a fortune-teller? I says 'stonished: 'Lady, you shore hit the truf and that ain't no lie.'

"Then she looks at me ergin and she says: 'And may be its about craps, er the lottery and you wants to know the lucky numbers and you've come to the lady what knows just what tickets will draw and what won't.'

"Then afore I could say nothin' she looks at the deck ergin, and says: 'No;

"You'se in trouble!"

tain't craps, hits womens youse bothered about.' I says 'stonished ergin, 'You shore made the coupling that time, and its about two womens that bothers me.' Den quick as lightnin she says: 'Yes, and one of the ladies lubs you better than the other, though both of their hearts is yourn, and one is darker than the other.' Now, how she know dat? How she fine out dey ain't de same color and dat dat wheeny-whiney voice Narcees ain't as dead stuck on me as Miss Nancy?

"Den I up and tells her dey bofe were gone on me, and do bofe said I was her honey-babe, I was bound to 'fess dat Narcees warnt so sweetsome on me as Nancy. Den I tells her about dat pin and axes her which of dem womens got dat pin.

"She flings a red rag with gold dollars stomped on it acrost her face, and breafes loud a long time, but jus' as I was gittin' skittish-like and sidging tords the door, she flung it off and walls up dem orbs of hern, and reaches out for the spots. Then she says in a ginger cake voice, 'Mr. Washington, it is the light lady what is the larcener of your valable joolry.' Then pintin to the queen of hearts she says 'splanatorious like, 'You will preserve, Mr. Washington, it is a red queen and not a black queen that the sperits has turn up, and hence it is the light lady what has larcenered your pin.'

"I gives her twenty-five cents, and she says polite as a basket of chips, 'Mr. Washington, I would be proud to have you call ergin when youse in trouble and let me and the cards hextricate you from your difficulties. The cards never lies. I gives you my own word for it,' says she.

"Now, I wants you to have dat Narcees 'rested and flung in jail, and when she am sent up there with dem rounders and crap shooters she'll learn better than to hook her clampers on joolry what ain't hern.

"Can't have her rested on evidence like dat? Dat ain't no proof? What you tryin to give me, squire? What more proof does you want? Youse got my word, the word of an oil mill's generman, that the pin were tooken, and you got the word of the fortune lady dat Narcees were the thief. I like then fer you to tell me if dat ain't proof enough to convic a white pusson, much less er cullud lady. Well, sponsen she 'nies it? Ain't it two ergin one?

"Go home and scuse her o' takin it, and may be will fessup? May be she will, judge, but I misdoubts it. If you'll excuse my not usin manners and behavior in the intrust of truth and hoss sense, I wants ter leave it wid you—it is seldom and rare a man can git a woman to own to what he knows to be de truf much less to fess just what he bellebes to be so and haves no proof on it. I am mighty afeared, squire, dat you maye be a good judge of law, but I tell you now I ain't a placin much pendence on yer jedgment of womens.

"You won't have her 'rested? Well, I'll go home and 'scuse her jest as you say, and see what I will see."

Grumbling over the unreason of the law which rejected the word of an oil mill hand and a fortune teller lady combined as insufficient to convict a "larcener," he slowly strode out of the office.

In about an hour there was a commotion among the loafers at the door of this theater where farces, comedies and tragedies are daily enacted without admission fees, and the justice looking up saw a constable authoritatively leading up to the bar the "oil mill hand" and two deeply indignant females, one light yellow and the other chocolate brown. Before the justice or the constable could say a word the oil mill hand commenced:

"Its all your fault, 'squire. You'se to blame for the whole thing. I told you you was ignunt of womens, I believed it then, but fore Gowd I knows it now. You'se jest dat ignunt of womens dat I am almost forceted to belibe you ain't never had no mammy; you'se to blame fer de whole rucus, dats what you is, 'squire.

"How you ter blame? Well, I'll tell you. I goes home, I does,—jess like you tells me. Dar' I find Narcess er settin' in a cheere rockin' herself and a guzzlin' of beer. It made me mad shore-'nough dat dat woman's conscience ain't a pesterin' her. So I go up to her, squire, just as you told me, and I says, as you said fer me to say, 'You low-down, bench-legged chile of a sea cook, you done stole my pin. You'se a thief. I'se got the 'squire's own word fer it. And what you reckon, squire? Did dat woman cornfess? Not much. But that honey babe called me a liar—me, judge! I would say a dern liar, as she said it her ownself, if I warnt in cote. Now, no man ain't got no right to let a pusson what's littler than him call him a lie. 'Tain't right. And besides it was same as calling you a liar, 'squire, fer I said what you told me.

"So I lambastes dat audacious woman one on her jaw. I jus' couldn't stand to have you call a lie to my face. Now what you reckon dat woman done? Take her chastisements according to the law and the scriptures? Not much; she was dat lost to reason dat she fetches me one side the haid with the hatchet.

"Nancy, she hears the racket from the kitchen and comes a sailing in and 'lows if there's any plantin' of fistes to be did in dat house she reckoned she'd take a han', and from the way Narcess yell, I'm 'pelled to spect she mus' er took two hans. Fis' and skull, skull and fis', they has it, while I wipes off the blood fore it dries on my hair and makes it hard fer to comb.

"Just den in steps your cornstable. Tho' I done tole him we warn't a' hurtin' nobody but jest tendin' to family juties, he 'rests us all three, and here we is.

"All through your fault, 'squire. All through yure igunce of womens. I oughtern to blame you, for you did the best you knowed, but its tough for a perfessing Christian and his cookladies to be drug through the streets same as rounders, and bone-rollers.

"'Dollar fine each and costs of the cote?' 'Breach of the peace?'

"Well, you may call it a breach of the peace, or a peace of the breaches, jus' as you's a mind to, but I nominates it a squire's pore judgment of womens, I does. Three dollars fine and twelve dollars costes. Just sen' that cornstable of yourn to the foreman of the mill and he'll square him up.

"Come erlong, Nancy. Come 'long, Narcess, and you needn't ter be a blinkin' them wall eyes of yourn at the 'squire. He ain't a studyin' yer. But just recollects, Miss Himpertnance, not to call a 'squire a lie ergin, for that fine has jus' the same as took two new dresses off'n your back.

"Goodby, 'squire, I ain't no wise thinkin' hard of you, but I wants to tell you now, I'll never follow nary nuther justice about the handlin' of womens. They is too ignunt of the creeturs."

WHY THE BOILER BURSTS.

Scientific Explanation of Some Phenomena of the Kitchen.

When you hear the kitchen boiler cracking there is no cause for alarm. There is a prevailing impression that the cracking is produced by steam and that there is, therefore, an increased pressure on the boiler at such times. But this is an error. If the boiler is in good condition, with the water turned on as usual, so that the boiler is kept filled, the only pressure that it is subjected to is the same as that in the water pipes, from which, of course, there never is the slightest danger. And this is true, no matter how hot the water in the boiler may be. The reason is very simple. As long as the boiler is kept full of water there is no room for steam. If you open the hot-water cock the water pours out and steam rises from it because it then has a chance to escape into the air. In other words rapid evaporation takes place. But as the hot water pours out water from the pipes rushes in to take its place, and thus the boiler is kept full. The cracking noise referred to is heard when the water is unusually hot, and is nothing but the expansion of the boiler under the influence of that heat. It is in no degree an indication of danger, unless, indeed, the boiler is worn out or defective, which is a matter entirely outside of what we are now considering. When a kitchen boiler explodes it is generally because a fire has been kindled in the range while the boiler was empty. It happens sometimes when people come back to town after spending the summer away. The fire heats the boiler, of course, and when the water is turned on it is converted suddenly and violently into steam, and the boiler cannot stand the enormous pressure. Fortunately, few persons are thoughtless enough or silly enough to build a fire before opening the cocks connecting the boiler with the water pipes.

Tourist Postal Cards.

Tourist postal cards are extremely popular on the continent of Europe. On this side the water the people seem to be too busy to think about them, but in Germany no city or hamlet, no place of historical interest is without these cards embellished with some design appropriate to the locality, which offer convenient means of communication with friends at home. Last summer, according to the German postoffice returns, over 20,000,000 cards were mailed in one week. Forty-six per cent were tourists' cards. The postage collected daily on these cards was more than $16,000. Berlin furnished the largest quota—137,000 cards. Next followed Dresden, then Hamburg, Cologne, Leipzig, Breslau, Frankfort, Hanover, Halle, Dusseldorf, Wiesbaden and Kiel. Bremen stood thirteenth in the list, with a daily overage of nearly 9,000 postals. —New York Press.

Betting and Oranges.

A favorite way of betting in China is with oranges. This goes on at the fruit stalls and also in private houses. The bet is on the number of seeds in an orange. Sometimes it is as to whether the number is odd or even and at others as to the exact number of seeds the orange contains. If at a fruit stand the dealer will pay the lucky guesser five times his debt, but the loser must pay the value of the orange and also five times as much as he has wagered. Quail-fighting and cricket combats are also sources of great interest to the oriental sporting fraternities.

A Puzzle Solved.

Many housekeepers have wondered what the white powder covering the nutmeg is. An old spice dealer is authority that as soon as the nutmeg is gathered it is rolled in a lime made from burned oyster shells in order to prevent its destruction by the weevil, and it is this dust that remains upon it. Mace is one of the outer coverings of the nutmeg, and is preferred by many cooks because of its color.—Milwaukee Wisconsin.

BIG CLASH IN CHINA

WARLIKE MOVEMENTS OF CHINESE AND ALLIED TROOPS.

Twenty Thousand Chinese Troops Are Advancing in the Provinces of Shansi and Chili — Force of French and German Troops Starts Hurriedly From Pekin — Present Expedition Due to the Hostile Attitude of Gen. Li—Missionary Exposes the Duplicity of Li Hung Chang.

Berlin, April 19.—Field Marshal Count von Waldersee telegraphs from Pekin that he has been informed that 20,000 Chinese are advancing through the defiles between the provinces of Shansi and Chili. It is not known whether their intentions are peaceable or warlike.

-o-

Pekin, April 19.—The departure from here yesterday of French and German troops to the western border of the province of Chili was the first intimation the other commanders had that any such expedition was planned. Some people view the expedition as inconsistent, owing to the negotiations that are now going on, while others commend the movement as necessary. The present expedition is due to the hostile attitude of the Chinese general, Li. So far as known it is believed that most of the Chinese troops to the north of Pekin are still hostile to the foreigners.

A missionary named Killie (the Rev. Mr. Kelley, Presbyterian?) has returned from Sanho, where Christians were burned to death in December. Mr. Killie reports to Gen. Chaffee that some time ago some of his

Converts Were Killed.

He had the guilty parties tried in the Chinese courts, where they were convicted and sentenced to death, subject to Li Hung Chang's signature. Mr. Killie came to Pekin to see Li, who said the men should be executed immediately. Upon going to Sanho three weeks later the missionary found the men all alive. He spoke to a judge of the Chinese court upon the matter, who thereupon showed him a letter from Li Hung Chang giving explicit instructions that the men must not be executed, as they had only been convicted on the testimony of Christians, consequently the evidence was untrustworthy. Mr. Killie has a copy of this letter. In the meantime the French had proved the same men guilty of incendiarism and other outrages and demanded their execution, whereupon the judge again showed his orders from Li Hung Chang. The French authorities replied that if the men were not executed within eight days they would take the law in their own hands and punish the Chinese officials likewise.

PASSES THE HALF BILLION.

Gold Holdings in the United States Treasury.

Washington, April 19. — The gold holdings in the treasury department yesterday amounted to the enormous sum of $500,552,526. This is in spite of the recent purchases by the secretary of the treasury of about $6,000,000 in bonds which were paid for in gold. Exclusive of the gold held against the gold certificates of the treasury the total gold is about $248,199,547. This amount includes the $150,000,000 gold reserve, leaving $98,199,547 of free gold. Treasurer Roberts estimates that the more than half a billion of gold on hand will be increased $10,000,000 or $15,000,000 more by the first of July unless the volume of bonds purchased by the secretary of the treasury is greater than now estimated. This is the largest amount of gold now held by any single financial institution in the world, and it is the largest ever held by any institution with one exception—the Imperial Bank of Russia, which in February, 1898, raised its total holdings to $590,300,000.

PRIESTS FROM THE STATES.

Will Take the Place of Spanish Friars in the Philippines.

Washington, April 19. — The report from Manila that Judge Taft has the assurance from Mgr. Chappelle that the Spanish friars will not attempt to return to their old parishes is regarded as reliable at the war department, though no official information has been received from Judge Taft. All official reports from the Philippine commission have indicated that this would be the outcome. Judge Taft believes that the people are loyal to the Catholic church, and that they should have Catholic priests, but these must not be friars. He has favored priests from the United States, and it is believed that Mgr. Chappelle has reached the same conclusion, and that he will make such recommendations in Rome, so that young priests from this country will be sent to the Philippines to take up the work of the friars.

GOMEZ IS COMING.

He Will Thank the Americans for Their Assistance to Cuba.

Havana, April 19.—Gen. Maximo Gomez is making arrangements to go to the United States to visit Gen. Estrada Palma. He will be accompanied by his son Urbide, and will probably return in the United States until the return of the convention's commission on relations. He desires to await action on the Platt amendment in order to avoid the accusation that the trip is made for political purposes. He desires to visit the americans and thank them for the assistance they rendered Cuba during the struggle with Spain. Gen. Palma is a warm supporter of Gomez for the presidency.

Bulgarian Invasion Repulsed.

Vienna, April 19.—A band of Bulgarians yesterday invaded Turkish territory at Ak-Task, in Northern Turkestan. They were repulsed by the Turkish troops. One Bulgarian was killed and the others escaped.

Banished Students Return.

St. Petersburg, April 19.—In consequence of their petitions to the czar a number of banished students have been allowed to return upon giving a written pledge not to engage in the antiorthodox propaganda.

EXAGERTED AND MISLEADING.

Gen. MacArthur Reports Regarding the Alleged Frauds.

Washington, April 20.—The following cablegram was made public at the war department yesterday:

"Manila—Adjutant General, Washington: With reference to your telegram of 16th, press report grossly exaggerated, misleading; matters therein touched upon regarding officers' subsistence department fully investigated. Proceedings (mailed) by transport Sheridan. Regarding theft commissary stores, amount which grossly exaggerated by press reports, immediate and most drastic measures already been applied. Three officers and number enlisted men being tried by court-martial. Number citizens military commission. —MacArthur."

No statement was made that the report of Gen. MacArthur was satisfactory, although it all along has been the theory at the war department that the reports from Manila were exaggerated. At the same time there is cause for regret in the department that even under the best construction that can be placed upon the dispatch three officers and a number of enlisted men and a number of civilians have conducted themselves in such a manner as to necessitate a court-martial, or a trial by a military commission in the case of the civilians. It is said, however, that even if these persons were being tried there might be exaggeration in regard to the offenses with which they are charged.

FIRST PRESIDENT OF CUBA.

Estrada Palma Is Favored by Gen. Gomez.

Washington, April 20.—Gen. Maximo Gomez has declared himself in favor of Estrada Palma for first president of Cuba. This is regarded as a good indication of the conservatism of the real leaders of Cuba.

Gen. Gomez, as the leader of the Cuban revolution and the general of the Cuban army, has been regarded as the most probable leader of the Revolutionary party. An effort was made in the convention to adopt a clause into the constitution providing that only native born Cubans should be eligible to the office of president. This would have shut out Gomez, as he is a native of San Domingo, but it failed to pass. If Gen. Gomez has determined to head a movement for Gen. Palma that movement will receive encouragement from Washington. Gen. Palma was at the head of the Cuban junta in this country during the consideration of the Cuban question by congress. He is a Cuban, but for some years he has lived in this country, and has conducted a school for the education of Cuban youths. He is conservative and level-headed, and his residence in this country and experience in Washington, where he has met public men, makes him better qualified to take the reins of government in Cuba than other leaders who have not had experience in public affairs.

STRUCK BY A SNOWSLIDE.

Passenger Train Hurled Into a Chasm and Four Men Killed.

Boulder, Colo., April 20. — A terrible accident occurred on the Colorado & Northwestern road near this city. Two big engines attached to a passenger train coming from Ward to Boulder, were struck by a huge snowslide and hurled into the chasm below. One fireman has not yet been accounted for and it is believed he is dead. Four other trainmen were killed. The bodies have not been recovered. The passenger train left Ward for Boulder drawn by two engines. When the train arrived at Boomerville the engines were uncoupled and started up the hill to buck the snow which was deep upon the tracks. A sharp curve occurs near the apex of the mountain, and just as the engines started to round the curve a vast avalanche of snow and earth was loosened from above. It came down with a terrific force and gained momentum every second. It is said that the train, which was heavily loaded with passengers, was not touched by the slide.

ATTEMPTED SUICIDE.

Beautiful and Accomplished Young Woman Takes Poison.

Grinnell, Iowa, April 20.—Because, it is alleged, her love was unrequited, beautiful and accomplished Laura Akers of Bloomfield attempted her life with poison and is still in a very precarious condition. Miss Akers is nineteen years of age. Her personal charms are many and for some time she has been a prominent figure in local social circles. She is a sister of Prof. Akers of the Pulaski high school and possesses many accomplishments. The deed was attempted while her parents were away from the house. The first attempt failed because Miss Akers took too much of the poison. The last attempt was more successful and would have terminated fatally had it not been for prompt assistance.

ROUTING THE BOERS.

Plummer and Douglas Continuing to Operate With Success.

London, April 20.—A dispatch from Gen. Kitchener, dated Pretoria, April 17, says: "Plumer has occupied Bathfont, capturing thirteen prisoners and a number of rifles and ammunition. Douglas' column has occupied Dulstroom. Six Boers were killed. Elliott's division has brought in a large number of cattle."

NATIONAL COAL MINE.

New Zealand Premier Has a Plan to Keep Down Prices.

Victoria, B. C., April 20.—The steamer Aorangi brings news from New Zealand that Premier Siddon will ask the government of the colony to start a national coal mine to supply the government-owned railways and private consumers and keep down prices.

Ear Bitten Off.

Chicago, April 20.—John McConachie, conductor of a Halsted street cable car, had his ear bitten off by a passenger. A young man tendered a transfer which the conductor declared worthless. In trying to eject the passenger McConachie lost his ear.

Seeding Delayed.

Stewartville, Minn., April 20.—Very little seeding has been done here yet. The ground has not been so wet in several years, and many fields cannot be worked for some time.

WORK OF PLANTING

FARMERS BEGINNING SEEDING OPERATIONS.

Crop Conditions Are Generally Favorable Throughout the Country —Rains Retard Farm Work in Some States, While in Others There Is Insufficient Moisture—Winter Wheat Making Favorable Progress—Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa and South Dakota Reports.

Washington, April 18.—The crop report of the weather bureau issued yesterday shows that over the greater part of the country east of the Rocky mountains the week has been abnormally cool and unfavorable for germination and growth. Excessive rains retarded farm work in the states of the Middle Rocky mountain slope and lower Missouri valley, while a large part of the lake region, Southern Florida and California need rain. With the exception of portions of the lake region, Florida, Texas and California, there is generally ample moisture in the soil and the conditions now most needed, especially in the central valleys and Middle Atlantic states are sunshine and warmth.

Slow progress has been made with corn planting, none having yet been planted north of the Ohio river or farther north than Southern Missouri to the westward.

Nearly all reports from the winter wheat states show that winter wheat has made favorable progress, although its growth has not been rapid owing to low temperatures.

Spring wheat seeding is well advanced over the southern portion of the spring wheat region, and some has been sown on the high lands in Northern Minnesota. In South Dakota the early sown is germinating well.

Oat seeding has been rapidly pushed in portions of the central valleys, some having been sown as far north as Southern Minnesota and New York, but slow progress has been made in Kentucky and portions of Missouri.

The following special bulletins from the Northwestern states show the condition of crops in that section of the country:

Wisconsin—Some snow on ground in northern counties but in central and southern sections soil about free from frost; some plowing in extreme southern counties but farm work not generally commenced; winter wheat, rye and clover in excellent condition; soil generally well stored with moisture.

Minnesota—Light rains in middle of week and cloudy weather prevented drying of heavy soils; wheat seeding general on high lands in all portions except southeast; in central and southwest portions wheat seeding well advanced and some oats and barley sown; clover and winter rye and wheat and fruits wintered well.

Iowa—Several fair days improving soil condition and seeding is in progress in all districts; sowing spring wheat nearly completed.

South Dakota—Although considerably delayed by freezing and wet weather, spring wheat seeding is far advanced in southeastern, progressing fairly in middle and begun in northern counties, and early sown germinating well in the south; soil amply moist generally, some localities too wet, especially in the north; grass and winter rye starting nicely.

A STUBBORN FIGHT.

Amalgamated Association Demands Recognition of the Union.

Pittsburg, April 18.—The close of the second day of the strike at the Deewes wood plant of the American Sheet Steel company at McKeesport shows a condition of affairs that forebodes a hard fight. The fight is being made by the Amalgamated association for the recognition of unionism, and President Shaffer's announcement that all of the company's mills will be called out may receive sanction of the advisory board to-day. Secretary Jeckett, in charge of the labor bureau of the company, will be present at this meeting and present the company's side of the matter and urge that no strike be declared. If the statement credited to the company that the McKeesport plant will be closed indefinitely rather than recognize the union, is adhered to, President Shaffer's attitude will demand that the entire strength of the Amalgamated association be pitted against the company as a whole. The status of the strike now is that only two departments of the mill are in operation, the steel mill or finishing department and the hammer shop.

TOPPLED OVER A BRIDGE.

Car Drops Eighty Feet and Two Men Are Killed.

Buffalo, N. Y., April 18.—A derrick car and a gondola toppled over a bridge over Eighteen-Mile creek, eighteen miles from Buffalo on the Nickle Plate road last evening. Sixteen men went with them to the rocky bed fifty feet below. Two were so badly injured that they died within half an hour after the accident. Four others were brought to the emergency hospital in this city. At midnight the surgeons said it was doubtful if two of them would live until daybreak.

LAUNCHING THE MAINE.

Interesting Event Will Take Place on Memorial Day.

Philadelphia, April 18.—It has practically been decided by the Cramps' Shipbuilding company to launch the United States battleship Maine on Memorial day. Survivors of the original Maine and the widows and orphans of the sailors killed in Havana harbor will probably be invited to attend the launching.

NAPOLEON AND HELENA.

French Prince Marries Daughter of Russian Grand Duke.

Brussels, April 18. — The Petit Bleu says that Prince Louis Napoleon has married the Grand Duchess Helena, daughter of the Russian Grand Duke Vladimir. Prince Louis Napoleon was born July 16, 1864. He is the second son of the late Prince Jerome Napoleon and the younger brother of Prince Victor. Helena, the youngest child of the Russian Grand Duke Vladimir, was born Jan. 29, 1882.

THE THIEF RIVER FALLS NEWS.

VOL. XVIII. NO. 17. THIEF RIVER FALLS, RED LAKE COUNTY, MINN., THURSDAY, MAY 2, 1901. $1.50 PER YEAR.

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

CUBANS TO ACCEPT

COMMISSION WILL MAKE FAVORABLE REPORT.

Now Have a Clearer Understanding of the Relations This Government Would Maintain Toward Cuba—Cubans Realize That the Acceptance of the Platt Amendment Will Guarantee Their Independence—Are Now Chiefly Concerned in the Economic Aspect of the Relations.

Washington, April 25.—As a result of the visit of the Cuban commissioners it is evident that these gentlemen will return to Havana with a clearer understanding of the relations this government would maintain toward Cuba. They have found the president, members of his cabinet, senators and representatives all earnestly in favor of doing everything possible to give Cuba the largest measure of independence not dangerous to the welfare of this country. It has been explained to them that the Platt amendment was adopted to insure Cuba independence in the conduct of her own affairs and to guarantee that independence by the power of the American army and navy. The Cubans already understand this, but they have depended upon the enforcement of the Monroe doctrine to from the interference of foreign powers without assuming any obligations of their own to this government. Without exception the Cuban commission acknowledges the supremacy of the United States in all matters affecting the American continent. Dr. Tamayo, secretary of state for Gen. Wood's Cuban cabinet, gave out the following statement:

"There is no doubt that we will present a favorable report to the convention. We have made little progress so far in discussing the economical problems, but under no circumstances will there be any conflict between us and the United States government. What we are now chiefly interested in is the economic aspect of relations. Our products of sugar and tobacco must in this country. If we receive special tariff advantages it will mean more to Cuba than all other concessions. Indeed, our principal object in coming here is to ascertain what this government will do in the way of tariff inducements. We have some differences of opinion among ourselves as to the eventual course, but there is little doubt that the president is seeking to establish relations which will be mutually beneficial."

Although practically agreed to recommend the ratification of the Platt amendment, the Cuban commission accepts this alternative not without reserve, but as inevitable. Secretary Root conferred with the Cubans at length yesterday. He had them, as on Thursday, at luncheon in the afternoon, and then presided at a meeting at the war department, at which Gen. Wood was also present.

GREISHEIM'S HORROR.

Eighty Bodies Taken From the Ruins of the Chemical Works.

Frankfort-on-the-Main, April 28. — Eighty bodies have been recovered from the ruins of the Greisheim electro-chemical works. It is believed that there are more bodies in the ruins. It is estimated that in addition to the killed 150 persons were injured. Many others are missing. A number of children who were hurled by the explosion into the River Main were drowned before rescuers could reach them. Several firemen are among the victims. The signal was given at 10:30 yesterday morning to all the inhabitants of Greisheim and vicinity that they must leave immediately, as an explosion of a great benzine reservoir was expected. Even the firemen, salvagers and soldiers left, but the explosion did not occur. Several women and children were trampled to death during the panic-stricken flight.

NEGRO LYNCHED.

He Had Committed an Assault on a Young Woman.

Elberton, Ga., April 28.—While fishing in the Savannah river near her home, Wednesday, Miss Rhoda Alexander was assaulted by a negro workman named William Goolsby. Miss Alexander reported the matter to her mother. About that time the negro appeared and offered to work six month for the mother if she would not report him. Before he could leave the place some friends of the family appeared, took charge of the negro and left for the river. Later they reported that they had set him free. Yesterday it developed that Goolsby was lynched and that his body was thrown into the Savannah river.

CURE FOR TUBERCULOSIS.

Argentine Army Surgeon Publishes Report on His Experiments.

Buenos Ayres, Arg., April 28.—Dr. C. L. Villar, an Argentine army surgeon, has just published a report on the treatment of fifty cases of tuberculosis with his serum at the military hospital in this city. The treatment extended from Dec. 2, 1900, to April 26, 1901. Tuberculosis in its early stages, says Dr. Villar, is cured within forty days. Patients whose cases were more advanced, but without complications, he reports, were all cured within ninety days. Of those patients whose cases were far advanced, all were cured except those who could offer very little resistance to the disease.

LINCOLN'S LAST RESTING PLACE.

Remains of the Martyred President Placed in the Permanent Tomb.

Springfield, Ill., April 26. — The caskets containing the remains of Abraham Lincoln and other members of his family were deposited in the crypt in the reconstructed Lincoln monument yesterday afternoon. Since March 10 of this year the caskets have been reposing in a temporary stone vault, pending the completion of the extensive repairs to the monument. The removal was unceremonious, being quietly witnessed by Gov. Yates, United States Judge Humphrey, Mayor Phillips and other state and city officials, besides about 200 citizens of Springfield. The exact time of removal had been withheld from the public as far as possible. The temporary vault was so thoroughly cemented that it was 5 o'clock, three hours after the work of removal commenced; that the remains of the president, which were the last to be removed, were finally placed in the marble sarcophagus in the crypt, where they were sealed up and where they will probably remain through all time. The casket was not opened for the identification of the body of the martyr president as had been expected, nor was even the leaden casket exposed to view, being covered by a cedar casket. The remains which now rest in the tomb -monument are those of President and Mrs. Lincoln, their sons Willie, Thomas and Eddie, and Abraham, son of their oldest son, Robert T. Lincoln.

LIEUTENANTS NAMED.

Nearly Six Hundred Selected Under the Army Reorganization Bill.

Washington, April 26. — The secretary of war yesterday made public the names of the 588 men selected for first and second lieutenants in the regular army under the army reorganization bill. All of these men have had service either in the state or national volunteer or in the regular army. They have been ordered for examination, and should they pass will be appointed. The following are from Northwestern states: Minnesota, eight, James G. Taylor, Ralph Emerson Herring, Fred H. Parks, George I. Becker, Alfred S. Morgan, Walter H. Johnson, John N. Loye, A. W. Bjornstad; North Dakota, one, W. P. Moffatt; South Dakota, two, Arthur L. Fuller, Harry A. Hegeman; Wisconsin, eleven, John B. Shuman, Frank L. French, Harry W. Newton, John H. Baker, Reuben D. Blanchard, Edward K. Madsen, John C. Ohnstan, Frederick P. Cook, Robert F. Woods, John H. Lewis.

WOMEN WHIPPED.

Sensational Incident of the Anti-Vice Crusade in Suffolk, Va.

Suffolk, Va., April 26. — As a result of an anti-vice crusade, Carrie Palmer and Lavina White were officially cowhided in the city hall by Chief of Police Ames. The young women quivered with pain as twenty stripes from a rawhide were laid upon their backs. When the whipping was over they were exiled from the town, never to return on the penalty of fifty lashes upon the naked skin. The officials mean to continue the infliction of stringent penalties until objectionable conditions in the town are wiped out. This was the first cowhiding of women in Suffolk's history.

KRUGER IS WORRIED.

He Fears Mrs. Botha Will Induce Her Husband to Surrender.

New York, April 26. — Once again peace rumors are in the air, says the Tribune's London correspondent. Mrs. Botha has been in correspondence with Lord Kitchener, and as a result it is believed that the British commander-in-chief has agreed to receive the three Boer generals, Botha, Delarey and Viljeon, within a few days. While nothing is definitely known, it is, perhaps, not without significance that the news should reach London from Amsterdam that Mr. Kruger is afraid Mrs. Botha's efforts will cause her husband to surrender.

ROBBED AT A WEDDING.

Sioux City Man Loses $500 Worth of Jewelry in Jersey City.

New York, April 26. — While the guests at the wedding feast of Miss Edna Amelia Schrader of Sioux City, Iowa, and Rudolph Weller of Hoboken were enjoying themselves at Postkeller hall, 213 Washington street, Jersey City, George Schrader, the father of the bride, fell asleep and he was put to bed in a room over the hall. When he awoke he discovered that $500 worth of jewelry had been stolen from his clothing. The police believe that one of the wedding guests did it. A reward of $50 has been offered for the return of the jewelry.

PUGILIST'S DEATH.

Billy Smith Succumbs to a Knock-Out Blow.

London, April 26. — Billy Smith the American pugilist who was knocked out in the eighth round of a contest with Jack Roberts for the 126-pound championship of England Monday night, and who has lain unconscious in a hospital since, died at 11:45 yesterday. An inquest will be held. Roberts, the manager of the National Sporting club, the referee and the seconds have surrendered to the police.

SIGNAL FOR THE SEA.

Wireless Telegraphy Station to Be Erected Near Fastnet Rock.

London, April 26.—Marconi's wireless telegraph company is erecting an etheric station on the mainland of England near Fastnet Rock. All vessels fitted with a transmitter will be able to report themselves when they are many miles beyond the rock, and thus avoid threading the passage separating it from the mainland.

CALLAHAN NOT GUILTY.

So Says the Jury and the Judge Expresses His Disgust in Emphatic Terms.

Omaha, April 30.—After considering over night the guilt or innocence of James Callahan, the jury announced yesterday morning that he had no part in the kidnapping of Edward Cudahy, Jr. The verdict was an evident surprise to the court, and Judge Baker expressed his disgust in emphatic terms. Callahan was arrested on two other counts which the state is not now prepared to say will be made use of as no new evidence is at hand and the expense of going over the ground again is considerable. Judge Baker, addressing the jury, rebuked them in the most vigorous terms. "If Callahan had made his own choice of a jury," the court said, "he could not have selected twelve men who would have served him more faithfully. If the state for its part had made the selection, I know of no men it could have named who could have been less careful of its interests. The jury is discharged without the compliments of the court, and the prisoner is likewise turned loose as to this trial, I presume to continue the criminal practices in which you have failed to check him. I do not know what motive actuated you in reaching this decision, but I hope none of you will ever appear again in this jury box."

The jury was evidently ill at ease during this arraignment, but did not make any response and filed rapidly from the box as soon as it was at liberty. In the hallway Callahan mumbled his thanks and shook the jurymen's hands. This proceeding was one of embarrassment under the contemptuous eyes of the court officers. Chief of Police Donohue says he will urge Mr. Cudahy to at once withdraw the proffered reward of $5,000 for the apprehension of Pat Crowe. "Crowe might easily make an appearance and claim the reward himself," said Chief Donohue, "as the evidence against him is no more direct than that against Callahan. In my eighteen years of experience with criminals I have never heard more absolutely convincing evidence presented than that presented against Callahan."

DRAGGED TO DEATH BY A PONY.

Girl's Foot Is Caught in a Stirrup When the Animal Runs Away.

Red Oak, Iowa, April 30. — Pluma Nordquist, the twelve-year-old daughter of S. C. Nordquist, a prominent Red Oak merchant, was dragged half a mile by a runaway pony, with her foot fast in the stirrup. She was dead when found.

Attempt to Blow Up a Mine.

Grand Rapids, Mich., April 30.—An attempt was made during the night to blow up the Midland Plaster company's mine near here. A fuse leading to 500 pounds of dynamite so placed that its explosion would wreck the mine, was discovered by an employe, who destroyed it. Forty men employed in the mine getting out stuff for the Pan-American exposition, struck the previous day. The mine is now guarded by a force of deputies.

Three Brothers Shot.

Gilman, Ill., April 30.—At a country dance three miles south of Gilman the three Morris brothers, Walter, James and Philip, of this city, were shot. Walter died; the other two will recover, though James was seriously wounded. The shooting followed a fight between the brothers and three or four other guests at the dance. George Morrison did the shooting. He gave himself up to the sheriff and claims he fired in self-defense.

Libraries for Iowa Towns.

Sioux City, Iowa, April 30.—The second bulletin of the state library commission, which has just been received here, shows that six Iowa towns have voted tax levies this spring for the establishment of public libraries. They are Pleasant, Hawkeye, Stuart, Jefferson, Hawarden and Colfax. Davenport, Cedar Rapids, Mount Vernon and Upper Iowa university at Fayette, all have received a gift of $25,000 from ex-Gov. Drake and have voted a tax for the establishment of a free public library.

Dennis Must Be Tried in Nebraska.

Sioux City, Iowa, April 30.—The Monona county grand jury failed to find an indictment against Frank Dennis for the alleged murder of John P. Worrell last February. The crime occurred on a sandbar in the Missouri river, and the evidence showed that the crime was out of the jurisdiction of the Iowa court. The surveyor who investigated the matter testified before the grand jury. It is said the Burt county, Neb., authorities will take up the matter of prosecuting Dennis.

Sheriff in Possession.

Sioux City, Iowa, April 30.—The sheriff of Ida county has taken possession of the hardware and implement business of F. Thompson of Holstein on a writ of attachment. Thompson left home suddenly last Monday and numerous claims are being filed by creditors. Thompson's wife claims a $5,000 interest in the business.

Called Back.

Sioux City, Iowa, April 30.—William Parkin the young man who escaped from the county jail here a few days ago while painting in the corridor, was arrested at Worthing, S. D., and brought back by Sheriff Jackson. Parkin was waiting to be taken to the state's prison to serve an eighteen months' term when he escaped.

MRS. NATION CRAZY

CONFINED IN A PADDED CELL AT WICHITA, KAN.

Kansas Saloon Smasher Becomes Raving Mad—She Imagines That She Is an Apostle Sent to Earth to Rule It—It Is Believed That Her Insanity Is Temporary—Her First Act of Madness Was to Assault Her Cellmate — Abuses the Sheriff and Her Best Friends.

Wichita, Kan., April 30.—Mrs. Carrie Nation, the noted saloon smasher, is confined in her cell in the county jail here, raving mad. She is thought to be only temporarily insane, however. Her insanity was Saturday and yesterday of the most acute stage. She imagines herself to be an apostle sent to the earth to rule it. She is confined in a dungeon cell, which has been padded, and everything is kept from her so she cannot injure herself.

Mrs. Nation's friends say that her insanity fit is caused by the news of her brother's death at Lewisburg Saturday. He was her bondsman in numerous cases, and just before she went voluntarily to jail here he called her up by telephone and offered to go on her bond, but she refused, preferring to serve time. Mrs. Nation's first act of insanity was to assault her cellmate, Mrs. Wilhoit, one of the two women who assisted her in several raids. She accused Mrs. Wilhoit of being a to gain confessions from her. She slapped her and otherwise made life dangerous until Sheriff Simmons confined Mrs. Nation in a dungeon in the lower part of the jail and put her on bread and water. Every few hours she would go into wild fits and talk unreasonably to herself. Saturday morning when news came that she had better get bond and come to see her brother she commenced growing worse. James Ray, her attorney, and Wilburt Jones, former Prohibition candidate for mayor, called at her cell door and offered to go her bail. She yelled at them wildly: "Go out of here, you scullions of hell, or I will throw lightning of saints at you. If I want to get out of here I can fly through the walls. The devil is in your hearts." Both men were astounded, as they have been her best friends since she and Jones has acted as her bondsman upon several occasions. Sheriff Simmons told her that she should accept bond if she wanted to see her brother alive, but she only commenced to abuse him. No one is allowed near her. David Nation, husband of the saloon wrecker, who is spending his vacation in Wichita, has been notified of the serious condition of his wife. Physicians have examined her mental condition, and they agree at times she is a raving maniac, while at other times she is as sane as any one could be. It is generally attributed that her raving was caused by solitary confinement and the death of her brother. Mrs. Nation was quieter last evening and announced her intention of going to Lewisburg to-day. Bond has been accepted for her release. Sheriff Simmons says he would be glad to get rid of her, as she is crazy.

BRYAN TO RUN FOR GOVERNOR.

May Be a Candidate for Position of Nebraska's Chief Executive.

New York, April 30.—Edward Rosewater, editor of the Omaha Bee, is quoted as saying:

"William J. Bryan, in my opinion, will be a candidate for governor of Nebraska next year. Mr. Bryan still exerts a wide influence in the state, and if he receives the gubernatorial nomination he will be a very hard man to beat. If elected governor he will hope to secure a Democratic legislature, in which event he will seek an election to the United States senate to succeed Gov. Dietrich, whose term will expire in 1905."

ROWDY STUDENTS IN DISGRACE.

Nine Sophomores at the State University of Kansas Suspended.

Lawrence, Kan., April 30—Nine members of the sophomore class of the University of Kansas, including the class president, were suspended for thirty days by the faculty for rowdyism in connection with a junior class party a week ago. The suspended students attempted to prevent attendance upon a party, destroyed clothing and tied upper classmen so that they could not attend. The nine men suspended were found to be implicated in the affair.

THROWN UNDER A TRAIN.

Omaha Man Robbed and Nearly Killed in Arkansas.

Hot Springs, Ark., April 30. — Two men knocked J. T. Williams, a visitor from Omaha, in the head with a slung shot, robbed him of his purse containing $170 and then threw him blindfolded and his hands tied, under the train on the Hot Springs road. He managed to escape from the horrible death the perpetrators had planned to hide their crime, but his left leg was severed just below the knee. Physicians attended him at once and it is thought he will live.

Probably Insane.

Washington, April 30.—Harry Finkelstein, a well dressed man about thirty-four years of age, who says his home is in Cleveland, Ohio, is locked up at the police station here on suspicion of being insane. He went to the vicinity of the White House, said he wanted to see the president on urgent business of a private nature and acted so [illegible] he was arrested.

Chicago, April 30.—Because she considered herself cheated by Julius Stern, a peddler, in the purchase of some jewelry, Mrs. Lillian Hudgins, a colored woman, slashed the man so badly with a razor that he died inside of two hours. She cut Stern's face to pieces and made a number of gashes across his throat, one of which cut the jugular vein slightly. Stern was carried to the hospital, but the surgeons could do nothing for him. The woman was arrested.

HOT AFTER CAILLES

BLOODTHIRSTY FILIPINO GENERAL PURSUED BY TROOPS.

Americans Surprise His Camp, Capture His Adjutant General and All His Papers, but the General Manages to Escape—Has a Reputation for Vindictiveness and Cruelty — Offered $10 Apiece for Heads of Americans Brought to Him—Can't Claim Immunity if Caught.

Manila, April 30—Capt. Wilson Chase, with a detachment of the Twenty-first infantry, on April 26 surprised the camp of the insurgent general Cailles at Dugot-Dugot, situated nine miles northeast of Cavinti, in the province of Laguna. Cailles was at his camp at the time of the American attack, but managed to escape. Capt. Chase's force captured his adjutant general, five other of his staff officers, fourteen men, twenty rifles, a large amount of ammunition and stores and all the papers and personal effects of the Filipino general. The insurgent major Velo was killed during the engagement, as were Corporal McGill and Private Tripp, both belonging to Company A, Twenty-first. Several columns of the American troops continue vigorously to pursue Gen. Cailles. Gen. Cailles recently offered a reward of $10,000 for the head of Capt. Edward N. Jones, Jr., of the Eighth infantry. For more than a year past Cailles has commanded the insurgent forces operating to the south of Bay Lake, not far from Manila. He is said to be a French half-caste. He has a reutation for vindictiveness and cruelty and is one of two of the Filipino leaders still in the field who have clearly violated the observances of honorable warfare. The Society of Mondo-Ducats, whose practice it was to assassinate and bury alive those of their countrymen who accepted American sovereignty whenever the latter fell into their hands, operated with the cognizance, if not the support of Gen. Cailles. If Cailles were captured, it is doubtful if he could claim immunity for past actions under the terms of the amnesty. In January of this year Cailles offered a reward of $10 apiece for the heads of all Americans brought to him.

STUDENT KILLED.

Is Shot by Companion While They Are Acting in a Play.

Burnsville, N. C., April 30. — During the closing exercises of the Stanley-McCormick high school at Burnsville R. N. McInturf, one of the students, was shot and killed by Baccus Bailey, another student, both representing characters in a play which was being enacted. When it became necessary for Bailey, in his role, to defend himself with a revolver against a drawn knife in the hands of McInturf, he used by mistake a loaded pistol, and in the presence of several hundred persons McInturf was shot dead on the stage. The boys were roommates and special friends.

JOLT FOR JEFFRIES.

Champion Pugilist Hit With a Beer Glass by a Congressman.

Kansas City, April 30. — James J. Jeffries, the champion pugilist, quarreled with Congressman Jim Butler of St. Louis in a down town saloon, and the big pugilist was hit with a beer glass before the quarrel ended. Butler and Jeffries were in an ugly mood, and for a time it was feared that serious trouble would result. Congressman Butler was game and did not flinch when Jeffries threatened to extend his terrible right. The St. Louis congressman picked up a beer glass and let it fly at the champion. Friends interfered and the belligerents shook hands.

TRAGEDY AT BREAKFAST TABLE.

A Man Kills His Sister Without Warning.

Prairie du Chien, Wis., April 30. — Max Heck, who runs his father's farm near McGregor, Iowa, yesterday shot and almost instantly killed his sister, Mrs. Ellsworth, at her home in McGregor while at the breakfast table. The family had sat down to breakfast when Heck drew a revolver and fired directly at his sister. The ball entered just below the heart. It is thought that Heck was temporarily insane. He was arrested.

MIDWAY MUST CLOSE SUNDAYS.

Compromise Made on the Buffalo Sunday Closing Issue.

Buffalo, N. Y., April 30.—The question of whether the gates of the Pan-American grounds are to be open on Sunday was finally settled by the board of directors. Their decision is a compromise. The gates are to be open from 1 p. m. to 11 p. m., but the midway and all amusement features will be closed during the twenty-four hours from Saturday night until Monday morning.

Pickpocket Killed.

Chicago, April 30. — While trying to escape arrest for snatching a woman's purse Richard Donahue, a notorious pickpocket was shot and instantly killed last night by Policeman Gardiner. Donahue was accompanied by three companions, but the latter managed to escape. The four thieves had been working in a crowd of several hundred people who were watching a fire.

IMPERFECT PAGE

WITH THE BIRDS

Long years ago, one sunny day—
Alas, how dim and far away
That bright day now appears—
Companionless and lonely, I,
For pastime watched the clouds go by,
As since have gone the years.

I wandered where the brook leaped down
Its rocky channel by the town
In foamy, ceaseless flow;
I saw wild pigeons rise and fly,
Like arrows cleaving the bright sky,
Shot from an archer's bow.

I heard the wood dove's plaintive note,
As softly from her burnished throat,
It melted on the breeze;
I heard the plover's joy-notes ring
Across the pasture, quavering,
And die among the trees.

Two little wrens were building near,
Their downy nest, where every year
They came to build and sing;
They seemed to love the spot, and there,
Their tender song, soft as a prayer,
Breathed welcome to the spring.

The morning long I watched them weave
With patient care beneath the eave,
Their soft and downy home;
I heard them sing their tender lay,
Their song of hope, that some near day
Nestlings would to it come.

And I see now what then I saw
But vaguely, that one common law
Rules birds as well as men:
And glowing warm in every breast
Is that home-love, the first and best,
Which bids us build the dear home nest,
As doth the little wren.

"Hits like dis, Squire," said a big burley "oil mill hand," addressing that functionary in the awed deferential tone of voice which the colored brother scorns to use except when speaking to preachers or administrators of the criminal law, "I'se called to question de arrest of a cullud lady. She have stole my pin. I wouldn't be 'er raisin' all dis san' about dat pin, but I shore lubs it. My brudder paid six bits fer dat pin in Kansas City, Kansas City, Mosourah.

"How I know she stole it?"

"Hits dis way. I went to see a lady what tells fortunes down on de levee. What de fortune teller got to do wid it? 'Squire, if you don't quit 'ruptin' dat way in a generman's cornversations, you will work confusements of speech. Dat fortune teller got all to do wid it. Why dat lady just brought fortune-tellin to dis world.

"I lef my coat with dat pin in the hem when I went off to work. Dere want nobody in dat house ceptin' the two ladies what cooks for me. What a man dat ain't married doin' with two cooks? Well, now. WHY THE BOILER BURSTS.

Scientific Explanation of Some Phenomena of the Kitchen.

When you hear the kitchen boiler cracking their is no cause for alarm. There is a prevailing impression that the cracking is produced by steam and that there is, therefore, an increased pressure on the boiler at such times. But this is an error. If the boiler is in good condition, with the water turned on as usual, so that the boiler is kept filled, the only pressure that it is subjected to is the same as that in the water pipes, from which, of course, there never is the slightest danger. And this is true, no matter how hot the water in the boiler may be. The reason is very simple. As long as the boiler is kept full of water there is no room for steam. If you open the hot-water cock the water pours out and steam rises from it because it then has a chance to escape into the air. In other words rapid evaporation takes place. But as the hot water pours out water from the pipes rushes in to take its place, and thus the boiler is kept full. The cracking noise referred to is heard when the water is unusually hot, and is nothing but the expansion of the boiler under the influence of that heat. It is in no degree an indication of danger, unless, indeed, the boiler is worn out or defective, which is a matter entirely outside of what we are now considering. When a kitchen boiler explodes it is generally because a fire has been kindled in the range while the boiler was empty. It happens prevent its destruction by the weevil, and it is this dust that remains upon it. Mace is one of the outer coverings of the nutmeg, and is preferred by many cooks because of its color.—Milwaukee Wisconsin.

BIG CLASH IN CHINA

WARLIKE MOVEMENTS OF CHINESE AND ALLIED TROOPS.

Twenty Thousand Chinese Troops Are Advancing in the Provinces of Shansi and Chili — Force of French and German Troops Starts Hurriedly From Pekin—Present Expedition Due to the Hostile Attitude of Gen. Li—Missionary Exposes the Duplicity of Li Hung Chang.

Berlin, April 19—Field Marshal Count von Waldersee telegraphs from Pekin that he has been informed that 20,000 Chinese are advancing through the defiles between the provinces of Shansi and Chili. It is not known whether their intentions are peaceable or warlike.

-o-

Pekin, April 19.—The departure from here yesterday of French and German troops to the western border of the province of Chili was the first intimation the other commanders had that any such expedition was planned. Some people view the expedition as inconsistent, owing to the negotiations that are now going on, while others commend the movement as necessary. The present expedition is due to the hostile attitude of the Chinese general, Li. So far as known it is believed that most of the Chinese troops to the north of Pekin are still hostile to the foreigners.

A missionary named Killie (the Rev. Mr. Kelley, Presbyterian?) has returned from Sanho, where Christians were burned to death in December. Mr. Kellie reports to Gen. Chaffee that some time ago some of his

Converts Were Killed.

He had the guilty parties tried in the Chinese courts, where they were convicted and sentenced to death, subject to Li Hung Chang's signature. Mr. Kellie came to Pekin to see Li, who said the men should be executed immediately. Upon going to Sanho three weeks later the missionary found the men all alive. He spoke to a judge of the Chinese court upon the matter, who thereupon showed him a letter from Li Hung Chang giving explicit instructions that the men must not be executed, as they had only been convicted on the testimony of Christians, consequently the evidence was untrustworthy. Mr. Killie has a copy of this letter. In the meantime the French had proved the same men guilty of incendiarism and other outrages and demanded their execution, whereupon the judge again showed his orders from Li Hung Chang. The French authorities replied that if the men were not executed within eight days they would take the law in their own hands and punish the Chinese officials likewise.

Gold Holdings in the United States Treasury.

Washington, April 19. — The gold holdings in the treasury department yesterday amounted to the enormous sum of $500,552,526. This is in spite of the recent purchases by the secretary of the treasury of about $6,000,000 in bonds which were paid for in gold. Exclusive of the gold held against the gold certificates of the treasury the total gold is about $248,199,547. This amount includes the $150,000,000 gold

EXAGERTED AND MISLEADING.

Gen. MacArthur Reports Regarding the Alleged Frauds.

Washington, April 19.—The following cablegram was made public at the war department yesterday:

"Manila—Adjutant General, Washington: With reference to your telegram of 16th, press report grossly exaggerated, misleading; matters therein touched upon regarding officers' subsistence department fully investigated. Proceedings (mailed) by transport Sheridan. Regarding theft commissary stores, amount which grossly exaggerated by press reports, immediate and most drastic measures already been applied. Three officers and number enlisted men being tried by court-martial, Number citizens military commission. —MacArthur."

No statement was made that the report of Gen. MacArthur was satisfactory, although it all along has been the theory at the war department that the reports from Manila were exaggerated. At the same time there is cause for regret in the department that even under the best construction that can be placed upon the dispatch three officers and a number of enlisted men and a number of civilians have conducted themselves in such a manner as to necessitate a court-martial, or a trial by a military commission in the case of the civilians. It is said, however, that even if these persons were being tried there might be exaggeration in regard to the offenses with which they are charged.

FIRST PRESIDENT OF CUBA.

Estrada Palma Is Favored by Gen. Gomez.

Washington, April 20.—Gen. Maximo Gomez has declared himself in favor of Estrada Palma for first president of Cuba. This is regarded as a good indication of the conservatism of the real leaders of Cuba.

Gen. Gomez, as the leader of the Cuban revolution and the general of the Cuban army, has been regarded as the most probable leader of the Revolutionary party. An effort was made in the convention to adopt a clause into the constitution providing that only native born Cubans should be eligible to the office of president. This would have shut out Gomez, as he is a native of San Domingo, but it failed to pass. If Gen. Gomez has determined to head a movement for Gen. Palma that movement will receive encouragement from Washington. Gen. Palma was at the head of the Cuban junta in this country during the consideration of the Cuban question by congress. He is a Cuban, but for some years he has lived in this country, and has conducted a school for the education of Cuban youths. He is conservative and level-headed, and his residence in this country and experience in Washington, where he has met public men, makes him better qualified to take the reins of government in Cuba than other leaders who have not had experience in public affairs.

STRUCK BY A SNOWSLIDE.

Passenger Train Hurled Into a Chasm and Four Men Killed

Boulder, Colo., April 20. — A terrible accident occurred on the Colorado & Northwestern road near this city. Two big engines attached to a passenger train coming from Ward to Boulder, were struck by a huge snowslide and hurled into the chasm below. One fireman has not yet been accounted for and it is believed he is dead. Four other trainmen were killed. The bodies have not been recovered. The passenger train left Ward for Boulder drawn

WORK OF PLANTING

FARMERS BEGINNING SEEDING OPERATIONS.

Crop Conditions Are Generally Favorable Throughout the Country—Rains Retard Farm Work in Some States, While in Others There Is Insufficient Moisture—Winter Wheat Making Favorable Progress—Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa and South Dakota Reports.

Washington, April 18.—The crop report of the weather bureau issued yesterday shows that over the greater part of the country east of the Rocky mountains the week has been abnormally cool and unfavorable for germination and growth. Excessive rains retarded farm work in the states of the Middle Rocky mountain slope and lower Missouri valley, while a large part of the lake region, Southern Florida and California need rain. With the exception of portions of the lake region, Florida, Texas and California, there is generally ample moisture in the soil and the conditions now most needed, especially in the central valleys and Middle Atlantic states are sunshine and warmth.

Slow progress has been made with corn planting, none having yet been planted north of the Ohio river or farther north than Southern Missouri to the westward.

Nearly all reports from the winter wheat states show that winter wheat has made favorable progress, although its growth has not been rapid owing to low temperatures.

Spring wheat seeding is well advanced over the southern portion of the spring wheat region, and some has been sown on the high lands in Northern Minnesota. In South Dakota the early sown is germinating well.

Oat seeding has been rapidly pushed in portions of the central valleys, some having been sown as far north as Southern Minnesota and New York, but slow progress has been made in Kentucky and portions of Missouri.

The following special bulletins from the Northwestern states show the condition of crops in that section of the country:

Wisconsin—Some snow on ground in northern counties but in central and southern sections soil about free from frost; some plowing in extreme southern counties but farm work not generally commenced; winter wheat, rye and clover in excellent condition; soil generally well stored with moisture.

Minnesota—Light rains in middle of week and cloudy weather prevented drying of heavy soils; wheat seeding general on high lands in all portions except southeast; in central and southwest portions wheat seeding well advanced and some oats and barley sown; clover and winter rye and wheat and fruits wintered well.

Iowa—Several fair days improving soil condition and seeding is in progress in all districts; sowing spring wheat nearly completed.

South Dakota—Although considerably delayed by freezing and wet weather, spring wheat seeding is far advanced in southeastern, progressing fairly in middle and begun in northern counties, and early sown germinating well in the south; soil amply moist generally, some localities too wet, especially in the north; grass and winter rye starting nicely.

CUBANS TO ACCEPT

COMMISSION WILL MAKE FAVORABLE REPORT.

Now Have a Clearer Understanding of the Relations This Government Would Maintain Toward Cuba—Cubans Realize That the Acceptance of the Platt Amendment Will Guarantee Their Independence—Are Now Chiefly Concerned in the Economic Aspect of the Relations.

Washington, April 28.—As a result of the visit of the Cuban commissioners it is evident that these gentlemen will return to Havana with a clearer understanding of the relations this government would maintain toward Cuba. They have found the president, members of his cabinet, senators and representatives all earnestly in favor of doing everything possible to give Cuba the largest measure of independence not dangerous to the welfare of this country. It has been explained to them that the Platt amendment was adopted to insure Cuba independence in the conduct of her own affairs and to guarantee that independence by the power of the American army and navy. The Cubans already understand this, but they have depended upon the enforcement of the Monroe doctrine to

from the interference of foreign powers without assuming any obligations of their own to this government. Without exception the Cuban commission acknowledges the supremacy of the United States in all matters affecting the American continent. Dr. Tamayo, secretary of state for Gen. Wood's Cuban cabinet, gave out the following statement:

"There is no doubt that we will present a favorable report to the convention. We have made little progress so far in discussing the economical problems, but under no circumstances will there be any conflict between us and the United States government. What we are now chiefly interested in is the economic aspect of relations. Our products of sugar and tobacco must in this country. If we receive special tariff advantages it will mean more to Cuba than all other concessions. Indeed, our principal object in coming here is to ascertain what this government will do in the way of tariff inducements. We have some differences of opinion among ourselves as to the eventual course, but there is little doubt that the president is seeking to establish relations which will be mutually beneficial."

Although practically agreed to recommend the ratification of the Platt amendment, the Cuban commission accepts this alternative not without reserve, but as inevitable. Secretary Root conferred with the Cubans at length yesterday. He had them, as on Thursday, at luncheon in the afternoon, and then presided at a meeting at the war department, at which Gen. Wood was also present.

GREISHEIM'S HORROR.

Eighty Bodies Taken From the Ruins of the Chemical Works.

Frankfort-on-the-Main, April 28. — Eighty bodies have been recovered from the ruins of the Greisheim electro-chemical works. It is believed that there are more bodies in the ruins. It is estimated that in addition to the killed 150 persons were injured. Many others are missing. A number of children who were hurled by the explosion into the River Main were drowned before rescuers could reach them. Several firemen are among the victims. The signal was given at 10:30 yesterday morning to all the inhabitants of Greisheim and vicinity that they must leave immediately, as an explosion of a great benzine reservoir was expected. Even the firemen, salvagers and soldiers left, but the explosion did not occur. Several women and children were trampled to death during the panic-stricken flight.

NEGRO LYNCHED.

He Had Committed an Assault on a Young Woman.

Elberton, Ga., April 28.—While fishing in the Savannah river near her home, Wednesday, Miss Rhoda Alexander was assaulted by a negro workman named William Goolsby. Miss Alexander reported the matter to her mother. About that time the negro appeared and offered to work six month for the mother if she would not report him. Before he could leave the place some friends of the family appeared, took charge of the negro and left for the river. Later they reported that they had set him free. Yesterday it developed that Goolsby was lynched and that his body was thrown into the Savannah river.

CURE FOR TUBERCULOSIS.

Argentine Army Surgeon Publishes Report on His Experiments.

Buenos Ayres, Arg., April 28.—Dr. C. L. Villar, an Argentine army surgeon, has just published a report on the treatment of fifty cases of tuberculosis with his serum at the military hospital in this city. The treatment extended from Dec. 2, 1900, to April 20, 1901. Tuberculosis in its early stages, says Dr. Villar, is cured within forty days. Patients whose cases were more advanced, but without complications, he reports, were all cured within ninety days. Of those patients whose cases were far advanced, all were cured except those who could offer very little resistance to the disease.

LINCOLN'S LAST RESTING PLACE.

Remains of the Martyred President Placed in the Permanent Tomb.

Springfield, Ill., April 26. — The caskets containing the remains of Abraham Lincoln and other members of his family were deposited in the crypt in the reconstructed Lincoln monument yesterday afternoon. Since March 10 of this year the caskets have been reposing in a temporary stone vault, pending the completion of the extensive repairs to the monument. The removal was unceremonious, being quietly witnessed by Gov. Yates, United States Judge Humphrey, Mayor Phillips and other state and city officials, besides about 200 citizens of Springfield. The exact time of removal had been withheld from the public as far as possible. The temporary vault was so thoroughly cemented that it was 5 o'clock, three hours after the work of removal commenced; that the remains of the president, which were the last to be removed, were finally placed in the marble sarcophagus in the crypt, where they were sealed up and where they will probably remain through all time. The casket was not opened for the identification of the body of the martyr president as had been expected, nor was even the leaden casket exposed to view, being covered by a cedar casket. The remains which now rest in the tomb monument are those of President and Mrs. Lincoln, their sons Willie, Thomas and Eddie, and Abraham, son of their oldest son, Robert T. Lincoln.

LIEUTENANTS NAMED.

Nearly Six Hundred Selected Under the Army Reorganization Bill.

Washington, April 26. — The secretary of war yesterday made public the names of the 588 men selected for first and second lieutenants in the regular army under the army reorganization bill. All of these men have had service either in the state or national volunteer or in the regular army. They have been ordered for examination, and should they pass will be appointed. The following are from Northwestern states: Minnesota, eight, James G. Taylor, Ralph Emerson Herring, Fred H. Parks, George I. Becker, Alfred S. Morgan, Walter H. Johnson, John N. Loye, A. W. Bjornstad; North Dakota, one, W. P. Moffatt: South Dakota, two, Arthur L. Fuller, Harry A. Hegeman; Wisconsin, eleven, John B. Shuman, Frank L. French, Harry W. Newton, John H. Baker, Reuben D. Blanchard, Edward K. Madsee, John C. Ohnstan, Frederick P. Cook, Robert F. Weeds, John H. Lewis.

WOMEN WHIPPED.

Sensational Incident of the Anti-Vice Crusade in Suffolk, Va.

Suffolk, Va., April 26. — As a result of an anti-vice crusade, Carrie Palmer and Lavina White were officially cowhided in the city hall by Chief of Police Ames. The young women quivered with pain as twenty stripes from a rawhide were laid upon their backs. When the whipping was over they were exiled from the town, never to return on the penalty of fifty lashes upon the naked skin. The officials mean to continue the infliction of stringent penalties until objectionable conditions in the town are wiped out. This was the first cowhiding of women in Suffolk's history.

KRUGER IS WORRIED.

He Fears Mrs. Botha Will Induce Her Husband to Surrender.

New York, April 26. — Once again peace rumors are in the air, says the Tribune's London correspondent. Mrs. Botha has been in correspondence with Lord Kitchener, and as a result it is believed that the British commander-in-chief has agreed to receive the three Boer generals, Botha, Delarey and Viljeon, within a few days. While nothing is definitely known, it is, perhaps, not without significance that the news should reach London from Amsterdam that Mr. Kruger is afraid Mrs. Botha's efforts will cause her husband to surrender.

ROBBED AT A WEDDING.

Sioux City Man Loses $500 Worth of Jewelry in Jersey City.

New York, April 26. — While the guests at the wedding feast of Miss Edna Amelia Schrader of Sioux City, Iowa, and Rudolph Weller of Hoboken were enjoying themselves at Postkeller hall, 213 Washington street, Jersey City, George Schrader, the father of the bride, fell asleep and he was put to bed in a room over the hall. When he awoke he discovered that $500 worth of jewelry had been stolen from his clothing. The police believe that one of the wedding guests did it. A reward of $50 has been offered for the return of the jewelry.

PUGILIST'S DEATH.

Billy Smith Succumbs to a Knock-Out Blow.

London, April 26. — Billy Smith the American pugilist who was knocked out in the eighth round of a contest with Jack Roberts for the 126-pound championship of England Monday night, and who has lain unconscious in a hospital since, died at 11:45 yesterday. An inquest will be held. Roberts, the manager of the National Sporting club, the referee and the seconds have surrendered to the police.

Wireless Telegraphy Station to Be Erected Near Fastnet Rock.

London, April 26.—Marconi's wireless telegraph company is erecting an etheric station on the mainland of England near Fastnet Rock. All vessels fitted with a transmitter will be able to report themselves when they are many miles beyond the rock, and thus avoid threading the passage separating it from the mainland

CALLAHAN NOT GUILTY.

So Says the Jury and the Judge Expresses His Disgust in Emphatic Terms.

Omaha, April 30.—After considering over night the guilt or innocence of James Callahan, the jury announced yesterday morning that he had no part in the kidnapping of Edward Cudahy, Jr. The verdict was an evident surprise to the court, and Judge Baker expressed his disgust in emphatic terms. Callahan was arrested on two other counts which the state is not now prepared to say will be made use of as no new evidence is at hand and the expense of going over the ground again is considerable. Judge Baker, addressing the jury, rebuked them in the most vigorous terms. "If Callahan had made his own choice of a jury," the court said, "he could not have selected twelve men who would have served him more faithfully. If the state for its part had made the selection, I know of no men it could have named who could have been less careful of its interests. The jury is discharged without the compliments of the court, and the prisoner is likewise turned loose as to this trial, I presume to continue the criminal practices in which you have failed to check him. I do not know what motive actuated you in reaching this decision, but I hope none of you will ever appear again in this jury box."

The jury was evidently ill at ease during this arraignment, but did not make any response and filed rapidly from the box as soon as it was at liberty. In the hallway Callahan mumbled his thanks and shook the jurymen's hands. This proceeding was one of embarrassment under the contemptuous eyes of the court officers. Chief of Police Donohue says he will urge Mr. Cudahy to at once withdraw the proffered reward of $5,000 for the apprehension of Pat Crowe. "Crowe might easily make an appearance and claim the reward himself," said Chief Donohue, "as the evidence against him is no more direct than that against Callahan. In my eighteen years of experience with criminals I have never heard more absolutely convincing evidence presented than that presented against Callahan."

DRAGGED TO DEATH BY A PONY.

Girl's Foot Is Caught in a Stirrup When the Animal Runs Away.

Red Oak, Iowa, April 30. — Pluma Nordquist, the twelve-year-old daughter of S. C. Nordquist, a prominent Red Oak merchant, was dragged half a mile by a runaway pony, with her foot fast in the stirrup. She was dead when found.

Attempt to Blow Up a Mine.

Grand Rapids, Mich., April 30.—An attempt was made during the night to blow up the Midland Plaster company's mine near here. A fuse leading to 500 pounds of dynamite so placed that its explosion would wreck the mine, was discovered by an employe, who destroyed it. Forty men employed in the mine getting out stuff for the Pan-American exposition, struck the previous day. The mine is now guarded by a force of deputies.

Three Brothers Shot.

Gilman, Ill., April 30.—At a country dance three miles south of Gilman the three Morris brothers, Walter, James and Philip, of this city, were shot. Walter died; the other two will recover, though James was seriously wounded. The shooting followed a fight between the brothers and three or four other guests at the dance. George Morrison did the shooting. He gave himself up to the sheriff and claims he fired in self-defense.

Libraries for Iowa Towns.

Sioux City, Iowa, April 30.—The second bulletin of the state library commission, which has just been received here, shows that six Iowa towns have voted tax levies this spring for the establishment of public libraries. They are Pleasant, Hawkeye, Stuart, Jefferson, Hawarden and Colfax. Davenport, Cedar Rapids, Mount Vernon and Upper Iowa university at Fayette, all have received a gift of $25,000 from ex-Gov. Drake and have voted a tax for the establishment of a free public library.

Dennis Must Be Tried in Nebraska.

Sioux City, Iowa, April 30.—The Monona county grand jury failed to find an indictment against Frank Dennis for the alleged murder of John P. Worrell last February. The crime occurred on a sandbar in the Missouri river, and the evidence showed that the crime was out of the jurisdiction of the Iowa courts. The surveyor who investigated the matter testified before the grand jury. It is said the Burt county, Neb., authorities will take up the matter of prosecuting Dennis.

Sheriff in Possession.

Sioux City, Iowa, April 30.—The sheriff of Ida county has taken possession of the hardware and implement business of F. J. Thompson of Holstein on a writ of attachment. Thompson left home suddenly last Monday and numerous claims are being filed by creditors. Thompson's wife claims a $5,000 interest in the business.

Called Back.

Sioux City, Iowa, April 30.—William Parkins, the young man who escaped from the county jail here a few days ago while painting in the corridor, was arrested at Worthing, S. D., and brought back by Sheriff Jackson. Parkins was waiting to be taken to the state's prison to serve an eighteen months' term when he escaped.

MRS. NATION CRAZY

CONFINED IN A PADDED CELL AT WICHITA, KAN.

Kansas Saloon Smasher Becomes Raving Mad—She Imagines That She Is an Apostle Sent to Earth to Rule It—It Is Believed That Her Insanity Is Temporary—Her First Act of Madness Was to Assault Her Cellmate—Abuses the Sheriff and Her Best Friends.

Wichita, Kan., April 30.—Mrs. Carrie Nation, the noted saloon smasher, is confined in her cell in the county jail here, raving mad. She is thought to be only temporarily insane, however. Her insanity was Saturday and yesterday of the most acute stage. She imagines herself to be an apostle sent to the earth to rule it. She is confined in a dungeon cell, which has been padded, and everything is kept from her so she cannot injure herself.

Mrs. Nation's friends say that her insanity fit is caused by the news of her brother's death at Lewisburg Saturday. He was her bondsman in numerous cases, and just before she went voluntarily to jail here he called her up by telephone and offered to go on her bond, but she refused, preferring to serve time. Mrs. Nation's first act of insanity was to assault her cellmate, Mrs. Wilhoit, one of the two women who assisted her in several raids. She accused Mrs. Wilhoit of being a

Spy Sent by Saloon Men

to gain confessions from her. She slapped her and otherwise made life dangerous until Sheriff Simmons confined Mrs. Nation in a dungeon in the lower part of the jail and put her on bread and water. Every few hours she would go into wild fits and talk unreasonably to herself. Saturday morning when news came that she had better get bond and come to see her brother she commenced growing worse. James Ray, her attorney, and Wilburt Jones, former Prohibition candidate for mayor, called at her cell door and offered to go her bail. She yelled at them wildly: "Go out of here, you scullions of hell, or I will throw lightning of saints at you. If I want to get out of here I can fly through the walls. The devil is in your hearts." Both men were astounded, as they have been her best friends since she and Jones has acted as her bondsman upon several occasions. Sheriff Simmons told her that she should accept bond if she wanted to see her brother alive, but she only commenced to abuse him. No one is allowed near her. David Nation, husband of the saloon wrecker, who is spending his vacation in Wichita, has been notified of the serious condition of his wife. Physicians have examined her mental condition, and they agree at times she is a raving maniac, while at other times she is as sane as any one could be. It is generally attributed that her raving was caused by solitary confinement and the death of her brother. Mrs. Nation was quieter last evening and announced her intention of going to Lewisburg to-day. Bond has been accepted for her release. Sheriff Simmons says he would be glad to get rid of her, as she is crazy.

Commenced Saloon Smashing,

BRYAN TO RUN FOR GOVERNOR.

May Be a Candidate for Position of Nebraska's Chief Executive.

New York, April 30.—Edward Rosewater, editor of the Omaha Bee, is quoted as saying:

"William J. Bryan, in my opinion, will be a candidate for governor of Nebraska next year. Mr. Bryan still exerts a wide influence in the state, and if he receives the gubernatorial nomination he will be a very hard man to beat. If elected governor he will hope to secure a Democratic legislature, in which event he will seek an election to the United States senate to succeed Gov. Dietrich, whose term will expire in 1905."

ROWDY STUDENTS IN DISGRACE.

Nine Sophomores at the State University of Kansas Suspended.

Lawrence, Kan., April 30—Nine members of the sophomore class of the University of Kansas, including the class president, were suspended for thirty days by the faculty for rowdyism in connection with a junior class party a week ago. The suspended students attempted to prevent attendance upon a party, destroyed clothing and tied upper classmen so that they could not attend. The nine men suspended were found to be implicated in the affair.

THROWN UNDER A TRAIN.

Omaha Man Robbed and Nearly Killed in Arkansas.

Hot Springs, Ark., April 30. — Two men knocked J. T. Williams, a visitor from Omaha, in the head with a slung shot, robbed him of his purse containing $170 and then threw him blindfolded and his hands tied, under the train on the Hot Springs road. He managed to escape from the horrible death the perpetrators had planned to hide their crime, but his left leg was severed just below the knee. Physicians attended him at once and it is thought he will live.

Probably Insane.

Washington, April 30.—Harry Finkelstein, a well dressed man about thirty-four years of age, who says his home is in Cleveland, Ohio, is locked up at the police station here on suspicion of being insane. He went to the vicinity of the White House, said he wanted to see the president on urgent business of a private nature and acted so [illegible] he was arrested.

MINERS LOSE THEIR LIVES.

Four or Six Thought to Have Perished in a Fire.

Latrobe, Pa., April 30. — The entire tipple, engine house and boiler house of the Dorothy Coal and Coke plant of the American Steel and Wire company is a smouldering mass of ruins and it is reported that either four or six miners have lost their lives. The loss is estimated at $150,000; fully insured. The fire will cause over 400 miners being thrown out of work.

RAMPOLLA RESIGNS.

Cardinal Ferrata Becomes Papal Secretary of State.

Rome, April 30.—The Patria states that Cardinal Rampolla has resigned the office of papal secretary of state and that he will be succeeded by Cardinal Ferrata, prefect of the congregation of indulgences and sacred relics.

Irate Negress Slashes Peddler.

Chicago, April 30.—Because she considered herself cheated by Julius Stern, a peddler, in the purchase of some jewelry, Mrs. Lillian Hudgins, a colored woman, slashed the man so badly with a razor that he died inside of two hours. She cut Stern's face to pieces and made a number of gashes across his throat, one of which cut the jugular vein slightly. Stern was carried to the hospital, but the surgeons could do nothing for him. The woman was arrested.

HOT AFTER CAILLES

BLOODTHIRSTY FILIPINO GENERAL PURSUED BY TROOPS.

Americans Surprise His Camp, Capture His Adjutant General and All His Papers, but the General Manages to Escape—Has a Reputation for Vindictiveness and Cruelty — Offered $10 Apiece for Heads of Americans Brought to Him—Can't Claim Immunity if Caught.

Manila, April 30—Capt. Wilson Chase, with a detachment of the Twenty-first infantry, on April 26 surprised the camp of the insurgent general Cailles at Dugot-Dugot, situated nine miles northeast of Cavinti, in the province of Laguna. Cailles was at his camp at the time of the American attack, but managed to escape. Capt. Chase's force captured his adjutant general, five other of his staff officers, fourteen men, twenty rifles, a large amount of ammunition and stores and all the papers and personal effects of the Filipino general. The insurgent major Velo was killed during the engagement, as were Corporal McGill and Private Tripp, both belonging to Company A, Twenty-first. Several columns of the American troops continue vigorously to pursue Gen. Cailles. Gen. Cailles recently offered a reward of $10,000 for the head of Capt. Edward N. Jones, Jr., of the Eighth infantry. For more than a year past Cailles has commanded the insurgent forces operating to the south of Bay Lake, not far from Manila. He is said to be a French half-caste. He has a reutation for vindictiveness and cruelty and is one of two of the Filipino leaders still in the field who have clearly violated the observances of honorable warfare. The Society of Mondo-Ducats, whose practice it was to assassinate and bury alive those of their countrymen who accepted American sovereignty whenever the latter fell into their hands, operated with the cognizance, if not the support of Gen. Cailles. If Cailles were captured, it is doubtful if he could claim immunity for past actions under the terms of the amnesty. In January of this year Cailles offered a reward of $10 apiece for the heads of all Americans brought to him.

STUDENT KILLED.

Is Shot by Companion While They Are Acting in a Play.

Burnsville, N. C., April 30. — During the closing exercises of the Stanley-McCormick high school at Burnsville R. N. McInturf, one of the students, was shot and killed by Baccus Bailey, another student, both representing characters in a play which was being enacted. When it became necessary for Bailey, in his role, to defend himself with a revolver against a drawn knife in the hands of McInturf, he used by mistake a loaded pistol, and in the presence of several hundred persons McInturf was shot dead on the stage. The boys were roommates and special friends.

JOLT FOR JEFFRIES.

Champion Pugilist Hit With a Beer Glass by a Congressman.

Kansas City, April 30. — James J. Jeffries, the champion pugilist, quarreled with Congressman Jim Butler of St. Louis in a down town saloon, and the big pugilist was hit with a beer glass before the quarrel ended. Butler and Jeffries were in an ugly mood, and for a time it was feared that serious trouble would result. Congressman Butler was game and did not flinch when Jeffries threatened to extend his terrible right. The St. Louis congressman picked up a beer glass and let it fly at the champion. Friends interfered and the belligerents shook hands.

TRAGEDY AT BREAKFAST TABLE.

A Man Kills His Sister Without Warning.

Prairie du Chien, Wis., April 30. — Max Heck, who runs his father's farm near McGregor, Iowa, yesterday shot and almost instantly killed his sister, Mrs. Ellsworth, at her home in McGregor while at the breakfast table. The family had sat down to breakfast when Heck drew a revolver and fired directly at his sister. The ball entered just below the heart. It is thought that Heck was temporarily insane. He was arrested.

MIDWAY MUST CLOSE SUNDAYS.

Compromise Made on the Buffalo Sunday Closing Issue.

Buffalo, N. Y., April 30.—The question of whether the gates of the Pan-American grounds are to be open on Sunday was finally settled by the board of directors. Their decision is a compromise. The gates are to be open from 1 p. m. to 11 p. m., but the midway and all amusement features will be closed during the twenty-four hours from Saturday night until Monday morning.

Pickpocket Killed.

Chicago, April 30. — While trying to escape arrest for snatching a woman's purse Richard Donahue, a notorious pickpocket was shot and instantly killed last night by Policeman Gardiner. Donahue was accompanied by three companions, but the latter managed to escape. The four thieves had been working in a crowd of several hundred people who were watching a fire.

Dropped Dead.

St. Joseph, Mo., April 30. — Harry Berlet, aged thirty-eight, a well known sporting man, late of Chicago, dropped dead here

WITH THE BIRDS

Long years ago, one sunny day—
Alas, how dim and far away
That bright day now appears—
Companionless and lonely, I,
For pastime watched the clouds go by,
As since have gone the years.

I wandered where the brook leaped down
Its rocky channel by the town
In foamy, ceaseless flow;
I saw wild pigeons rise and fly,
Like arrows cleaving the bright sky,
Shot from an archer's bow.

I heard the wood dove's plaintive note,
As softly from her burnished throat,
It melted on the breeze;
I heard the plover's joy-notes ring
Across the pasture, quavering,
And die among the trees.

Two little wrens were building near,
Their downy nest, where every year
They came to build and sing;
They seemed to love the spot, and there,
Their tender song, soft as a prayer,
Breathed welcome to the spring.

The morning long I watched them weave
With patient care beneath the eave,
Their soft and downy home;
I heard them sing their tender lay,
Their song of hope, that some near day
Nestlings would to it come.

And I see now what then I saw
But vaguely, that one common law
Rules birds as well as men;
And glowing warm in every breast
Is that home-love, the first and best,
Which bids us build the dear home nest,
As doth the little wren.

No Judge of Women.

BY DABNEY MARSHALL.

Copyrighted 1901 by the Daily Story Pub. Co.

"Hits like dis, Squire," said a big burley "oil mill hand," addressing that functionary in the awed deferential tone of voice which the colored brother scorns to use except when speaking to preachers or administrators of the criminal law, "I'se called to question de arrest of a cullud lady. She have stole my pin. I wouldn't be 'er raisin' all dis san' about dat pin, but I shore lubs it. My brudder paid six bits fer dat pin in Kansas City, Kansas City, Mosourah.

"How I know she stole it?"

"Hits dis way. I went to see a lady what tells fortunes down on de levee. What de fortune teller got to do wid it? 'Squire, if you don't quit 'ruptin' dat way in a generman's cornversations, you will work confusements of speech. Dat fortune teller got all to do wid it. Why dat lady just brought fortune-tellin to dis world.

"I lef my coat with dat pin in the hem when I went off to work. Dere want nobody in dat house ceptin' the two ladies what cooks for me. What a man dat ain't married doin' with two cooks? Well, now. Dare ain't no law, as I knows, 'hibting a generman's havin' as many cooks as he has de wages to pay fer.

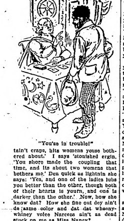
"I jes' natcherly gets tired er, chompn' grub fixed by the same pusson all the time, and besides the good book says, 'contrariety is the spice of life.' When I 'tuns home for my evenin's freshmeats I missed dat pin, and I knowed one of dem cooks had done tooken it? But which er one I couldn't say. So I hits the grit for the fortuneteller's studio or rudio, whichsomever dey calls it, down on the levee.

"As soon as ever I gets my hoofs on dat white woman's carpet, she up and 'lows:

"'You'se in trouble.'—Now, how she know I in trouble cepen she were a fortune-teller? I says 'stonished: 'Lady, you shore hit the truf and that ain't no lie.'

"Then she looks at me ergin and she says: 'And may be its about craps, er the lottery and you wants to know the lucky numbers and you've come to the lady what knows just what tickets will draw and what won't.'

"Then afore I could say nothin' she looks at the deck ergin, and says: 'No; tain't craps, hits womens youse bothered about.' I says 'stonished ergin, 'You shore made the coupling that time, and its about two womens that bothers me.' Den quick as lightnin she says: 'Yes, and one of the ladies lubs you better than the other, though both of their hearts is yourn, and one is darker than the other.' Now, how she know dat? How she fine out dey ain't de same color and dat dat wheeny-whiney voice Narcees ain't as dead stuck on me as Miss Nancy?



"You'se in trouble!"

"Den I up and tells her dey bofe were gone on me, and do bofe said I was her honey-babe. I was bound to 'fess dat Narcees warnt so sweetsome on me as Nancy. Den I tells her about dat pin and axes her which of dem womens got dat pin.

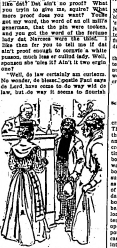
"She flings a red rag with gold dollars stomped on it acrost her face, and breafes loud a long time, but jus' as I was gittin' skittish-like and sidging tords the door, she flung it off and walls up dem orbs of hern, and reaches out for the spots. Then she says in a ginger cake voice, 'Mr. Washington, it is the light lady what is the larcener of your valable joolry.' Then pintin to the queen of hearts she says 'splanatorious like, 'You will preserve, Mr. Washington, it is a red queen and not a black queen that the sperits has turn up, and hence it is the light lady what has larcenered your pin.'

"I gives her twenty-five cents, and she says polite as a basket of chips, 'Mr. Washington, I would be proud to have you call ergin when youse in trouble and let me and the cards hextricate you from your difficulties. The cards never lies. I gives you my own word fer it,' says she.

"Now, I wants you to have dat Narcees 'rested and flung in jail, and when she am sont up there with dem rounders and crap shooters she'll learn better than to hook her clampers on joolry what ain't hern.

"Can't have her rested on evidence like dat? Dat ain't no proof? What you tryin to give me, squire? What more proof does you want? Youse got my word, the word of an oil mill's generman, that the pin were tooken, and you got the word of the fortune lady dat Narcees were the thief. I like then fer you to tell me if dat ain't proof enough to cornvic a white pusson, much less er cullud lady. Well, sponsen she 'nies it? Ain't it two ergin one?

"Well, de law certainly am curisom. No wonder, de blessed 'postle Paul says de Lord have come to do way wid de law, but de way it seems to flourish in dis her berg is about ernough ter 'stroy de faith of de childun of de kingdom and make infidels and Ingersols of every one of 'em.



"Yure igunce of womens is to blame."

"Go home and scuse her o' takin it, and may be will fessup? May be she will, judge, but I misdoubts it. If you'll excuse my not usin manners and behavior in the intrust of truth and hoss sense, I wants ter leave it wid you—it is seldom and rare a man can git a woman to own to what he knows to be de truf much less to fess just what he belibes to be so and haves no proof on it. I am mighty afeared, squire, dat you maye be a good judge of law, but I tell you now I ain't a placin much pendence on yer jedgment of womens.

"You won't have her 'rested? Well, I'll go home and 'scuse her jest as you say, and see what I will see."

Grumbling over the unreason of the law which rejected the word of an oil mill hand and a fortune teller lady combined as insufficient to convict a "larcener," he slowly strode out of the office.

In about an hour there was a commotion among the loafers at the door of this theater where farces, comedies and tragedies are daily enacted without admission fees, and the justice looking up saw a constable authoritatively leading up to the bar the "oil mill hand" and two deeply indignant females, one light yellow and the other chocolate brown. Before the justice or the constable could say a word the oil mill hand commenced:

"Its all your fault, 'squire. You'se to blame for the whole thing. I told you you was ignunt of womens, I believed it then, but fore Gowd I knows it now. You'se jest dat ignunt of womens dat I am almost forced to belibe you ain't never had no mammy; you'se to blame for de whole rucus, dats what you is, 'squire.

"How you ter blame? Well, I'll tell you, I goes home, I does,—jess like you tells me. Dar' I find Narcess er settin' in a cheere rockin' hersef and a guzzlin' of beer. It made me mad shore-'nough dat dat woman's conscience ain't a pesterin' her. So I go up to her, squire, just as you told me, and I says, as you said for me to say, 'You low-down, bench-legged chile of a sea cook, you done stole my pin. You'se a thief. I'se got the 'squire's own word for it. And what you reckon, squire? Did dat woman cornfess? Not much. But that honey babe called me a liar—me, judge! I would say a dern liar, as she said it her ownself, if I warnt in cote. Now, no man ain't got no right to let a pusson what's littler than him call him a lie. 'Tain't right. And besides it was same as calling you a liar, 'squire, for I said what you told me.

"So I lambastes dat audacious woman one on her jaw. I jus' couldn't stand to have you call a lie to my face. Now what you reckon dat woman done? Take her chastisements according to the law and the scriptures? Not much; she was dat lost to reason dat she fetches me one side the haid with the hatchet.

"Nancy, she hears the racket from the kitchen and comes a sailing in and 'lows if there's any plantin' of fistes to be did in dat house she reckoned she'd take a han', and from the way Narcess yell, I'm 'pelled to 'spect she mus' er took two hans. Fis' and skull, skull and fis', they has it, while I wipes off the blood fore it dries on my hair and makes it hard fer to comb.

"Just den in steps your cornstable. Tho' I done tole him we warn't a' hurtin' nobody but jest tendin' to family juties, he 'rests us all three, and here we is.

"All through your fault, 'squire. All through yore igunnce of womens. I oughtern to blame you, for you did the best you knowed, but its tough for a perfessing Christian and his cookladies to be drug through the streets same as rounders, and bone-rollers.

"'Dollar fine each and costs of the cote?' 'Breach of the peace?'

"Well, you may call it a breach of the peace, or a peace of the breaches, jus' as you's a mind to, but I nominates it a squire's pore judgment of womens, I does. Three dollars fine and twelve dollars costes. Just sen' that cornstable of yourn to the foreman of the mill and he'll square him up.

"Come erlong, Nancy. Come 'long, Narcess, and you needn't ter be a blinkin' them wall eyes of yourn at the 'squire. He ain't a studyin' yer. But just recollects, Miss Himpertnunce, not to call a 'squire a lie ergin, for that fine has jus' the same as took two new dresses off'n your back.

"Goodby, 'squire, I ain't no wise thinkin' hard of you, but I wants to tell you now, I'll never follow nary nuther justice about the handlin' of womens. They is too ignunt of the creeturs."

WHY THE BOILER BURSTS.

Scientific Explanation of Some Phenomena of the Kitchen.

When you hear the kitchen boiler cracking their is no cause for alarm. There is a prevailing impression that the cracking is produced by steam and that there is, therefore, an increased pressure on the boiler at such times. But this is an error. If the boiler is in good condition, with the water turned on as usual, so that the boiler is kept filled, the only pressure that it is subjected to is the same as that in the water pipes, from which, of course, there never is the slightest danger. And this is true, no matter how hot the water in the boiler may be. The reason is very simple. As long as the boiler is kept full of water there is no room for steam. If you open the hot-water cock the water pours out and steam rises from it because it then has a chance to escape into the air. In other words rapid evaporation takes place. But as the hot water pours out water from the pipes rushes in to take its place, and thus the boiler is kept full. The cracking noise referred to is heard when the water is unusually hot, and is nothing but the expansion of the boiler under the influence of that heat. It is in no degree an indication of danger, unless, indeed, the boiler is worn out or defective, which is a matter entirely outside of what we are now considering. When a kitchen boiler explodes it is generally because a fire has been kindled in the range while the boiler was empty. It happens sometimes when people come back to town after spending the summer away. The fire heats the boiler, of course, and when the water is turned on it is converted suddenly and violently into steam, and the boiler cannot stand the enormous pressure. Fortunately, few persons are thoughtless enough or silly enough to build a fire before opening the cocks connecting the boiler with the water pipes.

Tourist Postal Cards.

Tourist postal cards are extremely popular on the continent of Europe. On this side the water the people seem to be too busy to think about them, but in Germany no city or hamlet, no place of historical interest is without these cards embellished with some design appropriate to the locality, which offer convenient means of communication with friends at home. Last summer, according to the German postoffice returns, over 20,000,000 cards were mailed in one week. Forty-six per cent were tourists' cards. The postage collected daily on these cards was more than $15,000. Berlin furnished the largest quota—137,000 cards. Next followed Dresden, then Hamburg, Cologne, Leipzig, Breslau, Frankfort, Hanover, Halle, Dusseldorf, Wiesbaden and Kiel. Bremen stood thirteenth in the list, with a daily average of nearly 9,000 postals. —New York Press.

Betting and Oranges.

A favorite way of betting in China is with oranges. This goes on at the fruit stalls and also in private houses. The bet is on the number of seeds in an orange. Sometimes it is as to whether the number is odd or even and at others as to the exact number of seeds the orange contains. If at a fruit stand the dealer will pay the lucky guesser five times his debt, but the loser must pay the value of the orange and also five times as much as he has wagered. Quail-fighting and cricket combats are also sources of great interest to the oriental sporting fraternities.

A Puzzle Solved.

Many housekeepers have wondered what the white powder covering the nutmeg is. An old spice dealer is authority that as soon as the nutmeg is gathered it is rolled in a lime made from burned oyster shells in order to prevent its destruction by the weevil, and it is this dust that remains upon it. Mace is one of the outer coverings of the nutmeg, and is preferred by many cooks because of its color.—Milwaukee Wisconsin.

BIG CLASH IN CHINA

WARLIKE MOVEMENTS OF CHINESE AND ALLIED TROOPS.

Twenty Thousand Chinese Troops Are Advancing in the Provinces of Shansi and Chili — Force of French and German Troops Starts Hurriedly From Pekin—Present Expedition Due to the Hostile Attitude of Gen. Li—Missionary Exposes the Duplicity of Li Hung Chang.

Berlin, April 19—Field Marshal Count von Waldersee telegraphs from Pekin that he has been informed that 20,000 Chinese are advancing through the defiles between the provinces of Shansi and Chili. It is not known whether their intentions are peaceable or warlike.

-o-

Pekin, April 19.—The departure from here yesterday of French and German troops to the western border of the province of Chili was the first intimation the other commanders had that any such expedition was planned. Some people view the expedition as inconsistent, owing to the negotiations that are now going on, while others commend the movement as necessary. The present expedition is due to the hostile attitude of the Chinese general, Li. So far as known it is believed that most of the Chinese troops to the north of Pekin are still hostile to the foreigners.

A missionary named Killie (the Rev. Mr. Kelley, Presbyterian?) has returned from Sanho, where Christians were burned to death in December. Mr. Kellie reports to Gen. Chaffee that some time ago some of his

Converts Were Killed.

He had the guilty parties tried in the Chinese courts, where they were convicted and sentenced to death, subject to Li Hung Chang's signature. Mr. Kellie came to Pekin to see Li, who said the men should be executed immediately. Upon going to Sanho three weeks later the missionary found the men all alive. He spoke to a judge of the Chinese court upon the matter, who thereupon showed him a letter from Li Hung Chang giving explicit instructions that the men must not be executed, as they had only been convicted on the testimony of Christians, consequently the evidence was untrustworthy. Mr. Killie has a copy of this letter. In the meantime the French had proved the same men guilty of incendiarism and other outrages and demanded their execution, whereupon the judge again showed his orders from Li Hung Chang. The French authorities replied that if the men were not executed within eight days they would take the law in their own hands and punish the Chinese officials likewise.

PASSES THE HALF BILLION.

Gold Holdings in the United States Treasury.

Washington, April 19. — The gold holdings in the treasury department yesterday amounted to the enormous sum of $500,552,526. This is in spite of the recent purchases by the secretary of the treasury of about $6,000,000 in bonds which were paid for in gold. Exclusive of the gold held against the gold certificates of the treasury the total gold is about $248,199,547. This amount includes the $150,000,000 gold reserve, leaving $98,199,547 of free gold. Treasurer Roberts estimates that the more than half a billion of gold on hand will be increased $10,000,000 or $15,000,000 more by the first of July unless the volume of bonds purchased by the secretary of the treasury is greater than now estimated. This is the largest amount of gold now held by any single financial institution in the world, and it is the largest ever held by any institution with one exception—the Imperial Bank of Russia, which in February, 1898, raised its total holdings to $590,300,000.

PRIESTS FROM THE STATES.

Will Take the Place of Spanish Friars in the Philippines.

Washington, April 19. — The report from Manila that Judge Taft has the assurance from Mgr. Chappelle that the Spanish friars will not attempt to return to their old parishes is regarded as reliable at the war department, though no official information has been received from Judge Taft. All official reports from the Philippine commission have indicated that this would be the outcome. Judge Taft believes that the people are loyal to the Catholic church, and that they should have Catholic priests, but these must not be friars. He has favored priests from the United States, and it is believed that Mgr. Chappelle has reached the same conclusion, and that he will make such recommendations in Rome, so that young priests from this country will be sent to the Philippines to take up the work of the friars.

GOMEZ IS COMING.

He Will Thank the Americans for Their Assistance to Cuba.

Havana, April 19.—Gen. Maximo Gomez is making arrangements to go to the United States to visit Gen. Estrada Palma. He will be accompanied by his son Urbide, and will probably return in the United States until the return of the convention's commission on relations. He desires to await action on the Platt amendment in order to avoid the accusation that the trip is made for political purposes. He desires to visit the americans and thank them for the assistance they rendered Cuba during the struggle with Spain. Gen. Palma is a warm supporter of Gomez for the presidency.

Vienna, April 19.—A band of Bulgarians yesterday invaded Turkish territory at Ak-Tank, in Northern Turkestan. They were repulsed by the Turkish troops. One Bulgarian was killed and the others escaped.

Banished Students Return.

St. Petersburg, April 19.—In consequence of their petitions to the czar a number of banished students have been allowed to return upon giving a written pledge not to engage in the anti-orthodox propaganda.

EXAGERATED AND MISLEADING.

Gen. MacArthur Reports Regarding the Alleged Frauds.

Washington, April 20.—The following cablegram was made public at the war department yesterday:

"Manila—Adjutant General, Washington: With reference to your telegram of 16th, press report grossly exaggerated, misleading; matters therein touched upon regarding officers' subsistence department fully investigated. Proceedings (mailed) by transport Sheridan. Regarding theft commissary stores, amount which grossly exaggerated by press reports, immediate and most drastic measures already been applied. Three officers and number enlisted men being tried by court-martial. Number citizens military commission. —MacArthur."

No statement was made that the report of Gen. MacArthur was satisfactory, although it all along has been the theory at the war department that the reports from Manila were exaggerated. At the same time there is cause for regret in the department that even under the best construction that can be placed upon the dispatch three officers and a number of enlisted men and a number of civilians have conducted themselves in such a manner as to necessitate a court-martial, or a trial by a military commission in the case of the civilians. It is said, however, that even if these persons were being tried there might be exaggeration in regard to the offenses with which they are charged.

FIRST PRESIDENT OF CUBA.

Estrada Palma Is Favored by Gen. Gomez.

Washington, April 20.—Gen. Maximo Gomez has declared himself in favor of Estrada Palma for first president of Cuba. This is regarded as a good indication of the conservatism of the real leaders of Cuba.

Gen. Gomez, as the leader of the Cuban revolution and the general of the Cuban army, has been regarded as the most probable leader of the Revolutionary party. An effort was made in the convention to adopt a clause into the constitution providing that only native born Cubans should be eligible to the office of president. This would have shut out Gomez, as he is a native of San Domingo, but it failed to pass. If Gen. Gomez has determined to head a movement for Gen. Palma that movement will receive encouragement from Washington. Gen. Palma was at the head of the Cuban junta in this country during the consideration of the Cuban question by congress. He is a Cuban, but for some years he has lived in this country, and has conducted a school for the education of Cuban youths. He is conservative and level-headed, and his residence in this country and experience in Washington, where he has met public men, makes him better qualified to take the reins of government in Cuba than other leaders who have not had experience in public affairs.

STRUCK BY A SNOWSLIDE.

Passenger Train Hurled Into a Chasm and Four Men Killed

Boulder, Colo., April 20. — A terrible accident occurred on the Colorado & Northwestern road near this city. Two big engines attached to a passenger train coming from Ward to Boulder, were struck by a huge snowslide and hurled into the chasm below. One fireman has not yet been accounted for and it is believed he is dead. Four other trainmen were killed. The bodies have not been recovered. The passenger train left Ward for Boulder drawn by two engines. When the train arrived at Boomerville the engines were uncoupled and started up the hill to buck the snow which was deep upon the tracks. A sharp curve occurs near the apex of the mountain, and just as the engines started to round the curve a vast avalanche of snow and earth was loosened from above. It came down with a terrific force and gained momentum every second. It is said that the train, which was heavily loaded with passengers, was not touched by the slide.

ATTEMPTED SUICIDE.

Beautiful and Accomplished Young Woman Takes Poison.

Grinnell, Iowa, April 20.—Because, it is alleged, her love was unrequited, beautiful and accomplished Laura Akers of Bloomfield attempted her life with poison and is still in a very precarious condition. Miss Akers is nineteen years of age. Her personal charms are many and for some time she has been a prominent figure in local social circles. She is a sister of Prof. Akers of the Pulaski high school and possesses many accomplishments. The deed was attempted while her parents were away from the house. The first attempt failed because Miss Akers took too much of the poison. The last attempt was more successful and would have terminated fatally had it not been for prompt assistance.

ROUTING THE BOERS.

Plummer and Douglas Continuing to Operate With Success.

London, April 20.—A dispatch from Gen. Kitchener, dated Pretoria, April 17, says: "Plumer has occupied Bathfont, capturing thirteen prisoners and a number of rifles and ammunition. Douglas' column has occupied Dulstroom. Six Boers were killed. Elliott's division has brought in a large number of cattle."

NATIONAL COAL MINE.

New Zealand Premier Has a Plan to Keep Down Prices.

Victoria, B. C., April 20.—The steamer Aorangi brings news from New Zealand that Premier Siddon will ask the government of the colony to start a national coal mine to supply the government-owned railways and private consumers and keep down prices.

Ear Bitten Off.

Chicago, April 20.—John McConachie, conductor of a Halsted street cable car, had his car bitten off by a passenger. A young man tendered a transfer which the conductor declared worthless. In trying to eject the passenger McConachie lost his ear.

Seeding Delayed.

Stewartville, Minn., April 20.—Very little seeding has been done here yet. The ground has not been so wet in several years, and many fields cannot be worked for some time.

WORK OF PLANTING

FARMERS BEGINNING SEEDING OPERATIONS.

Crop Conditions Are Generally Favorable Throughout the Country—Rains Retard Farm Work in Some States, While in Others There Is Insufficient Moisture—Winter Wheat Making Favorable Progress—Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa and South Dakota Reports.

Washington, April 18.—The crop report of the weather bureau issued yesterday shows that over the greater part of the country east of the Rocky mountains the week has been abnormally cool and unfavorable for germination and growth. Excessive rains retarded farm work in the states of the Middle Rocky mountain slope and lower Missouri valley, while a large part of the lake region, Southern Florida and California need rain. With the exception of portions of the lake region, Florida, Texas and California, there is generally ample moisture in the soil and the conditions now most needed, especially in the central valleys and Middle Atlantic states are sunshine and warmth.

Slow progress has been made with corn planting, none having yet been planted north of the Ohio river or farther north than Southern Missouri to the westward.

Nearly all reports from the winter wheat states show that winter wheat has made favorable progress, although its growth has not been rapid owing to low temperatures.

Spring wheat seeding is well advanced over the southern portion of the spring wheat region, and some has been sown on the high lands in Northern Minnesota. In South Dakota the early sown is germinating well.

Oat seeding has been rapidly pushed in portions of the central valleys, some having been sown as far north as Southern Minnesota and New York, but slow progress has been made in Kentucky and portions of Missouri.

The following special bulletins from the Northwestern states show the condition of crops in that section of the country:

Wisconsin—Some snow on ground in northern counties but in central and southern sections soil about free from frost; some plowing in extreme southern counties but farm work not generally commenced; winter wheat, rye and clover in excellent condition; soil generally well stored with moisture.

Minnesota—Light rains in middle of week and cloudy weather prevented drying of heavy soils; wheat seeding general on high lands in all portions except southeast; in central and southwest portions wheat seeding well advanced and some oats and barley sown; clover and winter rye and wheat and fruits wintered well.

Iowa—Several fair days improving soil condition and seeding is in progress in all districts; sowing spring wheat nearly completed.

South Dakota—Although considerably delayed by freezing and wet weather, spring wheat seeding is far advanced in southeastern, progressing fairly in middle and begun in northern counties, and early sown germinating well in the south; soil amply moist generally, some localities too wet, especially in the north; grass and winter rye starting nicely.

A STUBBORN FIGHT.

Amalgamated Association Demands Recognition of the Union.

Pittsburg, April 18.—The close of the second day of the strike at the Deewes wood plant of the American Sheet Steel company at McKeesport shows a condition of affairs that forebodes a hard fight. The fight is being made by the Amalgamated association for the recognition of unionism, and President Shaffer's announcement that all of the company's mills will be called out may receive sanction of the advisory board to-day. Secretary Jeckatt, in charge of the labor bureau of the company, will be present at this meeting and present the company's side of the matter and urge that no strike be declared. If the statement credited to the company that the McKeesport plant will be closed indefinitely rather than recognize the union, is adhered to, President Shaffer's attitude will demand that the entire strength of the Amalgamated association be pitted against the company as a whole. The status of the strike now is that only two departments of the mill are in operation, the steel mill or finishing department and the hammer shop.

TOPPLED OVER A BRIDGE.

Car Drops Eighty Feet and Two Men Are Killed.

Buffalo, N. Y., April 18.—A derrick car and a gondola toppled over a bridge over Eighteen-Mile creek, eighteen miles from Buffalo on the Nickle Plate road last evening. Sixteen men went with them to the rocky bed fifty feet below. Two were so badly injured that they died within half an hour after the accident. Four others were brought to the emergency hospital in this city. At midnight the surgeons said it was doubtful if two of them would live until daybreak.

LAUNCHING THE MAINE.

Interesting Event Will Take Place on Memorial Day

Philadelphia, April 18.—It has practically been decided by the Cramps' Shipbuilding company to launch the United States battleship Maine on Memorial day. Survivors of the original Maine and the widows and orphans of the sailors killed in Havana harbor will probably be invited to attend the launching.

NAPOLEON AND HELENA.

French Prince Marries Daughter of Russian Grand Duke.

Brussels, April 18. — The Petit Bleu says that Prince Louis Napoleon has married the Grand Duchess Helena, daughter of the Russian Grand Duke Vladimir. Prince Louis Napoleon was born July 16, 1864. He is the second son of the late Prince Jerome Napoleon and the younger brother of Prince Victor. Helena, the youngest child of the Russian Grand Duke Vladimir, was born Jan. 29, 1882.

CUBANS TO ACCEPT IT.

COMMISSION WILL MAKE FAVORABLE REPORT.

Now Have a Clearer Understanding of the Relations This Government Would Maintain Toward Cuba—Cubans Realize That the Acceptance of the Platt Amendment Will Guarantee Their Independence—Are Now Chiefly Concerned in the Economic Aspect of the Relations.

Washington, April 28.—As a result of the visit of the Cuban commissioners it is evident that these gentlemen will return to Havana with a clearer understanding of the relations this government would maintain toward Cuba. They have found the president, members of his cabinet, senators and representatives all earnestly in favor of doing everything possible to give Cuba the largest measure of independence not dangerous to the welfare of this country. It has been explained to them that the Platt amendment was adopted to insure Cuba independence in the conduct of her own affairs and to guarantee that independence by the power of the American army and navy. The Cubans already understand this, but they have depended upon the enforcement of the Monroe doctrine to

from the interference of foreign powers without assuming any obligations of their own to this government. Without exception the Cuban commission acknowledges the supremacy of the United States in all matters affecting the American continent. Dr. Tamayo, secretary of state for Gen. Wood's Cuban cabinet, gave out the following statement:

"There is no doubt that we will present a favorable report to the convention. We have made little progress so far in discussing the economical problems, but under no circumstances will there be any conflict between us and the United States government. What we are now chiefly interested in is the economic aspect of relations. Our products of sugar and tobacco must in this country. If we receive special tariff advantages it will mean more to Cuba than all other concessions. Indeed, our principal object in coming here is to ascertain what this government will do in the way of tariff inducements. We have some differences of opinion among ourselves as to the eventual course, but there is little doubt that the president is seeking to establish relations which will be mutually beneficial."

Although practically agreed to recommend the ratification of the Platt amendment, the Cuban commission accepts this alternative not without reserve, but as inevitable. Secretary Root conferred with the Cubans at length yesterday. He had them, as on Thursday, at luncheon in the afternoon, and then presided at a meeting at the war department, at which Gen. Wood was also present.

GREISHEIM'S HORROR.

Eighty Bodies Taken From the Ruins of the Chemical Works.

Frankfort-on-the-Main, April 28. — Eighty bodies have been recovered from the ruins of the Greisheim electro-chemical works. It is believed that there are more bodies in the ruins. It is estimated that in addition to the killed 150 persons were injured. Many others are missing. A number of children who were hurled by the explosion into the River Main were drowned before rescuers could reach them. Several firemen are among the victims. The signal was given at 10:30 yesterday morning to all the inhabitants of Greisheim and vicinity that they must leave immediately, as an explosion of a great benzine reservoir was expected. Even the firemen, salvagers and soldiers left, but the explosion did not occur. Several women and children were trampled to death during the panic-stricken flight.

NEGRO LYNCHED.

He Had Committed an Assault on a Young Woman.

Elberton, Ga., April 28.—While fishing in the Savannah river near her home, Wednesday, Miss Rhoda Alexander was assaulted by a negro workman named William Goolsby. Miss Alexander reported the matter to her mother. About that time the negro appeared and offered to work six month for the mother if she would not report him. Before he could leave the place some friends of the family appeared, took charge of the negro and left for the river. Later they reported that they had set him free. Yesterday it developed that Goolsby was lynched and that his body was thrown into the Savannah river.

CURE FOR TUBERCULOSIS.

Argentine Army Surgeon Publishes Report on His Experiments.

Buenos Ayres, Arg., April 28.—Dr. C. L. Villar, an Argentine army surgeon, has just published a report on the treatment of fifty cases of tuberculosis with his serum at the military hospital in this city. The treatment extended from Dec. 2, 1900, to April 20, 1901. Tuberculosis in its early stages, says Dr. Villar, is cured within forty days. Patients whose cases were more advanced, but without complications, he reports, were all cured within ninety days. Of those patients whose cases were far advanced, all were cured except those who could offer very little resistance to the disease

LINCOLN'S LAST RESTING PLACE.

Remains of the Martyred President Placed in the Permanent Tomb.

Springfield, Ill., April 26. — The caskets containing the remains of Abraham Lincoln and other members of his family were deposited in the crypt in the reconstructed Lincoln monument yesterday afternoon. Since March 10 of this year the caskets have been reposing in a temporary stone vault, pending the completion of the extensive repairs to the monument. The removal was unceremonious, being quietly witnessed by Gov. Yates, United States Judge Humphrey, Mayor Phillips and other state and city officials, besides about 200 citizens of Springfield. The exact time of removal had been withheld from the public as far as possible. The temporary vault was so thoroughly cemented that it was 5 o'clock, three hours after the work of removal commenced; that the remains of the president, which were the last to be removed, were finally placed in the marble sarcophagus in the crypt, where they were sealed up and where they will probably remain through all time. The casket was not opened for the identification of the body of the martyr president as had been expected, nor was even the leaden casket exposed to view, being covered by a cedar casket. The remains which now rest in the tomb monument are those of President and Mrs. Lincoln, their sons Willie, Thomas and Eddie, and Abraham, son of their oldest son, Robert T. Lincoln.

LIEUTENANTS NAMED.

Nearly Six Hundred Selected Under the Army Reorganization Bill.

Washington, April 26. — The secretary of war yesterday made public the names of the 588 men selected for first and second lieutenants in the regular army under the army reorganization bill. All of these men have had service either in the state or national volunteer or in the regular army. They have been ordered for examination, and should they pass will be appointed. The following are from Northwestern states: Minnesota, eight, James G. Taylor, Ralph Emerson Herring, Fred H. Parks, George I. Becker, Alfred S. Morgan, Walter H. Johnson, John N. Loye, A. W. Bjornstad; North Dakota, one, W. P. Moffatt; South Dakota, two, Arthur L. Fuller, Harry A. Hegeman; Wisconsin, eleven, John B. Shuman, Frank L. French, Harry W. Newton, John H. Baker, Reuben D. Blanchard, Edward K. Madsen, John C. Ohnstan, Frederick P. Cook, Robert F. Woods, John H. Lewis.

WOMEN WHIPPED.

Sensational Incident of the Anti-Vice Crusade in Suffolk, Va.

Suffolk, Va., April 26. — As a result of an anti-vice crusade, Carrie Palmer and Lavina White were officially cowhided in the city hall by Chief of Police Ames. The young women quivered with pain as twenty stripes from a rawhide were laid upon their backs. When the whipping was over they were exiled from the town, never to return on the penalty of fifty lashes upon the naked skin. The officials mean to continue the infliction of stringent penalties until objectionable conditions in the town are wiped out. This was the first cowhiding of women in Suffolk's history.

KRUGER IS WORRIED.

He Fears Mrs. Botha Will Induce Her Husband to Surrender.

New York, April 26. — Once again peace rumors are in the air, says the Tribune's London correspondent. Mrs. Botha has been in correspondence with Lord Kitchener, and as a result it is believed that the British commander-in-chief has agreed to receive the three Boer generals, Botha, Delarey and Viljoen, within a few days. While nothing is definitely known, it is, perhaps, not without significance that the news should reach London from Amsterdam that Mr. Kruger is afraid Mrs. Botha's efforts will cause her husband to surrender.

ROBBED AT A WEDDING.

Sioux City Man Loses $500 Worth of Jewelry in Jersey City.

New York, April 26. — While the guests at the wedding feast of Miss Edna Amelia Schrader of Sioux City, Iowa, and Rudolph Weller of Hoboken were enjoying themselves at Postkeller hall, 213 Washington street, Jersey City, George Schrader, the father of the bride, fell asleep and he was put to bed in a room over the hall. When he awoke he discovered that $500 worth of jewelry had been stolen from his clothing. The police believe that one of the wedding guests did it. A reward of $50 has been offered for the return of the jewelry.

PUGILIST'S DEATH.

Billy Smith Succumbs to a Knock-Out Blow.

London, April 26. — Billy Smith the American pugilist who was knocked out in the eighth round of a contest with Jack Roberts for the 126-pound championship of England Monday night, and who has lain unconscious in a hospital since, died at 11:45 yesterday. An inquest will be held. Roberts, the manager of the National Sporting club, the referee and the seconds have surrendered to the police.

SIGNAL FOR THE SEA.

Wireless Telegraphy Station to Be Erected Near Fastnet Rock.

London, April 26.—Marconi's wireless telegraph company is erecting an etheric station on the mainland of England near Fastnet Rock. All vessels fitted with a transmitter will be able to report themselves when they are many miles beyond the rock, and thus avoid threading the passage separating it from the mainland

CALLAHAN NOT GUILTY.

So Says the Jury and the Judge Expresses His Disgust in Emphatic Terms.

Omaha, April 30.—After considering over night the guilt or innocence of James Callahan, the jury announced yesterday morning that he had no part in the kidnapping of Edward Cudahy, Jr. The verdict was an evident surprise to the court, and Judge Baker expressed his disgust in emphatic terms. Callahan was arrested on two other counts which the state is not now prepared to say will be made use of as no new evidence is at hand and the expense of going over the ground again is considerable. Judge Baker, addressing the jury, rebuked them in the most vigorous terms. "If Callahan had made his own choice of a jury," the court said, "he could not have selected twelve men who would have served him more faithfully. If the state for its part had made the selection, I know of no men it could have named who could have been less careful of its interests. The jury is discharged without the compliments of the court, and the prisoner is likewise turned loose as to this trial, I presume to continue the criminal practices in which you have failed to check him. I do not know what motive actuated you in reaching this decision, but I hope none of you will ever appear again in this jury box."

The jury was evidently ill at ease during this arraignment, but did not make any response and filed rapidly from the box as soon as it was at liberty. In the hallway Callahan mumbled his thanks and shook the jurymen's hands. This proceeding was one of embarrassment under the contemptuous eyes of the court officers. Chief of Police Donohue says he will urge Mr. Cudahy to at once withdraw the proffered reward of $5,000 for the apprehenson of Pat Crowe. "Crowe might easily make an appearance and claim the reward himself," said Chief Donohue, "as the evidence against him is no more direct than that against Callahan. In my eighteen years of experience with criminals I have never heard more absolutely convincing evidence presented than that presented against Callahan."

DRAGGED TO DEATH BY A PONY.

Girl's Foot Is Caught in a Stirrup When the Animal Runs Away.

Red Oak, Iowa, April 30. — Pluma Nordquist, the twelve-year-old daughter of S. C. Nordquist, a prominent Red Oak merchant, was dragged half a mile by a runaway pony, with her foot fast in the stirrup. She was dead when found.

Attempt to Blow Up a Mine.

Grand Rapids, Mich., April 30.—An attempt was made during the night to blow up the Midland Plaster company's mine near here. A fuse leading to 500 pounds of dynamite so placed that its explosion would wreck the mine, was discovered by an employe, who destroyed it. Forty men employed in the mine getting out stuff for the Pan-American exposition, struck the previous day. The mine is now guarded by a force of deputies.

Three Brothers Shot.

Gilman, Ill., April 30.—At a country dance three miles south of Gilman the three Morris brothers, Walter, James and Philip, of this city, were shot. Walter died; the other two will recover, though James was seriously wounded. The shooting followed a fight between the brothers and three or four other guests at the dance. George Morrison did the shooting. He gave himself up to the sheriff and claims he fired in self-defense.

Libraries for Iowa Towns.

Sioux City, Iowa, April 30.—The second bulletin of the state library commission, which has just been received here, shows that six Iowa towns have voted tax levies this spring for the establishment of public libraries. They are Pleasant, Hawkeye, Stuart, Jefferson, Hawarden and Colfax. Davenport, Cedar Rapids, Mount Vernon and Upper Iowa university at Fayette, all have received a gift of $25,000 from ex-Gov. Drake and have voted a tax for the establishment of a free public library.

Dennis Must Be Tried in Nebraska.

Sioux City, Iowa, April 30.—The Monona county grand jury failed to find an indictment against Frank Dennis for the alleged murder of John P. Worrell last February. The crime occurred on a sandbar in the Missouri river, and the evidence showed that the crime was out of the jurisdiction of the Iowa courts. The surveyor who investigated the matter testified before the grand jury. It is said the Burt county, Neb., authorities will take up the matter of prosecuting Dennis.

Sheriff in Possession.

Sioux City, Iowa, April 30.—The sheriff of Ida county has taken possession of the hardware and implement business of F. J. Thompson of Holstein on a writ of attachment. Thompson left home suddenly last Monday and numerous claims are being filed by creditors. Thompson's wife claims a $5,000 interest in the business.

Called Back.

Sioux City, Iowa, April 30.—William Parkins, the young man who escaped from the county jail here a few days ago while painting in the corridor, was arrested at Worthing, S. D., and brought back by Sheriff Jackson. Parkins was waiting to be taken to the state's prison to serve an eighteen months' term when he escaped.

MRS. NATION CRAZY

CONFINED IN A PADDED CELL AT WICHITA, KAN.

Kansas Saloon Smasher Becomes Raving Mad—She Imagines That She Is an Apostle Sent to Earth to Rule It—It Is Believed That Her Insanity Is Temporary—Her First Act of Madness Was to Assault Her Cellmate—Abuses the Sheriff and Her Best Friends.

Wichita, Kan., April 30.—Mrs. Carrie Nation, the noted saloon smasher, is confined in her cell in the county jail here, raving mad. She is thought to be only temporarily insane, however. Her insanity was Saturday and yesterday of the most acute stage. She imagines herself to be an apostle sent to the earth to rule it. She is confined in a dungeon cell, which has been padded, and everything is kept from her so she cannot injure herself.

Mrs. Nation's friends say that her insanity fit is caused by the news of her brother's death at Lewisburg Saturday. He was her bondsman in numerous cases, and just before she went voluntarily to jail here he called her up by telephone and offered to go on her bond, but she refused, preferring to serve time. Mrs. Nation's first act of insanity was to assault her cellmate, Mrs. Wilhoit, one of the two women who assisted her in several raids. She accused Mrs. Wilhoit of being a

to gain confessions from her. She slapped her and otherwise made life dangerous until Sheriff Simmons confined Mrs. Nation in a dungeon in the lower part of the jail and put her on bread and water. Every few hours she would go into wild fits and talk unreasonably to herself. Saturday morning when news came that she had better get bond and come to see her brother she commenced growing worse. James Ray, her attorney, and Wilburt Jones, former Prohibition candidate for mayor, called at her cell door and offered to go her bail. She yelled at them wildly: "Go out of here, you scullions of hell, or I will throw lightning of saints at you. If I want to get out of here I can fly through the walls. The devil is in your hearts." Both men were astounded, as they have been her best friends since she and Jones has acted as her bondsman upon several occasions. Sheriff Simmons told her that she should accept bond if she wanted to see her brother alive, but she only commenced to abuse him. No one is allowed near her. David Nation, husband of the saloon wrecker, who is spending his vacation in Wichita, has been notified of the serious condition of his wife. Physicians have examined her mental condition, and they agree at times she is a raving maniac, while at other times she is as sane as any one could be. It is generally attributed that her raving was caused by solitary confinement and the death of her brother. Mrs. Nation was quieter last evening and announced her intention of going to Lewisburg to-day. Bond has been accepted for her release. Sheriff Simmons says he would be glad to get rid of her, as she is crazy.

Commenced Saloon Smashing,

BRYAN TO RUN FOR GOVERNOR.

May Be a Candidate for Position of Nebraska's Chief Executive.

New York, April 30.—Edward Rosewater, editor of the Omaha Bee, is quoted as saying:

"William J. Bryan, in my opinion, will be a candidate for governor of Nebraska next year. Mr. Bryan still exerts a wide influence in the state, and if he receives the gubernatorial nomination he will be a very hard man to beat. If elected governor he will hope to secure a Democratic legislature, in which event he will seek an election to the United States senate to succeed Gov. Dietrich, whose term will expire in 1905."

ROWDY STUDENTS IN DISGRACE.

Nine Sophomores at the State University of Kansas Suspended.

Lawrence, Kan., April 30—Nine members of the sophomore class of the University of Kansas, including the class president, were suspended for thirty days by the faculty for rowdyism in connection with a junior class party a week ago. The suspended students attempted to prevent attendance upon a party, destroyed clothing and tied upper classmen so that they could not attend. The nine men suspended were found to be implicated in the affair.

THROWN UNDER A TRAIN.

Omaha Man Robbed and Nearly Killed in Arkansas.

Hot Springs, Ark., April 30. — Two men knocked J. T. Williams, a visitor from Omaha, in the head with a slung shot, robbed him of his purse containing $170 and then threw him blindfolded and his hands tied, under the train on the Hot Springs road. He managed to escape from the horrible death the perpetrators had planned to hide their crime, but his left leg was severed just below the knee. Physicians attended him at once and it is thought he will live.

Probably Insane.

Washington, April 30.—Harry Finkelstein, a well dressed man about thirty-four years of age, who says his home is in Cleveland, Ohio, is locked up at the police station here on suspicion of being insane. He went to the vicinity of the White House, said he wanted to see the president on urgent business of a private nature and acted so [illegible] he was arrested.

MINERS LOSE THEIR LIVES.

Four or Six Thought to Have Perished in a Fire.

Latrobe, Pa., April 30. — The entire tipple, engine house and boiler house of the Dorothy Coal and Coke plant of the American Steel and Wire company is a smouldering mass of ruins and it is reported that either four or six miners have lost their lives. The loss is estimated at $150,000; fully insured. The fire will cause over 400 miners being thrown out of work.

RAMPOLLA RESIGNS.

Cardinal Ferrata Becomes Papal Secretary of State.

Rome, April 30.—The Patria states that Cardinal Rampolla has resigned the office of papal secretary of state and that he will be succeeded by Cardinal Ferrata, prefect of the congregation of indulgences and sacred relics.

Irate Negress Slashes Peddler.

Chicago, April 30.—Because she considered herself cheated by Julius Stern, a peddler, in the purchase of some jewelry, Mrs. Lillian Hudgins, a colored woman, slashed the man so badly with a razor that he died inside of two hours. She cut Stern's face to pieces and made a number of gashes across his throat, one of which cut the jugular vein slightly. Stern was carried to the hospital, but the surgeons could do nothing for him. The woman was arrested.

HOT AFTER CAILLES

BLOODTHIRSTY FILIPINO GENERAL PURSUED BY TROOPS.

Americans Surprise His Camp, Capture His Adjutant General and All His Papers, but the General Manages to Escape—Has a Reputation for Vindictiveness and Cruelty — Offered $10 Apiece for Heads of Americans Brought to Him—Can't Claim Immunity if Caught.

Manila, April 30—Capt. Wilson Chase, with a detachment of the Twenty-first infantry, on April 26 surprised the camp of the insurgent general Cailles at Dugot-Dugot, situated nine miles northeast of Cavinti, in the province of Laguna. Cailles was at his camp at the time of the American attack, but managed to escape. Capt. Chase's force captured his adjutant general, five other of his staff officers, fourteen men, twenty rifles, a large amount of ammunition and stores and all the papers and personal effects of the Filipino general. The insurgent major Velo was killed during the engagement, as were Corporal McGill and Private Tripp, both belonging to Company A, Twenty-first. Several columns of the American troops continue vigorously to pursue Gen. Cailles. Gen. Cailles recently offered a reward of $10,000 for the head of Capt. Edward N. Jones, Jr., of the Eighth infantry. For more than a year past Cailles has commanded the insurgent forces operating to the south of Bay Lake, not far from Manila. He is said to be a French half-caste. He has a reutation for vindictiveness and cruelty and is one of two of the Filipino leaders still in the field who have clearly violated the observances of honorable warfare. The Society of Mondo-Ducats, whose practice it was to assassinate and bury alive those of their countrymen who accepted American sovereignty whenever the latter fell into their hands, operated with the cognizance, if not the support of Gen. Cailles. If Cailles were captured, it is doubtful if he could claim immunity for past actions under the terms of the amnesty. In January of this year Cailles offered a reward of $10 apiece for the heads of all Americans brought to him.

STUDENT KILLED.

Is Shot by Companion While They Are Acting in a Play.

Burnsville, N. C., April 30. — During the closing exercises of the Stanley-McCormick high school at Burnsville R. N. McInturf, one of the students, was shot and killed by Baccus Bailey, another student, both representing characters in a play which was being enacted. When it became necessary for Bailey, in his role, to defend himself with a revolver against a drawn knife in the hands of McInturf, he used by mistake a loaded pistol, and in the presence of several hundred persons McInturf was shot dead on the stage. The boys were roommates and special friends.

JOLT FOR JEFFRIES.

Champion Pugilist Hit With a Beer Glass by a Congressman.

Kansas City, April 30. — James J. Jeffries, the champion pugilist, quarreled with Congressman Jim Butler of St. Louis in a down town saloon, and the big pugilist was hit with a beer glass before the quarrel ended. Butler and Jeffries were in an ugly mood, and for a time it was feared that serious trouble would result. Congressman Butler was game and did not flinch when Jeffries threatened to extend his terrible right. The St. Louis congressman picked up a beer glass and let it fly at the champion. Friends interfered and the belligerents shook hands.

TRAGEDY AT BREAKFAST TABLE.

A Man Kills His Sister Without Warning.

Prairie du Chien, Wis., April 30. — Max Heck, who runs his father's farm near McGregor, Iowa, yesterday shot and almost instantly killed his sister, Mrs. Ellsworth, at her home in McGregor while at the breakfast table. The family had sat down to breakfast when Heck drew a revolver and fired directly at his sister. The ball entered just below the heart. It is thought that Heck was temporarily insane. He was arrested.

MIDWAY MUST CLOSE SUNDAYS.

Compromise Made on the Buffalo Sunday Closing Issue.

Buffalo, N. Y., April 30.—The question of whether the gates of the Pan-American grounds are to be open on Sunday was finally settled by the board of directors. Their decision is a compromise. The gates are to be open from 1 p. m. to 11 p. m., but the midway and all amusement features will be closed during the twenty-four hours from Saturday night until Monday morning.

Pickpocket Killed.

Chicago, April 30. — While trying to escape arrest for snatching a woman's purse Richard Donahue, a notorious pickpocket was shot and instantly killed last night by Policeman Gardiner. Donahue was accompanied by three companions, but the latter managed to escape. The four thieves had been working in a crowd of several hundred people who were watching a fire.

Dropped Dead.

St. Joseph, Mo., April 30. — Harry Berlet, aged thirty-eight, a well known sporting man, late of Chicago, dropped dead here

THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN

Michael G. Mulhall, the noted statistician who died recently in London, forecasted the twelfth American census within 95,000, showing how very precise and accurate statistical science can be in skillful hands.

Henry James was once praising the work of a fellow author. "You are very kind to him," said some one present, "for he says very unpleasant things about your work." "Ah," said Mr. James, "but, then, both of us may be wrong."

A station nine miles out from a great city on one of the oldest railroad lines in the United States bears the name "Relay." This was because the horses by which the road was first operated, were there changed. What's in a name? Sometimes a fragment of history.

The bureau of engraving and printing has orders from the postoffice department to print the new Pan-American Exposition stamps, in the following quantities: One-cent, 71,000,000; two-cent, 160,000,000; four-cent, 5,000,000; five-cent, 8,000,000; eight-cent, 3,000,000; ten-cent, 4,000,000; total, 251,000,000.

In the Sella Pass in the Dolomite mountains, above Bozen, three women from Fassa lost their way in the snowstorm, and were found frozen together in a stone-like group. They had to be laid on a sledge together and dragged into the valley, and thawed before a great fire, before they could be separated for burial.

Northern Indiana farmers are experimenting in the domestication of quail and the results are reported as highly gratifying. Nearly every farmer in that section has from one to three coveys on his farm and is giving them kind and careful attention. During the snow season the birds are fed regularly and on some of the farms they have become so tame that they roost with the barnyard fowls.

It is said that Herr Heinrich Ehrhardt, the well-known ammunition cart and gun manufacturer of Eisenach and Dusseldorf, Germany, intends, in co-operation with the wealthy Turin manufacturer, Friedrich Spuhn, to establish extensive works for the manufacture of his specialties in Italy. The proposed works will not only be devoted to the guns of Ehrhardt's patent, but also to the manufacture of boiler tubes.

The Paris seamstresses have gone on a strike for shorter hours and higher wages, and American dressmakers have formed a union for effecting prompt payment for garments delivered. On the other hand, an American lady has sued a famous dressmaker of Paris for wasting her time trying on a gown that did not fit. Her plea that nine fittings for one gown was a condition calling for damages has been sustained by the French court.

President Thwing of the Western Reserve university at Cleveland says in noting a marked decrease in the number of divinity students that two influences produce this result—the larger inducements which commercial pursuits offer and the unsettling of religious beliefs and doubts as to future relations between church and society. Young men, says Mr. Thwing, are in doubt, whether the church is to be a place of worship or a sort of club.

While most of the important armies of Europe possess an equipment, more or less complete, of quick-firing artillery, and Italy is busily occupied in bringing herself into line, the German war office is stated to have succeeded in procuring a field gun which is not only a quick firer, but absolutely free from recoil. So perfect is the mechanism for neutralizing the recoil in the new gun just turned out by Messrs. Krupp, that a coin placed on one of the spokes of a wheel is said not to be disturbed by the discharge. The whole of the German field artillery is now to be adapted to the non-recoil mechanism.

A disposition to do the fair thing by home talent has been evinced by a statesman in the Missouri legislature, who has introduced a bill into the senate "that the 14th day of February be and is hereby declared to be the only ground-hog day in Missouri." It appears that some confusion has arisen as to the precise festival of his groundhogship, and legislative enactment is expected to straighten out the tangle. It is not altogether certain that St. Valentine will joyously consent to a division of honors with the humble weather prophet, but the crowding of two such festal days into one will be gladly welcomed by a busy and industrious people.

The servant question in South Africa is one of the minor problems which must be worked out, war or no war. A correspondent of a daily paper complains of his experience with his Zulu houseboy, who had been paid the evening before. At 1 in the morning the servant was discovered leaving the house in heavy marching order, carrying his belongings. There had been no disagreement. It simply was a case of "moving on," from a desire for change. The Zulu mind seems to have regarded giving notice as superfluous.

YOUNG CUDAHY POSITIVE.

He Declares That Callahan Was the "Dark Man" Who Guarded Him.

Omaha, April 27. — In the trial of James Callahan on the charge of connection with the kidnapping of Edward Cudahy, Jr., Dec. 19, 1900, the victim took the stand and absolutely identified Callahan as the "dark man" in the case. After telling of the confinement in a deserted house, which he described minutely, young Cudahy was addressed by Attorney Cowin as follows:

"You may state whether the dark man who put a pistol to your head and made you a prisoner and who guarded you most of the time in the house and who walked down the street with you and bade you good bye when you were released, was one and the same person."

"It was the same man."

"Who was that man?"

"Jim Callahan."

"The defendant here in this case?"

"Yes, sir."

From this point on Callahan was referred to by name and no longer as the "dark man." Callahan betrayed no emotion when the boy declared he was one of the abductors, but a cynical smile played faintly over his features.

VESSEL A TOTAL WRECK.

Fate of the Crew of the Unfortunate Vessel Is Unknown.

Atlantic City, April 27.—The three-masted schooner Emma C. Knowles, Capt. Rogers, from Charleston, S. C., April 14, for Fall River, Mass., with a cargo of lumber, was sighted six miles off this city yesterday almost a total wreck. There was no life on the vessel and the fate of her crew is unknown. The hull of the Knowles, lying broadside in the water, was discovered almost simultaneously by three life-saving crews on the beach soon after the thick fog lifted yesterday morning. The life crews immediately launched their boats and rowed for the wreck. They were watched by several thousand persons on the Board walk. No sign of life was found on board and after making a thorough search the crews returned to the shore. There were signs that the Knowles had been in collision, and the life crews thought the crew might have been taken off.

INSTINCT OF GOULD.

The Father's Money-Making Proclivities Inherited by the Son.

New York, April 27.—George J. Gould is said to have made $20,000,000 personally in the last four years. Jay Gould left $70,000,000 to his five children, and to-day the combined Gould fortunes are worth more than $140,000,000. It is all due to the business sagacity of George, as really he has earned $35,000,000 since last November, or at the rate of $50,000 every hour the stock market was open. This amazing fortune is greater than any other man in Wall street has made, with the exception of John D. Rockefeller, and, perhaps, E. H. Harriman.

BOERS SCATTERED.

They Fle in Confusion and Abandon a Number of Horses.

Cape Town, April 27. — A dispatch from Dordrecht, Cape Colony, says the yeomanry under Col. Wodehouse and the Dordrecht volunteer guard were engaged all day yesterday with the Boer invaders in the vicinity of Dordrecht. When the British commenced firing at a distance of 200 yards, it is said, the Boers fled in confusion, abandoning a number of horses. The Boer losses are unknown, but are believed to be heavy. The British had no casualties.

FATE OF GEN. FRENCH

PERSISTENT RUMORS OF HIS CAPTURE BY BOERS.

Surrounded With Five Hundred of His Men and Compelled to Surrender — Despite War Office Denials the Belief Is Growing That He Is Now in the Hands of the Boers—Gen. Kitchener Strangely Silent—Nothing Definite, Official or Otherwise, Has Been Heard of Gen. French for a Month.

Philadelphia, April 28. — The North American prints the following cable from its London correspondent:

"Despite the persistent denials of the war office, the belief is steadily growing that Gen. French was captured with his men near Vreyheid, April 1, and is now a prisoner somewhere in the mountains of the Transvaal. Since that date—in fact since March 25, just a month ago—nothing definite has been heard from him, official or otherwise. Then he reported that as a result of raiding he had driven the Boers to the northward and would patrol the southern section. The next heard of him was the rumor which came in the form of a dispatch from the Cape Town correspondent of the Cologne Gazette, and reached London from there. In this it was said that while crossing the mountains in a heavy mist French, with his force of 500, was

Quietly Surrounded

by a strong Boer force, to which he capitulated as soon as the clearer atmosphere showed him his plight. If French were still at liberty his movements would be reported daily or weekly in the bulletins of the war office, with those of the other commanders, and the list of his casualties would appear in official reports. But they have all maintained absolute silence regarding him and no official interview is able to make a satisfactory explanation for it. About ten days ago the rumor was current in London and Cape Town that Gen. French had been captured while trying to capture Gen. Dewet. The London war office at that time officially discredited the rumor. Since then nothing has been heard from French. Lord Kitchener has been strangely silent about the rumor. He alone can verify it, as he controls absolutely every outlet of news from South Africa."

Boers Gathered In.

London, April 28.—Gen. Kitchener reports to the war office that since his last dispatch 16 Boers have been killed, 20 wounded, 227 captured and 52 surrendered. Three thousand cattle, 6,000 sheep, and many wagons have been taken. In addition to the foregoing, Lieut. Reid and 20 Imperial bushmen captured yesterday near Commissie Drift Olifant's river, Commandant Schroeder and 41 men of his command.

Britons Captured.

Cape Town, April 28.—Eleven men of a troop of the Western Province mounted rifles, who were patroling in the Calvina district, were surrounded by Boers. They fought for two hours, but surrendered after losing two men killed and two wounded.

INDEPENDENT OF THE TRUST.

More Purchases of Minnesota Iron Lands.

New York, April 28.—At the local offices of Jones & Laughlins of Pittsburg it was stated that additional purchases of several thousand acres of ore lands in Minnesota had just been made. This, with the recently acquired ore tract of P. L. Kimberley's, was declared in Wall street to place the firm in an independent position so far as the United States Steel corporation was concerned. The Kimberley property, of course, is the best. But it is understood that much of the other lands purchased are the finest in Minnesota. Jones & Laughlins say they are going to work at once. They have already started in on their plan to build or buy a fleet of vessels to transport the ore on the great lakes.

PRAIRIE FIRES

Are Doing Great Damage in Nebraska.

Valentine, Neb., April 28.—Word received from the southwestern part of this (Cherry) county is to the effect that disastrous prairie fires are raging there; that the buildings of one cattle ranch have been entirely wiped out, and that other ranches are threatened. Details are very meager and it is impossible to learn the name of the ranch which has suffered the loss of its buildings, which is about sixty miles from here. The report says that the fires started about 4 o'clock Thursday afternoon and at 10 o'clock last night were still raging. They are traveling rapidly northward under three separate heads, four miles apart. A high wind is prevailing.

KILLED BY SALT.

Ate Three Teaspoonfuls Daily Under a Mistaken Medicinal Idea.

Niles, Mich., April 28.—Col. Edward S. Bacon, a prominent attorney and the oldest member of the Berrien County Bar association, is dead, aged seventy-one years. The attending physician says the death was due indirectly to diabetis. At the suggestion of a friend, however, Mr. Bacon commenced taking salt a short time ago, and, as he felt improved, he increased the dose until he finally took three teaspoonfuls daily. This, the doctor says, separated the iron in the blood from the white corpuscles, with the result that the blood turned white.

Charged With Two Serious Crimes.

Carbondale, Ill., April 28. — Frank Lynch has been placed under arrest, charged with complicity in the planned robbery of a Mobile & Ohio train near Ava, this county, and is also charged with being an accessory to the blackmailing scheme on Murray Dean, one of the wealthy men of this county. Frank Lynch is the third arrest made, one of the others being his brother Charles. The man was captured near O'Fallon after the officers had been on his trail several days. Other arrests [illegible]

LINCOLN'S LAST RESTING PLACE.

Remains of the Martyred President Placed in the Permanent Tomb.

Springfield, Ill., April 26. — The caskets containing the remains of Abraham Lincoln and other members of his family were deposited in the crypt in the reconstructed Lincoln monument yesterday afternoon. Since March 10 of this year the caskets have been reposing in a temporary stone vault, pending the completion of the extensive repairs to the monument. The removal was unceremonious, being quietly witnessed by Gov. Yates, United States Judge Humphrey, Mayor Phillips and other state and city officials, besides about 200 citizens of Springfield. The exact time of removal had been withheld from the public as far as possible. The temporary vault was so thoroughly cemented that it was 5 o'clock, three hours after the work of removal commenced, that the remains of the president, which were the last to be removed, were finally placed in the marble sarcophagus in the crypt, where they were sealed up and where they will probably remain through all time. The casket was not opened for the identification of the body of the martyr president as had been expected, nor was even the leaden casket exposed to view, being covered by a cedar casket. The remains which now rest in the tomb monument are those of President and Mrs. Lincoln, their sons Willie, Thomas and Eddie, and Abraham, son of their oldest son, Robert T. Lincoln.

LIEUTENANTS NAMED.

Nearly Six Hundred Selected Under the Army Reorganization Bill.

Washington, April 26. — The secretary of war yesterday made public the names of the 588 men selected for first and second lieutenants in the regular army under the army reorganization bill. All of these men have had service either in the state or national volunteer or in the regular army. They have been ordered for examination, and should they pass will be appointed. The following are from Northwestern states: Minnesota, eight, James G. Taylor, Ralph Emerson Herring, Fred H. Parks, George I. Becker, Alfred S. Morgan, Walter H. Johnson, John N. Loye, A. W. Bjornstad; North Dakota, one, W. P. Moffatt; South Dakota, two, Arthur L. Fuller, Harry A. Hegeman; Wisconsin, eleven, John B. Shuman, Frank L. French, Harry W. Newton, John H. Baker, Reuben D. Blanchard, Edward K. Madsee, John C. Ohnstan, Frederick P. Cook, Robert F. Woods, John H. Lewis.

WOMEN WHIPPED.

Sensational Incident of the Anti-Vice Crusade in Suffolk, Va.

Suffolk, Va., April 26. — As a result of an anti-vice crusade, Carrie Palmer and Lavina White were officially cowhided in the city hall by Chief of Police Ames. The young women quivered with pain as twenty stripes from a rawhide were laid upon their backs. When the whipping was over they were exiled from the town, never to return on the penalty of fifty lashes upon the naked skin. The officials mean to continue the infliction of stringent penalties until objectionable conditions in the town are wiped out. This was the first cowhiding of women in Suffolk's history.

KRUGER IS WORRIED.

He Fears Mrs. Botha Will Induce Her Husband to Surrender.

New York, April 26. — Once again peace rumors are in the air, says the Tribune's London correspondent. Mrs. Botha has been in correspondence with Lord Kitchener, and as a result it is believed that the British commander-in-chief has agreed to receive the three Boer generals, Botha, Delarey and Viljeon, within a few days. While nothing is definitely known, it is, perhaps, not without significance that the news should reach London from Amsterdam that Mr. Kruger is afraid Mrs. Botha's efforts will cause her husband to surrender.

ROBBED AT A WEDDING.

Sioux City Man Loses $500 Worth of Jewelry in Jersey City.

New York, April 26. — While the guests at the wedding feast of Miss Edna Amelia Schrader of Sioux City, Iowa, and Rudolph Weller of Hoboken were enjoying themselves at Postkeller hall, 213 Washington street, Jersey City, George Schrader, the father of the bride, fell asleep and he was put to bed in a room over the hall. When he awoke he discovered that $500 worth of jewelry had been stolen from his clothing. The police believe that one of the wedding guests did it. A reward of $50 has been offered for the return of the jewelry.

PUGILIST'S DEATH.

Billy Smith Succumbs to a Knock-Out Blow.

London, April 26. — Billy Smith the American pugilist who was knocked out in the eighth round of a contest with Jack Roberts for the 126-pound championship of England Monday night, and who has lain unconscious in a hospital since, died at 11:45 yesterday. An inquest will be held. Roberts, the manager of the National Sporting club, the referee and the seconds have surrendered to the police.

SIGNAL FOR THE SEA.

Wireless Telegraphy Station to Be Erected Near Fastnet Rock.

London, April 26.—Marconi's wireless telegraph company is erecting an etheric station on the mainland of England near Fastnet Rock. All vessels fitted with a transmitter will be able to report themselves when they are many miles beyond the rock, and thus avoid threading the passage separating it from the mainland.

Backed Over the Dump.

Harris, Iowa, April 26.—George Hastings met with a serious accident. His horses became frightened and backed over a dump, falling eight feet. A horse fell on Mr. Hastings, leaving him in a dangerous condition.

Dead at Advanced Age.

Hastings, Minn., April 26. — John L. Jones died at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. J. M. Gere, from paralysis, aged eighty-four. He was a native of England, and a former resident of Milwaukee.

CHAPTER XIII. (Continued.)

The oily sweetness had gone from madame's manner, as she put the question. A new expression, jarring to the girl's ear, was in her tone.

She glanced quickly up. Her face, too, had grown hard and cold. A sudden chill ran through Beatrice's frame.

As madame had received her story, so would the world receive it.

"To do?" she repeated. "I came, madame, to ask your counsel, and appeal to your protection, until I can see my way clear to act. I remembered your kind interest, and the promise I so gladly gave you when I graduated, that I would always regard you as my friend."

"Quite right, my dear—quite right; but such a situation as this is most unlooked for—most unexpected. I—I scarcely know how to act, or what to advise. Why should you leave your home, Beatrice? Does you cousin drive you from its doors without suitable provision and support? Surely, he is most heartless!"

Beatrice raised her head proudly, and a haughtiness worth her old position as her father's heiress and Grey Oaks' mistress marked her manner.

"I left Gery Oaks of my own free will, madame. The same roof could no longer shelter Chester Randolph and myself. Pardon me that I erred in my appeal to you."

She rose, as she spoke, to her feet, but was compelled to stretch out one hand on the back of the sofa for support.

Madame rose, too.

"I—I am truly sorry, Beatrice," she said. "But you must see, my dear, I must think only of the pupils confided to my care. They cannot be guarded too carefully against association. Of course, this unhappy story, sooner or later, must come out; and, under the circumstances, should I receive you, I might be considered unworthy their guardianship. The world is so heartless, my dear. I—I am most truly sorry—and—and—as your present means are limited, you will, I am sure, allow me to offer you a loan?"

And she drew out her purse as she spoke.

For a moment the hot, red blood dyed the girl's beautifull face to whom she offered this last crowning insult. With a superb gesture of disdain she checked the Frenchwoman's motion to unfasten the purse.

"Madame!" she said, and in her voice rang a cold scorn which made her listener wince.

She uttered but the one word, but it was more eloquent than any further speech.

Then she moved toward the door.

"Your bag, my dear Beatrice," said madame and touched the bell. "Eugene, mademoiselle's bag," she ordered, as the same servant appeared who had admitted her. "You must not feel hardly, Beatrice," she added, as he disappeared on his errand. "I should have guarded you as carefully under reverse circumstances."

But for once, Beatrice did not even hear. The words mingled with the outside din of the street, as Eugene held open the door for her to pass.

Mechanically she received the bag from his hand; mechanically descended the steps and turned to the right, rather than to the left; mechanically went on, neither knowing or caring whither her steps led her, until she found herself in the midst of the brilliant scene Fifth avenue presents towards the close of a bright October day.

She saw it as those who look upon a picture or a scene upon the stage, taking no part in it themselves.

She heard the light laughter bubbling from happy women's lips; saw the horses drawing the luxurious carriages in which they reclined go dashing past; but could not realize that she herself was amidst it all. She stepped down from the curb toward the street.

An elegantly-appointed T-cart, in which sat a young man with no companion save his groom, was being rapidly driven down the avenue, when a warning shout rang in the air; but she to whom it was directed neither heard nor heeded.

A moment later there was a sudden commotion, and the crowd thickened.

A white, lovely face, with its veil torn from its protecting duty, lay in the dust.

The girl had fallen directly beneath the horse's hoofs.

CHAPTER XIV.

Faultlessly-shaped, white and soft as a woman's were the gloved hands that held the reins guiding the superb horses beneath whose hoofs Beatrice Markham lay in her helpless unconsciousness; but they possessed a strength as of iron.

She had not heard the cry, but it had reached Allen Layton's ear, and his quick eye had noted all the danger.

With the swiftness of thought he wound the reins about his wrists. The horses reared back on their haunches, but one of them, throwing out his leg, grazed her head with his iron shoe.

Fortunately, the hat and thick hair protected her head from fatal injury, although a tiny stream of crimson blood trickling down her white face, intensified its pallor.

All was over in a moment. But for almost incalculable skill, she would have been trampled to instant death.

Throwing the lines to his groom, the young man sprang from the cart, and, as though by right of having wrought the ill and by the equal right of a certain masterfullness inherent in his nature, he thrust the gathering crowd aside, and stooping, lifted the girl's unconscious form and rested her head upon his arm.

His handsome face softened to an infinite regret, as he noted the exquisite beauty of the face the movement revealed to him. It was perfectly colorless, save for that tiny, trickling stream of crimson, and the dark fringe of lash upon the lovely cheek.

With his disengaged hand he drew a small silver flask from the breast pocket of his coat, and, holding it to her lips, he forced a few drops between her shut teeth.

At the same time he beckoned a policeman to approach.

"Call a carriage," he said.

Then, when his command had been obeyed, unassisted, he lifted Beatrice and placed her within it.

Giving an address to the driver but a few blocks distant, he took his place beside her.

She was yet unconscious when the carriage stopped before a large and handsome house.

Springing out and running lightly up the steps, he drew a latch-key from his pocket and opening the door, disappeared within.

The butler stood beyond the vestibule.

"My mother, Andrews—is she at home?"

"Mrs. Layton and Miss Cora are both out, sir."

The young man looked perplexed.

What would his mother say on her return to find an invalid enforced upon her care? But what else could be done?

However little he could hold himself to blame, he was the unhappy cause of Beatrice's accident. Her beauty and her youth had rendered it impossible for him to leave her to strangers.

He remembered now the white face, as it rested against the cushions of the carriage, as a moment before it had rested upon his arm.

As soon as she recovered consciousness she could, of course, give the address of her home and friends, so that his mother soon would be relieved of any care. At any rate, he would not hesitate now. The wound on her head demanded immediate attention.

"I have brought home a young lady, Andrews," he said, "who, in crossing the street, was kicked by one of my horses, and is badly hurt, I fear. She is in a cab outside, and quite unconscious. You must help me to carry her in, and then go yourself for Dr. Harvey. He or his partner must come at once!"

"By Jove!" it is a strange adventure," thought Layton, as, fifteen minutes later, he paced up and down the luxuriously-appointed chamber, glancing frequently towards the bed, where lay Beatrice Markham's senseless form.

One or two of the maid servants bent over her and gently bathed the blood from her brow. They had unfastened the hat and taken it from her head, revealing more fully the glorious beauty of the red-gold hair and the whiteness of her forehead, where it rested in tiny, floating rings, except where the life-fluid had dampened it. But all their efforts brought back no signs of life.

An awful fear shot through the young man's heart—that this was death on which he looked. He drew nearer the bed. At the same moment the physician entered the room.

"You have come, doctor—thank God!" he exclaimed, fervently, hastening to add an explanation of the accident and its results—the doctor, meanwhile, carefully examining the patient and the wound.

"It has been a narrow escape," he said, after a few moments; "but I am inclined to believe there is more trouble behind. The wound of itself is scarcely sufficient so long and deathlike a swoon. You say this young lady is a stranger to you, Mr. Layton? Had I not better send for an ambulance, and have her at once removed to the hospital?"

"Move her in this condition? Surely, doctor, you are jesting. Besides, one glance will show you that she is a lady. Think of the anxiety her friends must be suffering! As soon as she can speak they shall at once be summoned. But, meantime, I beg, doctor, for the sake of my unhappy share in this business, that you will do all that lies in your power."

"That, of course, I will do," replied the physician, who had been applying different remedies, even while the conversation was taking place.

Fully fifteen minutes, [illegible], had elapsed before the dark [illegible] slowly lifted themselves, and [illegible] beautiful gray eyes looked wonderingly about the room. Then an expression of acute pain swept over her face, and she made a gesture to lift her hand to her head, only to let it wearily drop—its weight too great for her feeble strength.

"We must ascertain at once who she is," said Dr. Harvey, in a low aside, to Layton. "Her pulse is rising rapidly, and delirium may set in at any moment."

"Speak to her, then, doctor. You are less likely to startle her than I."

"You are with friends, my child," the physician then said, turning toward her. "Will you give me your name, that I may send word to your home?"

Beatrice mutely shook her head.

"You cannot speak?" questioned the doctor.

"I have no name—no home," she replied, in low, distinct tones. "Let me go!"

And she made an effort to rise, only to fall back in a second swoon.

The answer fell with startling distinctness on both her hearers.

"I'm afraid you've acted rashly, Mr. Layton," said the doctor, endeavoring, for the second time, to rouse her.

"She knows not what she is saying, doctor," answered the young man, indignantly. "Besides, this responsibility is mine. Look at that face! I would stake my life upon the purity of that woman's character and soul!"

But even as he spoke, there was a sudden rustling without of silken skirts, and a tall, elegant woman appeared on the [illegible] a pretty, girlish face peeping over her shoulder, from where its owner stood, otherwise hidden behind.

"Allen," said the first comer, "what does this mean?"

"It means, mother," replied the young man, calmly, "that in driving today, this young lady fell almost directly beneath my horses' feet. She is badly hurt, and, in common humanity, I brought her here."

"Common humanity!" gasped the lady of the household. "Are there no hospitals in New York?"

"Look at her mother. You can better understand then why I felt the only place for her was my mother's house."

Mrs. Layton, half-hesitatingly, ventured a step within the room, but motioned her daughter back.

"Don't come one step further, Cora. It's only another one of Allan's unaccountable freaks. For all I know, the girl may have just been dismissed from a smallpox ward."

But Cora's curiosity was not thus to be restrained. Step by step she came on behind her mother, until both had reached the foot of the bed.

"Oh, mamma! Is she not perfectly lovely?" exclaimed the girl.

And even Mrs. Layton could raise to the question no dissenting voice.

In her helplessness and unconsciousness, Beatrice's beauty appealed to every heart.

The unmistakable stamp of refinement was impressed upon every line of the exquisite figure—every feature of the colorless face.

But Mrs. Layton was not wholly conquered.

"Leave the room, Cora! Do you not hear me?" she cried. "The girl may be suffering from some contagious disease. Besides, we know nothing about her. Perhaps Allen can enlighten us."

"Mother!" exclaimed the young man, reproachfully, "she is a stranger to me as to you. But, surely, you must see, in bringing her here, I did the only thing that could be done. As soon as she recovers consciousness we will learn who are her friends, and so the responsibility will be no longer ours."

"And what do you think Edith will say to this?" asked Mrs. Layton, uplifting her brows.

"Edith will hear the story from my lips before to-night—"

"Who is taking my name in vain, and what is all this commotion about?" called out a gay voice from the doorway—a voice whose possessor, a beauway—a voice whose possessor, a beautiful brunette of some twenty-five summers, considered among the chief of the many attractions which had made Allen Layton a suitor for her heart and hand.

Somehow, in this moment, it jarred upon his ear. A sudden realization dawned upon him that his explanation might be made an unpleasant task.

The physician, turning, held up a warning hand for silence.

"Some one is ill?" inquired Miss Lorrimer, advancing into the room. "Who is she?"

And the black eyes fastened themselves inquiringly upon the beautiful face, colorless as the linen of the pillows on which it lay.

But, drawing her hand silently within his arm, Allen led his betrothed from the room, his mother and sister following.

Concisely he related all that had taken place, but in vain scanned Miss Lorrimer's features for any sign of softening or sympathy.

"I fully agree with Mrs. Layton," she said, when he had finished. "I am quite sure the hospital was the only place for her, and that she should be removed there within the hour."

CHAPTER XV.

November was half gone, and the chill breath of winter was in the air, before Beatrice, weak and wan, emerged from the mists of fever and delirium which had made the passing weeks an utter blank.

Notwithstanding Miss Lorrimer's flat regarding her, her eyes wonderingly opened on the same scene on which they wonderingly closed.

Where was she, and who were the friends who had watched beside her?

Gradually all that occurred came back to her, until the moment of leaving Madame Clair's house.

From then on all was a blank. She had, indeed, fallen in a swoon beneath the horses' feet, and had been wholly unconscious of her peril.

But when, at last, she was permitted to exchange her bed for the couch, Sister Mary asked her, one morning, if she would see the master of the house.

She bowed her head in assent; then, resting wearily on her pillow, she closed her eyes and sought to overcome the deadly faintness of fear stealing over her.

Whom was she to see?

Could it be that Randolph Chester had followed her, and, taking advantage of her helpless unconsciousness, again, had made himself the arbiter of her fate? Better had she been left to die in the streets than this!

The door opened.

"May I enter?" asked a voice, in a gentle courtesy—a voice both strange and unfamiliar to her ear.

The blood surged back to her heart in almost an ecstacy of relief. She lifted the heavily-fringed lids and looked at him who spoke.

He was a stranger to her—a man young and handsome—but the Sister had spoken of him as the master of the house.

"You may, indeed, come in!" she answered. "How heavy a debt of gratitude I owe you! Oh, will you not tell me how it happened that I am here and with strangers, who yet have proven kinder than friends?"

"You are strong enough to hear about it?" he asked, taking the little white hand one moment in his own, then seating himself in an arm-chair drawn close beside her couch.

"I feel quite strong," she answered, "and my brain is tired with ceaseless wonderment."

"It was this I feared," he replied; "but first let me introduce myself."

And drawing from his pocket his card case, he took from it one of his cards and laid it on her lap.

She glanced at the name. It, too, was strange to her.

In a very few words he told the story of the accident.

"Inasmuch as I was its unhappy cause, however innocent," he concluded, "I could do no less than retrieve it by any means within my power; therefore, as I could not ascertain the address of your own home, I ventured to have you brought to mine. One thing only has given me uneasiness, and that is my inability to find any trace of your friends and relieve the intense anxiety they must have experienced concerning you."

The hot blood flushed the beautiful face on which Allen Layton looked.

His words brought back a wave of memory. His card lay in her hand. It was now her turn to speak—her turn to tell who she was.

Yet how could she? Had she not learned how her story had been received even by those who had known her well?

Besides, she never again would acknowledge her old name until the world, too, had acknowledged her right to it—that was dead and buried in the old life.

But his eyes were resting wonderingly upon her. He was waiting for her to speak.

"Words are very cold, Mr. Layton," she said, in a voice so sweet, so low, that it fell like ripples of music on his ears. "Yet I thank you the more because you have opened your home to one who herself is homeless. You look surprised. Yet it is true. My friends have felt no anxiety concerning me. I have no friends. Had your horses trampled me beyond recognition beneath their hoofs, believe me, it would have been better so—"

"Hush, child! Such words are madness," he interrupted. "The fever has not yet left your brain."

"Ah, yes! the mists of delirium have wholly cleared. I have neither, father, mother, home nor friends. Such women are, in the world's sight, not respectable—is it not so? You see, Mr. Layton, your generous impulses have led you astray in offering to such an one your hospitality."

She spoke bitterly, her words at strange variance with her youth, her beauty and her winning grace.

Mr. Layton rejoiced that neither his mother nor his betrothed had heard them. Cora, his little sister, he could better trust, in her quick sympathy.

He was silent a moment, revolving in his mind her words, when she spoke again:

"I will not trespass much longer," she continued, taking up the sentence where she had left it. "In a day or two I shall be quite strong—indeed, by effort, I might almost go to-day."

He listened with a strange sense of pain.

Had he not done all, and more, than was required of him? Why, then, should the thought of this girl leaving the shelter of his roof cause him so much misgiving?

From the moment that he had looked into her face, as it lay upon his arm, he had felt that he could never again be indifferent to her existence.

It was this that had made the thought of the hospital so repellant to him. It was this which now forbade him to look on the sad picture she painted of her desolate future.

"My child," he said, gently, "you are very young and very beautiful. It is impossible for you to face the world alone, and I am quite sure, if all you tell me is true, that the experience is new and untried. For some reason, and through no fault of yours, I am sure, you have left your home; but you do not know the world, or you would have hesitated before taking such a step. I would not force your confidence—I have not earned it; but you will remember that while Allen Layton lives, you can be no longer friendless?"

Tears sprang to the lovely eyes, the first that had come to soften their bitter misery. Impulsively she outstretched her hand.

"You are very noble, very generous," she said, "and the memory of your words will make all my future brighter. I will go away to-morrow, Mr. Layton. I cannot tell you more about myself now, but the day may come when you will know and understand all. Will you, until then, think of me as kindly as you can?"

"But your name—may I not even know that?"

She shook her head.

"I have no name," she said. "Ah, Mr. Layton, you see it was, indeed, a waif whom you picked up in the street. The next wind will blow her away, and you will forget her."

"She is not yet blown away," he answered, smiling. "My child," he continued, seriously, "you have neither friends no money—pardon this latter discovery made in the necessary search for some clue to your identity. How, then, can you fight the world?"

"There are some jewels in my bag," she answered.

"Your bag?" he questioned. "Had you one? If so, it must have been thrown from you when you fell, and stolen by some of the crowd. Were the jewels valuable?"

"I believe so; but it does not matter," she said, listlessly.

"It only renders your desertion of us impossible. Some plan must be arranged whereby, for the present, we must keep you with us. But pardon me one necessary question. My mother and sister share my home—it is not necessary that they should share this confidence. Tell me what name I may give them. They tell me that your clothing is marked 'B. M.'"

"And my name is—Beatrice Montrose. You have a sister, Mr. Layton," she added; "and yet you ask me to remain, with all my life a mystery?"

"My sister needs a companion near her own age—some one to read and study with her. If you will accept the position, I offer it to you."

Impulsively Beatrice leaned over, and, catching his hand, raised it impulsively to her lips.

"I do accept, Mr. Layton, and I will prove myself worthy of your generous trust. But your mother—your sister—will they share your noble confidence?"

"All unconsciously, you already have quite won Cora's heart. My mother's favor may be more difficult. But I can scarcely imagine any one, Miss Montrose, whom, by a slight effort, you might not win. I leave it all to time and your patience."

He spoke lightly, but he well knew he had set himself a hard and bitter task.

FEARFUL OF FLOOD

"FATHER OF WATERS" BEGINNING TO BOOM.

Old Steamboat Men Predict Another Flood Like That of 1897, When Many Lives Were Lost in the Valley—Greatest Danger Is at Memphis — High-Water Mark of the Ohio River Flood Passes Cincinnati—Great Relief Is Reported From Many Places.

Memphis, April 27.—The flood situation in the Mississippi valley is becoming more menacing every hour. Yesterday morning the river commenced to rise, and has reached a stage of 28.5 and may go to 37 feet, according to the predictions of weather and river men. The river will rise slowly for twenty-four hours, when the volume of water is expected to arrive. Some of the old steamboat men predict another flood like that of 1897, when many lives were lost in the valley. The greatest danger point is in Memphis and adjacent territory. Owing to the building of the St. Francis levee system since 1897, the protective work will be a factor of danger to Memphis. It will cause the flood waters seeking an outlet to spread and back up on both sides of the river.

Preparations are being made to take care of the coming flood, but United States engineers say they have a very small fund at their disposal for this purpose. Many of the planters and renters do not seem to realize the danger, but old rivermen, who have used the great stream as a means of livelihood for years, are alarmed, and say that a grave danger stares the valley in the face. Since the last flood a great amount of levee work has been done by the government, and this will be tested.

Crest of Flood Passes Cincinnati.

Cincinnati, April 27.—The high water mark of the flood passed down this part of the Ohio Valley earlier last night than expected, and became almost stationary from 6 to 10 o'clock at fractions above 59.1 feet and afterward at 59.2 feet, when it became permanently stationary here and at upper points. It is expected to be of much shorter duration further down the river. Great relief is reported from Huntington, Catlettsburg, Ashland and Ironton, where the flood was so bad, and at smaller places in that district, that there are various demonstrations of rejoicing. Early in the evening the temporary rise in that district caused by the Kanawha and Big Sandy swelled the water at Portsmouth, but it was soon over and will lose its force before it reaches Cincinnati. The river at 8 o'clock was stationary at Portsmouth at 58.5 feet and will remain stationary from that city to Cincinnati until this afternoon, when it will begin falling. It was also reported stationary at Ripley, Higginsport, Augusta and Dover, Ky., all of which points have suffered extremely the past few days. The people here and for miles up the river are now preparing to avoid all possible evil effects of receding waters rather than of rising waters.

Rivers Still Rising.

Newcastle, Pa., April 27. — Both the Shenango and Mahoning rivers are still rising and they are now above all previous records except during the flood of 1893. The Erie & Pittsburg and the Ashtabula division of the Pennsylvania railroad are badly crippled and no trains can be run northward on either division. Near Pulaski, this county, the Shenango has overflowed its banks and covered the railroad tracks for more than a mile. Both the Shenango and Mahoning rivers have risen more than two feet within the past twenty-four hours, and portions of the city are already under water. Mahoning town is the greatest sufferer in this respect, and residents of Montgomery street had to leave their homes Wednesday night at 7 o'clock. Movable articles were taken to places of safety, but there was not time for much preparation. Communication over the Mahoning is absolutely cut off with the entire western portion of the county.

GAVE UP INFIDELITY.

Will Now, at the Age of Seventy-Five, Be Married a Third Time.

Toledo, Ohio, April 27.—M. O. Wagner has taken out a marriage license in the probate court. Wagner is the former infidel whose conversion to Christianity years ago was followed by the burning of his infidel library, one of the largest in the country. Since that time he has been divorced from his second wife and now, at the age of seventy-five, seeks a third bride, Mrs. Mattie J. Taylor, aged fifty-four, who has been twice married before. Wagner is a real estate man and lawyes of considerable prominence. The marriage is to be solemnized by two clergymen.

WEST POINT INQUIRY.

Censorship at the Military Academy Is Very Strict.

West Point, N. Y., April 27.—The investigation into the recent breach of discipline among the corps of cadets is being conducted behind closed doors and the cadets are not permitted to discuss the matter even among themselves. Cadet Robert R. Ralston, who, it is said, was reduced to the ranks for not reporting an infraction of the rules in the mess hall, and on whose account the cadets have manifested much displeasure, is uncommunicative. Cadet Ralston was appointed from Pennsylvania. He is in the present second class in which he stands near the top.

Gov. Dole Very Sick.

Chicago, April 27.—A special to the Record-Herald from Honolulu says: Gov. Dole is a very sick man. He was confined to his house and only the most intimate friends have been allowed to see him. Nervous prostration.

Count Charged With Bigamy.

New York, April 27.—Count Leopold de Melville, also known as Leopold Frauquem, arrested here a few days ago on a request from Chicago, has been indicted for bigamy and turned over to the Chicago police.

WHY GIRLS CANNOT THROW.

There Is a Scientific Reason, Consisting of Difference in Their Structure and That of Boys.

In this, the season of outdoor sports, the boy at school is prone to poke fun at his sister, because she prefers to skip the rope, and deride her because she cannot perforce throw a top at all, while he can make his spin every time. And he generally consoles himself for lack of her company by saying that "girls can't throw, nohow."

In this he is far nearer right than he thinks, perhaps. Girls cannot throw; at least, not like men can. And they never can. They are not "built that way."

When a boy throws a stone he crooks his elbow and reaches back with his forearm, and uses every joint from shoulder to wrist. The boy's arm is relaxed; a girl throws with a rigid arm. This is because her collar bone is longer and set lower than in a boy's. This interferes with the free motion of her arm, required in throwing accurately.

The Sea-Trip Cure.

"You say my wife has swallowed some foreign substance, and you can't seem to reach it, doctor?"

"That's it, exactly."

"Well, what can we do, doctor?"

"I would recommend six days on an ocean liner."—Yonkers Statesman.

FROM DEATH'S DOOR.

Hillsdale, Ill., April 29th.—Much interest has been aroused here over the case of William Marks, who has been, in a dying condition for several months with an apparently incurable Kidney Disease.

The leading physicians of this place had pronounced his case a hopeless one, and others from Port Byron, Geneseo, and Davenport, Iowa, had attended him, and in a consultation decided that he could not live.

In desperation, his nephew inquired of Mr. L. F. Giles, a local druggist, as to a last resort. Mr. Giles suggested Dodd's Kidney Pills, a remedy which had just been introduced here.

The results were marvelous. Mr. Marks immediately began to improve, and within a few weeks was able to be up and about, completely cured.

His cure is the talk of the neighborhood, and is considered nothing short of a miracle.

There appears to be no doubt that this new remedy, Dodd's Kidney Pills, will cure any case of Kidney Disease, for the more malignant forms, such as Bright's Disease, Diabetes, and Dropsy, yield readily to its remarkable influence. These forms of Chronic Kidney Disease have hitherto been considered incurable, and have baffled all medical skill, and yet, this new remedy has cured every single case in which it has been used in this neighborhood. The doctors themselves are amazed at the wonderful work Dodd's Kidney Pills are accomplishing in Rock Island Couny.

Sheep thrive best in a pasture where moles are numerous. The moles serve to drain the land.

CHANCE FOR THOUSANDS

IF YOU GUESS CANADA'S POPULATION.

Pick It Out and You Will Receive Five Thousand Dollars—Smaller Sums for Approximate Guesses.

There is a certain figure, probably somewhere between 4,833,230 and 6,041,543, which, written down and sent to the Pioneer Press in connection with a three months' cash subscription for the Daily and Sunday paper, may have the property, a few weeks hence, of endowing the writer with $5,000.

He who writes down the number next to that one will receive $2,000, and so on through a list of 1,000 names, the last 400 of whom will receive $1 each—$10,000 to be divided among the best "guessers." As guesses come into the Pioneer Press they are recorded, a certificate is sent to the guesser and a duplicate to the Press Publishing association, a corporation which awards the prizes. This corporation awarded thousands of dollars in a similar guessing contest on the population of the United States. Every precaution has been taken to insure the most perfect fairness in the competition. No one within the wide field of the Pioneer Press can really afford to be without the paper, and by sending in his subscription before the contest closes he may, in addition to the benefits derived from its daily visits, become the possessor of a handsome sum of money. Every one who sends $1.20 for the Daily and Sunday Pioneer Press for three months will be entitled to one guess free. You may send subscription for as many months as you choose and you will be entitled to one guess for every three months' subscription paid in advance on the Daily and Sunday, or one guess free with each year's subscription paid in advance to the Weekly Pioneer Press.

THIS OFFER IS LIMITED.

DO NOT DELAY.

Guesses must be sent to the Pioneer Press, St. Paul, Minn., before June 1, 1901.

THE NEWS,

By John W. Eastman.

PUBLISHED EVERY THURSDAY.

$1.50 PER YEAR IN ADVANCE.

The Women's Improvement association, of St. Anthony Park, under the direction of Prof. Otto Lugger, the entomologist, is going to prosecute a vigorous campaign this summer against the pestiferous mosquito. In case the ladies run out of material down there, we invite them to come to Thief River Falls where the crop is always sure and large.

This section of the country is at present seen at its poorest, which is greatly to be deplored as there are hundreds of land seekers in the city. If we had a good system of drainage—and this would insure good roads—farm lands would double in value. It is a very short-sighted policy the farmers in this section are pursuing in not voting bonds for ditching purposes.

MEMORIAL DAY.

Will Be Celebrated in Thief River Falls.

A small but enthusiastic meeting was held in the city hall Monday evening, the object being to formulate plans for a Memorial Day celebration. M. K. Wall was elected chairman, and was requested to ask all organizations and secret societies in the city to participate in the exercises and join in the parade.

Mayor Kretzschmar was requested to issue a proclamation asking that all business houses be closed on the afternoon of that day and invite the people in general to attend the exercises.

An executive committee, consisting of Rev. W Allen Sterling, W. C. Smiley and S. T. Johnson was appointed by the chair, and they will have full power to make all the arrangements for the celebration.

Profs. Wilson and Field will have charge of the music and flowers. The exercises will be held at Greenwood cemetery.

GERMANTOWN.

John Olson, of Esplee, returned from Crookston Monday.

Will Vaughan was up to the Vaughan cattle ranch the first of the week.

John Black and family arrived in Germantown from Alexandria Friday night. It took them five days to cover the distance between here and Thief River Falls.

M. Olson and W. Vaughan went to Thief River Falls Thursday, returning Saturday.

A heavy wind and rain storm visited this place Friday evening. It did a great deal of damage to the new buildings being erected. M. Olson's hotel and L. Oriard's barn were blown flat to the ground and about a dozen other buildings were moved three or four feet from their foundations. This rain has put off seeding for several days.

Additional Local.

The Presbyterian services will be conducted in the Zion church at 11 a. m. and in the Odd Fellows hall at 8 p. m. The evening address will be illustrated with stereopticon views of the life and time of the Messiah. A cordial welcome awaits you at these services.

There will be a meeting in the city hall next Monday evening to consider the matter of securing a ditch for the town of North. The residents of that town are now in favor of a ditch; and want the city to build one through the city, which the council is willing to do. A ditch would insure good roads north and west of town.

Frank, the young son of Dr. Grundy, while playing with a pair of shears last Saturday morning accidentally run one of the points in his right eye, cutting the eyeball quite badly. He was taken to Crookston by his father where an optician examined and dressed the injury. It is not thought that the boy will lose the sight of the eye.

The Odd Fellows attended the Methodist church in a body last Sunday morning, and the pastor, the Rev. W. Allen Sterling, preached a sermon for their especial benefit. The church was very prettily decorated and the attendance was large. In the evening the Odd Fellows and members of other secret organizations attended the Presbyterian church.

One of the most revolting acts ever done in a civilized community was witnessed on Main avenue Tuesday afternoon. The News has been repeatedly asked to publish the facts of this affair, but we do not deem it wise to advertise the disrespect a business man showed towards the community in which he lives—just to spite a rival. He has been severely censured by all, and there can be no good accomplished by parading his ignorance before people living outside of the city.

The Washington correspondent of the Pioneer Press states that Senator Nelson and Representative Eddy have had some difficulty in making any progress with Secretary Hitchcock regarding the opening up of portions of the Red Lake reservation. Mr. Hitchcock is of the opinion that the land—which is located near Cass Lake—is not fit for agricultural purposes, and will not give his consent to its opening. The citizens of this place should lose no time in informing Mr. Hitchcock of the character of the land situated near here which we wish to have opened up. We cannot expect our representatives in congress to accomplish all of this unless they are furnished with an accurate description of the land—something which has never been done.

TAKE CARE OF THE FEET.

How to Preserve the Usefulness of the Pedal Extremities.

Following are some excellent rules for the proper care of the feet:

The feet should be thoroughly washed every morning and evening and wiped carefully dry, especially between the toes, that hotbed of soft corns.

The toe nails should be cut regularly, but not too often, and never shorter than ends of the toes.

When buying shoes, allow perfect freedom for the toes. Have the breadth of the foot measured while you stand on it and allow fully half an inch to an inch more than the length of your foot.

Have no tightness anywhere. What slight pressure there is should be beneath the instep and on its sides, which parts are sometimes spoken of as the "waist" of the foot.

Have the sole thinnest and narrowest at the "waist" and broadest at the "tread."

Don't be ashamed of the size of your foot. A well-formed large foot is much better to look at than a small distorted one, and remember that well proportioned parts always look smaller than they really are.

It is only a mistaken standard of beauty that represents hands and feet as disproportionately small. The best antique standards of beauty show the perfect foot to be about one-sixth of the whole height.

To obtain health and comfort for the foot it is by no means necessary to wear ugly boots or shoes. The bootmakers are now making footgear that combines admirably both beauty and comfort, while people are gradually beginning to understand that the foot itself is more worth caring for than is its covering.

High heels placed far under the instep are now rarely seen in the street, though still worn in the house. They are extremely injurious, as they throw the body forward in an unnatural position, which affects the spine, the knees and the nervous system.

Chiropodists all say that if men and women gave up wearing ill fitting boots and shoes the next generation would know nothing of deformed and diseased feet.

If you want to file on a piece of government land it will not be necessary to go to Crookston. Make your filing in Thief River Falls before L. G. Browning, U. S. commissioner for the district of Minnesota.

Dr. William Elliott, of Peotone, Ill., a brother-in-law of Dr. Geo. Tupper, was in the city last week. He has faith in the future of this section and purchased a section of land located in Marshall county while here.

Several members of the Masonic order of Red Lake Falls will be in the city Saturday evening to attend a meeting of the local lodge. The Masons of the down river town will organize a lodge in the near future.

Subject of the morning sermon at the Methodist church: "Necessity of Devine Support." Evening: "A Half a Man." The old choir has been re-organized and will furnish music for the services in the future.

Rev. Finch states that he is receiving a great deal of encouragement in his efforts to secure subscriptions for the purpose of building a Presbyterian church here, and that it will undoubtedly be built during the summer.

P. Meehan has decided to plat two blocks of his property north of the city into town lots. The remaining part will be kept in acre property until there is a demand for it. The property platted is on north Main and LaBree avenues.

John Conery last week showed his faith in Thief River Falls by purchasing the W. T. Mullarky property on LaBree avenue which is occupied by Hansen & Christienson. This is good property and will surely prove a good investment.

P. Meehan arrived in the city last week from Milwaukee to look after his interests here. Mr. Meehan has a great deal of faith in the future of Thief River Falls, and predicts that we will soon have one of the largest cities in Northern Minnesota.

K. M. Hanson has received a letter from W. T. Mullarky, who states that he has purchased a ranche near Flora Vista, New Mexico, where he has permanently located. His many friends in this city hope he will prove a successful farmer.

R. B. Vining and S. T. Johnson have had a crew of men at work erecting a building for their bowling alley this week. The building is north of the Odd Fellow's block, is 16x96 feet, and the alley will be one of the finest in the northwest.

A local business man yesterday endeavored to buy some property from a Rocksbury farmer. There was some difference as to price, and it was settled by a fistic encounter, in which the farmer was badly used, receiving injuries that were both painful and unsightly. He has placed the matter in the hands of a local attorney, and either a suit for $1,2000 damages or a criminal action will be commenced.

ED. L. HEALY LAND AND LOAN COMPANY.

M. K. Wall, manager of the Ed. L. Healy Land and Loan Company, can be found at his new quarters in the Hanson building, where he will be pleased to consult with those desiring to sell or contemplating the purchase of farm or city property.

We have convinced people from the southern part of this state and other states that those lands offer to the poor man the chance of a lifetime to secure a home where the country abounds in game and the lakes and rivers teem with fish of many varieties, amidst flourishing settlements, near schools and churches and close to railway markets, in one of the most healthful localities in the world.

We have already secured the promise of hundreds of homeseekers whom we expect this spring. So, any one having farms or city property for sale is invited to call. We buy and sell property. We are here for that purpose. Call and see us.

GLIMPSES INTO THE FUTURE

Where does it lie, this country of our yearning?
Not eastward where morn's altar fires gleam
And orisons from happy bird throats stream,
Nor where the palms on edge of white sands burning
Show green oases to the traveler turning,
Nor e'en where snowy hands of mountains seem
To pluck the stars, the while they lonely dream
In solitude sublime life's plan discerning.

'Tis here about us, where we grope and stray
With blinded eyes; we wander wide and far,
Brushing the fair white wings of angel band,
And never know until at last some day
We fall on Death, whose kindly hands unbar
Our senses locked and lo, the wished-for land!

An Alphabetical Experiment.

BY JESSE LLEWELLYN.

(Copyright, 1901, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

She was a half-cast Jap, thoroughly Americanized but not quite civilized. Her prior history is not important, especially as no one was sure just how much of the conflicting autobiography she spun so charmingly was begot of her abundant talent for fiction. Talent she certainly possessed, as many of the current magazines testified monthly. That was the reason Miss Sheldon—for that was her English name—became much sought after in Bohemia. We all know that Bohemia is made up of two ingredients, as they say in cook books; first, an ample measure of those descending the ladder of fame, with a sprinkling of the ascending contingent who have not yet gained a glimpse of the top. One might follow the recipe still further and direct "cleanse thoroughly," but that would be superfluous not to say futile.

Miss Sheldon, as before remarked, had become a personage in that uncertain domain. There was but one drop of gall in her chalice of happiness as she sat in her hall bedroom one winter evening and lovingly fingered some half dozen small envelopes. Her brown face was puckered unpleasantly, as it was wont to be over the boarding-house coffee, and she was indulging in monologue, a habit most helpful to an amateur storyteller.

"Dinner and conversation; music and gabble; tea and talk," she murmured jerkily, slowly telling over the small blue and white missives. "Now, small talk is my Waterloo. They expect me to be fluent. Ah, if I could only write it down first! But how do I know what they will speak to me about?" She pondered deeply and dejectedly and gradually a brilliant scheme unfolded itself. She would converse alphabetically. Mondays her every remark should begin with the letter "A;" Tuesdays, "B," Wednesdays, "C," et cetera, beginning the second week with the eighth letter of the alphabet, until it was exhausted.

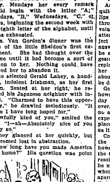
Mrs. Van Gorden's dinner was the scene of the little Sheldon's first experiment. She had thought over the scheme until it had become a sort of religion to her. Nothing could have induced her to abandon it.

Fate selected Gerald Lahey, a handsome, indolent Irishman, as her first victim. Seated at her right, he regarded his Japanese neighbor with interest. "Charmed to have this opportunity," he drawled melodiously. "It is one I have long hoped for."

"Awfully kind of you," smiled the girl. "I—ah—Absolutely nice of you to say so."

Lahey glanced at her quickly, but she seemed lost in abstraction.

"How long have you made America your home?" His question was point-blank and she hesitated a minute before answering. Here was a game worth playing. Suddenly she burst out in an exultant tone, which apparently had no connection with her words:



"Yes or no?"

"Almost all my life. After I first reached my teens, that is. Analysis of the people has taught me to love the country. America shall always be my home hereafter."

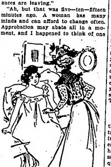
So delighted was she with the task of threading "A's" into the needles of common places that she fairly radiated with smiles and vivacity until Gerald Lahey was completely aroused from his lethargy to a real and growing interest.

When Mrs. Van Gordon asked her later whether she did not admire a new and popular portait painter and she answered with a mystifying smile, "Approximately," Gerald started with surprise, for she had just been speaking of the man, whose name was Andre Moore, in extravagant terms.

The hostess moved away with a superior smile at the faint praise of her favorite, and Lahey, who, it seemed, had commissioned himself Miss Sheldon's bodyguard for the evening, spoke almost sharply.

"Approximately?" You were just saying that his work displayed arduous study; 'acceptable to the most critical,' were your very words. You see what an impression your slightest utterances are leaving."

"Ah, but that was five—ten—fifteen minutes ago. A woman has many minds and can afford to change often. Approbation may abate all in a moment, and I happened to think of one very bad portrait of the great man's."



"Why, Gerald Lahey, of course."

"Which is?"

"Amos Churchill's."

An enigmatical smile which was quite maddening played about the girl's lips and lurked in her half closed eyes throughout her slightest remarks. In vain he endeavored to concentrate her attention upon himself or some subject of equal interest to himself. Her answers were always baffling. When he asked permission to call and suggested that she name the afternoon she replied that "Access of work required her constant attention at present; about the third of the month she would be delighted to see him."

Gerald did not wait until the 3rd, however, but called the following Sunday only to find her as unsolvable as ever. She would even laugh aloud at no apparent provocation and her rapt expression during the most commonplace conversation was as frustrating as it was charming.

Commonplaces were not frequent at the stage matters had now reached however, and one eventful night when the two met at the Bohemian Club he resolved that the crisis had come and he must speak. His opportunity came when at last they found themselves apart from the vocalizing, elocuting throng, gazing side by side down from the fourteenth story window to the sleepy lights on the wet pavement below. Her small brown hand was very near his on the window ledge, so to economize space he covered it with his own. The brown one trembled.

"You know what I want to say?" he whispered interrogatively.

"Not exactly," she murmured.

"It is only a sentence, and I wish but one word in reply—Mind, dear, only one word. You shall not evade the question as you have all my others. Will you be my wife?" The words were spoken under his breath, but like a man.

"Yes, or no?" he demanded, "If there are conditions I do not care to hear them. The woman who will be my wife must take me unequivocally, without clauses."

She drew her hand from his confusedly, like a frightened school girl, he thought, began counting hurriedly on her fingers.

"I'm waiting, dear little Jap," he reminded—"Yes or no?"

She looked at him appealingly and murmured, "Next Saturday week."

"Tonight and now! I must have my answer. Why, child, I cannot rest. I am beside myself. I must know. Do you not love me a little?"

"Not a little," she answered, with one of her odd inflections.

"Then it is 'yes'?"

"N——" She hesitated. For the life of her, no appropriate word beginning with "N" could she think of. His constant suggestion of one word had quite upset her, and before the right one had presented itself, he gave her a look of reproach, half of anger, and strode down the hall. With a little cry Miss Sheldon started after him, but he would not look back.

That night a very disconsolate, foreign-looking little figure rocked itself back and forth in a huddled heap in the middle of a diminutive bed in a certain hall bed-room.

"Idiot!" The girl was calling herself names. "Fool that I was to carry it so far, and now he'll never come back. I meant to say yes all the time, only I wanted to see if I could say it beginning with an 'N.' He is rich, too, awfully rich. Oh, idiot, idiot!"

Slowly and tearfully she climbed down from her exalted position and betook herself to fast writing. Pages were scribbled over at a tremendous rate and in large black letters. On each the word Gerald stood out with glaring frequency, following round, warm adjectives. The entire "system was laid bare before him."

"Early in the morning I will post it," she promised herself, adding as an afterthought, "and he is worth 'most a million!'"

Miss Sheldon slept late the next morning and was still in her lounging robe when her most intimate friend, a soprano in the Nettie-Graves Opera Company, rushed in upon her.

"Shelly, dear, I was on my way to rehearsal and just could not resist running in to tell you the good news——"

"Yes?" inquired the Jap sleepily.

"I'm engaged!" The rosy faced one held forth a glittering finger, continuing: "To the very man you've been flirting with so cruelly, too. I didn't tell you before, but he's been so sweet about calling for me after the play lately, and I just know it would come."

"To whom did you say?" Miss Sheldon was sitting up very straight.

"Why, Gerald Lahey, of course."

The rosy face grew rosier, as Miss Sheldon's took on a somewhat ashen hue.

"Well, I must be running along," chirped the warbler. "Thought you'd be dying to know, and as you are my very dearest friend, I've told you the first one. Oh! and Shelly, he says you're the cleverest girl—except me, of course—that he ever knew. Says you can converse alphabetically. Fancy now. Do you know, you had him completely teased with curiosity about you, until you struck the G's. But I simply must be off. Congratulations? Thanks awfully dear. Au revoir."

Sand and the Suez Canal.

One of the problems which has given the management of Suez canal much trouble is that of the sand which blows into it, adding to the dredging expenses. A considerable number of plants have been tried in the effort to fix the sands so that a comparatively small quantity would be blown into the canal. All of these plants have failed except one, which, it is now believed, will be quite effective in keeping the sand in place. This large plant is the casuarina tree. It thrives in the southern hemisphere, and grows well on the sand banks that skirt the Suez canal. It not only survives intense drought, but also excessive humidity, which is important, as the northern part of the canal is subject to inundations at some periods and droughts at other seasons of the year. The roots of this tree penetrate the sand so deeply that they tap subterranean sources of water. Many of the trees planted twenty-five years ago have thrived so well in their new habitat that they are now over forty feet in height.—All who have studied the problem of sand fixation are certain that this tree will offer important resistance to the movement of sand along the canal. Steps are being taken to plant it extensively.—New York Sun.

Icemen Happy and Polite.

An observant matron of some experience has made it a point to inquire among a rather large circle of acquaintances what sort of men the icemen who have served them have been. She was led to do this because the fact burst upon her one day that all the icemen she had seen were happy-natured, and within the limits of their education, polite. "No other class of trades or serving people who come to one's house," she said, "have I found so uniformly polite, good natured and willing to be accommodating. I have been unable to reach a conclusion as to the reason for it, but it is a fact. And all my friends whom I have asked have said that the same was true in their experience."

Onslaught of Washington Reporters.

When the members of the cabinet were coming out of the House the other morning, after their regular meeting, they saw a dozen or more correspondents and reporters lying in wait in the portico. Secretary Hay was ahead, with his big leather portfolio under his arm, the portfolio, which is supposed to conceal the most portentous secrets of state. Secretary Gage and Attorney General Griggs followed. Said Secretary Gage, grasping the attorney general by the arm: "Hold on a minute, Griggs. Look at that crowd of reporters outside there. Let's wait until Hay draws their fire." "That is useless," returned Griggs; "those fellows are repeating rifles."—Washington Letter.

It was recently stated that England's army and navy is inadequate to properly defend herself from a sudden onslaught. "Dont Speak to me."

All manner of extravagant expressions are possible when a woman's nerves are overwrought.

The spasm at the top of the wind pipe or bronchial tubes, "ball rising in the throat," violent beating of the heart, laughing and crying by turns, muscular spasms (throwing the arms about), frightened by the most insignificant occurrences—are all symptoms of a hysterical condition and serious derangement of the female organs.

Any female complaint may produce hysterics, which must be regarded as a symptom only. The cause, however, yields quickly to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which acts at once upon the organ afflicted and the nerve centers, dispelling effectually all those distressing symptoms.

Mrs. Lewis Says: "I Feel Like a New Person, Physically and Mentally."

"Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—I wish to speak a good word for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. For years I had ovarian trouble and suffered everything from nervousness, severe headache, and pain in back and abdomen. I had consulted different physicians, but decided to try your medicine, and I soon found it was giving me much relief. I continued its use and now am feeling like a new person, physically and mentally, and am glad to add one more testimonial to the value of your remedy."—Mrs. M. H. Lewis, 2108 Valentine Ave., Tremont, New York, N. Y.

Writing to Mrs. Pinkham is the quickest and surest way to get the right advice about all female troubles. Her address is Lynn, Mass. She advises women free. Following is an instance:

Mrs. Haven's First Letter to Mrs. Pinkham.

"Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—I would like your advice in regard to my troubles. I suffer every month at time of menstruation, and flow so much and for so long that I become very weak, also get very dizzy. I am troubled with a discharge before and after menses, have pains in ovaries so bad sometimes that I can hardly get around, have sore feeling in lower part of bowels, pain in back, bearing-down feeling, a desire to pass urine frequently, with pains in passing it; have leucorrhœa, headache, fainting spells, and sometimes have hysteria. My blood is not in good condition. Hoping to hear from you, I am," Mrs. Emma Haven, 2508 South Ave., Council Bluffs, Iowa. (June 8, 1899.)

Mrs. Haven's Second Letter.

"Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—I wish to express my gratitude for what your medicine has done for me. I suffered for four years with womb trouble. Every month I flowed very badly. I got so bad that I could hardly do my work. Was obliged to sit or lie down the most of the time. I doctored for a long time, but obtained no relief. I began using your remedies—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, Blood Purifier, Sanative Wash and Liver Pills—and now feel like a new woman."—Mrs. Emma Haven, 2508 South Ave., Council Bluffs, Iowa. (Feb. 1, 1900.)

TALE OF A SEA MONSTER.

The Terrible Thing Was Scaly and About 300 Feet Long.

"About four bells in the morning watch I noticed a large object about four miles off the starboard bow," was the introduction to the tale of a phenomenon witnessed by Third Officer R. G. Story, of the British steamship Claverhill, in the Red Sea, latitude 20 North, longitude 40 East. Capt. Scott, of the Claverhill, says the third mate's character is good. Mr. Story once had been an editor in England. The steamer is at the foot of Oliver street.

"It appeared to be a string of whales moving at a great rate across our bow," continued the sailorman thus vouched for. "Judge of my surprise when saw the string of whales resolve itself into one huge monster. Through the glasses I could see distinctly a flat and pointed head like that of a colossal cobra. Its color was grayish-black, its body appeared to be covered with barnacles, and it passed rapidly across our bow half a mile away, leaving an oily wake. It disappeared a mile off the port bow, presently blowing abeam and steering directly for the ship.

"As its head was raised I could see that its throat was whitish with gills. It was scaly, and I judged it to be about 300 feet long. The back had a dorsal fin. When within a quarter of a mile the monster dived, raising its tail twenty feet in the air, and disappeared. We were all so excited that we could not eat our dinner."—Correspondence Chicago Inter Ocean.

Safety of Ocean Travel.

The comparative, one might almost say absolute, security of ocean travel could not be better illustrated than in the latest trips of the Atlantic liners. A storm raged, the fierceness of which passes all memory, and yet every ship came in. They were late, of course, all of them, but they came in. Every one of them had been battered with countless tons of water, hurled with immeasurable force, and time and again the mighty liners were tossed like corks upon the waves. But they conquered triumphantly. Fasteners were torn from the decks, and even propeller blades were lost, but they plowed steadily forward. There was a diminution of speed, but they went on. That wonderful machine, the essence of power, known as the Atlantic liner, is superior to the tempest. The mind of man subdues, if not directs, the elements.—Marine Review.

In Doubt.

"I always go to Henrietta," said Mr. Meekton, "when anything is puzzling my mind. But a doubt has recently arisen which I don't quite know how to express."

"Aren't you happy?"

"Of course I am happy. At least, I assume so. But I don't feel inclined to act the way other people do when they are happy, and sometimes I almost think that I've have had more fun if I were not married. But I can't make sure. I can't go to Henrietta and ask her whether, if she had been in my place, she would have married herself. It doesn't sound reasonable."—Washington Star.

This is the address given in an order for Dodd's Kidney Pills received and filled by the Dodds Medicine Company of Buffalo, on April 16th. This unique direction means that to reach the sick people of Iceland, the parcel must travel to New York, then to London, Eng., then northwest to Greenland, to be landed finally on the lonely island at the edge of the Arctic Circle. This is a pointed illustration of how United States goods find their way to the remotest corners of the earth. America to-day produces better medicines, as well as better manufactured articles than any other country in the world, and this fact accounts for the demand for Dodd's Kidney Pills from every part of the known universe.

Bureau of Standards

TEMPLE OF SCIENCE WITH DOUBLE WALLS

Uncle Sam's new supreme court of weights and measures, for the building of which congress just gave Secretary Gage a quarter million dollars, is the largest bureau added to the government for many years. You have seen it referred to in the news dispatches as the national bureau of standards. That is its official name. It might be more properly called the supreme court of weights and measures, because it really will be the tribunal of last appeal, whereat disputes as to the accuracy of weights and measuring instruments can be finally settled. This new bureau will save millions of dollars a year to our great industries, will make the researches of scientists more accurate, will enable the surveyor to stake out our building and farm lots with greater precision, will give the common people better measure of dry goods, groceries, gas and electric light. This bureau of standards will correct our weights and measures, that they may all be equally uniform. It will test yard sticks, meter sticks, peck measures, pound weights, kilogram weights, thermometers, steam gauges, and all kinds of delicate measuring devices. It will stamp each with a government stamp certifying its truthfulness or error. A representative of each measuring or weighing instrument to be thus tested and stamped will be stored in the new bureau as "the" standard of that particular measure and weight, with which all others of its class must be compared. There will be a standard yard graduated into standard feet and inches; other standards of length, standards of weight, quantity, electricity, heat, light, pressure and so on, with their subdivisions and multiples. Today we are dependent upon Germany, France and England—which have standardizing bureaus—for these corrections. It will be difficult to realize the amount of care which will be taken with these standards installed in the new bureau. It will be far enough from the city to be out of reach of the vibrations caused by electric cars and heavy wagons. Many of the walls will be double, to prevent penetration of hot or cold air and consequent fluctuation of interior temperature. Compressed air and vacuum pipes will extend throughout the building, as will several systems of electric wires. There will be double windows capable of flooding the rooms with light, also light-proof shutters making them absolutely dark. There will be fire-proof vaults for the storing of the standards. A separate building, 1,000 yards or more away, will instal the engines, dynamos and other heavy machinery essential to the work. As a whole, the institution will be a modern temple of science, of which the country may be justly proud. The bureau will also establish a standard electric cell, measuring standard volts; indeed, electric standards of many kinds. Although applications of electricity represent a rapidly growing business with investments of $2,000,000,000, there are in this country no facilities for testing meters and other instruments used in electric measurements. A standard thermometer will be another of the many instruments to be stored in this bureau. With this will be compared for correction the millions of thermometers used by physicians and surgeons, by scientific laboratories and great industrial establishments. For a long time Uncle Sam has had an office of weights and measures for giving out, mostly to its scientists, standards of weights, measures and capacities which have been adopted for convenience, but not by law. It has always been a part of the coast and geodetic survey, but is now merged into the new bureau of standards. What is practically our standard for measuring length at the present time is to be found here. This is known as the "standard meter," a bar of metal, kept in three or four cases for its protection. This bar cost $2,500, and the metal alone in it is said to be valued at $1,500. The United States standard kilogram, which was similarly obtained from Paris, is a duplicate of the world's standard kilogram, installed in that city. It is a small cylinder of the same metal used in the construction of the standard meter. This metal, by the way, is an alloy of platinum and iridium, selected because it cannot be destroyed by heat. It cost $1,000. Two bell jars, one fitting over the other, protect it from the dust. It is handled only by a pair of forceps with chamois skin ends.—Philadelphia Record.

How Gold Was Found in Australia.

The discovery of the Australian gold fields was in some instances not altogether without romance, notwithstanding their prosaic surroundings, perhaps in no case more so than in that of West Pilbarra, of which I may quote the story as commonly told. It appears that a discerning youth of tender years picked up a stone to throw at a cow (some say a crow), and noticing that it contained gold reported the fact to the "Warden." This gentleman was so excited at the news that he flashed the intelligence by wire to the then governor of the colony, informing him that a lad had picked up a stone, to throw at a crow—forgetting to add that he had seen gold in it! The governor, much surprised, but moved by curiosity, wired back: "Yes, and what happened to the crow?" (or cow). This elicited explanations which led to the proclamation of the district as a gold field, and in consequence of the rush that followed in the same year (1888) 3,493 ounces of gold were obtained, valued at £13,273, early attention being drawn to the district by the discovery of several large nuggets, one of which weighed 140 ounces.—A. G. Charleton in the Engineering Magazine.

HAVE AGE AND STATURE

DECREASED SINCE THE DAYS OF ADAM AND NOAH?

The impression is quite general that the people of prehistoric times were much taller than those of the present day. In 1718 Henrion, a member of the French Academy of Sciences, published a pamphlet in which he asserted that Adam was 123 feet 9 inches tall; Eve, 118 feet 9 inches; Noah, 27 feet; Abraham, 20 feet; Moses, 13 feet. He gave elaborate reasons for his statements. A present-day scientific student of the Bible goes Henrion one better and makes Noah 67 feet tall and attributes to the flood survivor a weight of 1,375 pounds. His reasons for this estimate are not bad, either. He says: According to Genesis, Noah lived 950 years and then died. The average life of man to-day is about 70 years. It is a well-defined rule in nature that animals, bipeds and quadrupeds live about three and one-half times the number of years required for individual maturity. Thus man in this century matures in 20 years and dies at the age of 70 years. Dividing the age of Noah by three and one-half we find that he matured in about 270 years. The average man of to-day at maturity measures about 5 feet and weighs 125 pounds. Five feet in 20 years is equivalent to three inches in one year. Applying the same rule to Noah's maturing years, we find that at his maturity he was 67 feet tall and weighed 1,375 pounds. It stands to reason that if Noah was so great in body Adam must have been equally as large. The mere fact that Adam was never born evidences that he was a gigantic man. Everything created during the formation ages was according to a very large standard. The trees were skyscrapers, the animals immense and all other things in proportion. Why should Adam have been a freak in this array of colossal nature?

Civilization and multiplication of the races diminish the lives of individuals as well as the statures. Why? Possibly because our civilization is an unnatural perversion of the life contemplated by our Creator for us, and as free agents we are gradually destroying the race as a penalty for our wrong power to multiply having been given us, death is a natural consequence, but death by natural decay, instead of death by disease, crime, war, pestilence, results of civilization, was contemplated. Hence our civilization and all other civilizations are more or less responsible for the inevitable extinction of the race.

A curious mathematical coincidence lay in the above proof of man's decline in stature and age. Thus the stature of man in a few more than 6,000 years, according to Hale's chronology being the age of the human race, and according to my deductions, has decreased from 65 to 5 feet, at which rate of decrease the world will be depopulated in 461 years, or the year 2,362. The age of man has likewise decreased from 900 to 70 years in the same time, at which rate the race will become extinct in about 461 years, or the year 2,362. As you observe, both deductions reach the same conclusion.

There may be an element of truth in this theory, at least it is worth probing. The great trouble with us to-day is that we are too easily satisfied; we lack the ability and energy to "figure out" or "search for evidences of truth" and instead accept all kinds of theories and dogmas as they are presented to us, surrounded mostly by a halo of fanaticism, impossible and absurd.

RUSSIA AND AMERICA

In the Behring straits Russia and America shake hands. Big Diomede island and Little Diomede stand side by side, the former Russia's outpost, the other our own. A little strip of narrow sea lies between the two, and so clear is the air on a fair day that it seems as if from one island you could easily reach across a hand to the other. North, across Kotzeline sound, is Point Hope, a barren sandspit, extending far into the Arctic sea. It is the home of a tribe of Eskimos, who go to the mission school and church and learn to sing hymns, to speak a little English and to use soap.

SPRING CATARRH MAKES PEOPLE WEAK AND NERVOUS

MISS ANNA BRYAN OF WASHINGTON, D. C.

Miss Anna Bryan, a favorite cousin of William Jennings Bryan, is well known socially in Washington, D. C., where she has a host of friends. Miss Bryan recently studied music at Fairmount Seminary, of Washington, D. C. In a recent letter to The Peruna Medicine Co., of Columbus, Ohio, she says:

1459 Florida Avenue, N. W., Washington, D. C.

The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, O.:

Gentlemen—"At the solicitation of a friend I began some weeks ago to take your Peruna and I now feel like a new person. I take pleasure in recommending it to all who want a good tonic and a permanent cure for catarrh."—Anna Bryan.

MRS. BERTHA KOCKLER, 177 Guinett street, Brooklyn, N. Y., writes:

"Peruna and Manalin have done me very great service, and I recommend them with pleasure to all who suffer with nervous catarrh of the stomach as I did. Should such a disease ever attack me again I shall immediately take Peruna. I now feel very well and have a good appetite all the time. I have gained in weight. I recommended Peruna to an acquaintance of ours and he is making remarkable progress. I looked so badly for a time before I began your medicine, that now when I meet some of my friends they say: 'I was very much worried about you, but now you are looking so well.' I shall always keep Peruna and Manalin in the house as family medicines."—Mrs. Bertha Kockler.

Thousands of Fair Women Are Never Without Peruna, The National Catarrh Remedy.

Miss Marie Coats, President of the Appleton Young Ladies' Club, writes the following concerning Peruna:

Appleton, Wis.

The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, O.

Miss Marie Coates.

Gentlemen—"I find Peruna an excellent spring and summer medicine, and am glad to call the attention of my friends to it. When that languid, tired feeling comes over you, and your food no longer tastes good, and small annoyances irritate you, Peruna will make you feel like another person inside of a week. I have now used it for three seasons and find it very reliable and efficacious."—Marie Coats.

Mrs. Al. Wetzel, 21 South 17th street, Terre Haute, Ind., writes:

"Peruna is the greatest medicine on earth. I feel well and that tired feeling is all gone. When I began to take your medicine I could not smell nor hear a church bell ring. Now I can smell and hear. When I began your treatment my head was terrible, all sorts of buzzing, chirping and loud noises. Three months ago I dragged around like a snail; now I can walk as briskly as ever. I am going to go and see the doctor that said I was not long for this world, and tell him that Peruna cured me."—Mrs. Al. Wetzel.

If all the tired women and all the nervous women, and all the women that needed a tonic would read and heed the words of these three fair ladies who have spoken right to the point, how many invalids would be prevented and how many wretched lives be made happy.

Peruna restores health in a normal way.

Peruna puts right all the mucous membranes of the body, and in this way restores the functions of every organ.

If it is the stomach that is out of order, and the digestion impaired, Peruna quickly makes things right by restoring the mucous membrane of the stomach.

If the nerves tingle, if the brain is tired, if the strength is flagging and the circulation of blood weakened by flabby mucous membranes of the digestive organs, Peruna reaches the spot at once by giving to these membranes the vitality and activity which belongs to them.

The pelvic organs are also lined with mucous membrane which in the female sex is especially liable to derangements. Peruna is an absolute specific in these cases. The women everywhere are praising it. No other remedy has ever received such unqualified praise from such a multitude of women.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, O.

MAM-M-MA!! DON'T YOU HEAR BABY CRY?

Do you forget that summer's coming with all its dangers to the little ones—all troubles bred in the bowels.

The summer's heat kills babies and little children because their little insides are not in good, clean, strong condition.

Winter has filled the system with bile. Belching, vomiting up of sour food, rash, flushed skin, colic, restlessness, diarrhoea or constipation, all testify that the bowels are out of order.

If you want the little ones to face the coming dangers without anxious fear for their lives, see that the baby's bowels are gently, soothingly, but positively cleaned out in the spring time, and made strong and healthy before hot weather sets in.

The only safe laxative for children, pleasant to take (they ask for more) is CASCARETS. Nursing mothers make their milk mildly purgative for the baby by eating a CASCARET now and then. Mama eats a CASCARET, baby gets the benefit. Try it! Send for a 10c box of CASCARETS to-day and you will find that, as we guarantee, all irregularities of the little and big childrens insides are

SUFFER HEAVY LOSS

CHINESE PUNISHED BY THE GERMAN TROOPS.

Four Engagements Fought at the Great Wall Between German and Chinese Troops—Warriors of the Celestial Empire Make a Stubborn Resistance, but Were Finally Routed — All Chinese Troops Driven Out of Chili Province — French Troops Were Not Engaged.

Pekin, April 30. — It is stated here that the Germans sustained over thirty casualties in the recent engagement with the Chinese on the borders of Shansi province. One lieutenant was wounded. The pass where the engagement was fought will be held by foreign troops. All the Chinese troops have now been driven into Shansi province from Chili. None of them have surrendered, however, and they are still defiant.

The main body of Germans and French who participated in the engagement is returning. The Germans now hold the passes into Shansi and three highways, making it easy to carry out a forward movement should it be necessary.

Gen. Kettler's report shows that the Chinese troops did not leave the province until they were forced to do so. The entire brigade commanded by Gen. Kettler met the enemy April 23 and inflicted immense loss upon them. The report does not give this loss. The Chinese were forced to leave the province and were fully demoralized.

Fought Four Engagements.

Berlin, April 30.—The German war office has received the following advices from Count von Waldersee:

"Three engagements occurred April 23, and a fourth April 24, at the great wall, between four columns under Gen. Kettler and the Chinese troops under Gen. Liu. The Chinese were everywhere defeated, and after a stubborn resistance were forced back over the wall, being pursued as far as Kun-Kuan. Our casualties were four officers wounded and three men killed and thirty-two wounded. The French troops were not engaged."

FIVE BURNED TO DEATH.

Negro Arrested Charged With Starting the Fire.

Houston, Tex., April 30. — In a fire which destroyed a livery stable and three residences yesterday morning five persons were burned to death and several others were injured. The dead are Job Copping, a florist, his wife and three children. A negro has been arrested on the charge of having started the fire to get revenge on his employer for having discharged him. In the ruins were found the bodies of the victims, among them being an infant which had been born to Mrs. Copping during the progress of the fire. The fire started in a livery stable over which several families lived. The building, a mere shell, was a mass of flames when the firemen arrived. A crippled widow, Mrs. Thompson, escaped from the building and says she saw the Copping family run back into their room from the hallway, and that was the last seen of them alive. Mr. and Mrs. Jeff Hopper were cut off from escape by the stairs and jumped, Mr. Hopper's leg being fractured and Mrs. Hopper receiving internal injuries.

WORKMEN CRUSHED TO DEATH.

Buried Under Tons of Earth in a Baltimore & Ohio Tunnel.

Frederick, Md., April 30.—While attempting to sink a forty-foot shaft in the west end of the Mount Airy tunnel, which is to be one and a half miles long, for the new improvements on the Baltimore & Ohio railroad near Ridgeville, twenty miles from here, about 2,000 tons of earth fell upon the workmen in the tunnel, entombing a number of the seventy-five men who were there. The bodies of Arthur Frazier, colored; Douglass Hicks, colored, and Michael Coyne, foreman, of Fayette county, Pa., have been recovered. Michael Kearns, another foreman, is known to be under the debris, and it is thought that there are a number of others.

TAKES PHOTOGRAPHS IN COLORS.

Swiss Amateur Claims to Have Discovered the Secret.

Berne, April 30.—The Bund, the leading paper printed in German in Switzerland, has a long article on the discovery of the secret of color photography by a Berne amateur, Adolph Gartner. He has been working on the invention for several years, but, by a happy accident, a few days ago he discovered the secret, and it is simple. Gartner shows magnificent specimens on paper, porcelain and glass, in colors of blue, red, brown and dark yellow.

DECORATES THE CZAR'S HEIR.

M. Delcasse Presents Grand Cordon of Legion of Honor to Grand Duke Michael.

St. Petersburg, April 30—M. Delcasse, French minister of foreign affairs, went to the imperial palace at Gatchina, where he was received by the dowager empress and Grand Duke Michael, the heir presumptive, to the latter he presented the grand cordon of the Legion of Honor.

REBEL NATIVES ARE KILLED.

Sixteen Insurgents Slain During Suppression of Disturbances.

Algiers, April 30.—Later advices from Marguerite report that sixteen rebellious natives were killed during the suppression of the disturbances there.

Killed and Eaten by Natives.

Sydney, N. S. W., April 30. — Herr Mercke, a German millionaire who was cruising in his yacht, and Herr Caro, his private secretary, were recently murdered by natives off New Britain. Caro's body was eaten.

Unbalanced by Business Reverses.

Lincoln, Neb., April 30. — Norris Humphrey, for twenty-five years a leading business man of Lincoln, committed suicide last night by shooting himself. Business reverses, it is said, unbalanced his mind.

BURNED TO DEATH.

Two Ranchmen in Montana Perish in Their Cabin.

Helena, Mont., April 26. — Samuel Karns and Alice Misner, employed by John Frazier, a prominent Cascade county sheepman, were burned to death on Six-mile coulee. The bodies were found under the dirt roof of their cabin. It is supposed the cabin caught fire while the men were sleeping and that the roof fell, pinning them in the blazing walls.

DEPOSITS WHILE INSOLVENT.

Charge Against Banker Hunner Who Is Again on Trial at Alma.

Alma, Wis., April 26. — A special term of circuit court occurred here, Judge E. W. Helms of Hudson, presiding. The case on trial is the State vs. L. P. Hunner for receiving money, knowing the bank was insolvent. A jury has been secured, and the case is started and will be watched with much interest.

Heroic Little Girl.

Cedar Falls, Iowa, April 26. — People on Main street last evening turned their heads to save their eyes from seeing what they were sure would be the horrible death of little Florence Myers, ten years old, the sole occupant of a buggy being taken through the street at a terrible pace by a runaway team of bronchos. She was screaming with all her might, but clinging to the lines. The team evaded all who tried to check them and went in a straight line to Twelfth street, when the little heroine turned them toward the pumping station of the water works, where they were stopped. She was badly frightened but was unharmed. She has been complimented for her nerve.

Flyer Jumps the Track.

Minneapolis, April 26. — The Great Northern "flyer" which left St. Paul, west-bound, at 9:35 a. m. yesterday, jumped the track at Fifteenth avenue southeast. The train was pulled by two engines. The forward trucks of the first engine left the track. This caused both engines to take to the ties. They drew after them five coaches. It took a block for them to stop. The wheels were buried in the sand up to the axles. The rear half of the train stayed on the track. No one was hurt. It took several hours to clear the track.

Nineteen Townships Quarantined.

Aberdeen, S. D., April 26. — Dr. H. E. McNulty of the state board of health has returned from Sisseton, where he has been investigating the smallpox situation. He found matters in bad shape, and at once took steps to inaugurate a strict quarantine and compulsory vaccination. A quarantine of Sisseton and nineteen townships adjoining has been necessitated, and no mail, freight or express will be permitted to pass the dead line from the territory described. It is thought the disease can be wiped out in thirty days.

Awarded Damages.

Pine City, Minn., April 26. — In the district court yesterday the jury in the Charles Erickson $40,000 personal damage suit against the Minnesota Sandstone company brought in a verdict, awarding plaintiff $4,000. This is the second case decided against the company, the jury having awarded Mrs. Attix $5,000 for the death of her husband, caused by the breaking of a defective hoisting derrick. The cases will be appealed by the company.

To Investigate Foss' Case.

Fargo, N. D., April 26. — The state bar association has sent a committee composed of Col. Benton of Fargo and Former Judges Rose of Jamestown and Templeton of Grand Forks to Mandan to investigate State's Attorney Foss, against whom disbarment proceedings have been instituted. Foss is a Republican and all the members of the committee are Democrats.

Increasing Sheep Industry.

Rapid City, April 26. — A good many sheep are coming into this part of the country from the South. Sheep raisers have made money in the business in the past three or four years and the size of the herds will be greatly increased. It is estimated that the wool clip for this season will amount to nearly half a million pounds for the Southern Black Hills districts.

Log Drivers Get Busy.

Solway, Minn., April 26. — The town is packed with river drivers on their way to the drives. Lammers Brothers have started driving on Clearwater river and the Brainerd Lumber company will begin on the Mississippi to-day. The latter will have the largest drive ever known on the upper Mississippi—35,000,000 feet.

Killed in Chicago.

Winona, Minn., April 26. — Hugh P. Man of this city, son of Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Man, and a brother-in-law of Hon. W. B. Anderson, was instantly killed at Chicago yesterday by being run over by an express train. He was a great favorite here.

To Vote a New Court House.

Muscatine, Iowa, April 26. — The county board is seriously considering the advisability of submitting to the people a proposition for a new court house. The board will probably submit the question to the voters at the next election.

Farmer Loses Heavily.

Cumberland, Wis., April 26. — Andrew Howe's farmhouse near here, including contents and a large amount of cash, was totally destroyed by fire.

Crushed to Death.

Beaver Falls, Pa., April 26.—One man was killed and two fatally injured at the Penn Bridge works by the falling of a thirty-five-ton steel girder.

Rival Boards Organize.

West Superior, Wis., April 26. — Two different boards of public works are expected to clash any time now. They have both organized and the fight will now be to see which is the legal board and which is legally organized.

Spanish War Pensioners.

La Crosse, Wis., April 26. — Herman Burdt, a veteran of the Spanish-American war, has been granted a pension of $36 through the efforts of Congressman Esch. He was badly injured during service.

TERRIBLE DISASTER

NEARLY TWO HUNDRED PERSONS KILLED OR INJURED.

One of the Most Disastrous Explosions on Record Occurs at a Chemical Works Where Smokeless Powder Is Manufactured—Factory Immediately Became a Mass of Flames—Troops Were Ordered Out to Prevent the Fire Spreading — After Five Hours of Strenuous Effort the Fire Was Controlled.

Frankfort, Ky., April 27.—One of the most disastrous explosions on record occurred yesterday afternoon at the electro-chemical works near Griesheim, where smokeless powder is manufactured. Most of the boilers exploded. The noise was so tremendous that it was heard at great distances, including Frankfort and Mayence. The factory immediately became a mass of flames and a northeast wind carried the sparks to neighboring villages where several houses were also set on fire.

Eighteen cylinders, each containing about 100 pounds of smokeless powder, were in the room where the explosion occurred. Troops were immediately ordered to Griesheim to prevent the fire spreading to the large benzine reservoirs near by. Fire-brigades from every place in the neighborhood hurried to the scene, but owing to the dangerous nature of the disaster and the fear of a renewal of the explosions, the greatest difficulty was experienced in stopping the progress of the flames. Only after five was the conflagration to some extent controlled and the danger passed so as to make it possible to begin the work of extricating the bodies. It is feared that nearly 200 persons have been killed and injured. The last explosion occurred at 7:30 p. m., and, when it was ascertained that no further damage was anticipated the inhabitants were allowed to return to their homes. At 8:30 p. m. the fire was still burning in the center and the work of extricating the dead and dying was being carried on by torchlight, gas light not being obtainable. All railway traffic with Frankfort was stopped during the fire except for trains carrying the injured, but it has since been resumed.

Four sheds for dressing the wounds of the injured have been erected. The catastrophe originated in a small fire which ignited several recepticles of picric acid, causing a terrific explosion. The houses adjoining the factory were partly burned and partly demolished by the violence of the explosion. It is still impossible to say definitely how numerous are the victims.

BANDITS UNSUCCESSFUL.

Attempted to Hold Up and Rob a Town in Texas.

Texarkana, Ark., April 27—An unsuccessful attempt was made yesterday to hold up and rob the little town of Queen City, Tex., sixteen miles south of Texarkana, on the Texas & Pacific railway. Five men went to the shingle mill of C. L. Cabe, which was in charge of Night Watchman Ira King. They covered him with pistols and disarmed him. A tramp named Woods was sleeping in the mill. The men told King and Woods that they were going to tie them to the railway tracks, capture the night policeman and rob the town. King and Woods were taken to the track, but while the robbers were getting ropes ready they broke away. Woods was shot twice by the robbers and is dead. King was shot in the head, but will probably recover. The shooting attracted the attention of Constable J. M. Powell, who hurried to the scene with Clyde Strange. Upon their arrival a pitched battle ensued. The officer emptied two guns at the robbers and after exhausting his ammunition was forced to retreat. Bloodhounds are now on the trail of the robbers. Aside from being shot King and Woods were badly beaten with pistols.

ROOSEVELT IS RAISED.

Vice President of the United States Takes the Master Mason's Degree.

New York, April 27.—Vice President Roosevelt is now a master Mason, having taken the third degree Wednesday night in Matinecock Lodge No. 806, at Oyster Bay, L. I. The ceremony was witnessed by 400 master Masons, including Grand Master Charles W. Mead, of the grand lodge of this state, and his entire staff, who did the work of the degree. Visiting brethren were also present from Connecticut, New Jersey and Massachusetts.

REBELS SURPRISED.

Capt. McCrea Captures a Number of Them With Rifles.

Manila, April 27.—Capt. McCrea, with a detachment of mounted men from the the Third infantry and some Macabebes, surprised a body of insurgents in Pampanga province and captured a number of rebels with rifles. They also found some ordnance in a monument erected at the expense of the American government through the efforts of Maj. Kelley on the spot where Col. Egbert, of the Twenty-second infantry, was killed.

RUSSIAN BASE.

Korean Port Used for Extensive Operations by Czar's Army.

Vancouver, April 27.—Advices from the Orient say that Russia has taken possession of Chinghai bay, Korea, making it the base of extensive operations.

May Be Blocked.

Winnipeg, April 27. — The railway deals were before the railway committee at Ottawa. A dispatch says that Wallace Nesbitt made an overpowering argument on behalf of those opposing the deals, which may block the entire business.

The Busy Burglar.

Sleepy Eye, Minn., April 27.—Burglars effected an entrance into Christensen's department store and got away with considerable clothing, guns, revolvers and jewelry.

GRAIN INSPECTORS UNDER FIRE.

E. W. Knatvold and George H. Tunnell of Minneapolis Must Face Charges.

St. Paul, April 30. — Charges have been filed with the railroad and warehouse commission involving the standing of two members of the grain inspection force at Minneapolis, E. W. Knatvold, chief deputy inspector, and George H. Tunnell, his first assistant. They have been summoned to appear before the commission. The charges are made by B. F. Benson, a deputy inspector, who alleges that Knatvold and Tunnell tried to influence him to change his report on certain wheat. He graded the wheat "rejected," and in spite of repeated solicitation from Knatvold and Tunnell, as he claims, he refused to raise the grade to "No. 3." It is said that the amount of wheat involved aggregates 800,000 bushels.

SERIOUS FOR DUNTON.

Canvasser May Be Tried on the Charge of Forgery.

Sioux Falls, S. D., April 30.—W. V. Dunton, who was arrested here Friday by Chief of Police Martin on instructions from the Minneapolis Times for alleged fraudulent collecting in Spokane, Wash., and at points in Montana in the name of that paper, appears to be a much wanted man. In addition to the charges preferred by the Times, Seth I. Zemer, a Minneapolis publisher, wants him held to answer to the charge of forgery. Zemer had employed Dunton to canvass for books published by him. Dunton's practice while making the rounds of Sioux Falls as a book agent, it is charged, was to send in orders whether the parties approached had ordered them or not. Therefore, Zemer wants to prosecute Dunton for forgery in signing the names of parties to orders for books. If tried for forgery Dunton will be held here. But it is likely that he will be turned over to the Spokane officials if they come after him. Dunton is in jail.

DESTRUCTIVE WIND.

Seeded Land Blown Away to Depth of Several Inches.

Aberdeen, S. D., April 30.—Saturday's dust storm was followed by a severe wind and rain storms in the evening which did considerable damage to farm buildings in the country northwest of here. Several large barns in the vicinity of Leola are reported torn in pieces by the wind, and many smaller buildings wrecked. Farmers report extensive damage to seeded grain from wind storms of the past three days, many fields being practically ruined. In light soil the ground has all blown away to a depth of several inches.

BIG FOREST FIRE.

A Million Feet of Logs Burned Near Mellen, Wis.

Duluth, Minn., April 30. — Advices from Ashland, Wis., report the first serious forest fire of the season, Friday afternoon, when 1,000,000 feet of hemlock logs were burned near Mellen, and the Wisconsin Central passenger train got by the fire with difficulty. Fires are scattered all along the south shore of Lake Superior, and near Iron River and Muskeg are said to be particularly active.

Fire in Duluth.

Duluth, Minn., April 30. — Fire last night totally destroyed the building and stock of the Zenith Paper company, causing a loss of about $55,000, of which $35,000 is on stock and balance on building. The stock was insured for $30,000 and the building for about $16,000,—and the latter was owned by C. E. Dickerman of St. Paul. Buildings adjoining were damaged by heat and water to about $10,000 additional, of which the Duluth Paper company, which had $7,000 stock in warehouse next to the Zenith company, was the principal sufferer. The origin of the fire is unknown.

Did the Tramp Fire It?

Hudson, Wis., April 30. — George A. Grant, a pioneer truck farmer residing three miles east of the city, lost by fire a large barn, four horses and three head of cattle. The loss was $1,000; insurance, $100. Sheriff Bell was summoned from the city and arrested a tramp who came out of the burning building. He gave his name as Clarence Baker. He was arraigned before Judge Disney on a charge of vagrancy.

Cheap Lands Going Fast.

Wahpeton, N. D., April 30. — The Western Surety and Adjustment company of this city has just completed the purchase of 12,420 acres, being all of the remaining Northern Pacific holdings in this county. This deal places about all the cheap lands in Richland county in the hands of resident owners, and is the largest real estate deal made in this county in wild lands for some time.

Lumber Company Preparing to Ship.

Bemidji, Minn., April 30.—The Bacus-Brooks Lumber company is erecting a large hoisting works on the east shore of Lake Bemidji along the new Minnesota & International railroad tracks. This company has 21,000,000 feet of logs in the lake at present, and all of it will be shipped by rail to Minneapolis. The same company also has 11,000,000 feet in Leech lake to be shipped by rail.

Fargo to Make Lighting Contract.

Fargo, N. D., April 30.—As a result of the supreme court decision declaring the city's electric light contract void, the council held a special meeting and adopted a resolution calling for bids for lighting the city under a new contract. The mayor was given power to act in making a temporary contract.

Smallpox at Mantorville.

Kasson, Minn., April 30. — Another case of smallpox has been found in Mantorville, three miles north of here. It broke out in the family of Mr. Ellison. All necessary steps to prevent its spread are being taken.

FEARFUL OF FLOOD

"FATHER OF WATERS" BEGINNING TO BOOM.

Old Steamboat Men Predict Another Flood Like That of 1897, When Many Lives Were Lost in the Valley—Greatest Danger Is at Memphis — High-Water Mark of the Ohio River Flood Passes Cincinnati—Great Relief Is Reported From Many Places.

Memphis, April 27.—The flood situation in the Mississippi valley is becoming more menacing every hour. Yesterday morning the river commenced to rise, and has reached a stage of 38.5 and may go to 37 feet, according to the predictions of weather and river men. The river will rise slowly for twenty-four hours, when the volume of water is expected to arrive. Some of the old steamboat men predict another flood like that of 1897, when many lives were lost in the valley. The greatest danger point is in Memphis and adjacent territory. Owing to the building of the St. Francis levee system since 1897, the protective work will be a factor of danger to Memphis. It will cause the flood waters seeking an outlet to spread and back up on both sides of the river.

Preparations are being made to take care of the coming flood, but United States engineers say they have a very small fund at their disposal for this purpose. Many of the planters and renters do not seem to realize the danger, but old rivermen, who have used the great stream as a means of livelihood for years, are alarmed, and say that a grave danger stares the valley in the face. Since the last flood a great amount of levee work has been done by the government, and this will be tested.

Crest of Flood Passes Cincinnati.

Cincinnati, April 27.—The high water mark of the flood passed down this part of the Ohio Valley earlier last night than expected, and became almost stationary from 6 to 10 o'clock at fractions above 59.1 feet and afterward at 59.2 feet, when it became permanently stationary here and at upper points. It is expected to be of much shorter duration further down the river. Great relief is reported from Huntington, Catlettsburg, Ashland and Ironton, where the flood was so bad, and at smaller places in that district, that there are various demonstrations of rejoicing. Early in the evening the temporary rise in that district caused by the Kanawha and Big Sandy swelled the water at Portsmouth, but it was soon over and will lose its force before it reaches Cincinnati. The river at 8 o'clock was stationary at Portsmouth at 58.5 feet and will remain stationary from that city to Cincinnati until this afternoon, when it will begin falling. It was also reported stationary at Ripley, Higginsport, Augusta and Dover, Ky., all of which points have suffered extremely the past few days. The people here and for miles up the river are now preparing to avoid all possible evil effects of receding waters rather than of rising waters.

Rivers Still Rising.

Newcastle, Pa., April 27. — Both the Shenango and Mahoning rivers are still rising and they are now above all previous records except during the flood of 1893. The Erie & Pittsburg and the Ashtabula division of the Pennsylvania railroad are badly crippled and no trains can be run northward on either division. Near Pulaski, this county, the Shenango has overflowed its banks and covered the railroad tracks for more than a mile. Both the Shenango and Mahoning rivers have risen more than two feet within the past twenty-four hours, and portions of the city are already under water. Mahoning town is the greatest sufferer in this respect, and residents of Montgomery street had to leave their homes Wednesday night at 7 o'clock. Movable articles were taken to places of safety, but there was not time for much preparation. Communication over the Mahoning is absolutely cut off with the entire western portion of the county.

GAVE UP INFIDELITY.

Will Now, at the Age of Seventy-Five, Be Married a Third Time.

Toledo, Ohio, April 27.—M. O. Wagner has taken out a marriage license in the probate court. Wagner is the former infidel whose conversion to Christianity years ago was followed by the burning of his infidel library, one of the largest in the country. Since that time he has been divorced from his second wife and now, at the age of seventy-five, seeks a third bride, Mrs. Mattie J. Taylor, aged fifty-four, who has been twice married before. Wagner is a real estate man and lawyer of considerable prominence. The marriage is to be solemnized by two clergymen.

WEST POINT INQUIRY.

Censorship at the Military Academy Is Very Strict.

West Point, N. Y., April 27.—The investigation into the recent breach of discipline among the corps of cadets is being conducted behind closed doors and the cadets are not permitted to discuss the matter even among themselves. Cadet Robert R. Ralston, who, it is said, was reduced to the ranks for not reporting an infraction of the rules in the mess hall, and on whose account the cadets have manifested much displeasure, is uncommunicative. Cadet Ralston was appointed from Pennsylvania. He is in the second class in which he stands near the top.

Gov. Dole Very Sick.

Chicago, April 27.—A special to the Record-Herald from Honolulu says: Gov. Dole is a very sick man. He was confined to his house and only the most intimate friends have been allowed to see him. Nervous prostration.

Count Charged With Bigamy.

New York, April 27.—Count Leopold de Melville, also known as Leopold Frauquent, arrested here a few days ago on a request from Chicago, has been indicted for bigamy and turned over to the Chicago police.

SMASHED CAR WINDOWS.

Rowdies Do Considerable Damage to a Soo Train.

Osceola, Wis., April 27.—The trainmen on the Soo limited had a "hot time" just before the train reached here last night. About twenty roughs were aboard and became entangled in a fight, during which a number of windows were smashed. When the train reached the station the party was put off, and as the train pulled out the party began stoning the cars, finishing the few remaining lights. An attempt was made to capture the men but they succeeded in escaping to the woods. One of them, a young man named Riger, was afterward found in a saloon here and placed under arrest.

QUICK-SHOT COWBOY.

Kills a Bartender While the Latter Was Aiming at Him.

Helena, Mont., April 27.—Seth Dix, a cowboy, shot and instantly killed Ben Davis, manager and bartender of the Wells road house, fifteen miles south of Billings. The men had a dispute over the price of drinks when Wells pulled a gun with the words: "I'll give you your change out of this." Dix instantly drew and fired, the bullet striking Wells in the forehead. Dix came to Montana last March from Terre Haute, Ind. He is under arrest.

CRIMES IN IDAHO.

Special Session of Grand Jury Convened at Wallace to Investigate.

Wallace, Idaho, April 27.—A special grand jury has been convened by order of District Judge Mayhew to inquire into the recent troubles in Shoshone county. Two men were killed a week ago and it is generally understood that the crimes were the outgrowth of the miners' troubles which have existed in the Coeur d'Alene region for many years.

CONGER WILL DECLINE.

Minister to Keep Out of Iowa Politics Until After Chinese Question Has Been Settled.

Vancouver, April 27.—The Shanghai Mercury of recent date publishes an interview with a confidential friend of Minister Conger in which he is quoted as saying that Conger will decline the Republican nomination for governor of Iowa until after the Chinese question has been settled.

BUYING YELLOW PINE.

Weyerhaeuser Syndicate Invests Heavily in Louisiana.

Marinette, Wis., April 27.—The Weyerhaeuser syndicate has acquired 70,000 acres of yellow pine land in Sabine and Vernon counties, Louisiana. The consideration was about $650,000. Isaac Stephenson and the estate of A. C. Brown of Marinette were the principal owners. This deal also includes a section of pine land owned by Mr. Stephenson, individually.

DYING AT 103 YEARS.

Aged Negress Who Worked as a Slave With Fred Douglas.

Helena, Mont., April 27.—Carrie Henderson, 103 years old, a pioneer of Montana, who worked as a slave in the South before the war, is dying at the county hospital. She came to Helena with the first rush after the discovery of gold in "Last Chance," and at one time had a comfortable fortune.

Mild Form of Smallpox.

Fairmount, N. D., April 27.—Smallpox in a mild form exists in abundance but a few miles south of this village. The epidemic is well under control, being confined to two families. The family of Mr. Church in this village has had it, but the members have so far recovered as to render all danger of spreading from this source impossible.

Exonerated for Shooting.

Mandan, N. D., April 27.—Ben Singletary and J. H. Collis, prominent stockmen, became involved in a dispute. Singletary took five shots at Collis, one bullet passing through his hand. The trouble arose over money matters. Singletary was arrested, but the justice dismissed the case, entirely exonerating Singletary.

To Prevent Rate Cutting.

Dubuque, Iowa, April 27.—The Furniture Manufacturers' Association of the Northwest met here to complete their organization and consider matters of interest to the trade. The membership includes manufacturers in Iowa, Wisconsin and Minnesota. The object is to fix a standard scale of prices and prevent rate cutting.

Plenty of Time to Repent.

Deadwood, S. D., April 27.—Charles J. Braun, the man of many aliases who is wanted at Perry, Iowa, Chadron and other places for obtaining money under false pretenses, has been bound over to the next term of the grand jury under $500 bonds. He is in jail here and will be confined until the September term of court.

Two Boys and a Revolver.

Atlantic, Iowa, April 27—Ralph Hammond and Adolph Jensen, while playing with a revolver, discharged the weapon, the ball entering Hammond's abdomen, causing a wound that is feared will prove fatal.

Smallpox Near Miller.

Miller, S. D., April 27.—The home of Harvey Rudd, thirty miles north has been quarantined, Mrs. Rudd having a genuine case of smallpox. Many have been exposed in that neighborhood.

Robbed a Bank.

Urbana, Ill., April 27. — Cracksmen robbed the bank at Ludlow and after destroying the safe with a charge of nitro-glycerine made off with $5,000. They left no clue to their identity.

Cyclist Fatally Injured.

Racine, Wis., April 27.—John Paulson was run down and fatally injured by a street car while on his way home. He was riding a bicycle and in turning out of the way of an express wagon he was caught by the car.

Rescued From Suicide.

Menomonie, Wis., April 27.—John O. Nesvold, for many years a saloonkeeper, jumped into the millpond here yesterday with suicidal intent. A passing workman rescued him and he is now in the county jail.

SEVEN BURNED TO DEATH.

Cut Off From Escape in a Burning Apartment Building.

Chicago, May 7.—Seven persons were burned to death, three fatally injured and several others slightly burned and otherwise injured in a fire that destroyed a three-story apartment building at 9316 Marquette avenue, South Chicago, early yesterday. While the occupants of the burning building were struggling with the smoke and flames in hope of forcing their way to safety, the firemen, who were responding to the alarm, were vainly waiting for a freight train which was blocking the way of the fire engines to move away from the crossing and give an open road to the fire. Marshall Driscoll, in charge of the firemen, called to the conductor and brakemen to move the train but they refused to comply with his request. The police were sent for and the crew was arrested. Then under orders of the fire marshal the train was backed from the crossing, but by the time the firemen reached the burning building the structure had been destroyed. Scattered among the embers were found the charred remains of the victims. The bodies were burned beyond recognition and were identified in various ways. The train crew, who live at Elkhart, Ind., are being held without bail awaiting the verdict of the coroner's inquest. The origin of the fire is unknown. The building was an old one, built of wood and burned so rapidly that all avenues of escape by stairways were cut off before the occupants were aware of the fire.

UNCLE SAM TURNED DOWN.

England's Reply to the Complaint About the Seizure of a Wrecker.

Washington, May 7.—The answer of the British government to the inquiry of the state department respecting the seizure at Union bay of the wrecking vessel Ajax, which was engaged in saving the American steamer Willamette, has been received, and, as was expected, it takes the ground that the Willamette was not wrecked in waters "contiguous to the United States boundary line," a condition which the treaty makes necessary to wrecking operations like this. It appears that Union bay, the scene of the wreck, is more than 100 miles distant from the boundary line, and in the light of the treaty and of subsequent decisions of the authorities, it could not be regarded as forming part of the contiguous waters, so that the seizure was justified and cannot be made the subject of official remonstrance.

KING LUDWIG IS WORSE.

Mad Ruler of Bavaria Presents a Pathetic Spectacle.

Berlin, May 7.—Mad King Ludwig of Bavaria has just celebrated his fifty-third birthday anniversary. His condition grows worse and he now presents a painfully pathetic spectacle. His eyes have lost all expression and his voice is growing feeble. The hair on his head and his beard are white and ragged, as the appearance of a barber provokes a violent paroxysm. His face is the color of parchment. The only sign of recognition he ever given is a feeble smile. He smokes cigarettes perpetually and alternates between semi-starvation and wild voracity. His doctors say he may live five years unless an internal hemorrhage occurs.

MANY PEOPLE INJURED.

Collision of Two Traction Cars at Akron, Ohio.

Akron, Ohio, May 7.—Two Northern Ohio traction cars collided at the foot of a steep hill on North Howard street yesterday afternoon and about a dozen people were injured. The two cars were loaded with passengers and were traveling close together. For some reason the brakes on the second car failed to work and it dashed down the hill at a terrific speed, striking the forward car which had stopped to take on more passengers. Strange to say no one on the second car was injured except the motorman, Scott, who sustained serious internal injuries. The rear platform of the forward car was crowded and all on the platform were more or less injured.

BERTHA USED A WHIP.

Indiana Girl Publicly Chastises a Newspaper Publisher.

La Porte, Ind., May 7.—Miss Bertha Mack, aged twenty years, yesterday publicly horsewhipped William Hunt, a newspaper publisher, for giving publicity to statements reflecting on her character. Miss Mack then took up her position in front of Hunt's office, and while she confined him as a prisoner by threatening further vengeance if he ventured forth, addressed a crowd of upward of a thousand people, reciting her wrongs and claiming justification for her deed. Hunt has made no defense.

Canada Concurs.

Ottawa, Ont., May 7.—The dominion authorities have concurred in the United States regulations recently adopted, regarding the carding and sealing of packages passing between the United States ports via Canada. Cars must be sealed by United States custom officers, the seals to remain until the goods arrive again in the United States. Railroad iron and other merchandise in bulk, which is incapable of being put in locked cars may be transported on platform cars, duly carded and sealed.

Wholesale Arrests in Russia.

St. Petersburg, May 7.—During the past four days there have been wholesale arrests and seizures in connection with the alleged revolutionary movement. It is reported that persons of high standing and position are involved. Several hundred persons have been arrested during the last forty-eight hours, including a number of prominent people.

ARE LEAVING PEKIN

AMERICAN TROOPS COMMENCE EVACUATION OF CHINA.

Artillery and Cavalry Leave Chinese Capital and Will March to Tien-tsin—Infantry Will Leave by Rail as Soon as the Transports Arrive—Imposing Farewell Ceremonies Attend the Departure of the Troops—Evacuation by Foreign Troops May Result in General Disorder.

Pekin, May 7.—The American cavalry and artillery, which has been ordered to leave China, has just left here for Tien-tsin. The men will march to that place, carrying ten days' concentrated rations. They marched yesterday to Tong Ku. These cavalrymen were extremely popular here, and the cleanliness and order of their camp arrangements were much praised. Imposing farewell ceremonies attended their departure. Sir Alfred Gaselee and other British generals with their staffs were present and the British commander sent a detachment of Baluchis, who escorted the Americans outside the city walls. Gen. Chaffee publicly thanked the cavalry and artillery for their services in the international relief expedition and for their behavior since, which has been, he said, a credit to themselves and their nation. The infantry and headquarters staff will leave by rail as soon as the transports arrive at Taku.

General Disorder Feared.

Reports have been received that the districts along the line of march of the German troops returning from the west have been largely deserted by their inhabitants. There has been much commandeering by them. They required supplies and transportation from one mandarin, who, fearing that compliance with the demands made upon him were impossible, committed suicide. Other districts are reported to be greatly disturbed by disbanded soldiers and banditti. One district requested aid from the French soldiers, who, upon arriving there, had a fight with the outlaws and sustained some loss. Two of their officers were killed. These reports of disturbance are held to show that there will be disorders in every direction should the evacuation of foreign troops begin without arranging for the return of a sufficient Chinese force to maintain order.

To Open Up Manchuria.

London, May 7.—"I am informed by a high native official," says a Shanghai correspondent of the Times, "that China has approached the powers suggesting a complete reopening of Manchuria to the enterprise of all countries, and that replies have been received from Japan, the United States and Great Britain. Japan cordially approves the suggestion. The United States government generally assents, but suggests an application of the principle to the whole empire. Great Britain approves. It is feared, however, that Russia will object. The chamber of commerce and the British and American associations are vigorously protesting against the proposed increase of the customs tariff to 10 per cent."

BRUSH WITH BOERS.

Eight Britons Are Captured, but They Are Later Rescued.

Cape Town, May 7.—Twelve men belonging to the Diamond Field Horse, under Lieut. Matthews, encountered a large number of Boers under Commandant Malan near Cradock. The British fought until all their horses had been shot. Lieut. Matthews and seven of his men were captured, but Col. Scobell subsequently effected their release.

-o-

Johannesburg, May 6.—Gen Delarey, the Boer commander, has now four or five thousand men in the hills around Harthbeestefontein. Gen. Babington, in command of the British forces in the district, is without a sufficient force to attack, and is observing the Boers while Generals Methuen and Rawlinson are converging hither. A battle appears imminent.

NATIVES IN REVOLT.

Situation in the Ivory Coast Colony Critical for the French.

Paris, May 7.—The Eclair says that the situation in the Ivory Coast colony, West Africa, is reported more critical. Various engagements are reported to have taken place in the Baule regions between the insurgents and the French troops. The latter, it is said, encountered desperate resistance and were hard pressed. Some officers of the French force are said to have been wounded. Gen. Combes, it is stated, is on his way to the Ivory Coast colony from Senegal to direct the operations of the French troops.

DRAPER WILL LIVE IN ITALY.

Former Ambassador to Rome Gives Up His American Residence.

London, May 7.—Mr. Draper, formerly the American ambassador at Rome, recently passed through London on his way to Italy, where he intends to make his permanent abode. He is now in Venice and has bought a number of pictures at the exposition there.

PLAGUE RIOTS IN INDIA.

Twenty Villages in Revolt and Several Persons Killed.

Calcutta, May 7. — Three hundred troops have been dispatched to the Sialkat district to suppress plague riots. Twenty-five villages are in revolt in the district, and several hospital assistants have been killed or wounded.

IS IT A MIRACLE.

Doctors Examine the Spots on the Famous "Bleeding Picture" at Menominee, Mich.

Marinette, Wis., May 7.—At the request of the Reverends Cleary and Papon of Menominee, Catholic pastors of the Irish and Polish Catholic churches, respectively, the physicians made a microscopic examination of the spots on the bleeding picture. The doctors were unable to decide by the microscope whether or not it was blood. They say that a chemical analysis is necessary. Both of the priests mentioned above are inclined to think that the manifestation is a miraculous one. The candles are still kept burning about the picture, and many people are praying before it. The fact that two of the priests believe that it may prove to be a miracle is causing many to take the matter more seriously.

WILL ACCEPT.

Minister Conger Says He Will Not Refuse Iowa's Gubernatorial Nomination.

Des Moines, Iowa, May 7.—Minister Conger has authorized the publication of the following card:

"In reply to hundreds of letters from all over Iowa, which I cannot answer personally, urging me to accept the nomination for governor by the Republican party, I repeat the statement first made, that I cannot be a candidate, but will accept nomination if it is tendered to me. —E. H. Conger."

Minister Conger has gone to Washington to report to the state department and consult with the authorities with regard to the situation in China.

POSSIBLY A MURDER.

An Unknown Man Found Dead Near East Grand Forks.

Grand Forks, N. D., May 7. — The dead body of an unknown man was found in the woods near the river in East Grand Forks yesterday morning. Several pools of blood were found in the vicinity and the coroner was notified. An identification card found on the deceased bore the name of Charles M. Heck and requested that information be sent to John Heck, Ripley, Ohio, in case of accident. The man came in from the west two days ago. An autopsy has been performed and a bad contusion was found behind one ear.

Huron to Have State Fair.

Huron, S. D., May 7.—A number of Huron citizens have filed articles of incorporation for a charter for an organization to be known as "Central South Dakota Fair association." The plan is to lease for a term of years a tract of land in close proximity to the city and fit it up for fair purposes; an annual stock carnival will be the chief attraction, the first to be held early in October. A large amount of stock has been taken in the enterprise and its success is assured.

Now Opposed to Hazing.

Sioux City, Iowa, May 7. — The students of Morningside college here have taken an official stand against the practice of hazing after an unfortunate affair of a few days ago. A new student was hauled from his bed in the night and his clothes torn off him, and he was given a severe fright. His friends came to his rescue and there came near being a riot. The faculty has just ascertained who some of the leaders of the affair were and has suspended them.

A Million Dollar Mortgage.

Omaha, May 7.—One million dollars is the amount of a mortgage filed in the office of the Douglass county register of deeds. It is the first lien mortgage and deed of trust from the Union Pacific Railroad company to the Mercantile Trust Company of New York, given to secure the payment of an item of $1,000,000 of 4 per cent gold bonds, dated April 15, 1901, and due May 1, 1911.

For North Dakota's Fair.

Mandan, N. D., May 7.—The state fair management has had the track put in shape for the coming fair. Considerable work has been placed on it, and it is now pronounced the best and fastest track in the state. About $3,000 purse money has already been raised. The different committees have been appointed, and the work for the coming exposition is well under way.

His Job a Fatal One.

Brainerd, Minn., May 7. — James Schwartz, a laborer, was drowned in the river here. Schwartz has recently been employed on the new bridge, but had taken a job on the drive. In company with two other men he went to the river to practice and fell off a log when about twenty-five feet from shore. His home is near Mankato. He leaves a wife and child.

Will Be Taken Back.

Pierre, S. D., May 7.—Agent Hatch, of the Cheyenne agency, refusing to take charge of the smallpox-infected, Indians who came in here Friday evening from Forest City, they were sent back to that place, under guard. The agent takes the position that their homes are on Bad river, and they should be sent there.

Celestial Rounded Up.

Fargo, N. D., May 7. — Fung Yung Gee, a former resident of the Flowery Kingdom, was arrested at Pembina, where he had walked across the international boundary line. He is now in the local jail with three other Celestials who were arrested in Portal, and whose trial has been adjourned to May 18.

MANY LIVES LOST

CASUALTIES ADD TO THE HORROR OF THE JACKSONVILLE FIRE.

A Number of People, Hemmed in by the Fire, Jumped Into the St. Johns River and Nearly All of Them Lost Their Lives—Number of the Victims Is Not Known—Work of Clearing Up the Debris Proceeding Rapidly — Relief Trains Bring Supplies for the Homeless and Hungry.

Jacksonville, Fla., May 7.—Just how many persons perished in the great fire of Friday cannot be ascertained at this time. It is known, however, that Martha Hagan, a colored woman, perished in the flames, for her partially burned body was found in front of the door of her house. A number of people whose names cannot be learned were drowned in the river while attempting to escape from the flames. They were the occupants of the Meyer & Muller and the Mohawk blocks, which ran back to the river from Bay street. These people were hemmed in by the fire and took refuge on the docks. The latter were soon in flames, and one person after another Jumped Into the St. Johns.

Several of them crowded into a boat, which was capsized and nearly all were drowned. A steam launch picked up several men who were struggling in the water, but did not report their names, and so it is not known who the rescued were. The citizens have taken breath from the direful calamity visited upon them, and to-day building operations will begin. The streets have already been cleared of rubbish as much as possible, and an army of linemen are at work clearing away the miles of tangled telephone wires. Firemen are still playing on the smoking ruins, and where possible men are digging safes out of the mass of bricks that cover them. The hunger of 10,000 homeless people was satisfied yesterday upon the arrival of relief trains and boats

Bringing Provisions

from neighboring towns. Early yesterday morning a commissary was established in the center of the city and thousands were fed during the day. The relief fund is growing hourly and every mail brings offers of assistance. An order was promulgated under martial law requiring all merchants whose stores were spared by the conflagration to open their doors and sell to all who asked. The streets have been crowded all day with shoppers who lost all in the fire, and many stores remain open all night. It is estimated that 3,000 persons have left the city and every outgoing train is Crowded With Refugees.

Five car loads of tents have been received, the property of the state, which are to be used by the homeless temporarily. Another shipment of tents is expected from the government today. The Times-Union and Citizen estimates the total property loss at $11,000,000. These figures are based upon an itemized statement furnished by a volunteer committee of citizens. Martial law is being rigidly enforced and the town is quiet, although much anxiety prevails because of the threats said to have been made by the negroes that they would obtain provisions by force at their first opportunity.

MAYOR TAGGART A HERO.

Prevents a Serious Accident at the Risk of His Life.

Chicago, May 7.—Mayor Taggart of Indianapolis, who is here on a visit to friends yesterday prevented a pleasure party from meeting with serious accident, if not death, in a runaway. Mr. Taggart acted promptly, though he did it at the risk of his own life. He was riding behind the party in an automobile when the horses, taking fright, ran away. Putting his machine to its full speed Mr. Taggart passed the runaways, brought his auto to a stop and jumped to the ground, not a second too soon, grabbed one of the horses by the bridle. The speed of the team carried him off his feet, but though he was dragged more than a block, he kept tight hold of the bridle and finally brought the horses to a stand-still. Beyond a few slight bruises Mr. Taggart was unhurt.

LOCK-OUT AT DAYTON, OHIO.

National Cash Register Company Shuts Down Its Works.

Dayton, Ohio, May 7.—Twenty-three hundred men have been locked out by the National Cash Register company. The trouble arose about the discharge of four union men in the molding department. J. H. Patterson, president, and Robert H. Patterson, manager, say they will shut up the factory indefinitely. The shop committee asked the company to take the men back. This was refused. The molders walked out and the metal polishers struck in sympathy with the molders. Other unions were preparing to strike when the company closed the doors and dismissed all of the men. The office force has been suspended.

GOING INTO THE TRUST.

Great Western Cereal Company May Have but a Brief Existence.

Akron, Ohio, May 7.—It was learned here on the return of the men who were present at the birth of the Great Western Cereal company in Chicago this week, that negotiations have already been started for the consolidation of the new company with the American Cereal company. It has been predicted, since the inception of the Great Western company that the result would be such a combination, but it was not expected steps in that direction would be taken so soon.

THIEF RIVER FALLS NEWS

By John W. Eastman.

THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN

A fine specimen of the periophthalmus family, a species of fish that is supposed to be confined strictly to African waters, was recently caught near Fernandina, Fla.

Italy's new coinage with the head of Victor Emmanuel III. will be ready soon. The dies have been cut by Cavaliere Speranza, the engraver of the coins of King Humbert.

H. G. Wells, the novelist, has designed a house for himself at Sandgate, England, in which he prides himself that nothing which can be done by machinery will be done by hand.

"The Extirpation of Rabbits," "Heaven's Dead Letter Office" and "Revival by Constitutional Methods," have been recently announced in Australian newspapers as subjects of Sunday discourses. So it appears that America is unfortunately not the only country where sensational titles are chosen to attract listeners to sermons.

The market for bridges is far greater in the United States than elsewhere. The states have now 190,000 miles of railways, and it has been estimated that there is an average of one span of metallic bridge for every three miles of railway. This gives 63,000 bridges on existing lines, without including those required for new lines.

To such an extent has the blackballing practice grown in Paris that the Union, which is the most fashionable, exclusive and aristocratic club of the French metropolis, has been obliged to alter its method of election, and to restrict the balloting to the governing committee, instead of allowing the entire club to take part therein, as heretofore.

Cattlemen in Greenwood county, Kansas, are making hard times for lawyers. They have established a system of arbitrating differences. Three men are chosen as an arbitration committee. They investigate the trouble and make a decision, which is final. A fuss involving $60,000 was settled at Eureka last week by an arbitration committee.

The daughter of Admiral Montojo, who commanded the Spanish fleet at the time of its destruction by Admiral Dewey in Manila Bay, has just committed suicide by hanging at Genoa. The admiral and her mother are now living at Barcelona, and as she wrote to them a long letter just before she put an end to her days, they probably are aware of the mysterious reasons that prompted her to the deed.

Rather than lose his five-foot cue Lee On, a New York Chinaman, who jumped from a trolley car backward recently and received a fractured skull in consequence, will return to Hong Kong in a gaudy coffin. The surgeons want to trephine Lee's skull and that means a hair cut. Although a prosperous Mott street merchant and well versed in western ways, Lee thinks he would rather die.

Courtesy for courtesy is, unfortunately, not the motto of all shoppers. During a recent month a large drygoods store sent out, in answer to requests, thirteen hundred dollars' worth of samples. Every package contained a printed request to return samples after examination. The head of the department says that less than one-tenth ever find their way back. "Where are the nine?" is no new lament for benefits forgot.

A mountain goat farm is a new business in Center and Tioga counties, Pa. A pioneer in the business opens with cleared mountain land and a consignment of 1,000 white goats, costing $18 a head. The mountain cleared land affords an ideal pasture for the hardy animals. The New Mexican goats have a good fur, their hides made a fine leather, and the meat, for food, is said to be delicious and most nutritious. The pasture grounds of the goats are inclosed with a wire fence.

The Revue de Paris contains some very interesting details by Count de la Vaulx about his projected balloon trip across the Mediterranean. He says "My balloon will be made of French silk, which is much lighter than Chinese pongee silk, and has quite as much resistance. The car will be made of rushes, and will measure two metres eighty c.m., by three metres twenty, and will be attached to the balloon in the same way as is used by the military balloonists at Chalais. The crew of the balloon for the Mediterranean voyage will be four in number—two naval officers and aeronauts. The voyage will be made in June or July, when the wind and sea are their calmest. There will be preliminary trials, and provisions for three weeks will be prepared.

Of red snow we all know something from books on the High Alps. Black snow—except when it is "manufactured" in London, and consists of a fine blend of soot and slush—is less well known. But it might have been seen some years ago in a corner of the Muetto Valley, where a "dark snow, which formed a thick layer, almost black, on the ground," came down in a heavy shower. Ill-smelling, it was, and, what is worse, its color represented an enormous host of tiny insects. A strong wind, we are told, brought them over from some distant part.

GIRL'S HEROISM.

Rescues Two Little Sisters From a Burning Building.

Marinette, Wis., May 4.—Lottie Wangburg, sixteen years old, made a heroic rescue of her two little sisters, three and five years old, early yesterday in a fire which totally destroyed their home. She was awakened by the smoke pouring in her room. She opened the door leading down stairs and the flames shot in. She shut the door, raised the window and, seeing no one, jumped to the ground, twenty-five feet below. With her foot sprained she ran for a ladder on the other side of the house, placed it in position and ascended into the burning dwelling and carried out the children one by one down the ladder. They were safe and sound when the neighbors arrived and the girl had to be attended by a physician. The father and three children on the first floor were nearly overwhelmed by the flames.

WELTON'S WILL.

Probate Judge Decides Against Miss Nellie Cass.

Fargo, N. D., May 4.—The petition of Miss Nellie Cass, formerly an employe of the local telephone office, to have the will of the late George H. Welton in her favor filed for probate was denied by Judge Roberts. It was held that the will was not a true holographic instrument. By its terms Welton had willed all his property to Miss Cass, entirely ignoring his wife and three children. An appeal will be taken.

FIRED THROUGH A WINDOW.

An Attempt to Assassinate a Sioux Falls Man.

Sioux Falls, S. D., May 4. — While William Hayes, fireman in the electric light plant, was sitting in the boiler room some one shot at him through the window. The bullet plowed along the floor and lodged in a cupboard at one side of the room. A deviation of six inches would have probably resulted in Hay's death. The would-be assassin is unknown.

Will Enlarge the Plant.

La Crosse, Wis., May 4.—The Wisconsin Pearl Button factory here has decided to put $20,000 more into their business, and will increase the capacity of its finishing plant by eight machines. By June 1 the factory will employ 135 people. Business with them is excellent and the firm is fully warranted in taking the expansive step.

Liquor License Lowered.

Faribault, Minn., May 4.—At a special council meeting last night the liquor license was lowered from $800, to which it was raised last year, to $500. A saloonkeeper here recently took the matter to the supreme court, asserting that the city had no right to raise the license. The court decided that council could either raise or lower it.

Iowa Is Launched.

Seattle, Wash., May 4.—The battleship Iowa was launched yesterday from the Bremerton navy yard after undergoing repairs and a thorough overhauling. Less than four weeks were required in the great undertaking although six weeks had been allowed by the navy department. The Iowa is now awaiting sailing orders.

CRISIS IN GERMANY

TROUBLE BREWING OVER THE CANAL BILL.

Three Prominent Members of the Ministry Are Likely to Hand in Their Resignations—Certainty of the Defeat of the Bill Caused the Government to Close the Diet—Report That the Kaiser Has Given It Out That He Would Not Nominate a Successor to Chancellor Von Buelow.

Berlin, May 4.—Owing to the certainty that the canal bill will be rejected the government has decided to close the Prussian diet to-day without waiting for the verdict of this body. There is an impression that the cabinet has not abandoned the canal bill. It is considered probable that Dr. Von Miquel, vice president of the council and minister of finance; Baron von Hammerstein-Loxten, minister of agriculture, and Dr. Schoenstadt, minister of justice, will resign.

The Allgemeine Zeitung says that Emperor William recently remarked that he would not nominate a successor to Chancellor von Buelow. If the question of his successor ever became acute he would assign to the office of chancellor even greater weight and importance than it now possesses and would make Prince Albrecht of Prussia chancellor. The latter assertion is ridiculed, while the former one is credited by those who are well informed.

CRISIS IN JAPAN.

Premier Ito and All but One of the Ministers Resign.

Yokohama, May 4.—In consequence of the continued postponement by the Japanese minister of finance, Viscount Watanabe, of the carrying out of the expected public works, the cabinet crisis reached a climax yesterday, and Marquis Ito, the premier, proceeded to the palace and tendered his resignation to the mikado. All the other members of the cabinet did likewise, with the exception of the minister of war, Baron Kodama.

It is asserted that Marquis Ito advised Emperor Mutsuhito to intrust the task of forming a new cabinet to Marquis Yamagata, whose government resigned last October; but it is doubtful whether Marquis Yamagata will accept the responsibility. The probability is that Marquis Ito will reinstate the cabinet, excluding Viscount Watanabe.

NO POSTPONEMENT.

St. Louis Exposition Will Certainly Be Held in 1903.

St. Louis, May 4.—The board of directors of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition Co. held its first meeting yesterday and organized. Ex-Gov. David R. Francis was unanimously elected president of the board. William H. Thompson announced that the bill before the St. Louis municipal assembly tendering the use of the parks for a site for the fair had been passed by the council, and he was satisfied that it would be passed by the house of delegates without delay. He hoped that no one would make any suggestion as to postponing the fair. They had started out to hold it in 1903, and they intended to live up to their plans.

FAMINE IN RUSSIA.

Peasants Suffer as a Result of the Failure of the Last Harvest.

St. Petersburg, May 4.—Distressing accounts are arriving here of the situation of the village populations throughout Bessarabia, especially in the Soroki district, caused by the famine arising from the failure of the last harvest. The peasants are living on husks of maize, boiled in water. Half of them are suffering with typhus fever. They are clad in rags and have no furniture or other household necessities. Horses and sheep have decreased from 50 to 60 per cent, owing to the lack of forage. In some villages horses are sold at a rouble each. Elsewhere 70 per cent of the farmers have lost all their horses.

THE GOLDEN RULE.

United Christian Party Will Continue to Work on That Line.

Chicago, May 4.—The second national assembly of the United Christian party, at the call of the national chairman, William F. Benkert of Davenport, Iowa, met yesterday. The following national officers were elected: Chairman, W. F. Benkert, Davenport, Iowa; vice chairman, Rev. C. B. Thomas, Chicago; secretary, D. B. Martin, Pittsburg; treasurer, J. F. R. Leonard, Ainsworth, Iowa. It was unanimously decided by the assembly that the United Christian party should "continue to stand for union in God's name, direct legislation of the people governed by the golden rule."

BRITONS HOPEFUL.

Outlook Brighter for the Termination of the War.

London, May 4. — According to the Standard the war office is more hopeful of the termination of the war in South Africa than it has been for weeks. The arrangements for food and forage for the army, based on the expectation that hostilities would be prolonged, are likely to be canceled.

EIGHT KILLED.

German Casualties in the Fight With Chinese Troops.

Berlin, May 4. — Field Marshal Count von Waldersee cables from Pekin that the German casualties in the fighting with the Chinese imperial troops on the borders of Shansi province April 23 and 24 were 8 killed, 13 severely and 37 slightly wounded. The Germans captured 18 quick-firing and many obsolete guns.

Fire Causes Heavy Loss.

Loudonville, Ohio, May 4. — A fire broke out in the American house livery barn last night causing a loss of $75,000. The loss is partly covered by insurance. The fire was started by the upsetting of a lantern.

Two Men Killed.

Monterey, Tenn., May 4. — A dynamite explosion at Oates' Camp, on the Nashville & Knoxville railroad extension from here to Laurel Creek, killed two men and severely injured several others.

ROSENFIELD'S BODY FOUND.

Committed Suicide After Killing His Children.

St. Paul, May 5.—The body of William Rosenfield was found among the logs of the St. Paul Boom company a mile from Fort Snelling at noon yesterday by William Loughway and Geo. Delano, employes at the boom. They had been instructed by Supt. McCabe to watch the river closely for the bodies. Coroner Miller went to the boom, accompanied by Joseph Macauley, superintendent of the police alarm, who identified the body as that of Rosenfield, who had thrown his four children from the Marshall avenue bridge and then jumped into the river. The remains were taken to the morgue where Doctors Miller and Finnell held a post mortem examination. They found several bruises on the body that had been inflicted after death by contact with obstacles in the water.

C. A. MOREY MAY DIE.

Sustains Serious Injuries by Falling Down Stairs at Capitol.

St. Paul, May 5.—Charles A. Morey of Winona, one of the three members of the state board of control, fell down a flight of stairs in the capitol yesterday morning and sustained injuries which may result in death. His right side is completely paralyzed from the effects of the fall. Dr. Mc Goughey of Winona, his family physician, is as yet unable to tell just what injury Mr. Morey received from his accident. There are no abrasions of the skin on the head showing a fracture of the skull. But an internal fracture is feared. Nothing definite will be known until a careful examination can be made. In the meantime practically nothing can be done beyond keeping the patient quiet and watching for any symptoms which may develop.

WELCOME TO CONGER.

Big Reception Tendered the Minister at Des Moines.

Des Moines, Iowa, May 5.—Minister Conger was formally welcomed to Des Moines at a public meeting held in the Auditorium yesterday afternoon. The reception was tendered by the two grand army posts, the city, citizens generally and the missionary societies represented in China. Three thousand attended. Minister Conger and family and intimate friends occupied the stage and the boxes were filled with state and city officials. Addresses of welcome were made by Judge Josiah Given, Dr. E. R. Hutchins, John A. McCall, Gov. Shaw, Mayor Hartenbower and others, and Minister Conger responded, briefly reviewing the events of the siege of Pekin and the relief of the legationers.

ST. PAUL GETS IT.

Cudahys Will Establish a Big Packing Plant There.

St. Paul, May 5. — Patrick Cudahy visited South St. Paul yesterday, and with his chief engineer, L. E. Martin, inspected the old Dakota company packing plant. The Dakota plant cost $125,000. Mr. Cudahy's proposition to the Union Stock Yards company was for a ninety-nine year lease and improvements in the plant to cost $250,000. The directors of the Stock Yards company held a meeting Wednesday and, it is understood, practically agreed to accept the offer of Cudahy Bros. The new plant will be as large as that of the Swift company, and will be in operation by Nov. 1. Cudahy Brothers will make a specialty of packing hogs.

MOONEY SUED FOR $20,000.

Banker Said to Have Robbed Fellow Townsman of Wife's Affections.

Langdon, N. D., May 5.—Papers have been served in the Burke-Mooney alienation case. Damages to the extent of $20,000 are claimed. A decree of divorce was granted the Burkes two weeks ago. The defendant is a wealthy banker and widower and the plaintiff is a well known insurance agent. Both are prominent and the case promises to be one of unusual notoriety.

Smallpox at Cando, N. D.

Cando, N. D., May 5.—Smallpox has again broken out here and several are down with the disease. A half-breed from St. John, who had just come to town was the first, and he has it bad. The Dakota hotel, the best in town, is under quarantine. The county commissioners are building a pesthouse north of town and doing everything they can to keep the disease from spreading.

Died in a Cell.

La Crosse, Wis., May 5. — George Wright, a steamboat cook who had lived in La Crosse for forty years and who was well known on the Upper Mississippi, dropped dead in a cell in central police station yesterday of heart failure, caused by excessive drinking. He was arrested for drunkenness. He was forty-eight years of age.

Found in the River.

Oshkosh, Wis., May 5.—Mrs. Elizabeth Hoage, aged ninety-two years, was found in the river a short distance from her home. It is believed she went out for an early morning walk and fell in the river by accident. She resided with her son-in-law, Carleton Foster, of the Foster-Haff Lumber company.

Charged With Forgery.

Milton, N. D., May 5.—George Nelson, a young man who recently arrived from Lake City, Mich., was arrested here for forgery. The sheriff of Missaukee county is here. He will take Nelson back to Michigan.

Shooting at a Charivari.

Sioux City, Iowa, May 5.—Rev. A. R. Bartholomew of Richland, S. D., fired into a charivari party. Arthur Shufelt Shufelt was hit in the jaw by a bullet but will recover. The parties are all prominent.

Ex-Speaker Heads Police Board.

La Crosse, Wis., May 5.—Hon. J. J. Hogan, ex-speaker of the assembly, has been chosen as the new president of the board of police and fire commissioners, of which he has been a member since the civil service law went into effect. He succeeds the late Hon. J. W. Losey.

Milnor Loses a Citizen.

Milnor, N. D., May 5.—C. W. Henderson, for twenty years a resident of this place, died at Wahpeton of typhoid-malaria fever.

CHAPTER XV. (Continued.)

"Well, Allen," exclaimed his mother, when he had descended to the library, where she sat awaiting the close of his interview, who is she, and when will she be able to leave the house? Really, this sudden conversion of it into a hospital is most uncomfortable."

"She is Miss Montrose, mother, and I think she will be fully able to leave her room by the end of the week."

"Her room? You surely do not expect to allow a stranger the privilege of the entire house?"

"Mother, I have taken a strange interest in this young girl. She is very desolate and very friendless. A singular fate seems to have led her to us. Will you not discard your worldly ideas and help me in mine regarding her? I cannot account for my feeling concerning her, further than that I cannot cast her adrift upon the world. I have asked her to remain as companion to Cora, and she has accepted the position."

Mrs. Layton held up both hands in consternation.

"Allen, this is madness!" she exclaimed. "Why, the girl may be—probably is—an adventuress—a—"

"Hush, mother!" interrupted her son. "Cora is no more pure than she. On this I stake the responsibility of my action. Besides, it is taken now, and, in my own house, mother, I am master!"

Rarely, indeed, did Allen Layton speak thus; rarely did any whisper remind his mother that the wealth and luxury by which he was surrounded had been amassed by his own toil—that she owed to him all that she possessed.

His father had died bankrupt when the boy was but a child, scarcely able to comprehend the meaning of the term. That had been twenty years before.

He had paid, dollar for dollar, his father's debts since then; and wealth had first come slowly, and then more and more rapidly, into his coffers, until to-day, at thirty-two, he already stood on the topmost rung of the ladder of success.

"There is only one explanation possible," ventured Mrs. Layton, tearfully, but at the same time half-fearfully—"the girl has bewitched you. I verily believe you are in love with her, spite of your engagement to Edith Lorrimer."

Allen Layton's face paled. He opened his lips to answer; then, checking himself, he turned and walked rapidly from the room; and Mrs. Layton was left to the gist of his own reflections.

CHAPTER XVI.

"I'll find out who she is!" murmured Edith Lorrimer to herself, when, a few days later, after listening with all outward composure, to Mrs. Layton's account of the revolution effected in the household, that lady had at last taken her departure, congratulating herself that Edith had received the news so calmly. "I'll find out who she is!" and the resolve, this time, came from between shut teeth. "Beatrice Montrose, indeed! It's like some name out of a novel or on the stage. I could see Mrs. Layton was uneasy, too, for all she strove to hide it. Does she fear for Allen, I wonder? She need not. I'll take care of my own, and, once pledged, Allen Layton's honor would hold him like links of steel."

"Where is your protege?" she asked her lover, as that evening he walked into her drawing room. "Owing to your absence from town for the past two days, I learned, only to-day, through your mother, of her becoming a permanent member of your household."

Allen's face flushed.

"I hope you approve of it, Edith?" he said, earnestly.

"I hope you'll find no cause to regret it, Allen," she answered, simply.

She understood him better than the mother who bore him. The wedge must be inserted very quietly—so quietly that it would arouse no suspicion in his mind even that she disapproved.

But Beatrice, falling asleep that night, with a prayer of thanksgiving on her lips that for a little while she might find rest and strength with which to gird herself afresh for the coming conflict, knew not that she had made a new and powerful enemy—an enemy swayed by the strongest—most influential of all levers—a woman's jealousy!

"May I come out and pay you a visit, my dear Mrs. Layton? Aunt Gertrude is very anxious to go South for a few weeks, and insists upon my accompanying her; but I will not go, although the thought of remaining in that great house alone fills me with horror. May I come to you?"

Very sweetly Edith spoke, as if asking some real favor, and no one would have dreamed that it was she who planned and arranged the Southern trip for Aunt Gertrude, much against that poor, long-suffering lady's will, in order that she might find the pretext to be under the same roof with Cora's new companion.

"We shall be charmed, Edith—you know that," answered Mrs. Layton, warmly. "Is not this your future home, my dear? I am sure it only rests with you when you shall come to it for good and all."

No flush, as she listened, rose to the girl's clear-tinted, olive cheek, no happy smile of expectant happiness to her lips; but for the moment there glimmered a strange light in the black, brilliant eyes.

The next week the guest-chamber of special honor was assigned to her, and she had taken the first step in her voyage of discovery. The second was not distant.

"B. M. is earnestly asked to send some tidings to B. T., Address Box 66."

Early in December, casually glancing over the morning paper, this advertisement met her eye.

"What a pretty, romantic name you have, Miss Montrose!" she said, carelessly, looking up from its pages to where the two girls were sitting on the other side of the morning room. "And, by the way, here is an advertisement addressed to you."

The lovely face paled, and the red lips quivered.

"Addressed to me?" she echoed. "Oh, you must be mistaken!"

"You do not know any one, then, whose initials are B. T?"

"B. T.? Give me the paper! Let me see!"

She sprang up as she spoke, and, with unrepressed eagerness, crossed the room.

"Nonsense, Miss Montrose! You scarcely can imagine I seriously believed a personal in the columns of the Herald could have reference to you? It is a coincidence—nothing more?"

And she coolly resumed her reading, while the girl stood, white and trembling before her.

Slowly she went back to her seat. "B. T." The initials seemed to flash before her eyes in letters of flame.

Constantly as Bertie had been in her thoughts, great as had been her anxiety concerning him, she had wholly forgotten that he must have suffered even greater expense concerning her.

Doubtless he had discovered her flight from Grey Oaks, and knew no more.

"You are pale and trembling, Miss Montrose," said Cora, when she had returned to her chair. "Do go to your room and lie down. You must not forget that you are still an invalid, and that Brother Allen has put you under my care."

Tenderly Beatrice stooped and kissed the sweet, upturned face, neither noting the quick glance of hate from the black eyes opposite at mention of "Brother Allen's" name.

"I believe I will go to my room, dear. Will you postpone our reading for a little while?"

"She will come back for the paper!" thought Edith. "She will answer the appeal! How shall I get that answer into my hands? I verily believe she is connected with a gang of thieves!"

But her first surmise, at least, was correct. An hour had scarcely passed before Beatrice re-entered the room.

Edith had retired into a distant window, and let the curtain fall before her, so that she was screened from view.

The paper had been carelessly thrown upon the table.

A moment before she took it up Beatrice pressed her hand to her heart. It seemed to her, from those printed pages that Bertie's voice was actually calling to her.

Then she glanced eagerly over the columns. She had found the place, for on a card she had noted down the number given, then, with a dry sob, hastened from the room.

A little later, thickly-veiled, she emerged from the house.

Already bonneted and cloaked for this emergency, at a little distance, Edith followed her.

As she supposed, her destination was the nearest lamp-post, into which she slipped her letter.

Greeting her carelessly, as they met, Edith walked on, only to retrace her steps and take her stand beside the box until the postman should make his next round.

"I have just posted a letter which I wish to recall," she said to him. "It is addressed to B. T., Box 66."

The postman glanced at her a moment, but her eyes met his frankly.

She was young and pretty and richly dressed. It must be all right; besides, she had the address which proved the letter hers.

Opening the box, he sorted its contents, until he found that to which he referred.

"Here it is, miss," he said.

She slipped a note into his hand.

"Thanks!" she murmured. "You have saved me great anxiety."

Then, with her precious prize in her hand, she walked swiftly home, and, going straight to her own room, carefully locked and bolted herself within it.

Cautiously and slowly she unfastened the envelope, so as to leave upon it no trace of the tampering.

She might have wished to forward it to its destination.

A closely-written sheet fell from it.

When she had finished reading it she knew all. That revelation was, indeed, different from what she had supposed. The girl had done no wrong, then, and Allen's pity had not been misplaced. Pity! Was it pity? Did she not know otherwise?

Through the mad infatuation of a moment, knowing full well that his heart was in no wise moved, she had brought about his formal offering of his hand and heart. Once pledged, he would redeem his pledge; but latterly, he was changed—even his infatuation was taking wings. Her old influence was waning, and to this girl she owed it!

Had she not some right to recognize the debt? She had seen Allen's eyes rest upon her pale beauty with a glance she never had inspired. She had heard his voice soften, as it never had softened to her. She had noticed his avoidance of this stranger guest, and read in it another sign of his distrust of himself. It would make no difference in the fulfillment of the bond between them. If it had been merely his position, his wealth, his name, she coveted, she could have laughed in scorn and cared not at all. But Edith Lorrimer alone knew the secret workings of her own heart, and recognized that out of all the world it craved one thing alone, and that the passionate love of the man to whom she was betrothed.

Even in the moment of his declaration, keenest pain had mingled with her triumph. He asked her to become his wife, to rule as mistress of his home, but, regarding his heart, he was silent. Yet she had accepted him—yet she hoped to win him. And now failure mocked her—failure, wearing the form of a rival's beauty.

She laid the letter on the flames of the wood fire dancing on the hearth, and watched it burn.

"Be patient, Bertie," Beatrice had written. "I am resting and gaining strength to fight with you in our coming conflict." Randolph Chester! The name same back to her like a dimly remembered dream.

She understood the recollection better when that evening—when they had already, after fifteen minutes in waiting for the master of the house, taken their seats around the dinner table—Allen, entering the room, closely followed by a dark, handsome man, turned to his mother, and said, gaily:

"My old friend, Randolph, mother!" adding, while yet the stranger bowed with courtly grace over the old lady's cordially extended hand, "Cora, dear, you remember Mr. Chester, let me present Miss Lorrimer, Miss Montrose, Mr. Chester."

"Merciful heaven! Miss Montrose!"

But his words were all unheeded by her to whom he addressed them. The little head had sunk back on the cushioned chair. Miss Montrose had fainted dead away! But further than one quick start of recognition, noted only by one pair of eyes, black and brilliant as his own, Randolph Chester had given no sign that he and this new and unexpected addition to his friend's household had ever met before.

CHAPTER XVII.

Beatrice's swoon was not a long one, but it allowed her the pretext of withdrawing from the meal and seeking the retirement of her own room.

Conversation flowed uninterruptedly without her; but Allen was pale and distracted. Never had Miss Lorrimer appeared more brilliant or more charming. Mr. Chester's eyes dwelt on her admiringly.

"I was proposing to Allen," he said, as dessert was brought on, "that you should all come down for the holidays. I can hardly picture to you the dreary desolation of Grey Oaks since my cousin's death. You can scarcely imagine what a real act of charity you would perform if you would but enliven my solitude."

"But why shut yourself up there, my dear Chester?" asked Allen, rousing himself.

"I feel my presence necessary for many reasons. Foremost is this unhappy affair of my cousin's daughter. It appears that her mother was an Italian prima-donna, with whom my cousin lost his heart and offered heart and hand. As in her case the latter was disposed of, she could only accept the former. No one, however, suspected this until Mr. Markham's death. It was a cruel shock to his daughter. unhappily, too, there was no will, so she was left penniless. The terrible disaster must have turned her brain, I think, for she left Grey Oaks one day, and we have since been unable to obtain no clue to her. I trust, however, she may yet return, when I would be there to welcome her."

Clearer and clearer grew the story to Miss Lorrimer, while even Allen looked up with a quick, startled glance.

It seemed to him he had unconsciously held a puzzle in his hands, of which the parts were fitting into place. Yet it must be a chimera of his own brain.

Had not his guest met Miss Montrose as a stranger? Her faint, too, was easily explained by her recent illness.

His own nature was too frank to harbor long the supicion of whose very existence he was scarce conscious.

"Poor girl!" exclaimed Miss Lorrimer. "Was she young and pretty?"

"Quite young and very pretty. You will be able to comprehend how sad it all has been for me, when I tell you that she was my affianced wife. I have been loth to take possession of my inheritance; but her flight compelled explanation, and the law forced me to claim my own. . Do you wonder that the old house is desolate to me? Will you not cheer me up for a little time in its empty solitude?"

"I think your plan most charming," assented Edith, Cora eagerly echoing her words.

"You will chaperone us, Mrs. Layton?" asked Chester, with his old, winning smile.

And so he won his point.

It was arranged that the Thursday following the little party should become his guests.

"Miss—pardon me," he added, "but I did not catch the young lady's name who is with you. You will explain to her that she is included in the invitation."

He spoke so naturally, so easily, that even Edith was for the moment checked in the building of her little wall of proof.

Was it well that this girl should return to her own home as an alien? She could scarcely prevent it, except by breaking up the entire plan; and, after all, it would enable her better to lay the scheme for future action.

Flushed and eager, Cora related to Miss Montrose, whom she found lying, pale and quiet on her lounge, the proposed plan.

To the young girl just budding into womanhood, Beatrice Montrose seemed a lovely visitant from another world.

She adored the beautiful companion kind fortune had sent her. In her eyes she was without flaw or blemish. Although in reality but two years her junior, she was as a child beside her.

She spoke now, with all of a child's enthusiasm.

"We are to spend the holidays," she exclaimed, "at Grey Oaks, they call the place—a pretty name, is it not? And it is one of the show houses, they say, on the Hudson. Will it not be charming, Miss Montrose? But are you not sorry for the young girl who supposed always it was to be hers? I hope she will come back while we are there. How cruel and unkind her father must have been to deceive her so!"

"Cruel and unkind!" burst from her listener's pale lips. "Hush—hush! you do not know what you are saying. It is all false, base and wickedly false, what you have heard. He, this poor girl's father, was the best, the noblest of men!"

"Ah, you know him—you knew her? Tell me about them both?"

"No, no," said Beatrice, regaining her composure, "but I have heard this story before, and differently told. I am sorry I spoke of it. I—"

But the effort at self-repression was too great. Her voice trembled and broke. She burst into bitter weeping, sobs shook her frame, while Cora's arms clasped themselves about her, and she strove in every way to soothe her.

Gradually the storm of pent-up emotion spent itself.

"Promise me, Cora, to say nothing of what has happened. Some day, my dear, I will explain it to you. I cannot now. Neither can I go with you to Grey Oaks. You will leave me here."

"No, no; you are to go to. It was all arranged at dinner. And Mr. Chester, particularly, invited you. He could not remember your name, but he said that you must come. How very, very handsome he is, Miss Montrose! Do you know, I think if he told me to do anything in the wide world, I should feel I had to obey him. When he talks I shut my eyes, and his voice sounds like low music."

She spoke with a child's innocence, but Beatrice glanced up, startled, into the sweet, childish face, which the faint crimson blood was flushing into warmth.

What new danger was this which threatened, not her, but a charge she had assumed and considered sacred? Could she, in the light of this new knowledge, let her remain for two weeks or longer, under this subtle influence, without her counteracting power? Besides, might not her refusal to go to Grey Oaks excite suspicion.

There was another reason, too, for her acceptance. Twenty-four hours before she had had a dream. She fancied herself once more in the library at Grey Oaks. She was alone in the room, and sat, leaning back in an armchair and looking out through the open windows on to the rustling leaves of the old oaks.

Suddenly, the rustling seemed to shape itself into words, at first low and indistinct, then growing louder and louder:

"Beatrice—the will—the papers—you will find—are secret! Beatrice—the will—the papers—you will find—the secret—the secret!"

Over and over again the leaves murmured these words, until they were indelibly impressed upon her brain.

They had been the last words spoken to her by her father; but in all the excitement and subsequent misery of that terrible time, they had taken no definite shape of meaning.

She heard them now, as though for the first time; and as she listened, glancing up, she saw, standing framed by the French window, her father's form. A look of infinite love and innate pity was in his dear eyes. She would have sprung to meet and greet him, but she was powerless to stir.

Slowly, as she let her hungry, yearning gaze rest on him, he lifted his right hand and pointed to a small music-room, beyond which there was a guest chamber.

"The will—the papers—the secret!" the leaves rustled again, and then the dream ended—the vision vanished.

Had it been sent to her for naught? She believed not. Away from Grey Oaks, what could she do to prove her right? The will, the papers were unfound. It remained for her to find them.

"Cora," she said, "on one condition, I will go with you. Promise me that no word shall transpire of the conversation which has taken place between us to-night, further than that you repeated to me Mr. Chester's very polite invitation to make one of your party, and that I accept it."

"I promise!" answered the girl, delightedly; and, with a warm embrace, left her, to carry the good news to their future host.

CHAPTER XVIII.

She had sworn in her own soul never to return to Grey Oaks, save as its acknowledged mistress—acknowledged by the man who had dispossessed her and by the world.

And now, when scarce three months later, the carriage rolled through the lodge gates, and the old, familiar scenes burst upon her view, Beatrice felt that she had, in a measure, perjured herself.

And yet, a voice within her whispered that it was a first step toward the goal of success, and as the cold wind blew through the bare branches of the oaks, she could fancy it bore to her the message of the dream.

The great bronze door leading into the wide, spacious hall was thrown wide open; the ruddy glow of the hall's huge fire-place shone out its welcome, while, bare-headed, Randolph Chester came forward to receive his guests.

To each he murmured some courteous phrase of greeting, even to herself; though his eyes, meeting hers, held at once a challenge and defiant dare of her acceptance of it.

A suite of rooms had been assigned her in the east wing, a portion of the house rarely used, and farthest removed from the suite which formerly had been hers.

Among the servants she saw not one familiar face. All the old retainers of her father had been discharged. Not one remained who could recognize their young mistress.

Yes, one. Tyrrell still held his place—indeed, had been promoted to the care of the lodge. He was a high favorite, she later heard the servants whisper to themselves. Careless and indolent and half the time unfitted by liquor for his duties, he was rarely reprimanded or noticed by his master. In his cups, indeed, the fellow was wont to boast of this himself.

But at dinner, a great surprise awaited her. Several courses had followed each other, when Randolph Chester rose in his chair.

"I wish to acknowledge a special debt of gratitude I owe you, my dear Allen," he said, "and also your mother and your sister, for your kind care and protection of my cousin, whose sad story I have already related to you. Now that she has consented to return once more to my roof, I ask you, with me, to drink her welcome."

All glanced at each other's faces, then toward Beatrice, who had grown deathly pale.

She had not dreamed he would not permit her to remain in her false character.

He stood waiting, holding his filled glass uplifted in his hand. Her soul sickened with some unknown dread.

BIG JUMP IN CORN

YOUNG MR. PHILLIPS THE CAUSE OF IT ALL.

Corn Shoots Up to the 55-Cent Mark and It May Reach 65 Cents—Phillips Corners the Coarse Cereal—Tremendous Excitement in the Chicago Grain Pit—Frenzied Mass of Excited Men Watch the Upward Shoot of Corn While the "Little Man," the Cause of It All, Keeps in the Background.

Chicago, May 4. — Under a tension which stirred traders and public alike May corn yesterday shot up to the 55-cent mark, and George H. Phillips, the master of the situation, is now talking 65-cent corn.

On the floor of the board of trade it was a day of tremendous excitement, and the corn pit surged with a frenzied mass of men, perspiring in shirt sleeves, who saw the price take an upward shoot, while the "little man," the cause of it all, kept in the background. The price went upward without any boosting from him, and while it was at its highest he took time to let a lot of

Minor Shorts Settle

at the market price and thereby save a squeezing that would likely have left them minus the breath of life. They came to him in a bunch when the price of May corn was between 54 and 55 cents, and told the bull leader that they were short all the way from 5,000 to 10,000 bushels. They were old-time associates and personal friends of Phillips, and he treated them in his usual generous manner. After the close the concensus of opinion seemed to be that 60 or 65-cent corn, or even $1 corn, might result, as apparently there is the rushing of the price to any figure. Phillips said jokingly that it would soon be 65 cents. The May corn market has now developed into a "one-man market," and the one man who is running it talks frankly on some subjects, and not at all on others, so the result can only be guessed.

Nothing to Stem

Closing Wednesday night at 49 1-2 cents, the opening yesterday was at 50 to 50 1-2 cents. Then there was a quick jump to 51 1-2, then to 52 1-2, to 53, to 54 and to 55 cents, recording the most remarkable advance in May corn since Phillips started his bull campaign. Late in the session lack of business, with a disposition to let go, caused a quick reaction from 55 to 53 1-2 cents.

LIGHTNING'S FREAK.

A Dozen People Shocked and Two Seriously Injured.

Chicago, May 4. — A dozen people were seriously shocked and two seriously injured by a bolt of lightning which struck the tower on the Ozark apartment building at Thirty-fifth street and Wabash avenue last night. Exactly eight years ago last night this building suffered from a similar accident. Last night's bolt, after demolishing the tower, ran down the electric light wires leading to the fourth floor, where it entered the flat occupied by Dr. Anna Wells. Mrs. Wells and her companion, Mrs. C. M. Shafer, were thrown to the floor and rendered unconscious by the shock. Although seriously injured by falling glass both will recover. In the basement where the cafe is situated the greatest damage was done. A score of people were in the room at the time and all were more or less hurt by the falling walls and glass.

FAT MAN CAUSES PANIC.

Street Car Catches Fire and He Is Wedged in the Doorway.

Chicago, May 4.—As an Elston avenue electric car sped along in the early morning darkness the motor blew out with a blinding flash. The tongues of flames ignited the woodwork of the car in a second and the passengers rushed panic-stricken to the door. A fat man first reached the exit, and became wedged in the door, blocking all egress. In the ensuing panic the corpulent gentleman and one other were seriously injured.

SEEDED RAISIN TRUST.

Californian Prepare to Control the Raisin Trade.

Fresno, Cal., May 4. — The Pacific Coast Seeded Raisin association has been incorporated with a capital of $300,000, all subscribed. Its incorporators represent five firms that sell 90 per cent of the seeded raisins produced in California, and 75 per cent of the raw product. The object of the new corporation is to economize expenses in preparing raisins.

MORE TRADE WITH DENMARK.

Six Steamers to Be Added to the United States Line.

Copenhagen, May 4. — The United Steamship Company of Copenhagen has ordered six new steamers of 12,000 tons each for the United States trade, on account of the increase of American exports it has been decided to open a regular line to Boston and increase the number of steamers on the New York and New Orleans routes.

TURKISH MISSION SAILS.

Will Establish Relations With Chinese Mussulmen.

Constantinople, May 4. — The Turkish mission, under Enver Pasha, composed of military officers and clergy, charged with the establishment of relations between Turks and the Chinese Mussulmans, has sailed. The delay in the departure of the mission was due to Russian opposition. The scheme is favored by Germany.

Strikers Are Killed.

Murcia, Spain, May 4.—A thousand men are out on strike at the Aguilas mines. The company has refused the men's proposals and there has been serious disturbances. One man has been killed and several wounded.

Trampled to Death.

Escanaba, Mich., May 4. — William Gabourie, forty years of age, was killed at Perronville. He was driving a team, which became frightened, and he fell between the horses and was trampled to death.

FLIES ON THE ADMIRAL'S HEAD.

Result of an Irishman's Attempt to Imitate a Negro in Catching Flies.

Rear Admiral Robley D. Evans, in "A Sailor's Log," published by the Appletons, tells the following story:

"When the Rhode Island was his flag ship, Capt. Trenchard, who commanded, had a very accomplished steward, a colored man, who became so expert in catching flies off the captain's bald head that he never seemed annoyed by them. Admiral Lardner had for his steward a fine, large, heavy-handed Irishman, who watched the colored man with great envy, while his master, undisturbed, enjoyed his meals. Pat's master thrashed at the flies, and swore roundly as they lighted on his close-cropped hair. The colored man went on catching flies with quick, dextrous movements of his right hand, until Pat could stand it no longer. Drawing back, he made a vicious swing at a fly, but instead of catching it, he caught his master an awful blow on the back of the head. The captain, thinking there was a mutiny, grabbed the carving knife and made after Patrick, who retreated to the spar deck, and there was a hurdle race fore and aft—the officer of the deck and the orderly trying to catch the admiral, who was doing his best to put the carving knife in the back of Pat, who finally escaped, but never bothered any more about flies on the admiral's head."

A DOCTOR THIS TIME.

Portland, May 6th.—Dr. E. A. Rose, a practicing physician, formerly of Yates Center, Kans., was on what everyone supposed to be his death bed. He had Diabetes, and six of his brother doctors were in attendance and consultation at his bedside. They had done everything that medical skill could suggest to save his life, but they were at last reluctantly forced to tell him that he must prepare for death.

His aunt had been summoned to his dying bedside. After the doctors had given her nephew up, she insisted that, as a last resort, he be given a treatment of Dodd's Kidney Pills.

From the very first dose the tide turned in his favor. His life was saved, and he is hale and hearty to-day.

This case and its cure has amazed the physicians, and is the sensation of the hour. It is interesting to note that, while many others are being cured by this great discovery in medicine, the physicians themselves are among the first to benefit, and that while the simpler and more prevalent forms, such as Rheumatism, Sciatica, Bladder and Urinary Trouble and Female Weakness disappear before it, the more malignant forms, such as Bright's Disease, Diabetes and Dropsy, which have always been regarded as incurable, are yielding just as easily.

Dodd's Kidney Pills are fast superceding all other treatment for Kidney Disease, and as nearly all human sickness and suffering has its origin in the Kidneys, the use of this wonderful medicine is becoming almost universal.

Cheering.

"You are sure you can support my daughter in the style to which she has been accustomed?" asked the Heavy Father.

"Sure, Mike," answered Our Hero, with the assurance of youth.

"Well, I am glad to hear it. It's more than I can afford any longer."—

IN JUNE.

A TREATY WILL BE MADE WITH THE INDIANS.

The Washington correspondent of the Minneapolis Journal says.

"Representative Eddy has asked the secretary of the interior to send an inspector to the Red Lake reservation to negotiate a treaty for the cession of eleven townships in that reservation near Thif River Falls, now unalloted and unoccupied by the Indians. The last Indian appropriation bill authorized the secretary to negotiate treaties for the cession of lands without going through the formality of creating expensive comissions and Inspector McLaughlin is now at Rosebud, S. D., on that work.

"It is said at the department that Mr. Eddy's request will be granted and that Inspector McLaughlin will be detailed to negotiate the treaty. As he has work planned which will take a month to complete he will not get to Red Lake until about the first of June. Any treaty he may negotiate will have to be submitted to congress for ratification."

Mr. Eddy has informed the citizens of this city that it is now time for us to act and do some work. He suggests that we give the inspector all the assistance within our power and that we aid him in making a treaty with the Indians. If everything goes well this land will be opened for settlement within one year.

The quarterly statement of the First State Bank published in another column shows that institution to be in a decidedly prosperous condition, in fact it is the best statement ever made by a bank in this section of the state.

The required number of names to the petition to unite the two school districts in the city of Thief River Falls has been secured, and the matter will be voted on at a date to be named later. Nearly everyone in the city is of the opinion now that the two districts should be united, thereby placing the schools of the city under the management of one man, which will be more economical. With the two districts united, state aid to the amount of $1,000 a year can be received, while under the present system but $300 is received from that source.

A number of farmers from the town of North were in the city Monday evening to attend a meeting of the city council and talk over the proposition of building a ditch in that town. It was the unanimous verdict that a ditch must be built, and Attorney Bagley was instructed to prepare the necessary papers for giving the people an opportunity of petitioning for a county ditch. It is proposed to build ten miles of ditch and have three outlets to the river—two north of the city and one south. When this ditch is built we predict that the roads leading into the city from the north and west will at all times be in good condition, and that the value of farm land in the town of North will double in value.

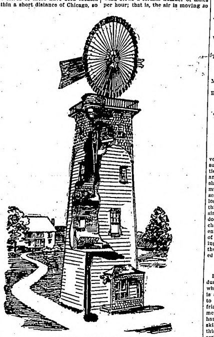
USE OF WIND WHEELS

A Handy Power That Costs But Little.

Wind wheels have been in use for a thousand years. The ponderous and unwieldy old-world wind wheel has given place to the compact snug wheel of Yankee manufacture, just as the old-time water wheel has been displaced by the turbine. The old-fashioned wind wheel, like its contemporary paddle or bucket water wheel, had to be built where it was to be used; while the new wind wheels, like the turbines, can be readily transported to any desired location. It is undoubtedly the handiness of the American wind wheel which has so strongly recommended the machine to the agricultural class, for it is that class which at present is its chief user.

It will not be far out of the way to estimate the number of wheels in the United States at upward of 600,000. These wheels are, however, in the main so small and unobtrusive, and we have become so accustomed to seeing them that they are hardly noticed unless displayed in unusually conspicuous places.

There have been about one hundred firms engaged in the manufacture of wind wheels in the United States, and two-thirds of these have been located within a short distance of Chicago, so that that city must be looked upon as the center of the wind wheel trade. (Perhaps this fact has in some measure contributed toward the establishment on a permanent basis of the appellation "Windy City" as applied to Chicago.)



A WIND LIGHTING PLANT.

The use of the wind machine as a motor is, however, still in its infancy. There can be little doubt that the wind will become the prime motive power of the future, not only for all kinds of work to be done in rural districts, but also in the cities for such work as requires but a moderate expenditure of power.

Work which does not require any definite time for its accomplishment, such as wood-sawing, pumping water, grinding grain and cutting feed, is now accomplished by the wind wheel, and it only needs the invention of some convenient means of storing up the energy of the wind, so that the power derived from it may be available at any time, to make it a universal labor-saver. It is most probable that the conserving of wind power will take place through the use of storage batteries, and its transmission will occur electrically. The use of wind power in compressing air and storing the latter for future use also offers great possibilities. The simplest way to secure this power will be to mount small wind wheels above the roofs of houses, each house with a wheel of a size sufficient to meet its needs. It would indeed at first be a strange sight to see thousands of whirligig wheels on the roofs of a city, but after the novelty has worn away we should not mind them any more than we do the rows of chimneys which exist at the present time.

There is no reason to doubt that in the course of time there will be erected great machines which shall collect the wind power in such quantities as will allow its transmission from central power houses, as at present accomplished by other sources of energy. Or wheels may be set up at regular intervals and each be expected to contribute power enough to operate a plant within a certain precinct.

We can very readily calculate just what wind power is available over any chosen area and within the limits of any designated height. The difficulties to be encountered and overcome in making use of this energy are purely mechanical ones. Two problems come up for solution:

First—To construct a machine which will transmit the energy of the moving air with least loss of power. The ingenuity of the American inventor has been fully exercised in the addition of such improvements to wind wheels as shall reduce to the minimum the loss of power in their operation. Notwithstanding these efforts, there is still much room for improvement, for it is conceded that even with the best wheels, a large percentage of the available power is lost.

Second—To construct the machine of such dimensions and place it in such a position that it will produce the desired power. In order to do this it is necessary to know how much wind actually exists in different localities, and also how much power is developed by winds of different velocities.

There are two ways of stating the strength of the wind. We can either say the wind presses on a surface with a force of so many pounds per square foot of surface; or we can say that the wind blows a certain number of miles per hour; that is, the air is moving so many miles an hour. The wind force or wind pressure varies with this wind velocity.

The inland winds are much stronger on the great plains than in any other section. In Kansas and Nebraska the winds are nearly twice as strong as in the Ohio River valley. These velocities refer to the winds as experienced on the tops of houses in a city, or twenty-five feet above the ground in unsheltered positions in open fields.

All countries are not as well situated as the United States for obtaining wind power. In general the regions between the latitudes 30 deg. and 55 deg. present the most desirable wind power.—Boston Herald.

How the Spring Came to Pierrot

By Ella Corman

Look, love, how the woods are all misty
With purple and gray!
And the soft mellow wind has a touch
Of enchantment today.

There is rain in the air, and a magic Unloosing of bonds—
A glad putting forth of new life,
An unfolding of fronds.

Whence come these old exquisite ardors
In crimson and green,
That walk through the valley and quicken
The life that has been?

Whence come these old exquisite fervors
In yellow and blue,
That touch the frail flowers, and waken
Their beauty anew?

Whence come these old passionate raptures
In whistle and trill,
That open the gates of the morning
By meadow and hill?

Whence come to the house of the spirit
Love, daring, desire,
To knock at the door—bid the inmate
Awake and aspire?

My heart never questions a moment
What April may bring,
But only cries, after long patience,
"Pierrot, it is Spring!"

Etiquette of the Sick Room.

In the sick room try to keep the conversation as much as possible on other subjects besides the illness of the patient. Avoid speaking of the illness of anyone. What you say to the sick one should be something cheerful, and how much better and brighter the patient seems. Never tell anyone that they look "so ill," no matter what you think, for such remarks have a depressing effect on the patient and surely does nobody any good. A bright, cheerful, jovial, happy, hopeful person entering a sick room is like the rays of the morning sun shining on a drooping plant. The effect is electrical and the patient is at least temporarily lifted a step forward to a quick recovery.

Regiments on Ski.

In Norway the ski is in constant use during the winter, and the ease with which great distances can be covered is surprising. Peasants are thus able to get about their work and visit friends in far-away districts. Sportsmen, with gun on back and stick in hand, set out in pursuit of game on ski, and the soldiers are reduced to this means of getting about when exercising. A regiment of soldiers on ski is a sight by no means uncommon in and around Christiania.—The Traveler.

The Steam Locomotive Doomed.

It is claimed that within a few years the electric motor will completely supplant the steam locomotive, and trains will then rush along at a speed of 100 miles an hour. To travelers this will prove a great blessing, but no more so than Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, has proved a blessing to those who wish to regain their health quickly. The Bitters cure dyspepsia, indigestion, biliousness, malaria, fever and ague, also improves the appetite and purifies the blood.

END OF A CIRCUS CLOWN.

Death Came in a Slum Saloon as He Hummed "Garryowen"—Had Just Found Employment.

When the reporters went to investigate the death of one "John Costello," whom the police described as a "laborer," because he was poorly-dressed, they found that the man had died in a saloon connected with Taylor's hotel, No. 2, Roosevelt street, and that he was an old-time circus man, since fallen on misfortune and bad habits. According to one of his cronies, his circus name was Dan Costello, and he was for many years one of the most popular clowns in Barnum's shows and in the shows that combined with Barnum's later on. Costello was sixty-five years old. He is said to have made a good deal of money in the circus business, but he lost it all. When he retired he went to New London, where he married a widow and opened a saloon. His friends say of him that he was too much of a "sport" himself and too good a "spender" to succeed in the saloon business, and it was not long before he had sunk all his money. He then came to New York, and for some years worked at odd jobs along the shore. Last night he went to F. O. Miller, of Forepaugh & Sell's circus, at Madison Square Garden, and told his story. Mr. Miller engaged him. Happy, Costello went to Taylor's hotel and took a seat in the bar room. Some of the people in the room heard him humming "Garryowen." One of them told of his death thus: "I heard him singing, but suddenly the tune died out, and I walked over to see what was the matter. Costello was sitting very still. I put my ear to his heart, and found that the machinery had stopped."New York Post.

In the Enemy's Country.

"I know well enough, fellow citizens," exclaimed the fierce-browed, shaggy-haired orator, "that the views I advocate are not popular. Not ten days ago, while advocating them from a public platform, I was struck on the head by a brick and knocked senseless."

"Why didn't you wait until you got your senses back before you went to talking again?" inquired a man in the outskirts of the crowd, in a loud, raucous voice.—Chicago Tribune.

DOUGLAS FACTORY

To Be Enlarged Before the First of July. Will Make 6,000 Pairs Daily.

Advertising pays.

W. L. Douglas is going to increase the capacity of his factory to 6,000 pairs of shoes per day. The addition will add 16,000 square feet of space for manufacturing purposes. At the same time a new 400 horse-power engine and an additional 150 horse-power boiler will be installed, which will afford adequate power for the present and another addition to the factory, which will no doubt be necessary later on.

When the factory starts up the first of July it will be on an output of 500 dozen or 6,000 pairs of shoes per day, and the weekly pay roll, exclusive of office help, superintendent, foremen, etc., will be $22,000 per week. The Douglas salesmen on the road are selling 25 per cent more goods than last season. The increased sales is the direct result of good shoemaking and extensive advertising. The advertising expenditure of Mr. Douglas is now larger than at any period of his business, and this is to be still further increased. Beginning this week half-page advertisements of the Douglas shoe will appear in all the principal newspapers of the large cities, as well as such papers as the Youth's Companion.—Brockton, Mass., Times.

PERIODS OF PAIN.

How Three Women Found Relief.

While no woman is entirely free from periodical suffering, it does not seem to have been the plan of nature that woman should suffer so severely. Lydia E. The three letters here published should encourage every woman who suffers:

Aug. 6, 1898.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have suffered since the age of sixteen with painful menstruation. I have been treated for months, and was told that the womb had fallen a little. The doctor says that is now in place again, but I still have the same pain. Please tell me what to do."—MRS. EMMA KUEHL, 115 Trautman St., Brooklyn, E. D., N.Y.

Jan. 10, 1899.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—After receiving your reply to my letter of Aug. 6 I followed your kind advice, and am glad to tell you that I have been cured of the severe pain at time of menstruation through the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I have taken six bottles of it, felt better after the first bottle, and after a while had no more pain or womb trouble.

"I had doctored from the age of sixteen to twenty-six, and had lost all hope, but your medicine has made me well.

"I would like to have you use my testimonial, so that others may see, and be inspired with hope, and take your medicine."—MRS. EMMA KUEHL, 112 Trautman St., Brooklyn, E. D., N.Y.

Feb. 20, 1900.

"I saw your medicine so highly recommended I thought I would write to you for advice.

"My menstruation occurs every two weeks, lasts a week, and is painful. I have been troubled in this way for some time. I suffer from sick headache and backache all the time, appetite poor, sick at stomach every morning, everything I eat hurts me, am very weak, thin, and sallow.

"I have tried a doctor, but he did not seem to do me any good."—MISS MAGGIE POLLARD, 319 So. 4th St., Richmond, Va.

MAGGIE POLLARD

April 23, 1900.

"Since receiving your answer to my letter I have been taking your Vegetable Compound, and it has done me more good than any medicine I have ever taken. My menses are all right now, and appear once a month, and I feel so much stronger. I shall always praise your medicine."—MISS MAGGIE POLLARD, 319 So. 4th St., Richmond, Va.

"I was troubled with female weakness, irregular and painful menstruation, and leucorrhoea. The doctor's medicine did me no good. I have taken one bottle and a half of your Vegetable Compound, and thanks to your medicine, my pains are gone. I advise all women suffering as I have to use your Vegetable Compound."—EMMA J. PRIBBLE, Indianola, Ill.

EMMA J. PRIBBLE

If there is anything about your case about which you would like special advice, write freely to Mrs. Pinkham. No man will see your letter. She can surely help you, for no person in America has such a wide experience in treating female ills as she has had. She has helped hundreds of thousands of women back to health. Her address is Lynn, Mass., and her advice is free. You are very foolish if you do not accept her kind invitation.

$5000 REWARD.—We have deposited with the National City Bank of Lynn, $5000, which will be paid to any person who can find that the above testimonial letters are not genuine, or were published before obtaining the writer's special permission. LYDIA E. PINKHAM MEDICINE CO.

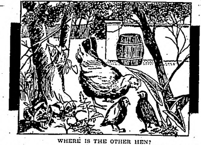
A PUZZLE PICTURE.



WHERE IS THE OTHER HEN?

—Chicago Daily News.

A Captured Whale.

Some ten or twelve years ago a whale floundered into Oyster bay, just north of the Columbia river mouth, and in the state of Washington. The bay is shallow and there is a sand bar at the entrance to it; but the whale must have ridden in on a big wave. At any rate, the next morning perhaps the maddest whale in the world was charging up and down the bay, running its nose into the sand furiously spouting water and mud like a geyser and evidently determined to get back to the Pacific ocean at any cost. For weeks the gigantic creature raged up and down the bay like a big fish in a small tub of water. The railroads ran excursions to the scene, and the captive animal drew a larger crowd than a whole circus. At last a great storm came, and when it departed the whale went with it. So the railroads declared an extra dividend, and the people about the bay went back to work or play, as suited their tastes or necessities.

MORSELS of WIT & HUMOR

FROM THE DAILY LYRES.

London Cablegram to the Chicago Daily Anglomaniac.—Alarming reports come from Russia. The czar is a raving maniac. He shot dead the secretary of state who entered his quarters unannounced. The czar has finally determined to shut all American made goods out of Russia. Acting under instructions of the czar, M. de Giers, ambassador at Pekin, has ordered all Americans out of China. It looks as if the relations between Russia and the United States are badly strained. England yet lives.

The London Daily Beef says: Russia is robbing Japan of Manchuria. England cannot stand idly by while this wholesale robbery of territory is being perpetrated. Let Japan and Russia come together and England will do her duty.

Berlin.—The Daily Bung Starter Zeitung says editorially: If England can get Japan into a fight with Russia and also keep the people of the United States convinced that Russia is an enemy of the United States then England may take a hand. What England wants is a chance to grab the very territory in which Russia is now so strongly intrenched—Manchuria. In either case it is no cheese to Germany. We want a slice of Western China.

St. Petersburg Cablegram to the Chicago Daily Anglo-Phobist.—The czar has invited Charlemagne Tomer, American ambassador, to accompany him on an automobile trip overland to Odessa. They held a long conference today. The British ambassador is yellow with envy (he wouldn't be green). The American flag is everywhere being displayed in recognition of the friendly relations between the Bear and the Eagle. If the enthusiasm lasts much longer the British ambassador will ask for his passports.

St. Petersburg.—The Daily Canardsky says editorially that an alliance between Russia and the United States is more than likely. This will, if consummated, insure the peace of the world for all time to come.

Chicago Cablegram to London Daily Beef.—Prince Odorofsky, the celebrated Russian anarchist, was given a royal reception by the citizens of Chicago today. He delivered a fierce tirade against the czar and his government. Among the speakers were the British consul and the editor of the Anglomaniac.

Chicago Cablegram to the St. Petersburg Cumoffsky: Prince Odorofsky, the anarchist and paid slanderer of the czar of Russia received a cool reception. A few Canadians attended the meeting at Music hall last night. The prince is not worrying, however, as the British government is paying all his expenses. He is a guest at Bull house.—Ex.

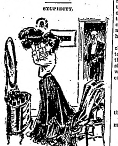
HE LET IT GO AT THAT.

"What is the sacrament of marriage?" asked the Sunday school superintendent of a girl in the juvenile class.

"It is a state of punishment into which we enter to prepare for another and better world," replied the little miss who had learned her lesson by rote and got things slightly mixed.

"That isn't the orthodox answer," said the superintendent with a deep sigh, "but perhaps, after all, it may be correct."

STUPIDITY.



He—"Aren't you most ready, dear?"

She—"How many times are you going to ask me that question? I've been telling you for the last half hour that I'd be ready in a minute."

FRIENDSHIP'S LIMIT.

From the Detroit Free Press: This young man is not so confiding as he was, and his ideas of friendship are not so exalted. Yet he takes it philosophically and is willing to place a heavy credit in favor of experience.

"I started in a small way," he tells, "and I had an idea that my business would expand rapidly. But I find a good many leaks and drains. Of course you know Jones. He is my friend and knows about horses. So when my horse went lame I consulted him, he being the one friend I had who, I thought, could help me out.

"'Pretty bad shape,' he said, as he looked the nag over. 'Need him on your delivery wagon, don't you?'

"I need him or some other horse, and asked Jones what I could get for the lame one. He looked him over, felt his legs, examined his eyes and teeth and finally said that, being a friend of mine, he'd give me $40 for the horse. I took it. That same afternoon he sold the horse for $80, a fact I learned about a week later.

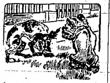
"'Now,' said Jones, 'I'm not the man to leave a friend in a scrape. I'll just rustle around and find you another horse.'

"'Thank you, but keep within a hundred. I can't afford to pay more.'

"Next morning my friend showed up with a horse he told me I could have for $98, though he was really worth more. He was sound, gentle, 7 years old, according to Jones.

"He had bought that horse for $60. He had spavin and ringbone, was knee sprung and 13 years old. So Jones had made $78 off me and left me with one of the worst old crowbaits you ever saw. I'm not saying much about it, for Jones is my friend, you know. But an old codger that buys groceries from me says friendship ceases in a horse dicker."

A NARROW ESCAPE.



Bull—"What's ailing you?"

Fido—"My! I had to run, I saw a man down the street there with such a hang-dog look!"

HER REASONS.

W. L. Riordan in Leslie's Weekly: "Ah, yes," sobbed Christabel; "I confess I love you, but it can never be—we can never marry. I feel that mother is right; that social distinctions must be observed, however, much they may interfere with the inclination of our hearts. Go, Harry Hawlum! The chasm that yawns between us is too wide."

"I will go," said the young man, his voice trembling with emotion; "but would you mind telling me where this chasm comes in? I always thought that our families were on about the same social footing. Has anybody left you a fortune lately?"

"No," wailed Christabel; "it is not that. It is—it is—but, oh, Harry! why should I pain you?"

"Never mind the pain," said the young man, now thoroughly aroused. "I must know why you consider me beneath you socially."

"Then hear it!" cried the maiden. "We have mantel mirrors and gas logs in our new flat. Have you these things in your flat? Answer me, Harry Hawlum!"

But there was no answer. The young man had lived all his life in Harlem, and he knew its social distinctions but too well. With a groan of despair he fled to his old-fashioned flat and sat down and cursed the inventors of mantel mirrors and gas logs.

A VERY CLEAR CASE.

"Very eccentric fellow, that Burkling."

"Eccentric? I call it something else. When a fellow keeps himself soaked with whisky all the time and would rather go around begging for money to help kill himself off than to work once in a while, there's no use trying to soften matters by calling him eccentric. Give the devil his due, but never try to make him out better than he is."

"Still, you know, this chap doesn't claim whenever he strikes you that it's to be the last time, and that he wants the money to get a clean collar and a shave so that he can accept a job which is waiting for him around the corner."

LITTLE LAUGHS.

A Hopeless Case.

Mr. Goodman—Why don't you take the pledge, my good fellow?"

Jaggsby—"Because there are too many other things to take."

"Why?"

Achieving Greatness.

"And how did your husband become so famous, Mrs. Wickleham?"

"Oh, whenever anybody did anything he always got interviewed about it."

Strenuous Inactivity.

"Pa, what do statesmen do?"

"Well, mostly, Tommy, they ride on the railways from city to city, paying visits which have no political significance."

A Chance to Do Better.

Julius—"Would you like to live your life over again?"

Edgar—"No; but I'd like to spend over again all the money I've spent."

Sacred Lily's Alias.

Deception has even reached the disciples of Flora. There has lately been introduced into the market a bulb called "the sacred lily of the Nile." The name is sufficiently catchy to captivate lovers of flowers, and a friend of mine added the new flower to his conservatory. Time passed, and up came the plant, but when the "sacred lily of the Nile" appeared he found only an old, but still agreeable friend in the homely narcissus.—East Anglian Times.

Woman as a Parliamentarian.

"Yes, sir. I did my best to train my daughter up as an accomplished parliamentarian. I took her to meetings to give her a chance to listen to the rulings of able chairmen, and I had her learn the text-books on the subject by heart. I thought I had her perfect in the business, but I was mistaken. She attended a convention not long ago, and pretty soon she had a chance to appeal from a decidedly unjust ruling of the chair, and how do you suppose she did it?"

"Well?"

"She was excited, you know, and this is what she said: 'You are a mean old fright, and I just hate you! So there!' And then she burst into tears and sat down. No, sir; woman's nature will have to change before she will ever become a parliamentarian."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

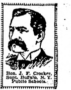
EX-UNITED STATES MARSHAL MATTHEWS, OF MISSISSIPPI.



Hon. J. F. Crocker, Supt. Buffalo, N. Y. Public Schools.

A UNITED STATES MARSHAL

Thanks Peruna For His Rapid Recovery From Catarrh.

Hon. S. S. Matthews, ex-United States Marshal of Mississippi, in a recent letter to The Peruna Medicine Company of Columbus, Ohio, written from Hazelhurst, Miss., says:

"I am happy to say that I am cured of catarrh and need no more attention from you. It is a great satisfaction that I am able to write you that Peruna has in my case done all that you claim, and that I will need no more medicine."

The great multitude take this remedy without any other advice than the directions to be found upon the bottle and in the pamphlets. There are those who prefer, however, to correspond with Dr. Hartman during their sickness. To all such he will make prompt and careful answer without charge.

Hon. J. F. Crooker of Buffalo, N. Y., who was for years Superintendent of Schools at Buffalo, in a letter dated October 16, writes:

"I have been a sufferer from catarrh six or seven years, and after trying many remedies was induced by a friend to take Peruna. The results have been highly satisfactory. I take pleasure in recommending Peruna to any one suffering with catarrh, as my case is complete."

Hon. B. B. Doviner, Congressman from West Virginia, in a letter from Washington, D. C., to The Peruna Medicine Co., says the following of their catarrh remedy, Peruna:

"I join with my colleagues in the House of Representatives in recommending your excellent remedy, Peruna, as a good tonic and also an effective cure for catarrh."

Mrs. Mary C. Fentress writes from Paradise, Tex., the following: "I think I can say that your good advice and medicine has cured me of chronic catarrh. I have had no pains in my head since I have taken Peruna. I have been in bad health ever since '59, and have taken a good many medicines which were only of temporary relief. Peruna is the catarrh cure. The Peruna stopped my catarrh of the head so that it did not become chronic, and I am very thankful for Dr. Hartman's advice and medicine."

Peruna is a specific for all catarrhal diseases. It acts quickly and beneficially upon the inflamed mucous membrane, thus removing the cause of catarrh.

Catarrh is catarrh wherever located. Catarrh is essentially the same everywhere. The remedy that will cure catarrh in one situation will cure it in all situations.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

AWFUL HOLOCAUST

JACKSONVILLE, FLA., ALMOST WIPED OUT BY FIRE.

Conflagration Extended a Distance of Two and a Half Miles by Half a Mile Wide — Loss Will Reach Ten or Fifteen Million Dollars—Fourteen Solid Blocks of Residences Consumed — Block After Block of Business Houses Go Up Before the Flames Were Conquered—Six Lives Said to Be Lost.

Jacksonville, Fla., May 5.—The most disastrous fire in the history of this city began yesterday shortly after noon in a small factory from a defective wire, according to the best belief, and burned for nearly ten hours. In that time a property damage estimated at from $10,000,000 to $15,000,000 was caused. According to the city map 130 blocks were burned, many of them in the heart of the business and residence section. The estimate of houses to the block is ten, hence 1,300 of them went up in smoke. Many of the finest public and private buildings were destroyed, including hotels, theaters, churches and residences. The casualties cannot be accurately estimated. That there were several seems to be well authenticated. Among them was that of the fire chief, who sustained a bad fall.

The mayor ordered all of the saloons closed and has impressed help to clear the wreckage. When the fire reached Julia street it was a roaring furnace without any prospect of being put under control. The local military companies were called out to keep back the crowds and the fire department to blow up the houses a block from the fire and thus prevent the fire from spreading. So fierce was the blaze, however, and so strong had become the wind that millions of sparks and flying burning shingles spread over five or six blocks, setting the roofs of the houses on fire in advance of the department. Soon Senator Taliaferro's residence, then the adjoining houses or that block were ablaze, and in spite of all efforts to save the Windsor and the St. James hotel, both hostelries were quickly enveloped in flames. For about an hour the guests in the Windsor had been busy packing their trunks and went away loaded with trunks and grips, some unfortunately to the United States hotel, but most of them to the Riverside.

Leaping madly across the street from the Windsor, the flames attacked the Sellis house and then the Methodist parsonage, and in a few moments the Trinity Methodist church was a mass of flames. The opera house block followed and the Richards and Livingstone boarding houses came next. A desperate effort was made to save the Baldwin mansion, which was recently purchased by the Elks for $18,000. No earthly power could save this building and the entire block and the one west was quickly a mass of flames. Once the fire got started on Main street the closely adjoining buildings

Went One After the Other.

Paint shops with barrels of oil were plentiful in this district, and as they caught fire one after another, the blaze rising hundreds of feet high, quickly set fire to the buildings across the street. Then the Hubbard hardware store caught and the people scattered when they saw what had happened. Hundreds of pounds of powder and a great deal of dynamite were stored in this building. In ten minutes there was a roar and the building collapsed like an eggshell. The dynamite and powder had exploded. Here again there was much danger for the firemen. Cartridges began to explode and bullets began to fly around and the effort to fight the flames at this point had for a time to be abandoned. This was only the start of the most intense part of the fire. The new Furchgott building was soon ablaze and then quickly the Gardiner building was also a mass of flames. Down the street the

Fire Spread With Rapidity

and the entire section of Day street from Market to Main street and extending for five blocks back, was burning all at once. The city building went, the fire department building, the armory, the county court house, the city jail and the graded schools and the Catholic church and orphanage, St. John's Episcopal church and the convent. All this destruction was wrought in less than four hours. At 8:30 the fire was checked at the intersection of Laura and Bay streets, where the Commercial bank is located, which went up in the flames, the Western Union Telegraph office being just across the street and not damaged. Among the prominent hotels burned were the St. James, the United States, the Placido and the Windsor. It is impossible at this hour to ascertain the losses, but it is estimated by insurance agents that it will be between eight and nine million dollars. Six lives are reported lost.

Thousands Are Homeless.

At 1 a. m. this morning the situation was one approaching desolation in a large section of the city. The burned district reaches from Burbridge street on the north to St. John's river on the south, a distance of not quite two miles. The width of the desolated area is thirteen blocks. Within this space practically everything is blackened ruins. On Bay street, the principal mart of trade, the Western Union Telegraph company's building is the first building standing, going west. Everything west of Laura and Bay is gone. At 10:15 o'clock the fire was under control, having practically burned itself out.

Meetings of the city council, the commercial bodies and the charitable institutions will be called Saturday morning to devise ways and means for meeting the situation. Mayor Bowden at 1 o'clock this morning says the property loss will exceed fifteen millions. Ten to fifteen thousand people are homeless.

TWO BLOCKS BURNED.

Gridley, Ill., Visited by a Destructive Fire.

Gridley, Ill., May 5. — Two entire business blocks, facing Center street, were burned yesterday afternoon, causing a loss estimated at $50,000. Mrs. H. Cohn, wife of a clothing merchant, started to burn a pile of rubbish. She lighted it and then left it. In a few minutes it had spread to the butcher shop owned by William Setla. A brisk south wind carried it across the street to the new Commercial hotel, and from there it jumped to the new Gridley State bank. By this time it was seen that the whole town was in danger and a call for aid was sent to Peoria. A steamer and a hose cart were sent, but before their arrival the fire had destroyed two blocks of buildings and had practically burned itself out. There were no casualties.

ALL TEXAS TURNS OUT.

Reception to the Presidential Party a Brilliant Affair.

Austin, Tex., May 5.—Out of Dixie the presidential party yesterday traveled into the heart of the great Southwest. The president's reception in the Lone Star State was a continuation of the ovation he has received throughout the South. Every honor was shown him and his party and there was much enthusiasm. Gov. Sayers and other prominent state officials met the president at Houston, the first stopping place inside the state, and accompanied him as far as Austin, the capital. There were some interesting features at the reception at Houston, and a very picturesque scene at Prairieview, where the president addressed the colored students of the state normal school. At every station along the route there were cheering crowds. The feature of the day was the reception accorded the party at Austin, which, like New Orleans, had never before had the honor of entertaining a chief magistrate of the nation. The city was profusely decorated and in the evening there was a brilliant illumination of congress avenue. Austin never before held such crowds of people. They came from every direction, some hundreds of miles, and literally swamped the hotel accommodations of the city. It was estimated that over 20,000 visitors were here. As the population of Austin is only 23,000, the tax upon its facilities can be imagined.

TO BE SOLD FOR JUNK.

This Will Be the Ending of the Famous Frigate Minesota.

Boston, May 4—Poor old frigate Minnesota will be stove up and sold for junk after all. A strenuous effort has been made to save the famous old craft for sentimental reasons, and the movement had apparently met with success about a week ago when she was ordered to Virginia to act as a receiving ship, but yesterday this action was reversed by Secretary Long and her fate was sealed. She will fly the flag no more.

Dunton Sentenced to Prison.

Sioux Falls, S. D., May 5. — W. V. Dunton, the book agent, newspaper collector and swindler who was arrested here a few days ago on instructions from the authorities at Spokane, Wash., and from a publishing house and newspaper in Minneapolis, who pleaded guilty to forgery in the fourth degree for attaching the names of individuals to alleged orders for books, was yesterday sentenced to one year's imprisonment in the state penitentiary.

Old Man Nearly Killed.

Waterloo, Iowa, May 5.—John Jackson, sixty years old, came near being killed yesterday while at work in the blacksmith shop of Ole Gullickstad. He was working at an emery wheel when the belt slipped off the pulley. He attempted to replace it while the machine was in motion. He fell across the drive bar and next to the fly-wheel. He was picked up badly injured but will recover. How he escaped death is a mystery.

Ingersoll Temple.

Chicago, May 5. — The building in Chicago of a $100,000 temple to the memory of Robert G. Ingersoll, in which the teachings of the orator and atheist shall be perpetuated, is the purpose of the Ingersoll Memorial association, incorporated at Springfield. The projectors are Edward C. Reichwald, secretary of the American Secular Union and Free Thought Federation; Frederick Dahlstrom and Samuel Roberts.

Turkey to Pay.

Constantinople, May 5.—It has been arranged that the Imperial Ottoman bank shall pay the Cramps £100,000 sterling as a first installment, and pay an amount not specified to the Krupps, from a 6 per cent sur tax on the general taxation of the empire. Simultaneously with this announcement the Turkish officials have revived the old story that the Cramps' payment includes the United States Armenian claims.

Examined for Cadetship.

Cedar Falls, Iowa, May 5. — John Lund, a student at the state normal school, passed the examination for a cadetship at West Point and stood at the head of the list of seventeen applicants. R. M. Gibson of Independence was a close second and was recommended as an alternate in case Mr. Lund fails to pass the final test at Fort Snelling.

Trans-Siberian Road.

Moscow, May 5. — Vityovsky, chief engineer of the Trans-Siberian railway, says that since the railway was begun in 1892 3,000 miles of track have been laid and that 2,000 more must be constructed before the great work is complete. He expects that the road will be finished in 1903. Already thirty miles of bridges have been built.

Cherokee treaty Rejected.

Washington, May 5.—Acting Chairman Bixby, of the Dawes Five Civilized Tribes commission, yesterday wired the rejection of the treaty negotiated for allotment of the Cherokee lands as follows: "Canvass of the vote concluded last evening. Cherokee agreement defeated by majority of 1,232 votes."

Killed by a Policeman.

Schuyler, Neb., May 5.—Because he refused to submit to arrest while disturbing the peace, a stranger, supposed to be R. W. Moss, was shot and killed by a policeman. At the inquest the officer was exonerated.

Held to Grand Jury.

DIAZ TO M'KINLEY

TWO PRESIDENTS EXCHANGE CORDIAL GREETINGS.

President Diaz Unable to Meet President McKinley at El Paso Sends a Personal Message and Also Delegates Gen. Hernandez to Personally Present His Good Wishes—President McKinley Replies in the Same Cordial Terms—It Being Sunday the Official Exercises Were Postponed.

El Paso, Tex., May 7.—The presidential party reached El Paso, the gateway to Mexico, at 9 o'clock yesterday morning and will remain until noon to-day. President Diaz of Mexico had hoped to meet the president here and shake hands with him across the border, but as the Mexican congress is in session he could not leave the capital. He sent a personal message to the president, however, and also dispatched Gen. Juan Hernandez, the commander of the Second military zone of the State of Chihuahua, to personally present his good wishes to the chief magistrate of the United States. Gov. Miguel Ahumada of Chihuahua, the most northerly state of Mexico, also traveled to El Paso to pay his respects, and these distinguished Mexican officials, accompanied by Gen. Hernandez's staff in full uniform, were received by the president in his car at the station. After exchanging felicitations the president requested Gen. Hernandez to convey to President Diaz his personal good wishes for the health and happiness of President Diaz and for a continuation of the cordial relations at present existing between the two countries. President Diaz's message was as follows:

"City of Mexico, May 5.—To the President of the United States of America, El Paso: When you arrive this day at the frontier of Mexico I wish I might shake hands with you, but I send you as cordial a salute as corresponds with the between the two republics of North America. I also send Gen. Hernandez to express to you the same feeling.

Cordial Relations Which Exist

—"Porfirio Diaz."

To this the president sent the following response:

"El Paso, Tex., May 5.—To His Excellency, Gen. Porfirio Diaz, President of the Republic of Mexico, City of Mexico: It gives me great pleasure to reciprocate the courteous greeting of your excellency and to express my most cordial good wishes for your health and happiness and for the continued prosperity of the Mexican republic, to which we are bound by so many ties of mutual interest and friendship. —William McKinley."

It being Sunday, the president had requested the local committee not to arrange any program for the day. His wishes were respected and the military parade and official exercises were postponed until to-day. The president and Mrs. McKinley and the members of the cabinet attended the Station Street Methodist church in the morning and in the afternoon some of the party went out for a drive. After dark last night the Mexican band, which had been brought from the City of Mexico by Gen. Hernandez, serenaded the president and Mrs. McKinley at the train. To-day Gov. Murphy, of Arizona and his staff will participate in the formal greetings. One of the features of the program is to be a Mexican breakfast with the typical Spanish dishes for the ladies of the party.

Aden, May 7.—Spies who have come in report that the Mad Mullah is marching with a considerable force from Lassidar, four days' march down the Tug-Dehr river, northward, with the object of raiding Berbera as soon as the British force leaves Burao. A general British advance was expected May 1, but the Mullah's rapid marches caused a constant change of plans.

CHIEF SULTAN TO PAY FINE.

Death of British Vice Consul Is Recalled.

Mombasa, May 7.—The Jubaland expedition has occupied Ofudo. The chief sultan has agreed to pay a fine for the murder of A. C. W. Jenner, the British subject-commissioner and vice consul, who was killed in November last during a night attack on his camp by professedly friendly natives while he was on a tour inland with a small force.

Crazy Man Stabs Four Women.

Grenna, Sweden, May 7. — While Baroness Augusta von Dusen was introducing a patient named Nehrmann into a hospital for nervous diseases here, Nehrmann became violent, seized a knife and stabbed the baroness and her three daughters. The patient then escaped into the street, clad only in underclothing, tried to force an entrance into several houses and attacked and wounded five persons before being overpowered. One of the daughters of the baroness has succumbed to her wounds.

Actress Commits Suicide.

New York, May 7. — Miss Frances Raymond, an actress, committed suicide by inhaling gas yesterday in her home here. From clipping found in the apartment, letters, manuscripts, etc., it was learned that she once played with one of the Frohman traveling companies in the part of Lucy Hawkesworth in "The Girl I Left Behind Me." For two weeks she had acted in an erratic manner. Miss Raymond's real name was Mrs. Schaffer. Her husband died ten years ago.

FATHER'S FOUL DEED

KILLED HIS FOUR CHILDREN AND HIMSELF.

Body of One of the Children Is Found in the River at St. Paul, Which Confirms the Theory of the Police That He Had Taken the Lives of His Children—Condition of the Body Indicates That the Child Was Almost Dead When Thrown Into the Water—Worst Crime in the Criminal Annals of the Twin Cities.

St. Paul, May 4.—William Rosenfield murdered his four children. He threw them over the Marshall avenue bridge into the Mississippi river. The criminal annals of the Twin Cities do not show a crime so terrible.

One of the most baffling mysteries that the police of the two cities have ever handled was cleared up yesterday morning when the waters of the Mississippi threw against the sheer boom of the St. Paul Log and Boom company's works the remains of Joseph Rosenfield. The body of the boy was discovered by Joseph Lachappelle, watchman. This was the first absolute confirmation of the theory of the St. Paul police that William Rosenfield, when he took his four children away from their shelter last Wednesday night, drove to the river and in the water. Within a few minutes the entire police department of the city was aware of the discovery, and it was generally considered that the crime of William Rosenfield, drunkard or maniac, was established. Within three-quarters of an hour the coroner had pulled the body of the boy out of the water. A discovery was made which adds even more horror to the crime. When the body was turned over so that its face could be seen, there was a rush of blood from the nostrils. The nose was flattened and broken. The left side of the forehead was dented. The right eye seemed swollen and blackened. Every indication points to the theory that Joseph was nearly dead when his body entered the water. Charles Adams, the driver of the morgue wagon, immediately recognized the features of Joseph Rosenfield, the oldest child, nine years of age. It is expected that at any time the bodies of the other three children may be Taken From the River.

Ended the Five Lives

Their names are Mary Rosenfield, aged 7; William Rosenfield, 4; Samuel Rosenfield, 2. It may not be that the body of William Rosenfield, the murderer, will be found in the river. There is a possibility that he is a fugitive from justice.

For some time Rosenfield had not been living with his wife, she having left him because he drank. Wednesday, a week ago, he was discharged from the livery stable where he was employed on account of his intemperate habits. That evening he hired a buggy from T. J. Swartz and drove to the home of Mrs. Bowlin, where his youngest child was living. He got the baby on the pretext that he was going to take the children out for a drive. Later he went to Minneapolis and called at the home of Mrs. Frank Bigford, another sister of his wife, who was caring for the other three children.

He Got Them From Her

by telling her that he was going to take them all to his sister, Mrs. Oswald. He then drove away, and that was the last seen of him or the four children alive. The finding of the buggy the next day in the vicinity of the Marshall avenue bridge later gave rise to the theory that Rosenfield had killed his children by throwing them off the bridge and had probably taken his own life. The recovery of the body of Joseph yesterday confirms the surmise that he drowned the little ones.

Mrs. Rosenfield is in a very critical condition. Her sister died a few hours after her husband called upon her the evening he disappeared, and the double loss of her little ones has prostrated her.

OFF TO THE GOLDEN GATE.

President McKinley Concludes His Visit to New Orleans.

New Orleans, May 4.—The day spent in New Orleans will live long in the memory of the president and the members of his party. In no other city in the United States is the old and romantic preserved and placed in such sharp contrast with the modern as in the Crescent City, and yesterday as the presidential party drove through the flower-embowered city from the new into the old French and Spanish quarter it was like passing mysteriously from America into a foreign land, from this century into another that has gone. The entire population apparently was out to see the chief magistrate. After a short visit to the Southern university, where a thousand colored students greeted the president with waving bits of colored bunting so arranged as to make the whole of an American flag, and where the president made a brief speech, the party passed across Canal and Rampart streets, the boundaries of the new city, into the old town with its narrow streets, its quaint galleried residences, its cathedrals, old Spanish buildings and the French market, all with the flavor of another generation and all now unfortunately going into picturesque decay. The party then returned to the hotel for luncheon and in the afternoon embarked on a Mississippi river steamboat for a trip along the river front from Audubon Park to the historic battlefield of Chalmette, where the monument erected in memory of the defeat of Packingham by Gen. Jackson commands a view of the river. A little further up, and on the Algiers side of the stream, the presidential party had a good view of the preparations now being made for the reception of the new floating drydock now in course of construction for the government at Sparrow's Point, Md. The ladies of the party had remained quietly at the hotel during the ceremonies of the morning, only a few of them taking a very quiet ride around the city, but they participated in the river trip and enjoyed it. At 6 o'clock last night the presidential train resumed its long journey to the Pacific.

MONEY FOR MEXICO.

Chicago Capitalists Will Finance Several Enterprises.

Chicago, May 4. — The Tribune this morning says: Chicago capitalists and millions of Chicago money are to develop the resources of Mexico until the Southern republic becomes one of the important factors in the world's trade. Silver mines supplying two-thirds of the silver of the world, coal fields hundreds of miles in extent, great reaches of iron and other ore lands, thousands of acres of cottonseed and the great grazing lands dotted with cattle are to be made the objects of the impulse of Chicago money. As a first step in this direction, John J. Mitchell and Levi Z. Leiter have been elected to the directorate of the Mexican Central railway. Bonded warehouses, heretofore unknown in the republic, are to be erected. Under present methods the Mexican importer is compelled to pay duty on his goods the moment they are landed. In the United States imports may be stored until they can most opportunely be released and disposed of. The concession under which these great warehouses will be erected grants the rights for forty years.

THE THIEF RIVER FALLS NEWS.

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

VOL. XVIII. NO. 19. [redacted] THIEF RIVER FALLS, RED LAKE COUNTY, MINN., THURSDAY, MAY 16, 1901. $1.50 PER YEAR.

MRS. M'KINLEY ILL

CAUSES UNEXPECTED CHANGE IN PRESIDENT'S ITINERARY.

Arrives in San Francisco Several Hours Ahead of Schedule Time—Mrs. McKinley Taken to the Scott Residence Where She Can Have Complete Rest for a Few Days—President's Physician Says Mrs. McKinley's Condition Is Not Serious—Impression of Those Who Saw Her Is That She Is Very Ill.

San Francisco, May 14.—The sudden illness of Mrs. McKinley has caused an unexpected change in the itinerary of President McKinley. He arrived in this city quietly yesterday afternoon, several hours ahead of the time scheduled. The state of Mrs. McKinley's health was such yesterday morning that the president decided to leave Del Monte and bring his wife to this city immediately, to the home of Henry T. Scott, where she could have complete rest for a few days, and where a specialist could be consulted if necessary. A special of two cars and a locomotive was made up from the president's special and at 12:30 the president, Mrs. McKinley, Miss Barber, the president's niece, Secretary Cortelyou and wife, Dr. Rixey and Mr. H. T. Scott and wife, left Del Monte for San Francisco, leaving the remainder of the presidential party at Del Monte. Only a few hundred people greeted the president upon his arrival in this city. His coming was not generally known and only those who chanced to see the bulletins posted by the newspapers announcing that the president would reach the city at 4 p. m. awaited his train. The president, in order to avoid the crowd that was expected to assemble at the Southern Pacific depot at Third and Townsend streets, left the train with his little party at Valencia street, a station in the southern part of the city. When the train, consisting of a baggage car and the president's special coach, stopped at Valencia street, Mrs. McKinley was carried in a steamer chair by two colored porters from the private car to a closed carriage in waiting. She was heavily veiled and the president and Dr. Rixy followed close behind. Mrs. McKinley was gently placed in the carriage and the president and Dr. Rixey took seats in the same vehicle. The president was Quite Pale and Looked Serious.

The rest of the party followed in carriages. Mr. and Mrs. Scott had arrived at their residence ahead of the president and were waiting to receive their distinguished guests. Mrs. McKinley was again lifted out of the carriage and placed in an invalid chair and carried into the house.

Secretary Cortelyou, when questioned concerning Mrs. McKinley's condition, stated that there was nothing alarming in her present indisposition and that perfect quiet and rest for a few days would restore her to her usual health. It was the impression, however of those who saw Mrs. McKinley that she is very ill and that her present state may result in an entire change of the president's program. Should his wife's health improve, the president will carry out his intention to attend the celebration at San Jose to-day. If, however, her condition is no better, the president will not leave his wife's bedside, but will allow the cabinet officers and others of his party to represent him at San Jose. At 6 o'clock last night Dr. Rixey made the following statement:

"Mrs. McKinley stood the trip from Del Monte much better than I expected. Her condition is not serious. She will stay here at least a week and have perfect rest. I think by that time she will be able to continue the journey. She has been gaining strength all afternoon."

TROLLEY CAR RUNS AWAY.

Over One Hundred Passengers Receive Injuries.

New York, May 14.—An open trolley car in which were packed about 115 persons got away from the motorman near Fort Lee, N. J., and dashed down Leonia Hill. Every person on the car was bruised, three are seriously hurt, but only one is likely to die. Frank Sunstruck, the conductor, it is feared may lose his life on account of possible internal injuries, and J. E. Robinson and his wife of this city are the two others who were seriously hurt. The heavily loaded car had started down an incline a quarter of a mile in length when the motorman lost control. It was going so fast no one dared to jump. The road is a winding one. At the foot of the hill it curved sharply. When the front trucks hit the curve they started around it and made it. The rear ones followed part of the way. The wrench upon the car, however, as it swung around, was so great that the body was lifted and torn from the trucks and rolled over on the ground. The passengers were caught in under the car and piled up in a heap.

CONSPIRACY CHARGED.

Doctor Is Said to Have Wanted to Kill His Wife.

Philadelphia, May 14. — Dr. Thomas Eldridge was arrested, charged with conspiracy to kill his wife. Several days ago the police were notified by Paul Schroeder, a private detective, that he had been employed by Dr. Eldridge to procure two letters from Eldridge's wife, who had left him. Schroeder asserted that the doctor wanted him to inject morphine into Mrs. Eldridge, and if he was unable to secure the letters by that means Eldridge said he would furnish the detective with a stick of dynamite to blow up the house in which Mrs. Eldridge resided.

EASTMAN IS NOT GUILTY.

Harvard Professor Acquitted on Charge of Murdering His Brother-in-Law, Grogan.

Cambridge, Mass., May 14.—After a long and dramatic trial Charles R. Eastman, the Harvard instructor, was acquitted on the charge of murdering his brother-in-law, Richard H. Grogan, Jr., while at target practice on July 4, last. The jury, after listening for nearly three weeks to a mass of testimony, followed by two days of argument, debated five and a half hours before reaching a verdict. When the verdict was announced there was a demonstration among the 150 spectators which the court officers were entirely unable to suppress for some minutes. The young man's father, who had stood loyally by his side through the long strain, and who had spared no expense in lawyers and experts to clear his son of the charge, was the first to press his hand as he stepped from the prisoner's cage. Before the jury left their seats Eastman went over and shook hands with each one, and then passed out into an anteroom where he was greeted by his relatives and friends.

MURDERED HIS WIFE.

Fiendish and Brutal Deed of a Wealthy Farmer.

Bloomington, Ill., May 14. — On a farm near this city yesterday Merritt Chism killed his wife. As she was starting to church in a buggy with the two little daughters of Chism, her stepdaughters, a quarrel arose. Chism jumped into the buggy and with a knife cut his wife's face and neck. He then threw her into the road, jumped upon her and stabbed her repeatedly. Her son, Harvey Freeland, aged twelve, struck at Chism with a ball bat. Chism wrested the bat from the lad and struck his wife three times with it, smashing her skull and dashing out her brains. Then he tried again to stab the woman. Harvey caught the hand in which was the knife. Chism drew the knife through Harvey's hand, almost severing the fingers and stabbed Harvey in the arm. Chism then fled across the fields and tried to drown himself in a stock well. The water was not deep enough and he climbed out and went to the house of a son, where he tried to kill himself with a revolver. The son prevented this and took Chism to Bloomington, where he gave himself up to the sheriff. Chism is one of the wealthiest farmers in the county. He is a man of quick temper, but had never before been guilty of crime. He is forty-nine years old.

COLORED MAN'S HEROISM.

Losses His Life by Giving His Friend First Chance at Escape.

Indianapolis, May 14.—William Phelps of Richmond, Ky., and James Stansbury of this city were cleaning the inside of an eight-foot upright boiled at the cerealine mills yesterday afternoon when an employe turned on the steam, thinking the cock was tight. It leaked and the scalding steam poured in on the two men. The only exit was up a ladder to a manhole in the top. Both jumped for the ladder. Phelps reached it first, took one step and stopped. He jumped aside and shouted "You go first Jim, you are married." Stansbury sprang up the ladder and escaped with slight burns about the face and legs. Though Phelps followed at his heels his act of heroism cost him his life. Both men were being cooked when Phelps jumped aside. By the time he had followed Stansbury up the ladder the flesh was dropping from his limbs. He was cooked alive and with supreme effort dragged his scalded body from the manhole. He lived for two hours in terrible agony but did not let a groan escape him. "It was Jim's right to go first," he said, quietly. "He is married." Phelps has been boarding at Stansbury's house. Both men are colored.

FREE SPEECH IS ALLOWED.

Point for Which Detroit Crowds Rioted Has Been Gained.

Detroit, May 14.—Mayor William C. Maybury and Director of Police Frank C. Andrews held a conference which resulted in a peaceful solution of the matters which have been disturbing the city since Mr. Andrews became the head of the police department. Mr. Andrews agreed that he would take no action relative to the suppression of free speech on the campus martius by single tax orators or others without first consulting the mayor. The mayor announced that he would make a speech on the campus. As a result about 7,000 people gathered there to hear him. There were no police present and there was no disorder. Mr. Maybury addressed the crowd from Tom Bowden's single tax wagon, and urged the people to make no demonstration such as was witnessed Friday night, saying it was not the intention of the authorities to restrict free speech. The crowd gave the mayor several hearty cheers and gradually dispersed before the tax orator had time to return to his argument.

KILL WRONG MAN.

Revengeful Mob Slays an Innocent Negro.

Birmingham, Ala., May 14.—An unknown negro, supposed to be James Brown, who was charged with assaulting a woman at Springville, was shot and killed by a crowd of white men near Leeds, twelve miles from here. The coroner expressed the opinion that the wrong man was killed.

TRIAL OF BARROWS IS FINISHED.

Verdict Not Yet Announced in the Minneapolis Man's Case.

Manila, May 14.—The trial of Capt. Frederick J. Barrows, of the Thirtieth volunteer infantry, quartermaster of the department of Southern Luzon, on charges connected with the commissary scandals, has been finished. The verdict has not been announced.

SWEPT BY FLAMES

$800,000 WORTH OF PROPERTY DESTROYED NEAR DETROIT.

West Bank of the Rouge River in Delray Swept for a Distance of Three-quarters of a Mile—Western Union Telegraph Company Loses $600,000 Worth of Cedar Poles — Firemen Were Powerless to Check the Flames and Devoted Their Attention to Preventing It Spreading—Glare of the Fire Illuminated the Sky for Miles.

Detroit, Mich., May 14.—Fanned by a thirty-five-mile-an-hour wind, fire yesterday afternoon swept the west bank of the Rouge river in Delray, a suburb to the south of Detroit, for three-quarters of a mile, and destroyed over $800,000 worth of property. Following are the losses:

Salliotte & Ferguson, lumber mill, $50,000, covered by insurance; Brownlee & Co.'s sawmill, salt block and part of their stock of lumber, $45,000, insurance $15,000; the Western Union Telegraph company, loss on cedar poles stored in a yard which was swept by flames, about $600,000, insurance unknown; Carkin, Stickney & Cram, loss on dredge which was tied up at the dock, $70,000, insurance unknown; Maltby Lumber company, cedar poles and sawmill, $50,000, insurance $25,000.

The fire originated shortly after 1 o'clock in the roof of the Salliotte & Ferguson mill. The mill had not been running for several months and the roof was as dry as tinder. The building was soon in ashes and the fire swept across a dock to where dredge No. 5, of the Carkin, Stickney & Cram fleet of dredges, was tied up. Despite efforts to save her this craft was burned to the water's edge. Great embers were picked up by the wind and dropped on the roof of Brownlee & Co.'s mill and Salt block and both these buildings were destroyed. Delary has a very small fire department and a call for help was sent to the Detroit department which responded with three engines and the fire boat Battle. Even the great streams from the fire boat the flames which were rolling down the river bank for hundreds of feet. From the Brownlee property the fire jumped over into the large yard which the Western Union Telegraph company used as a storage point for its cedar telegraph poles. The yard is the distributing point for ten states and over 100,000 poles were stored there. The fire swept through the great yard, which comprises about eight acres, in less than two hours, but the poles blazed until far into the night. The streams from the fire boat Battle were centered on this yard but they had no effect in staying the flames. The four-inch streams were turned into steam almost before they reached the burning piles of poles.

Were Powerless to Check

The plant of the Maltby Lumber company was the last one on the river bank, and it was soon destroyed, together with a large stock of cedar poles which was stored in the yard.

When darkness fell the glare from the burning poles illuminated the sky for miles. The firemen worked on the fire almost all night but it was only to keep it from spreading to other property, for they realized that it would simply have to burn itself out in the Western Union storage yards.

While this fire was burning the lumber yard of G. A. Raupp & Co. in Ecorse, about a mile from Delray, was set on fire by sparks from a passing engine and 500,000 feet of lumber was destroyed. The loss is about $75,000, covered by insurance.

FIGHT DUEL TO DEATH.

California Sheriff and Constable Locate Two Escaped Prisoners and Have a Fight.

Adin, Cal., May 14.—Sheriff Behrens, Reding, Cal., arrived here Saturday morning on the track of Dorland and Illingsworth, two prisoners who escaped from the Shasta county jail on April 9. The constable of Alturas, H. S. Walker, met Sheriff Behrens at Adin and they located the prisoners about three miles north of Adin. A hand-to-hand combat ensued. Dorland was killed, probably by a bullet from his companion, as he was between the sheriff and Illingsworth. Dorland did not shoot as the sheriff had him covered, but Illingsworth shot fifteen or twenty times, three bullets piercing the sheriff's clothing. Constable Walker was shot through the top of the left hip, probably fatally. Illingsworth escaped. Dorland's remains were taken to Adin.

PROVE THERE IS NO QUARREL.

Duke and Duchess of Marlborough Active and Conspicuous in London Society.

London, May 14.—The duke and duchess of Marlborough have taken an active and conspicuous part in the Primrose league meetings this week, always appearing together, as if to emphasize that there was no truth in the recent stories of a serious misunderstanding between them. At the reception which Mrs. Elschoffsheim gave to the league Thursday evening, among the prominent people grouped about the hostess were the duke and duchess of Marlborough.

STAY ON BOARD THREE WEEKS.

Steamer Held in Quarantine With Seven Hundred Persons.

Montreal, May 14. — The steamship Lake Superior, from Liverpool for Montreal, is quarantined at Grosse Isle for twenty-one days with smallpox on board. She has 700 passengers.

BIG STRIKE THREATENED.

150,000 Machinists Directly and 500,000 Metal Workers Indictly Involved.

Washington, May 14. — A general strike involving directly 150,000 machinists and indirectly 500,000 men in metal working trades is expected to take place on May 20 unless some arrangement is effected in the meantime. This is the statement made by President James O'Connell of the International Association of Machinists, who has his headquarters in this city. The demands of the men, the refusal of which threatens to precipitate the strike, Mr. O'Connell said, are for a working day of nine hours and an increase of 12 1-2 per cent in wages or in other words ten hours' pay for nine hours' work.

SULTAN DEFIES THE POWERS.

Turkish Ruler Practically Charges the Envoys With Smuggling.

Constantinople, May 14—A third note, evidently emanating direct from the sultan, was delivered to the ambassadors, demanding in peremptory language the immediate suppression of the foreign postoffices and reiterating the charges of smuggling against foreign officials. The ambassadors immediately returned the note to the porte, thus creating a partial cessation of relations between the embassies and the Turkish government.

KILLED BY A COLLISION.

Two Young People Dead and Five Seriously Injured.

New York, May 14. — Of twenty-six young people who started from College Point, L. I., Saturday night on what is locally known as a "starlight" ride, two were carried home yesterday morning dead, five are in the hospital, four were allowed to leave the hospital after having their wounds dressed and every one of the remainder was more or less bruised. A collision with a trolley car caused the accident.

FILIPINOS LEARNING ENGLISH.

Natives Evince a Desire to Adjust Themselves to New Conditions.

Manila, May 14.—Gov. Goldman states that municipal governments have been established throughout the Province of Bataan, with the exception of a few towns in the western part. Schools have been established everywhere and the english language is being eagerly studied. The natives display great aptness in adjusting themselves to the new conditions.

MORE OUTRAGES IN MACEDONIA.

Turkish Authorities Continue the Policy of Shooting Revolutionists.

Vienna, May 14.—A dispatch to the Abendblatt from Constantinople announces the wholesale shooting of revolutionary Macedonians, including women. Twenty-four persons were executed at Monastir, fourteen at Berin, eighteen at Jating, eighteen at Seres, and twenty-nine at Uskub.

Assaulted a Comrade.

Orville, Ohio, May 14.—Louis Deman, a member of Company D, Second United States infantry, surrendered himself to Marshal Drushall here yesterday. Deman said he had assaulted a comrade, Dennis Ferris, with a bayonet while the latter was asleep in the barracks at Columbus, Ohio, last Friday, and he feared he had killed Ferris. He said he started to run away but concluded it would be best to return and take the consequences. He was held awaiting the orders of the commandant of the post at Columbus.

Aborigine Musical Artists.

Fargo, N. D., May 14.—Fargo will not have a band of Indians as one of the attractions at the fire festival. It had been decided to bring a number here from Standing Rock. There were many protests on the ground that the red men were no novelty in this section. The committee is relieved of all embarrassment, however, by a hitch in securing government consent, and the money will be spent for some other attractions.

To Kill the Weeds.

Fargo, N. D., May 14.—A circular on the methods of destroying mustard and kindred weeds in young wheat and oats has been issued by Prof. H. L. Bolley of the North Dakota agricultural college. After a number of years experimenting he advises the use of copper sulphate in solutions of one pound to four gallons of water. The spraying is to be done by the machine methods.

May Join the Combine.

Moline, May 14. — The Moline Plow company, owning the second largest plow factory in the world, has given an option to New York capitalists which, if closed within the limit of sixty days, will bring this concern into the $50,000,000 plow combination and make sure its success. The company employs 1,000 men, and the option is for upward of $5,000,000.

Admitted by Esterhazy.

Brussels, May 14.—The Independence Belge publishes affidavits signed by Count Ferdinand Walsin Esterhazy before the French consul in London admitting the authorship of the Dreyfus bordereau and declaring that the bordereau was written with the connivance of Col. Sandher, ex-chief of the secret interrigence bureau.

Dewet Resumes Operations.

London, May 14.—Gen. Dewet, according to a dispatch to the Daily Mail from Pretoria, has resumed operations and is reported to have crossed into the Transvaal with 2,000 men.

Rejects a Klondike Railroad Bill.

Ottawa, May 14. — The Alaska & Northern railway bill providing for a railroad from Pyramid Harbor to Dawson has been rejected by the senate railway committee.

INDIANS GUARD PINE

INCENSED OVER THE CUTTING OF GREEN TIMBER.

Sixty Red Men Armed With Winchesters Will Hold the Logs Until They Are Rescaled and Their Claims Satisfied—Particularly Bitter Toward Agent Mercer—Alleged Fraudulent Scaling of Logs Another Source of Dissatisfaction—Want No Trouble and Are Only After Their Rights.

Park Rapids, Minn., May 14. — The tension over the cutting of green pine has become intense on the White Earth reservation, where the Indians have decided in councils to protect their interests by force, if necessary, and to prevent the lumbermen from driving the logs off the reservation until they are rescaled and paid for at green pine rates.

Parties of Indians, armed with Winchesters, have gone from Pine Point, White Earth and Twin Lakes on the White Earth reservation, to Round lake, where the logs would enter the Otter Tail river. These parties number in the aggregate about sixty men, who say they want no trouble and are after only their rights. They will hold the drive at Round lake and prevent the drivers from sending the logs down the Otter Tail until a new scale is made. Special Agent McCommas, who is at White Earth, has requested the commissioner of Indian affairs to send an expert scaler, and this request has allayed the anger of the Indians for the time being.

The Indians are incensed at Agent Mercer of Leech Lake, who, it was supposed, would look after their interests, and at the lumber companies, between whom they charge connivance and fraude. They claim that the wholesale cutting of fine standing green pine was repeatedly reported to Agent Mercer from the time it commenced in the early winter until the camps closed in the spring.

Another source of dissatisfaction on the part of the Indians is the alleged fraudulent scaling of the logs. They claim collusion between the scalers of the lumbermen and those of the agent, whereby the scale fell short millions of feet, thus defrauding them of thousands of dollars.

The old feeling of distrust toward the government is aggravated by the repeated dispatches from Washington to the press that only "5 per cent" of the total cut of pine was green, whereas the Indians, estimate that at least 75 per cent was green standing pine; and that the full confidence of the interior department was reposed in these operations. They hold that this confidence in the face of the evidence is unwarranted, and that an investigation, independent of Agent Mercer, should be granted.

PICTURE OUT OF COMMISSION.

Marinette Tricksters Forced to Stop Their Imposition on the Ignorant Poles.

Marinette, Wis., May 14. — There is general indignation here over the imposition that has been practiced on the poor and ignorant Poles of this city by means of the picture which the tricksters called the "bleeding picture." The deception was so simple and puerile that the intelligent public did not appreciate that soon the ignorant could be mystified or duped by it until the excitement in the Polish quarter, where the picture was on exhibition, had grown to alarming proportions. A wet sponge has now removed the blood stains, and the picture has been taken away by order of Rev. Fr. Papon, pastor of the Polish Catholic church.

Free Gold Ore Found.

Lead, S. D., May 14. — A very rich strike of free gold ore has just been made in the Golden Crown mine, north of this city, which is included in the big purchase of H. J. Mayham and associates of Denver. The ore is like that found by Otto P. Grantz a year ago, which went $40,000 to $50,000 per ton gold. These Denver capitalists have organized the Hidden Fortune Mining company and they propose to sink shafts on the ground purchase in quest of the Homestake ore lode.

Change of School Principals.

Excelsior, Minn., May 14. — Prof. J. W. Heckert, principal of the public schools, has resigned, to take effect at the close of the present term. He has accepted a position as principal of the schools at Renville, Minn. The board of education has selected as his successor G. H. Booth of Holmesville, Ohio, a graduate of Oberlin college.

Twelve Thousand People in Fargo.

Fargo, N. D., May 14.—Fargo's census enumerators overlooked many people according to C. A. Pettibone, who has just completed the canvass of the city for a new directory. His figures show nearly 12,000 people in the city, whereas the official census, done by inexperienced men, materialized less than 10,000.

Killed by Lightning.

Ipswich, S. D., May 14—James Adams was instantly killed by lightning. He had been to town and was on his way home, northwest of here, with a load of feed. Seeing the storm approaching, he drove into the yard of Mr. Jackson, a neighbor, but before he could alight from his wagon the bolt struck him and he fell back dead.

Forest Fire in Black Hills.

Rapid City, S. D., May 14.—A forest fire has burned over 3,000 acres of fine pine timber west of this city at a considerable loss to mine owners. The fire has been extinguished.

The toy-making industry of Germany has enjoyed great prosperity during the past few years. Cape Colony, British East India, Eastern Asia, North and South America and Australia buy German toys, and the demand seems to be increasing from year to year.

The legislature of Alabama has passed the much discussed "White House" bill, carrying an appropriation for the purchase and maintenance of the old Jefferson Davis house in Montgomery. This relic of the days of the Confederacy will now be given its proper place and made an interesting feature of the capital city of Alabama.

The death of Baron Saigo de Thorent at the age of 97 deprives the Legion of Honor of its oldest member. The baron served for many years in the French army and afterward made his home in Ireland, where he married. One of his sons served in the British army. The baron spent the latter part of his life upon an estate in the Eastern Pyrenees.

A remarkable contrast to the map in precious stones which lately astonished Paris, is the railway map on tiles, put up at York Station, in England, by the Northeastern company. It is made of white tiles, the lines being marked in black and burnt sienna. It is about six feet square, and each tile is eight inches square. The company intends to have similar maps at all important stations on its own system.

Prince Henry, consort of the Queen of Holland, is extremely busy at the present moment getting together a perfect armory of sporting guns, mostly of English manufacture, in view of his approaching trip to the island of Java, and to the remainder of the Dutch East Indies. He sails early in the month of June; that is to say, just about the time the honeymoon may reasonably be expected to have begun to wane, and will remain absent until the end of the year.

Scores of old barns in Ohio have floors and mangers of black walnut, put in fifty or seventy-five years ago, when the chief endeavor of the pioneer was to clear the dense forests for crops. So popular is black walnut furniture abroad that English and French agents buy even old barn timbers and fence rails. One of the few walnut groves left in Ohio was sold last month for export as lumber. The largest tree, eight feet in diameter at the stump, brought twelve hundred dollars.

Many of the coast towns of California instituted last year on Memorial day a unique form of tribute to the memory of our sailor dead whose unknown graves lie in the ocean. Bands of children marched to the water's edge and while singing patriotic songs strewed the sea with flowers. It is now urged that this pretty ceremony be made a national custom, and with this idea in view a circular, signed by Mrs. Armitage S. C. Forbes of Los Angeles, Cal., is being sent about, urging all interested and influential people to concur and assist in perpetuating the ceremony.

Max L. His brother secured amnesty for him, and he will return to Germany after wedding Miss Anna Franklin at Chattanooga, Tenn. He is about 30 years old and a graduate of Heidelberg. While in this country he worked as a baker, and recently had been employed at Lebanon, Ind.

The preparation of a simple and cheap artificial stone is becoming an important German industry and likely eventually to supplant brickmaking. The ingredients are only lime and sand in the proportion of from four to six parts of the latter. The materials are thoroughly mixed and shaped into blocks of the desired size. The latter are then put in a boiler, which is sealed, and submitted to a steam pressure of from 120 to 150 pounds to the square inch. This operation gives a flinty character to the blocks, making them very hard.

WANT GOV. DOLE'S SCALP.

Hawaiian Legislature Asks the President to Remove Governor.

Honolulu, May 4, via San Francisco, May 12.—The first territorial legislature of Hawaii came to an end on the evening of April 30, according to Gov. Dole, and on the next night, according to the majority of both houses. The legislature ended its existence at loggerheads with the governor all along the line, and without having passed a single one of the important measures to which the home rulers were committed except the county government act, which the governor killed by a vest pocket veto. The last act of the house on the evening of the 30th was to pass a concurrent resolution containing a memorial to President McKinley asking for the removal of Gov. Dole. He is charged with having hindered the work of the session by his hostility toward the legislature, withholding information and reports that were called for and refusing to co-operate with the lawmakers. The president is asked to use his influence in behalf of an extra session of the legislature to transact general legislation which Mr. Dole refuses to grant. The Hawaiians claim they had not had time in which to work out the plans of lawmaking they had formed in the thirty days of the regular session. In conclusion the home rulers ask that Mr. Dole be removed if the president sees no other way to bring about an extra session of the territorial legislature, declaring that the governor has acted in such a manner as to lose the confidence of a majority of the people, and charging that he has not dealt fairly with the home rule legislature. The concurrent resolution passed through both houses by large majorities. All the native home rule members voted for it.

STRUCK BY MIGHTY CLOUDBURST.

Thousands of Dollars' Worth of Damage Done in Pennsylvania.

Pittsburg, May 12.—A mighty cloudburst struck Tarentum and vicinity last night and did many thousands of dollars worth of damage in a very short time. Suddenly, without any warning, the flood gates were opened. Rain fell in torrents for one hour, barns were washed down off the hills, and in some cases were upturned against residences. Bridges were washed away, the railroad bed was washed away at Creighton and the track was covered with three feet of water for more than three miles. Telegraph and telephone poles and trees were washed down onto the tracks for a long distance and at least seven hundred cellars were flooded. People were panic-stricken when they saw the floods descending, and many moved their furniture from their homes. Before the storm abated the rain turned to hail and inside of ten minutes more than an inch of hail covered the ground for miles. Big landslides are reported from up the road and across the river on the Valley railroad, but it is not known just what the loss will be. At a late hour the waters were receding.

Lives Lost in West Virginia.

Wheeling, W. Va., May 12.—A cloudburst east of Wheeling last night caused the overflowing of Peters, Chapel's and Wood's runs, tributaries of Wheeling creek. At Triadelphia the Baltimore & Ohio tracks were covered with water for several hours and trains were held up, including two passenger trains. At Greggsville a little child was washed away and drowned. It is feared several lives were lost.

SHAMROCK II. IS LAID UP.

Damage to Yacht More Serious Than Was Thought.

Southampton, May 12.—The damage to Shamrock II. is more serious than was at first thought. The topsail and mainsail were badly torn. The moldings for the gaff are at the Clyde yards and a new one will possibly be constructed there. It is not expected that either the challenger or Shamrock I. will go out again before Monday.

ROBERTS WILL RETIRE.

English Pugilist Affected by the Death of Smith.

London, May 12.—Jack Roberts the pugilist who fatally injured Billy Smith, or Murray Livingston of Philadelphia in a contest before the National Sporting club April 22, and who was committed for trial May 2, is so affected by the death of Smith that he has announced his retirement from the ring.

LARGER CROP EXPECTED.

Yield of 100,000,000 Bushels of Kansas Wheat Predicted.

Topeka, Kan., May 12.—Conservative wheat growers estimate the yield of wheat in Kansas this year will be 100,000,000 bushels. Last year it was 76,595,443 bushels. Conditions are better than they were a year ago, and the acreage is 20 per cent greater.

GEN FRENCH FREE.

His Arrival at Cape Town Disproves Stories of Capture by Boers.

Cape Town, May 12.—Gen. French arrived here from the north last night. It is thought likely that on account of the presence of the bubonic plague the proposed visit of the duke and duchess of Cornwall and York to the Cape next August will be abandoned.

ARGENTINE SUGAR.

Additional Duty Placed Thereon by Our Government.

Washington, May 12.—Following the recent action in the case of Russia, in which an additional tariff duty was placed on sugar receiving a bounty, the treasury department has imposed an additional duty of 10 cents per kilogram upon Argentine sugar.

Store Entirely Destroyed.

Salt Lake, Utah, May 12. — The cooperative store at American Fork, Utah, was entirely destroyed by fire yesterday. Loss, $65,000.

Destruction by Fire.

Crested Butte, Colo., May 12.—A fire of incendiary origin, supposedly, destroyed several buildings in the business section of this city, causing a loss of $50,000. The Colorado Supply company was the heaviest loser.

No Proof of Bribery.

Ottawa, Ont., May 12.—The committee appointed to investigate the allegations made by H. H. Cook that he was offered a senatorship for $10,000 has made its report to the effect that the charges have not been sustained.

INDEMNITY IS FIXED

FOREIGN POWERS DEMAND 450,000,000 TAELS.

Claim Has Been Presented to the Chinese Plenipotentiaries — Chinese Officials Favor a Loan Guaranteed by the Foreign Powers—Ministers Give the Chinese to Understand That This Sum Does Not Constitute the Claim, but the Total of Expenses Including Private Claims.

Pekin, May 11.—An indemnity claim of $450,000,000 taels will be presented to the Chinese plenipotentiaries this evening. Official Chinese throughout the empire have been communicating with the court and giving advice. Most of them seem to favor a loan guaranteed by the foreign powers. Others more prominent, among whom is Chang Chi Tung, believe in raising the money in every possible way without a loan, and in paying off the entire demand within five years. The court has considered methods of raising 20,000,000 taels extra annually and provisionally approved the plan, but the Chinese plenipotentiaries have instructions to obtain a reduction of the indemnity demanded as far as possible.

Whatever the final demands of the powers may be it is not believed the opposition will be much more than a matter of form. The ministers of the powers met and decided that the Chinese should be given to understand thoroughly that the amount did not constitute the claim, but about the total of the expenses, including private claims considered fair, and was meant more to obtain an opinion from official sources as to China's ability to pay and also as to what means she would employ.

FILIPINOS ARE COMING IN.

During the Past Month Nearly Eight Hundred Riflemen Surrendered.

Manila, May 11. — Reports from the districts commanded by Gen. Bell show that 782 riflemen have surrendered during the past month. These include all of Gen. Tinio's men who had remained out and the force of the ex-priest leader, Aglipay, who surrendered at Laoag April 28, with the exception of forty men who have disobeyed their ex-leader's orders to come in, and who remain under arms in the Province of Ilocos Norte.

Capt. Barrows on Trial.

Manila, May 11.—The trial of Capt. Frederick J. Barrows of the Thirtieth volunteer infantry, quartermaster of the department of Southern Luzon, who is charged with embezzlement in selling fifty cases of bacon and in converting fifty additional cases to his own use, is proceeding before a military court presided over by a lieutenant colonel of the army. Capt. Barrows pleaded not guilty and the examination of witnesses has begun.

CANCER CURE.

Eat Boiled Yellow Corn and Drink the Water.

Centralville, Conn., May 11.—A new cancer cure of undoubted benefit is given to the world by Stephen Griggs of Brooklyn. A traveling man from Hartford was cured by Griggs some months ago. Miss Anda Surrett, a Brooklyn lady, ascribes her cure to Mr. Griggs' method. Mr. Kingsley of Plainfield has lately been under the treatment for an aggravated cancer and is said to be nearly cured. The treatment consists in eating boiled yellow corn and drinking the water in which it is boiled. No other food is allowed during the treatment. At least thirty days is necessary to complete a cure.

CANADIAN CHOSEN.

Prof. George Elected President of Chicago Theological Seminary.

Chicago, May 11.—Prof. J. H. George of Montreal, Can., has been elected president of the Chicago Theological seminary by the trustees. The seminary has been conducted under a dual system heretofore. The controlling bodies have been the board of directors and the faculty. The Rev. Dr. George was born and educated in Canada, going to Boston for the finishing of his education. He was pastor of the First Congregational church in St. Louis for seven years. Three years ago he became principal of the Congregational department of Montreal college.

CONGER AT WASHINGTON.

Looking Over the Latest Official Advices From Pekin.

Washington, May 11.—United States Minister Conger has arrived in Washington and is stopping with relatives here. He called at the state department and paid his respects to Acting Secretary Hill and Assistant Secretary Cridler. It is his preference to spend only a few days in Washington looking over dispatches that have passed between Washington and Pekin since he left the Chinese capital. He will then be in a position to advise the officials here as to any details which they may have overlooked in dealing with the situation.

KING EDWARD NOT RICH.

Hence the Necessity for a Liberal Grant in the Civil List.

London, May 11.—The king, said the chancellor of the exchequer, Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, in discussing the civil list in the house of commons, had no personal fortune, a fact which could not be too widely known. He was, therefore, dependent on the revenues of the duchy of Lancaster and parliamentary grants.

Foot Caught on the Track.

Alexander, Iowa, May 11. — Brakeman Young, on the local freight between Hampton and Algona, on the Iowa Central railroad, was killed by accidentally catching a foot in the track and being run over.

Postoffice Robbers Sentenced.

Fort Scott, Kan., May 11.—Lawrence and Miller, charged with three postoffice robberies in Kansas, pleaded guilty yesterday to robbing the Altamont postoffice. Lawrence was given four and Miller three years.

BURIED AN AXE IN HIS HEAD.

Cass Lake Man Resents a Curse and a Kick.

Cass Lake, Minn., May 11.—"Bulldog" Regan, a well known character, was yesterday cut down with an axe in the hands of Angus MacDonald. Regan was being ejected from the side door of the Tedford saloon, when he spied MacDonald coming down the walk with an axe over his shoulder. He immediately met MacDonald with a curse and a kick in the stomach. MacDonald, without a word, swung the edge of the axe at Regan's head, burying it deep into the left side, and, as Regan fell, swung the axe again and gave him the same kind of a gash on the other side. He coolly walked to the yard of the Hotel Tedford, put down the axe, picked up a rake and commenced work. He did not resist arrest, and his only explanation for the deed is that Ryan had jumped onto him repeatedly for several years past. Ryan has been unconscious ever since and his death is momentarily expected.

ATTEMPTED ASSASSINATION.

Unknown Man Takes a Shot at Mayor Ames' Secretary.

Minneapolis, May 11. — An attempt was made at 11 o'clock last night to assassinate Thomas R. Brown, private secretary to Mayor Ames. Mr. Brown's would-be slayer fired a shot at him at close range and then fled, pursued by Mr. Brown, who fired two shots at the fugitive. Later the revolver and a mask dropped by the stranger were found near the scene of the assault. While no one in particular is suspected of having made the assault it is looked upon as an outgrowth of the bitterness that has sprung up between the present administration and those that were formerly in power in the city.

LEGAL QUESTION BARS THE WAY.

It May Keep the Younger Boys in State's Prison.

St. Paul, May 11.—The legality of the Deming bill will be passed upon before the state board of pardon acts on application of the Younger brothers for a parole. The board will consider the right of Chief Justice Start to sit on the pardon board as provided by the Deming bill. A negative decision in either question may keep the Younger brothers in prison. Both of these questions may be decided at the next regular meeting of the board, July 8, or Attorney General Douglas may be asked to pass upon them in the meantime.

SENSATIONAL SUICIDE.

Mrs. Horace Barlow Drowns Herself in a Cistern at Hudson.

Hudson, Wis., May 11.—Mrs. Horace Barlow, prominent in this city, and one of the oldest settlers of the county, committed suicide by drowning herself in a cistern back of the family residence. She was fifty years of age and a graduate of Vassar college, and of high intellectual attainments. She was a victim of the morphine habit and had domestic troubles. The mouth of the cistern in which she was drowned is but eighteen inches square.

INDIAN PEST CAMP.

Doctors From the Cheyenne Agency Try to Collect Smallpox Patients.

Pierre, S. D., May 11.—Doctors Gergoldt and Wosteo are here from Cheyenne agency attempting to make arrangements to have the Indians in the smallpox camp here taken to the other side of the river and to their pest camp which has been provided on the reservation. — The supreme court has admitted Amos N. Goodman to practice in the courts of this state. His admission was on certificate from the courts of Illinois.

ANOTHER NEW COMET.

Has Well Defined Nucleus and Tail and May Be Visible Here.

Northfield, Minn., May 11. — A telegram received at Goodsell says a new comet will be visible in the northern heavens in a short time. It was seen at Cape Town, South Africa, May 3, and has a well defined nucleus and a tail about two degrees long. Dr. Wilson expects to be able to locate the comet on the horizon about sunset in a few days and has hopes that it will be visible to the naked eye.

HIGH PRICE FOR PEARLS.

Clam Fishers Gathering in Large Sums for Them.

Prairie du Chien, Wis., May 11. — never since the clam-fishing industry started here has the demand for pearls and slugs been so great and prices so high. The highest price yet paid for a pearl was paid by F. T. Runda of Milwaukee, who purchased the McCarthy pearl, found near Harpers Ferry, for $1,500. Prices are being paid accordingly for other pearls and slugs.

College Debate Called Off.

Yankton, S. D., May 11.—The interstate debate between Yankton college and the University of Mitchell has been declared off for the present on account of the smallpox scare at the latter place. This will probably also interfere with the annual college athletic meet which is advertised to take place at Mitchell the latter part of this month. In this case arrangements will probably be made to hold the meet at Sioux Falls or at some other point.

Inspected Reform Schools.

Fargo, N. D., May 11. -- President Webb and Secretary Heegard, of the state reform school board, returned from the inspection of the schools in Minnesota and South Dakota. They secured many valuable pointers for the state building to be erected at Mandan. With the $20,000 at the disposal of the board, a small building will be erected at first and a superintendent, matron and two or three instructors employed as a starter.

Rooster on the Pilot.

Rands, Iowa, May 11. — When the stock freight from Rockwell City passed through here a White Brahma rooster was seen on the pilot. He was carried to the next station and there alighted. He was short a few feathers.

Had Been in an Asylum.

Huron, S. D., May 11. — Benjamin Sellers, who committed suicide in the Sanborn county jail while awaiting examination as to his mental condition, formerly lived here and was sent to the hospital for the insane four years ago.

HEPATICA
BY JOHN BURROUGHS

When the month is in her genial mood,
And leafy smells are in the wood,
In sunny nook, by bank or brook,
Behold this lovely sisterhood.

A spirit sleeping in the mold,
And tucked about by leafage old,
Opens an eye blue as the sky,
Nor deems that she is overbold.

Before a leaf is on the tree,
Before I see the bumblebee,
She hears a voice, "Arise, rejoice,"
And in furry vestments greeteth me.

Before the oven-bird has sung,
Or thrush or chewink found a tongue,
She ventures out and looks about,
And once again the world is young.

Sometimes she stands in white array,
Sometimes as pink as dawning day,
Or every shade of azure made,
And oft with breath as sweet as May.

Sometimes she bideth all alone,
And lifts her cup beside a stone,
A child at play along the way,
When all her happy mates have flown.

Again in bands she beams around,
And brightens all the littered ground,
And holds the gaze in leafless ways—
A concert sweet without a sound.

Like robin's song or bluebird's wing,
Or throats that make the marshes ring,
Her beaming face and winsome grace
Are greetings from the heart of spring.

Persis Is Free.

BY ELIZABETH CHERRY GILMER.

(Copyright, 1901, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

The minister had finished his tea at Miss Persis Thorne's cottage. It had been a most dainty and satisfactory one and altogether to his liking. There was something that entirely suited him in that quaint little dining room. The presiding genius of it all was Miss Persis herself, tall and prim in a deep purple merino and a white apron.

The minister and Sister Susie had been dismissed to the best room and Miss Persis excused herself while she picked up the silver—consisting of five thin spoons and a butter knife. Sister Susie was the wife of a prosperous farmer a half dozen miles away. He had been too busy with the haying to come in to the "comp'ny tea." This Sister Susie explained to the minister as she sat up, stiff and neat in her black silk. Then she hemmed and hawed a little ere she said:

"Persis asked Dan'el Mannin, too, but he held it wasn't proper to go to 'comp'ny teas' when his mother was so poorly."

"Is that the old lady over on the other road?" asked the minister politely, "I made a call there yesterday but she was asleep. She is in a bad way, I believe."

"She's been in a bad way for twenty years," snapped Sister Susie decisively, "or thinks she is. She's the longest dyin' I ever heered of, Mr. Bell."

The minister looked at her in mild reproach. "I don't 'spose I'd feel so hard if it wasn't so bad for Persis here. Some one else 'll tell you if I don't," she went on. "Its better for one's minister to understand things from the family. Persis has been engaged to Dan'el for twenty-one years. His mother made 'im promise he would never marry while she lived, an' it's twenty-one years now."

"This is a grave matter."

Out of his amazement the minister said, faintly: "Miss Persis must have been pretty young then."

"She was seventeen," retorted Sister Susie, "and she didn't know any more what she wanted than a six month's old baby. I tell you it is a shame, an' what trouble it has been to us, Brother Bell, no tongue can tell. Dan'el is stubborn, and bossy, and oneasy. He wants to act like Persis was his wife, an' he won't marry her on no 'count while his mother lives. He wants to come here any time of day an' tell 'er what to do. He objected to this tea an' we put it off and put it off ever since you come until it was making talk. So I said to Persis, 'Persis, the time has come for you to make a stand. Dan'el either marries you or lets you alone until his mother dies. He can't be runnin' in here any hour or bossin' round. You ain't showing the proper speerit. It looks bad to town folks and it must look bad to folks comin' in. What d'ye suppose the new minister 'll say?' And she says, 'I wish you'd ask him. He is a man of God. Ask his advice for me. I can't see my way clear. I thought I was doing my duty.'"

The pale face of the man was colored for an instant with a real blush.

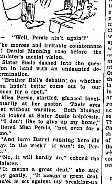
"I thank Miss Persis for her trust."

Sister Susie twisted her fat hands nervously. "She hasn't seen how it was lookin'. Dan'el's tryin' to act as if he owned her now. It ain't in reason and Henry and me wants Persis to give up and come live with us for a spell or until old Miss Manning does die or somethin' happens. What d'ye think?"

"I must consider, Mrs. Huggins. This is a grave matter."

"So 'tis," acquiesced Sister Susie, "so 'tis, as I'm tellin' you."

They both sat quietly for some minutes and were silent when Miss Persis tripped down the hall and came in with a sorrowful smile if there is such a thing. She was still suggestive of youth and her atmosphere was that of pathetic repression and patience.



— "Well, Persis ain't agoin'!"

The morose and irritable countenance of Daniel Manning rose before the minister's mental vision.

Sister Susie dashed into the question in hand with an undaunted determination.

"Brother Bell's debatin' on whether you hadn't better come out to our house for a spell."

Miss Persis, startled, glanced involuntarily at her pastor. Their eyes met without warning. Both blushed and looked at Sister Susie helplessly.

"I don't like to give up my home," faltered Miss Persis, "not even for a time."

"And have Dan'el running here six days in the week? It won't do, Persis."

"No, it will hardly do," echoed the minister.

"It means a great deal," she said very gently. "It means a great deal. Dan'el is set against my breaking-up. He says he won't have it."

"Then he must at once get married. Such authority is that of a husband alone."

The tears were running down Sister Susie's face.

"O Brother Bell," she said brokenly, "that's the way to talk to her. Persis is such a good, patient girl."

"I didn't mean—to be anything but faithful—" gasped the figure in the purple merino. "It's so long."

"Too long," said the minister gently and with a strange huskiness in his voice, "you are not the one to blame, perhaps. You were willing to marry him long since."

"It was his mother," sighed Persis, "he had to consider his mother."

"At a sacrifice of your life," said the minister. Then he stood up and came over to the table, "but, my sisters, we will pray for guidance."

As they arose from their knees the younger woman stumbled toward her sister and fell on her shoulder.

"Take me home, Susie, take me home."

* * * * *

The second morning after this Daniel Manning drove over the white and dusty roads towards Curnee. A half mile this side was the white cottage of Miss Persis Thorne. There was a large farm wagon in front of the house door and two men were carrying out furniture, boxes and a trunk. One of these was Henry Huggins, Persis' brother-in-law, a man he detested.

"Where's Persis?" said Daniel in the same tone he used to his farm hands.

Henry lifted a little red rocker into the wagon that Daniel knew very well as Persis' especial favorite. Then he stopped and looked at Daniel.

"She's livin' with us now."

"But I want Persis to go over to the house. Mother's dead—died last night."

The florid face of the farmer grew redder. He planted his feet firmly and looked at Daniel.

"Well, Persis ain't a-goin'—so there!"

"I'm goin' straight over after 'er. We kin be married now."

"When?"

"O—after the funeral—an' mother did want me to wait a year."

Henry gave him a look of the utmost contempt.

"It never will be if me and Susie has our way," he said, "an' ye shall never darken my door."

"I'll see Persis."

"Mebbe—mebbe not. She's a free agent."

Daniel climbed into his buggy and gathered up the reins. "I'm going straight out to your house," he cried, but the words died on his lips. Persis and her sister appeared on the doorsteps. He jumped down and ran to the women. Habit made him harsh in speech.

"What's this foolishness, Persis?" he cried, "Mother's dead—died last night. Everything will be all right."

Persis turned on him her gravest look. "I feel sorry for you, Daniel," she said, "but other things are dead too. I am going home with Susie, and the minister has rented the cottage. I wish you well but do not come to see me."

"But, Persis," he began.

"Hesh up!" said Henry Huggins, "you've got yer dead to bury an' no time to be worryin' roun' here. You're twenty years too late an' I'm mighty glad Persis has broken the rusty chain an' can be herself. Go long now. Persis is free."

LADY POOL-PLAYERS.

Watching a Game at the Billiard-Room of the Waldorf.

While it is pretty generally known that there are many clever billiard and pool players among the women of the city, and the skill of several of these is a matter of gossip in the social circles in which they move, there is but one place where they are privileged to play in public, says the New York Times. This is in the billiard room of the Waldorf, and the appearance of a party of ladies playing pool with their escorts is generally a cause for a display of rather well-bred curiosity. Quite recently in a party of four, two of whom were ladies, there was an exhibition that called forth the manifest approval of quite a party of ladies who were watching the game. One of the players was a miss who was hardly more than twenty, neatly gowned, and with her hair dressed in the severe style of the ancient Greeks that artists so much admire. As the game progressed it became her turn to break the balls. It was a game of fifty points and she announced her intention of pocketing a named ball in the upper left hand corner pocket. The shot was true, the ball fell into the designated pocket, and a second fell in the side pocket. The break was a good one, and then one after another she drove the balls into the pockets until there was but one left. This was in a bad spot, so that the only possible shot was a side pocket after playing twice across the table. Nothing daunted, the miss called the shot, played deliberately, and made it as cleverly as De Oro could have done. She had cleaned the table without a miss, and as the last shot was made the throng watching her broke into applause in spite of themselves as a recognition due the young woman with whom they had no acquaintance. Such as knew her personally of course congratulated her. The player was a debutante of the Chicago season, moving in the most exclusive circles, and the daughter of one of the most daring operators on the Board of Trade, a man who counts his wealth in the millions and whose name commands respect in the highest business circles.

PRETTY WILD IN MONTANA.

Still the Natives Manage to Pull Along All Right.

"I suppose things are pretty wild out your way?" he queried of the man who had admitted that he was from Montana.

"Well, yes, you might call them wild,' was the reply.

"And every day brings its thrilling adventure?"

"One has an adventure now and then, of course, as might be expected."

"Anything thrilling happened to you of late?" persisted the questioner.

"Why, I don't know that you'd call it thrilling exactly. I sat in my library a few evenings ago reading, while my wife was playing on the piano in the parlor and my little daughter was in the conservatory gathering hot-house roses. All at once I heard a crash—"

"Injuns attacking the house, by George!' interrupted the other.

"I heard a crash from the grand salon, and, carefully laying aside my book and walking in there with languid step, I found—"

"A grizzly bear of course!"

"I found that one of my three old masters of Rubens had fallen down and knocked the nose off a piece of statuary that cost me $8,000 in Florence."

"And there were no Injuns!"

"No."

"And no grizzly?"

"No."

"Not even a rattlesnake?"

"No. It was simply the fall of a picture and a broken nose; I called in the butler, the footman and the housemaid, and the debris was soon cleared away."

"And you—you—" stammered the man who had been waiting to thrill.

"Nothing more, except that a carload of tapestries and foreign bric-a-brac arrived an hour later, and a few friends came in to sample some French wine at $7 a bottle. Yes, things are pretty wild out our way, but we manage to pull along somehow."—Utica Globe.

His Trip Awheel.

A devotee of the bicycle started southward on his wheel at the beginning of winter. Several weeks afterward he reached Florida, none the worse for his journey. "Do you mean to tell me," exclaimed the friend whom he had gone to visit, "that you made the entire distance by wheel?" "Certainly," he replied. "When I couldn't ride the machine I got off and walked by it." The reader will perceive that there is more than one way to travel "by wheel."—Youth's Companion.

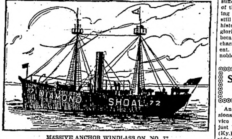
CAPE HATTERAS SHOAL.

Stanch Lightship Set to Guard This Ocean Graveyard.

Sailors say that there are two graveyards in the Atlantic, one off Sable Island and the other at Cape Hatteras. The wrecks that strew the sea bottom around the little piece of land between the Grand banks and the mainland are mostly caused by the dense fogs that prevail most of the year, misleading the skippers westward and eastward bound, until too late they find themselves upon the rocks. Fog is only a lesser peril of Hatteras weather. The cape is know the seven seas over as the worst of storm centers. The fury of its winds, the sweep of its terrible cross-seas and the treachery of its lurking shoals are a byword in the mouth of every deep-sea sailor. It is here that the government has just set the new and powerful lightship, No. 72, stanchest of its kind, to warn ships from the invisible perils of the coast.

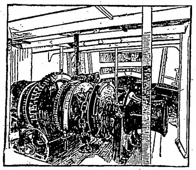
The dangers of Hatteras are generally unseen. Even in fine weather the water at high tide entirely conceals the reefs of jagged rock upon which many a ship has beaten herself to pieces. But fine weather is rare thereabouts. Seldom does the sun rise clear upon the low sand spit running far out into the ocean. Every storm that reaches the coast seems to seek out Hatteras for the display of its greatest violence. During a northeast or southeast gale its rocky, seaward stretching ledges turn the ocean currents into a vortex; and then there is no spot in the oceans of the world more to be feared. Tremendous cross-seas rise and sweep the waters for many miles out to sea. A real Hatteras storm often extends its influence between two and three hundred miles outward.



MASSIVE ANCHOR WINDLASS ON NO. 72.

Menace to the Navigator.

If the reefs of Hatteras were situated at a different point on the coast line the cape would not have its evil reputation. But they lie in wait at the most easterly point of the South Atlantic coast, and vessels bound to and fro between southern ports and such cities as New York and Philadelphia, as well as the fleet of steamships which load at gulf cities for Europe and coal at Norfolk and Newport News, must pass close by. The cape is also close to the direct route between South Atlantic ports and Great Britain, and if a ship captain loses his reckoning even by a few miles he is liable to come dangerously near it.



Since the first American monitor went to the bottom of the sea off Cape Hatteras hundreds of crafts, from the fishing smacks to the liner, have been its victims, and thousands of lives have been lost in its stormy waters. Realizing this constant menace to the navigator, the government has spent millions of dollars trying to find something which will give suitable warning to ships. Time and again lighthouses have been planned, and the work gotten well under way, but sooner or later, often after months of work, the treacherous quicksands have engulfed the most solid foundations and sometime a single night of storm has demolished the structure. Floating buoys of various kinds have been tried, but these have also been quickly washed away. After careful consideration, the United States lighthouse board decided to have a lightship constructed which would be strong enough to withstand the heaviest seas and provide illumination which could be seen at a long distance on the stormiest night.

First Ship a Failure.

The first ship tried wasn't of sufficiently heavy caliber. The artillery of the seas was too much for her, and one night she was torn from her moorings and landed high and dry on the beach, the crew just escaping with their lives. No. 72 had just been finished and was sent direct to Hatteras. She is much larger than the other vessel and the workmen in the yards at Quincy, Mass., where she was built, had orders to put the very best material into the hull and machinery and to take time enough to drive every bolt and rivet home. She is 112 feet in length and quite shallow, being about 20 feet in depth. The hull, made of the best steel, is divided into five watertight compartments by bulkheads of the same material, so that if the water should fill three of these, the other two would keep her afloat. Partly to strengthen her hull, she is given three decks built almost as strongly as those of a warship in order to resist the tremendous strain when rocking in the waves. The quarters for the captain, officers and crew are on the main deck, while the coal bunkers and other supplies are below. As the officers and men must remain sometimes for five or six weeks without seeing anyone or being relieved, the government has tried to make their surroundings as homelike as possible.

STANCHEST LIGHTSHIP AFLOAT.

Steam heat and electric lights are provided in each cabin, and the furniture, carpets and fittings would be a credit to a mansion. The ship is equipped with refrigerating apparatus, and has also a plant for distilling water so that an ample supply of ice can be maintained in the summer months as well as an abundance of pure water.

Anchor and the Light.

To hold the lightship on her station powerful apparatus was provided. She has what is known as a harbor anchor, weighing 2,000 pounds, large enough for an ordinary liner. This is connected by a chain whose links are 1¼ inches thick, calculated to stand a strain of 79,000 pounds. Beside the anchor, there is what is known as a wedge anchor, weighing 350 pounds, which works as a sort of steering gear to keep the vessel head on to the waves in a heavy storm. In order to give her plenty of room to ride the waves, 720 feet of anchor chain is provided. The anchors are raised and lowered by steam, the ship being equipped with special engines. Electricity furnishes the illumination for the lanterns which are arranged upon two steel masts at a height of 50 feet above the water line. Each mast contains a cluster of six arc lamps, each of 100 volts. On a clear night their rays can be seen a distance of twenty miles, while in stormy weather it is calculated that the captain of a ship ten miles distant can see them through his field glasses, as they have an attachment which produces a vivid flash every half minute. The electric current is generated by a set of powerful dynamos operated by steam engines.

No. 72 is provided with steam as a motive power, in case she should break loose from her moorings. Her engines are as large as those in an ocean tug of the first class and, it is believed, will enable her to battle successfully with average northeasters. She is equipped with a mainsail, foresail and jib, principally to steady her in a gale of wind. There is no danger of her being mistaken for any other craft. The letters on her side are about ten feet in height and on a clear day can be seen at a distance of several miles in themselves.

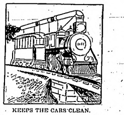
FIRST OPERATIC SUCCESS.

Verdi, Although Sick, Got Good Price for First Opera.

"Nabucodonosor" was played with the most brilliant success at the Scala on March 9, 1842. Verdi was not at the performance. He simply went to the theater at the close of the piece, noted the success of his work, returned to his garret and went to bed. He was still sleeping when, at dawn, there was a knock at his door. Merelli entered. Knowing that several of his confreres would be sure to make propositions to Verdi, he determined to be the early bird. The conditions of the garret convinced him that he had a first-class chance to make a good bargain, and he remembered that Donizetti sold his "Elizire d'Amore" for 500 francs. "How much do you want for your opera?" he asked. "Thirty thousand francs," said Verdi. Merelli started. "What did you say?" he gasped. "I said 30,000 francs," replied Verdi, with the greatest coolness, "because you got up at 5 o'clock in the morning to come to see me. This evening the price will be 50,000. After some discussion Merelli handed over his check, after which he went home and took to his bed, where he remained for two months suffering from jaundice. On account of that jaundice he became the laughing stock of all Milan, and old artists still speak of it. The rest of Verdi's history is known. No one merited the glorious triumphs more than he did, because his heart, his mind and his character reached the heights of talent. His generous soul was vast and noble, like his genius.

SMOKE AND CINDER CONVEYOR.

An annoyance of no small dimensions seems to be overcome by the device illustrated herewith, which has just been patented by four Louisville (Ky.) inventors. The object is to provide a conductor which will receive the cinders and gases from the stack of a locomotive and discharge them at the rear end of the train, the purpose of this device being to prevent the smoke and cinders from coming in contact with the cars or passengers. A subordinate object is to provide for the direct passage of the smoke when the engine is at a standstill, which is accomplished by placing a hinged cap directly over the vertical stack, with means for opening it from the cab of the engine. The conveyor is formed of a number of individual sections placed horizontally on top of the car, with means for automatically joining the sections together when the cars are brought into conjunction. Recent experiments have shown that a large percentage of the coal is wasted in small particles, which are discharged through the stack with the smoke, and as this smoke conveyor would arrest a large proportion of this waste it might also be advantageous from an economical point of view as well as aiding in keeping the passengers free from travel stain and their eyes unaffected by cinders when they desire to look through the open windows.



KEEPS THE CARS CLEAN.

Where Cleveland Played Pinochle.

If there is an humbler game than pinochle I have never played it, and do not know its name. If ever there was a prouder man than Grover Cleveland I have never played him, and do not know his name. Therefore, the combination of pinochle and Mr. Cleveland is irresistibly fascinating to the student of cards and biography. Jove spinning a peg-top would be less diverting. Some of the millions expected to visit the Pan-American exposition this year will not leave Buffalo without inquiring for the little back room in Pearl street where the Man of Destiny played for the drinks with a coterie of familiars numbering about a dozen choice spirits. He generally won. Fifty feet from the front door of Joe Goetz's place, as it is today, is a mark across the floor, showing where stood the wooden partition dividing the front of the room from the rear and forming one side of the historic den. It is said that in deference to the ex-president Joe had the partition removed.—New York Press.

MAY 31.

Graduating Exercises to Be Held Here.

Prof. James A. Wilson is making extensive preparations for the graduating of a class of about twenty students from the grammar department into the high school. The event will take place on Friday evening, May 31, and it is the intention to have the exercises in the Odd Fellows hall. A speaker of state reputation will be here to deliver the commencement day address, and a musical program will be rendered. This will be the first time in the history of Thief River Falls that exercises of this nature will be held here, and we hope it will mark an epoch when more interest is taken in the public schools by the people residing here.

Better Than Gold Mines.

We read in the old books thousands of years old of the golden fleece and of the sheep's foot that turns all it touches into gold, says The Sheep Breeder. And some of us may think that there is nothing else in the world but gold that is worth the trouble to get and that the sheep's foot story is only a sort of fake to amuse people with. But the facts are that the profits from the sheep are far greater than those made from the gold mines. It is estimated that a gold dollar costs to get more than its worth in labor, which is unquestionably true when we figure up the worth of the labor spent in gold mining all over the world. But figures, which do not lie, go to show that the profits derived from the sheep in Colorado are more than is made from all the gold mines in the state. Indeed net income from the sheep in the United States every year is far greater than the total income from all the mines of gold and silver combined. While the profit of the mines is only once for all, the sheep leaves in the world behind it the capital invested in it to accumulate, and still keep up returning profit from increase. More wealth has been gathered from the pastures of the west by the golden hoofed sheep than has been collected from the gold mines at such enormous cost of labor and life and money spent in the getting of it. Let us cherish the sheep.

Influence of Environment.

Plants and animals transported to climates differing widely from that under which they have grown for a long time slowly but surely change their habits to conform to environments. That is why the finest wooled sheep cannot be grown in warm climates. Where the weather is mild sheep have no use for dense masses of fine clothing and gradually discard such for short and straggling hair.—Texas Farm and Ranch.

THE SOUL DEPARTED

Sweet love of youth, forgive if I forget thee
  While the world's tide is bearing me along;
Other desires and other hopes beset me,
  Hopes which obscure, but cannot do thee wrong.

No later light has lightened up my heaven;
  No second morn has ever shown for me;
All my life's bliss from thy dear life was given;
  All my life's bliss is in the grave with thee.

But when the days of golden dreams had perished,
  And even Despair was powerless to destroy;
Then did I learn how existence could be cherished,
  Strengthened and fed without the aid of joy.

Then did I check the tears of useless passion—
  Weaned my young soul from yearning after thine;
Sternly denied its burning wish to hasten
  Down to that tomb already more than mine.

And even yet I dare not let it languish,
  Dare not indulge in memory's rapturous pain;
Once drinking deep of that divinest anguish,
  How could I seek the empty world again?
—EMILY BRONTE.

A Trifle Short.

"Marechal Niels—three dollars a dozen! Rather dear; but hang it, so is she!" he inwardly mused. Outwardly he said:

"Yes, I'll take the dozen—this note is to go with them, the address is on it. Be sure it don't get lost." If his pocket was lighter, so was his heart as he left the florist's shop and went to his law office.

There were two of them; and one of her. Each hoped he was the right one, yet was not quite sure. Indeed, she was scarcely sure herself. One represented wealth, ease, station—the things she had been taught were the ultima thule of human existence. The other represented—she scarcely dared say what; but when he was near her pulses thrilled as if a strange sweet secret were about to be revealed—and afterward dreams—such dreams as maids from princess to peasant have dreamed—haunted her pillow persistently.

"Did I sign that note?" Hollister asked of his Code as he went over it an hour later—"seems to me I wrote my name in full, Arthur Sullivan Hollister, I think I recall how the H looked. Yes, I'm sure I signed it all right." And he tried to go back to his brief with a quiet soul.

To be sure he had signed the note in a way. "A. S. H." might mean Arthur Sullivan Hollister; and it doubtless would if Croesus hadn't been in the case. "Croesus" she called him that to keep well in mind what he represented. But on 'Change where he dwelt with others of his kind, he passed as Anthony Semmes Hudson—and when that name was signed to a check, it went!

She adored roses—most of all Marechal Niels; and as she inhaled their fragrance in luxurious whiffs she read the note:

"These will tell you what you are to me. Wear them at Mrs. De Land's tomorrow night and I will know that you have read their message aright.
"A. S. H."

"A. S. H." that meant Anthony Semmes Hudson—Croesus, of course. Roses were three dollars a dozen—nobody else—and she took a hasty inventory of her admirers—nobody else would have sent the whole dozen. It was quite plain that it must be Croesus who was minded to play flower-god.

"Croesus, of course."

He deserved a kind, a very kind note of thanks after the way she had snubbed him at the opera last night. No doubt he sent the roses to convince her that he did not cherish malice.

Before the note of thanks was written, the similarity in the initials occurred to her—could it be possible—and a warm glow suffused her cheek—no, it could not. He whom she vaguely wished might prove the right one had not time nor money for such methods of wooing. He might have stolen away from those musty law books to tell her what she was to him; but to intrust the tender secret to those flowery messengers—at three dollars a dozen! Oh, no—it was quite plain that Croesus was her Flora, and the note of thanks was speedily dispatched to him.

In the flurry of the stock exchange Croesus lost a promising batch of Erie by lingering over that scented bit of French stationery.

But Croesus could afford to lose the Erie, seeing he played for a dearer stake, and seemed to be winning, too.

"Flowers?" "thanks?" what does she mean? Well, it seems that I am in luck, and I won't give myself away at any rate." And the brokers wondered how Hudson could smile so, on top of losing the Erie.

"Your roses?"—she started.

"She might, at least, have thanked a fellow," said Hollister to his familiar demon when the day passed and no acknowledgment of his roses came to hand. "Ah, well! her life is so full of roses she has no time nor thought for me or mine. I was a fool to have fancied otherwise. What's a struggling fellow with little but love and hope—what's he to a girl like that? She was reared to measure everything by the gold standard, and women don't often stray from such training for the sake of love."

Then Hollister went to sleep and dreamed that his law books came down from their shelves and changed to golden imps and danced a minuet around him. Only on each golden body, in lieu of a head, a mammoth Marechal Niel was perched; and as they passed, each imp seemed to pause and smile mockingly at him.

The next night, the trio met at Mrs. De Land's German. She, radiant, imperial, matchless—in turquoise velvet, pearls and Marechal Niels. Croesus looked upon her with more covetous eyes than ever he had given to the goodliest "preferred" stock; and resolved to hazard his fate while that alluring look met his gaze.

When Hollister saw his roses on her breast, his smouldering rage diminished and love seemed, just then, the only guerdon worth striving for. But Croesus hovered about her and she let him.

"Why not?" she said to that womanly something which shrunk back from the words she felt were trembling on his lips. "Why not take the plunge, and have it over? The world expects it—my people expect it and I am not sure but I expect it myself. Then why can't I put on my golden shackles and wear them gracefully? They'll be twenty-two carat—warranted—solid through and through! Hearts? Pshaw! What use has one for them in my world? They are only fit to ache and get under people's feet—so why not dispense with them and have done with it?"

Croesus felt that the moment was propitious.

"Come! let's go into the conservatory. I'm sure you don't care for this waltz!" and he had about him that something which every feminine creature senses, and knows means, "Yea, or Nay."

She felt it and was on the point of going when Hollister came to her side with a steely glint in his eyes.

"Since you wear my colors, may I not claim at least one dance?" he said with a significant glance at the golden beauties that were beginning to droop upon her breast. She scarcely comprehended the force of his words save that they meant a little respite from what she dreaded and yet felt was inevitable, as well as a brief sojourn in that other world—the world of dreams!

Before Croesus realized that she was going from him she was sweeping down the room in Hollister's arms to the dreamy music of the waltz.

"What did they say to you—my roses?" he whispered as they glided on.

"Your roses?"—she started in surprise—"these?"

"I hope so. I begged that you wear them, and when I saw them on your breast I dared—"

"Do you mean that you sent me roses yesterday?" and in her eyes there flashed a something Croesus would not have liked to see.

"Yes."

"And a note?"

"Certainly, but you did not answer it. I fear my roses were faithless messengers. Perhaps my tongue would not have played me so false."

And with the masterful way that sways women's hearts, he led her out from among the dancers into the scented moonlight. And when she heard from his warm, impassioned lips the story—the story the roses had but faintly hinted at, she knew, at last that the world of Dreams is the Real world; and having once truly entered it, the gilded world, for her, did not exist.

When they re-entered the drawing room, Croesus and her chaperone were looking for her. She ignored his proffered arm and said with fine scorn as Hollister relinquished her to her chaperone:

"Appropriating another's stock may be admissible on 'Change, Mr. Hudson; but there is another world where such tactics do not always win."

Then Croesus knew that in King Cupid's mart he was hopelessly "short."

HAVE A ROOM FOR BUSINESS.

Women Want a Home Office for Their Household Matters.

Women who have taken to house keeping seriously have lately adopted a new method of showing how business-like they are. The home office is the latest novelty in household arrangements, and the woman whose house happens to possess a room adapted for that purpose regards herself as fortunate. Otherwise she takes the necessary steps to see that some part of her house is made suitable for that purpose. The room need not be large and it is chiefly important that it look business-like and not too feminine. Into this room goes her desk, which must be exactly the kind used in a regular office and accompanied with appropriate office furniture. It is here that she keeps her books, the accounts of the household expenditures and hither come the cook and other servants to take their orders. Here letters pertaining to the business of running the household are written, and all that could by a liberal interpretation of the word be accounted household business is done. Rooms of this kind have become more and more popular during the past few years, and their number has now increased until architects of new houses arrange in the plan for such an apartment, to be used exclusively by what the pedlers call "the lady of the house" to look after her daily affairs. Of course the transaction of social duties, such as sending and receiving invitations, cannot rightfully be carried on in this sacred apartment, as this is not businesslike enough for the room consecrated wholly to the commissary end of the household.—New York Sun.

Boston Horsewomen to Ride Astride.

Several ladies of the most exclusive society of Boston will in the near future, if their present determination holds good, appear in public in a manner that cannot fail to cause widespread comment and give rise to much dissension, favorable and otherwise. It is the intention of the ladies to appear at the horse show and give a demonstration of what has become considerable of a fad in the riding schools of the city by riding their mounts astride. The reason for adopting this new method of riding are said to be because women are thus able to reduce considerable adipose tissue, the figure and bearing are improved and a feeling of greater security is experienced.—Utica Globe.

Children Learn to Raise Flowers.

Cleveland has a home gardening association which encourages children to cultivate flowers at home. Last spring the association distributed to children 50,000 penny packages of flower seeds, accompanied with printed instructions how to prepare the soil, plant and water. The teachers supplemented these instructions by talks. In the fall exhibitions were held in many schools, which revealed the fact that about 75 per cent of the efforts of the children were successful.

THE SASKATOON DISTRICT.

ONE OF THE NEW WESTERN CANADA DISTRICTS.

The Great Advantages of Settlement Where the Soil Is of Unexampled Fertility.

During the past year or two a large number of American settlers (those going from the United States to Canada), have made homes in the Saskatoon district in Western Canada. They have found the climate all that could be desired and their prospects are of the brightest. In writing of it a correspondent says:

The lands for sale are choice selections from a large area, and every farm is within easy distance of a railway station. Experience has shown that this district enjoys immunity from summer frost, from cyclones and blizzards. The South Saskatchewan, flowing through the tract, is one of the finest rivers in the country, being navigable and having an average width of stream of 1,000 feet.

The agents of the Canadian government, whose advertisement appears elsewhere in your paper and who will be pleased to furnish full information, tell me that within the limits of the tract there are two distinct varieties of soil. One is a rich black loam, and the other is a somewhat lighter loam, containing a small admixture of sand. There appears to be no appreciable difference between the fertility of these two kinds of soil. Both are alluvial in their characteristics, both are marvelously productive, and both rest upon a subsoil of clay. The advantage of this formation is that it retains the heat of the day during the night, and is favorable to the early maturity of crops. Every kind of crop will here attain the highest perfection of quality. The land is admirably adapted for stock-raising and dairy farming, as well as growing grain. Some idea of the richness of the natural grasses of the prairie may be formed from the fact that more than 200 tons of hay were gathered within a short distance of Saskatoon and stored up for use during the winter. A growth so luxuriant demonstrates beyond all possible question the suitability of the land for pasturing cattle, and no doubt this important industry will be largely carried on.

Nature has been lavish in her gifts to this territory. Not only is the soil of unexampled fertility, but the climate is delightful and healthy. Such is the testimony of every settler, and this testimony is confirmed by enthusiastic opinions from every traveler, explorer, missionary or newspaper correspondent who has ever visited this far-famed Saskatchewan Valley. In former years vast herds of buffalo came here to winter from the elevated storm-swept regions south of the United States boundary line, proving thereby the adaptation of these rolling prairies to the purpose of raising stock. The land is dry, with sufficient, but not excessive rainfall, capable of early cultivation in the spring, and free from summer frosts. The configuration of the country renders artificial drainage unnecessary, and prevents the accumulation of stagnant pools; mists and fogs are seldom seen.

The days of summer are full of sunshine, under the genial influence of which crops rapidly ripen. Autumn is characterized by an almost unbroken succession of fine weather, during which the crops are safely garnered. In winter it is cold, but extremely exhilarating and pleasant, owing to the wonderful dryness and bracing qualities of the air. The winter is a source of profit as well as enjoyment to the people, being far healthier than a humid climate.

Water and fuel—these two prime necessaries of life are plentiful throughout the district.

POOR LITTLE JOHNNY!
AND HIS "TUMMY"!

Small boys, and many times large ones, and occasionally girls, too, big and little, suffer terribly from convulsive pains or "cramps" in the bowels and stomach—pain so violent that it "doubles up" the ones attacked, and makes it impossible for them to stand up.

Some people call it colic, but most honest, plain-spoken people call it "belly-ache" and very properly, for the seat of the trouble is in the bowels, and caused by the violent efforts of the bowels to rid themselves of something which doesn't belong there. The small boy usually gets it from over-eating or from eating forbidden fruit, and suffers mostly in the summer time.

It's spring now, and "in times of peace, prepare for war." Let the boys and girls and the big folks, too, for that matter, clean out the clogged channels filled with winter bile and putrid undigested food, strengthen the 30-feet of bowel canal, liven up the liver, and "summer belly-aches" will have no terrors, because they won't happen. The way to make the body ache-proof is to use CASCARETS, gentle, sweet, fragrant CASCARETS, the perfect system cleaners and bowel strengtheners. For fear that anybody in the family should ever be attacked by belly-ache, keep a box of CASCARETS in the house always, and remember that all pains and troubles in your insides are

FARM AND GARDEN

MATTERS OF INTEREST TO AGRICULTURISTS.

Some Up-to-Date Hints About Cultivation of the Soil and Yields Thereof—Horticulture, Viticulture and Floriculture.

Rape and Its Cultivation.

J. H. Skinner, assistant agriculturist of the Indiana Experiment Station, sends out a press bulletin on rape growing. We believe this plant to be very valuable to the farmer and would advise its more general growing. The bulletin referred to is as follows:

Rape is a succulent plant belonging to the cabbage family. It grows rapidly, making a large amount of green food, upon which pigs and sheep grow well. To make a success of rape, select a rich piece of land free from weeds. Plow deep, then roll—if not too moist, and harrow till the soil is finely pulverized and well firmed down. Finish the preparation by running a plank drag over it. Such a seed bed will germinate the seed quickly and enable the plants to withstand dry weather. I prefer to have the plowing done just before sowing. This will give the rape an even start with the weeds.

Sow with garden seed-drill, three pounds, or five pounds broadcast per acre. When drilled the rows should not be more than 20 to 24 inches apart. Drill sowing will permit cultivation, which will keep down weeds, conserve moisture and increase the yield. Where drilled the animals destroy less as they walk, and lie down between the rows. If sown broadcast cover with harrow or weeder and roll. In many cases it is well to roll the drill-sowing also.

The season will control time of seeding. Do not sow until the ground has become warm enough to quickly germinate the seed, as it comes up better and grows more rapidly. Usually it should not be sown before the middle of April—in this latitude of north central Indiana. It is best to sow at intervals of ten days to two weeks. By the use of low hurdles, this will give fresh pasture throughout the season, as the early sowing can be grazed off a second time. This also makes less waste as the stock does not run over it so much. Rape may be sown in the corn just before the last cultivation. If the soil is not too dry, it will grow well unless the corn is very large and thick. Where thus sown it makes splendid pasture for lambs from September till cold weather. Some men have had success in sowing rape with oats. This however is not a sure way as the season will have much to do with it.

It is a good plan to have the rape patch near the barns and alongside of the pasture. This brings the animals under the stockman's eye, and if a lamb "bloats" he is there to give it attention. If the stock can go freely back and forth between the pasture and rape, it will save trouble, time, labor and even loss. Rape thus supplements the pasture, making fat lambs and good pigs. Where sheep have access to both rape and grass, they should not be turned on the rape until the middle of the day when the animals are not hungry enough to gorge themselves, and the rape is free from dew. If they do not have the run of the pasture, turn them on the rape for an hour a day gradually increasing the time, until they become accustomed to it. Then keep them on it continuously till the end of the season.

Some Clover Facts.

Clovers are among our most valuable forage plants, but they will not withstand the extremes of drouth and heat that prevail over large sections of the west every year and in other sections of the same region some years. Being soil renovators they can be grown in rotation with other crops to advantage. On account of the large amount of protein they contain they have a high feeding value. There are several varieties of clovers grown in this country, among which are the following:

Red clover (Trifolium pratense).—This is the most common variety, and is grown successfully in the north wherever the supply of moisture is sufficient. In dry sections it becomes uncertain. Some call it a perennial, but it is scarcely more than a biennial, its perennial character being often assumed by new plants springing up from seeds dropped by the plants each year. It makes a good hay, but is unsuited for permanent pasture. When it is desired to use it for pasture, as a single plant, it is necessary to rotate, keeping the clover pasture in one place for not more than two years.

Mammoth clover (trifolium medium) resembles red clover, but has no spots on the leaves. It is adapted to more moist land than is red clover, and under favorable conditions will give a larger yield.

Alsike clover is a perennial clover whose appearance suggests a hybrid between red and white clover, but it is not a hybrid. It will thrive on soil too wet for red clover, but on ordinary soil is probably not to be so highly recommended. A writer says that it should be sown with grasses to get the best results.

White clover (trifolium repens) is a low-growing perennial, spreading by creeping stems. The flowers are white, the older ones more or less purplish tinged. It is of little value for hay owing to its small growth, but is very useful for beautifying lawns, and has some value as a pasture plant. Some farmers sow white clover seed with bluegrass and consider it an assistant to the bluegrass pasture. It stands drouth fairly well, and will grow on soil too poor to give good yields of some other pasture plants. In Ireland it is called the shamrock.

Crimson clover (trifolium incarnatum) is an erect annual a foot or two high. It bears scarlet flowers in oblong heads. It was highly spoken of some years ago as a soil renovator, but of recent years has been quite generally ignored in the north. In the south it is proving valuable in some localities.

Treat Oats for Smut.

A communication from the Illinois Experiment Station says that the average per cent of smut in Illinois oat fields as determined by several careful counts in over sixty counties of the state last year, was 14 per cent. Illinois produces the largest amount of oats of any state in the union or about 164,000,000 bushels for 1900. Making liberal allowances for variation in estimates of yield and per cent of smut the loss to the farmers of our state from smut was not far from $5,000,000 or about $15 for every forty acre oat field. This loss can be entirely prevented at a very slight expense by the hot water or formalin treatment of the seed.

Hot Water Treatment.—The apparatus needed for this treatment consists of an ordinary scalding kettle or any arrangement for heating water, a barrel, several gunny sacks and an accurate thermometer.

The kettle should be partly filled with 35 to 60 gallons of water and heated until the temperature of the water reaches 137 degrees F. The gunny sacks should be about half filled with one bushel of seed oats after they have been fanned and cleaned. Dip the sack of oats into the hot water, taking care to keep the sack completely under water and stirring it gently to keep the water circulating through every part of the sack. Treat for five minutes at from between 132 and 137 degrees F. After treating dip immediately into the barrel filled with cold water. This will cool the oats off quickly and prevent over heating in the center of the sack.

About two pecks by measure of the wet oats should be added to the amount desired to be sowed per acre, to make up for the swollen seed. The wet oats cannot be dried and should be sown immediately after treating, by hand or with a force seed drill. The treating process quickens germination and makes a more vigorous plant, thus increasing the yield independent of the destruction of the smut. It is advisable to treat a part of the seed this year, sow it apart from the general crop, thresh separately and save this seed for the general seeding the following year. The treatment need not be repeated oftener than once in three years at most.

Cultivating the Orchard.

H. L. Dean of Illinois says: I consider good and thorough culture of the utmost importance in growing fruits successfully. First getting your ground in the best possible condition before setting out your plants or vines and then frequently stirring and loosening the ground during the growing season. Now this is not only necessary during the growing season before your trees and vines come into bearing but especially is it true that during their fruiting the ground must be frequently stirred and kept pulverized, in order to have the best results when gathering your fruits. By thus keeping your ground in a loose, pliable condition you counteract, in a measure, the effect of drouths and enable your fruit to keep on growing and to some extent prevent their dropping. Another condition also noticed, between orchards cultivated and those not cultivated the last few years, and one I think the fruit grower will fully appreciate is this: the orchards that have been down to grass for a number of years and have been bearing fairly good crops of fruit as their owners say, without any cultivation, are running down noticeably while those which have been thoroughly cultivated are improving every year. This is gratifying to the orchardist and looking at his orchard he knows he has been well repaid for all work put on it. The fruit grower must watch his trees and ought to be able to tell whether his trees or vines are thriving as well as the stock man who goes around amongst his stock, can tell how his stock is growing. If your trees are not doing as well as you think they ought you can improve their condition by judicious fertilizing, and especially will it do wonders on young trees.

Holstein-Friesian Records.

(First two weeks of April, 1901.)

The size of the records and the number received during these two weeks are very remarkable. The number is thirty-two, eight of which average 20 lbs. 1.9 oz. equivalent butter of 80 per cent fat. The full-age cows, seven in number, average 18 lbs. 10.8 oz.; and the average of the eight four-year-olds is 17 lbs. 12.6 oz.; of the three-year-old class only three reports were received, the average product of which is 14 lbs. 12 oz.; of the two-year-old class fourteen were received, of which the average product is 12 lbs. 9.4 oz., the average of the seven highest of this class is 14 lbs. 15.2 oz. —S. Hoxie, in Farmers' Review.

Property owners in the Fox lake region of Wisconsin have banded to drive German carp out of the waters in that vicinity, and it is intended to seine the Niagara river for the same purpose. The carp are making havoc among game fish and hence the contemplated warfare.

By means of the dairy cow we are enabled to make use of the great yields of grass, which grows so luxuriantly wherever the conditions of sunshine and moisture are right. Green grass rightly used has made many a people rich.

Pasture Crops for Hogs.

Pasture and range are necessary in order to keep breeding swine in a healthy condition and grow the stock at a profit. The man who tries to raise swine under other conditions is playing a losing game, and his balance will be on the debtor side of the ledger just as sure as we have day and night. Although these facts have been vouched for many times by experiment stations and successful swine raisers and given wide publicity, thousands of farmers still continue in trying to raise hogs in a dry lot with nothing but corn as a feed, with the expectations of making it a profitable operation.

A hog pasture does not mean a dust lot with possibly a few old weeds off in one corner, but a good and commodious range, and if planned to give the best results, it will contain a variety of crops, selected as to their food value. The pasture should not be so small that the hog is compelled to eat his own filth to get the feed. Every farm should have six to eight acres of hog pasture fenced purposely for this use. This is in addition to what range may be utilized outside at times. Better far to have a little too much than not enough. If the crop gets ahead of the hogs and becomes woody cut it off with the mower and a new growth will start. This can be done with many plants and will pay even if the mowed portion is not gathered. The pasture may be greatly fertilized by this method in many cases. The enclosure should be divided into two or three parts, at least, so that while one part is being pastured, crops may be growing in the others.

While succulent food is very essential the year round for growing and breeding stock, the exercise is just as necessary. Pigs confined in pens will do much better if they have some green food, but the results will be vastly better if the pigs are allowed range and the chance to gather this feed for themselves. Any green crop is much better than no pasture, but some crops for this purpose are very much superior to others, and a variety of crops, even though they may be much alike in composition, are superior to a single crop. Many swine raisers that appreciate the value of a hog pasture, do not realize the importance of giving attention to variety and composition of the plants to be used. In selecting the crops for a hog pasture consider the composition of the plants as you would consider the composition of the grain in a ration. Bear in mind that certain crops are rich in the food nutrient protein, that is so essential in the animal system to build up the frame and muscles, and is very necessary in the food of breeding stock. Crops of the opposite nature are rich in carbohydrates, the heat and fat forming compounds. Endeavor to have some of the former to pasture along with the latter and the results will be better.

Alfalfa Silage.

A bulletin of the Colorado station thus summarizes the results of tests of alfalfa as a silage crop: Some tests were carefully made upon a small scale to see what losses might be expected in making silage of alfalfa. One test was made with the alfalfa put in whole as cut in the field, the other with the alfalfa cut into quarter-inch pieces as we cut our corn for silage. The whole alfalfa showed a spoiled layer three inches thick on the top and an inch layer around the side nearly all the way down. The silage of the bottom and middle was excellent and was greedily eaten by the cows and calves. Its loss in the total weight was 10.7 per cent, but its loss in feeding value was probably a little larger. The other silo was filled with cut alfalfa. The next day the silo was covered with two thicknesses of building paper and one of boards and weighted with stone to about 55 pounds per square foot. When covered, the silage was hotter than the hand could bear. Two days later the temperature had fallen to 83 degrees F. and in two days more had fallen to that of the air. The silage shrank and settled a good deal. When put in it contained 33 per cent of dry matter. On opening, the silo showed 2 inches of spoiled silage on top and half an inch on the sides. The spoiled silage was 7.3 per cent of the total weight. The loss in dry matter was approximately 10 per cent. It is fair to presume that with a good tight silo, well made silage from cut alfalfa should not make a larger loss than was here given in our small experimental silo, or about 10 per cent of its feeding value. To make good silage from whole alfalfa is a much harder proposition. It requires that the alfalfa be quite green; that the silo be both tight and deep; that the alfalfa be thrown into the silo in small forkfuls and carefully tramped, and that it be weighted by four to six feet of some heavy, tight packing material like cut-corn fodder. If the alfalfa is put up in the middle of summer in clear, bright weather, it must be raked and loaded as fast as cut. One lot we tried was too dry for silage two hours after it was cut.

Tree Wash—A good wash is often worth many times what it costs to apply and will do much toward preventing the attacks of borers and other insects. A one pound can of concentrated lye dissolved in two or three gallons of water makes a very good tree wash. Another good wash can be made of one-half pint of pine tar, one-half pint carbolic acid, and two gallons of soft soap. These washes can easily be applied with an old whitewash brush or a swab made of old rags tied on the end of a stick. These washes should be applied two or three times to the trunk and large limbs during the spring and early summer.

Chic French Purse.

A novelty French purse is attracting many buyers by its originality and humor. It is a small hand purse, with a roundwhite metal clasp, and has a chamois bag attached. This metal disc is pressed into the features of a jolly, big, smiling-mouthed wag or buffoon. by pressing two small springs on each side of his mouth it opens for the change to pass through, and then closes again. Any silver, from a 50-cent piece, may be dropped into it. When taking money out, the purse may be opened in the usual way—by pressing on the top of the head.

Without Food for Four Weeks.

A remarkable case of a young man living without food or drink for four weeks is that of Corporal Andre Desarts, who, while walking along a road near Brest, fell into a pit 100 feet deep, which had been dug as a part of mining work. He could not get out, and passers-by were so infrequent that for twenty-eight days he was imprisoned in the bottom of the excavation. At last some men on their way to work passed near the pit and heard faint cries for help coming from it. They investigated and found the soldier. He was exceedingly weak, and his body had been gnawed frightfully by vermin. Though his condition was extremely serious, doctors who were called said they thought they could save his life.—New York Press.

A Miracle Explained.

Bryant, Mo., May 13th.—The sensational cure of Mrs. M. A. Goss of this place has sent a ripple of excitement all over Douglas county, and Dodd's Kidney Pills, the remedy in question, are receiving the greatest advertisement any medicine has ever had in this state.

To satisfy the many inquiries which she finds it impossible to answer by letter, Mrs. Goss has sent the following statement of her case to the St. Louis Globe-Democrat:

"I did not think I could live a day and suffer as I have lived and suffered for months, with Sciatica and Rheumatism. I used baths and liniments of all kinds. Two physicians treated me, one of them for two months. Nothing helped me in the least. I never slept more than ten or fifteen minutes at a time. I was bed-fast, and had to lie on one side all the time. I used to wish for death to deliver me from such torture.

"A friend suggested Dodd's Kidney Pills, and after I had used them a week I began to improve, and in about four weeks I could sit up in bed. A few days later I walked a quarter of a mile and back. I now do all my own cooking and housework. The pain has entirely left me, and I am a well woman. I have taken altogether sixteen boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills. Dodd's Kidney Pills saved my life.

"It Seems as Though my Back Would Break."

Is it not true? Women suffer, feel the very life crushed out of them, grow old before their time. Each morning wake up determined to do so much before the day ends, and yet—

Before the morning is very old the dreadful BACKACHE attacks them, the brave spirit sinks back in affright; no matter how hard they struggle, the "clutch" is upon them and they fall upon the couch crying:

"Why should I suffer so? What can I do?"

The answer is ready, your cry has been heard, and a woman is able to restore you to health and happiness.

IN THE WEB OF A SPIDER

By......
LILLIAN GILLIN.

CHAPTER XVIII. (Continued.)

She had walked boldly into the web this cunning spider had woven for her unwary feet. How could she—poor, helpless little fly!—oppose him?

She looked at those gathered about the table, and Allen's eyes met hers. Instinctively she felt his strength and protection could not fail her, let her need be ever so great.

"You do not understand me," continued Randolph, as no glass was lifted in response to his own. "Let me, then, present you to my cousin, Beatrice Markham, in the young lady you have known as Miss Montrose. By courtesy, we will still give her the old name. Beatrice, you, at least, will lift your glass to mine?"

Had a thunderbolt been launched in their midst, it could have produced no more startling effect.

Randolph stood waiting, smiling; but Beatrice sat motionless and dumb.

She had dreamed, in her folly, that her ingognita might for a time be preserved. She had not argued the thousand chances that might at any time disclose it, against any and all of which Chester had thus boldly fortified himself.

She felt for an instant like a criminal on whose arm the hand of justice has been laid. Her heart beat slowly and with difficulty; her blood refused to flow.

Then the very facts with which she was confronted gave her back her courage which for the moment they had robbed her.

After all, it was easier to fight under her true colors than wearing a mask, whose disguise might at any time be rendered of no avail.

"I will leave you to finish the explanation you have begun, Mr. Chester," she said, with dignity, as she rose from the table. "You, doubtless, can make it clear why the man who robs his fellow man of some paltry sum of gold or silver is called thief and thrust into jail, while he who steals fortune, name and identity from a helpless girl is entitled, in the eyes of the world, to all honor for the act. But, understand, Randolph Chester, I have returned to Grey Oaks neither in acceptance of your invitation nor your formally-proffered charity, but because a voice from the dead has summoned me. Take care that, later, its summons do not reach your ears!"

She finished speaking and, with a low bow, swept from the room.

Silence fell on the little group left behind her—silence again broken by their host.

"I owe you an apology, Mrs. Layton, and you, also, my dear Allen," he said, while an expression as of deep grief flitted over his face, "for not having at once disclosed to you the identity of my cousin in one known to you as Miss Montrose; but, seeing her under your roof, and perceiving instantly that she wished to pass unrecognized by me, my worst fears regarding her were confirmed. All this wretched trouble, and the shock of discovery regarding her parents, had turned her brain. I feared to take any other course than the one I have followed, of seeming to humor her whims, lest she should refuse to return to Grey Oaks, and I shrank from employing force to bring her here. Happily, my little plan worked well. She is once more under my roof and my protection. Although unsuspected by herself, I shall have her carefully guarded; nor shall she be permitted, alone, to leave the grounds. Meantime, I must beg your indulgence for her. Give her no hint that we suspect her mind to be disordered, and perhaps, in time, it will recover itself. You can guess something of the nature of this trial to me when I repeat that she, whom you have just heard address me with such aversion, was to have been my wife."

His voice seemingly broke and, rising abruptly, he walked toward the window, as though to hide emotion too strong for him to otherwise conceal.

The story produced a different effect upon the little group.

Mrs. Layton's first thought had been a secret determination to cut short her visit to Grey Oaks, and horror that Cora should have been thrown in close association with a young person whom society could no longer regard as respectable;—but, after all, Mr. Chester was very charming, the girl insane, and who knew but that Cora might prove the healer to this most romantic wound!

Cora's bright eyes were dimmed with tears. Had any other lips than Randolph Chester's pronounced Beatrice insane she would indignantly have denied it; but, coming from him, who had already acquired so strong and subtle an influence over her, the assertion staggered her.

Miss Lorrimer had listened with a cold smile, her eyes fixed, not on the speaker, but on Allen's face. She had watched the muscles of his mouth quiver, and had seen the blood slowly ebb from his cheeks. What part did B. T. play in th drama, she wondered, and where was he now? She had renewed reason for congratulation that she had not permitted the letter sent him to reach its destination. Through that letter, too, she had gained valuable knowledge—knowledge which made her now distrust both Randolph Chester and his statements. Yet she was the first to reply to him.

"It is very, very sad," she said. "Really, it quite made my blood run cold when she spoke of having been commanded to return here by a voice from the dead. Mad people have strange freaks always. You consider her quite harmless, Mr. Chester?"

"Oh, my dear, you quite startle me!" exclaimed Mrs. Layton.

Allen looked up. His face was very white, and he opened his lips to speak, but repressed the impulse and was silent.

"He does not dare to trust himself," though his betrothed. "Well, I shall have an able ally in Randolph Chester in my plans, and Allen's heart shall yet be mine on the rebound."

Meanwhile, face downward on the bed where she had thrown herself, lay she of whom they spoke. No tears flowed, but great sobs shook and racked her with cruel force.

She felt herself alone in her old home—a stranger at Grey Oaks.

Why had she returned? What was in a dream—a foolish, flitting dream—that it should wield such constraining power? How could she live a single day beneath the same roof which sheltered her bitterest foe?

Not for a moment ever again could his specious plausibility deceive or blind her. Yet she had walked boldly into the trap his wily fingers had set for her. She would not, could not stay.

What mattered it that she was penniless? The world could not be so cruel as he.

To-night—this very night—she would steal like a thief from the old home, never, never to return to it again. Even Bertie had sent her no letter in reply. Alone, unaided, she must give up the contest.

"Papa! Mamma!" she cried. "Oh, why did not God take me, too?"

And then, as though the intuitive appeal had brought reply, a burst of tears came, to save her brain from the madness of which they already accused her.

CHAPTER XIX.

It was midnight, and Grey Oaks was wrapper in the embrace of the twin shadows—silence and darkness—when the door leading to the suite of apartments in the east wing softly opened, and a figure, which seemed a very phantom of the night, stood hesitating.

It was Beatrice, fully dressed.

Some instinct warned her that by daylight her flight from Grey Oaks might be intercepted. Besides, it seemed to her she could not draw a free breath until outside the grounds which once had been to her the dearest spot on the wide earth.

As no sound broke the stillness of the house, she noiselessly groped her way through the half-lighted halls and down the stairway until the outer door was reached.

The great door of entrance, in opening, would betray her, so she passed into the library, hoping to be able to unbar a window without noise.

The room was dimly-lighted, but every article could be distinctly seen.

As the familiar picture met her view, her dream recurred to her with startling distinctness. She almost fancied she could hear again the rustling leaves, and glancing instinctively toward the window which had framed her father's form; but it was closed and shuttered, and without the trees were bleak and bare, without a single leaf to tell her the story if it could!.

She stifled a sob and walked swiftly across the room, lifting her hand to undo the fastenings of the window.

Just as she made the movement, another hand was laid on her. Her whole frame quivered with the shock, but she uttered neither scream not cry, although for the instant it seemed as if the owner of the hand must have sprung from the very floor.

"Allow me to assist you, my dear cousin," said a low, mocking voice in her ear. "It is a cold night for a moonlight stroll, such as I guess was your intention. But there is no accounting for a fair woman's freaks. I believe I had fallen asleep in the arm chair here, and do you know, for a moment, as you flitted so noiselessly across the room, I held my breath, imagining you a visitant from another sphere?"

"I am," she answered, icily—"a sphere unknown to you, Randolph Chester—a sphere whose atmosphere is honor, loyalty and truth. Therefore, let me pass, and pray, as I shall pray, that our two paths may never meet again."

"Rather, my dear Beatrice, I intend that they shall never again divide. It was a fatal mistake, your leaving Grey Oaks. It gave rise to unstinted comment, and caused me the gravest anxiety concerning you. Of your own free will you have returned here, and here you must remain!"

"Must remain! You are mad to use such terms! You speak as if compulsion would be used!"

He smiled, indulgently.

"Did you know, Beatrice," he said, "that one of the strangest freaks of the insane is to imagine that all the rest of the world are mad? My child, don't include me in your category, I beg you!"

"A freak of the insane!" she murmured after him, with whitening lips, and gathering a sickening prescience of his meaning. "For God's sake, what do you mean?"

"Only, my child, that your brain has not been strong enough to bear these cruel shocks from which you have suffered, and has given way beneath them. Time and care will, I trust, entirely restore you. When you shall look upon Bertram Talbot not as a hero, but the thief he is—when you shall regard me, not as your enemy, but your friend, lover and husband—when you shall give your free will and consent to granting me the latter title, I shall deem the cure complete. Until then, Beatrice, you force me into placing you under surveillance befitting so sad a case."

Fear—absolute physical fear—entered the girl's soul as she grasped the full purport of his words. Her lovely face, pale before, blanched to marble whiteness. The gray eyes dilated until they were black with the awful horror in their depths. She shivered as if a blast of winter had struck her.

Instinctively she stretched out her arms and grasped the back of a chair for support, lest her trembling limbs should refuse to sustain her.

"You call me mad?" she said, the words falling, one by one, from her white lips. "Listen, Mr. Chester! I will plead to you—to you—even to you who so cruelly have wronged me. Let me go away to-night. You shall see or hear of me never again. Though there are those who, coming to me to-morrow, would say: 'I will restore to you your birthright,' I would not hearken. I will never claim my own. Only do not say this hideous thing. For the sake of the past—for God's sake, for humanity's sake, let me go forth from Grey Oaks to-night, and let the shades of darkness forever make my hiding-place!"

"My poor child, this is but a phase of your delirium," he answered.

But the old, mocking smile had never left his lips. His voice rose no whit higher than its usual tone. She was indeed, huntetd, trapped, caged. He might torture her as he would, until, in very truth, he had driven her to madness. What mercy might she hope from him? None—none, and full well she knew it.

"I will demand protection from your guests, then!" said she, striving to regain some of her lost courage. "They will not allow this outrage to be perpetrated!"

He still smiled on.

"Will you tell them that a voice from the dead has counseled you to seek their help?"

His words were more cruel than blows. Closer and closer he drew the withes around the tender flesh, until she fairly writhed in agony.

"Beatrice," he continued, "do you not see the uselessness of this struggle? Why prolong it? Swear to me that in one month hence you will become my wife, and all shall yet be well. Refuse, and the consequences are of your own making. Spite of all you have done, spite of your undisguised hatred and aversion, I still offer you my love. Why will you not accept it?"

"Because it is a worse fate than even this horrible alternative you lay before me. You can but torture, until you kill, Randolph Chester. But why—why should I submit? Is there no law—no justice, that can protect me?"

"Why, dear, spite of your illegitimacy of birth, I am, in the law's eyes, your nearest relative, and, as such, your guardian. It rests with you whether the authority thus given me proves irksome. How gladly would I renounce it, Beatrice, for the chains forged alone by love! Are you still relentless?"

"Yes, and will be to the end! To the end, Randolph Chester, though you may drive me with knotted cords along the long, slow road that leads there, although the end may be only the grave. I will never plead to you again. Wreak your worst!"

From the ashes of her misery her courage rose to this last challenge. Never had she looked more beautiful than when she thus dared and defied him.

"Poor child!" he answered, "I trust violence may not be necessary. You understand that only in the hours of daylight you may go into the grounds, and never beyond them, quite alone. If, from time to time, pitying glances are thrown toward you, you will understand them."

Thus he tortured her, until her reeling brain seemed to burn as if fire rested upon it.

"Go to your room, Beatrice," he said, and though his voice was low, it rang for the first time as an absolute command.

It told her obedience was expected, and would be compelled. And she was powerless—powerless to refuse.

"My God! Thou, too, hast deserted me!" she inwardly cried, as, staggering like a drunkard, she tried to cross the floor.

He placed his arm about her for support, but the hated touch gave her back some of her sorely-tried strength.

She shook herself free from him.

"Not that! Anything but that!" she said; and in her voice rang the old, dauntless scorn. "Your touch, at least, I may be spared!"

Alone she gained the threshold of the room. Suddenly she paused.

Who had spoken?

"The will! The papers! The secret—the secret!"

Distinctly the words fell on her ear. She turned.

Randolph Chester was standing on the self-same spot, the same smile wreathing his thin lips, but he had not spoken. It was not his voice that she had heard!

She peered into the dim recesses. No one was in hiding.

"The secret—the secret!"

Again the whisper was borne to her ears.

"God in Heaven!" she thought, despairingly. "Was it true that madness, indeed, had overtaken her?"

CHAPTER XX.

How she reached her room, how the long night wore away, Beatrice never knew. She lay, fully dressed, upon her bed, in a sort of stupor, from which the daylight, stealing through the blinds, aroused her.

Her eyes had never closed. All through the night they had stared into the darkness, until this first faint sunshine blinded them. Ah, what had she and sunlight in common! No wonder that she shrank from its brilliance and its glare. Yet, all unconsciously to herself, it found its way into her soul, and revived the crushed plant of courage and bruised flower of hope.

The sense of impotence which had assailed her in the presence of her enemy grew less. Her strong will asserted itself. It could not be possible that, in this house, filled with people, among whom she was free to move as she pleased, into whose ears, too, unforbidden, she might pour the story of her wrongs, that this monstrous injustice could be perpetrated.

She had heard of some people being shut up in mad-houses; but that was different. They could find no one to listen to the truth. Grey Oaks was not a mad-house. Why, the very servants would rise up to bring her help and deliverance.

She rose and bathed, and freshly dressed herself. Finding in her room all her old belongings, she chose a dress of white flannel for her morning costume. She met no one as she came down the stairs.

Going into the conservatory, she broke off two or three creamy roses and fastened them at her neck.

Never, thought Allen Layton, had he seen so exquisite a picture as she made when entering the dining room, where he was for the moment sole occupant, standing in one of the windows, and gazing out on the sloping, oak-gemmed lawn and beautifully-appointed woods.

Her footfall, gentle as it was, disturbed his reverie. He turned and came quickly toward her, his own face flushing warm with pleasure. Never before had he seen her but in her deep mourning robes. This gown, only less pure in hue than the exquisite skin, with the lovely roses nestling at her throat, revealed to even fuller perfection the beauty alike of face and form.

True, there were dark shadows circling the eyes, and in their grey depths was utter weariness; but it added to, rather than detracted from her loveliness.

"Miss Markham!" he exclaimed, in a voice which trembled with feeling, and extended both his hands in greeting.

The old name sounded strangely from his lips. It was a breath of the old life.

She cast one startled glance around the room, to find that they two were alone.

Here was her opportunity. She must not lose it.

"Tell me what he has told you of me!" she exclaimed, in low, agitated tones, her eyes dilating, her lips quivering. "Tell me what he has dared to say! Not that I was mad? He did not tell you that—and if he did, you knew that it was false. Of course, you must have known it; and so, laughing in his face, you answered him?"

Looking at her; listening to her low, incoherently-murmured words, a new and terrible fear smote Allen Layton's soul.

Last night she had spoken of "a voice from the dead," which had bidden her return to Grey Oaks. To-day her whole manner was altered, and altered in a way which made her very disclaimer the most powerful argument for its necessity.

Poor child!

She did not reason that her excitement was her own worst enemy, and put into Randolph Chester's hands an unexpected weapon.

"You grow pale," she continued. "I have shocked and startled you. But, oh, I hate to tell you! It is too dreadful!—but last night, I made up my mind to leave Grey Oaks forever. You see, when I returned here, I thought I could preserve the character I had assumed. I had no suspicion that Randolph Chester was playing the part of the spider, to lure the fly into his web, until I found myself once more within the horrible meshes. Do you wonder I longed to free myself before he drew the threads which bound me closer, and so made it impossible? Well, I waited until the house was quiet, and then I stole down the stairs and into the library. He was there, and so my plan was foiled. And then he told me his wicked scheme to prove me mad. Oh, Mr. Layton, you will be my friend—you will not let them drive me mad through this most horrible atmosphere of madness in which he will envelope me?"

The very blood seemed congealing in Allen Layton's veins as he listened; but he struggled to regain his own calm.

A pang, nearer akin to misery than any former experience of his life, smote him as he looked on the young and exquisitely-lovely girl, in the belief, to which her own words had given birth, that reason, in very truth, was tottering on its throne.

"My child, calm yourself!" he entreated. "Your cousin was, indeed, thoughtless to breathe to you such a fear. But you must not let it trouble you, nor must you fancy yourself, in any sense, a prisoner at Grey Oaks. You are free to come or go, as you please."

"Then let me go!" she interrupted. "I would not, of my own will, stay here another hour. Oh, Mr. Layton, you do not know Randolph Chester as I know him! You do not know the terrible plot he is concocting! It is not that I am not mad now which is his hope: it is that he will drive me to madness!" She leaned forward and spoke these last words in a whisper, her burning eyes fixed on her companion's face. "Save me, Mr. Layton—save me from him and from this fate! You told me once, so long as you lived I should not need a friend. Oh, prove good your promise in this, the bitterest hour of my life!"

"I will, child—I will!" he answered.

And he held his words to his own soul as an oath.

"Am I disturbing a tete-a-tete?" called a gay voice from the doorway.

Both turned toward it.

The speaker was Miss Lorrimer, and close behind her followed their host.

"An early riser, as usual, dear Beatrice! I trust you rested well the first night in your old home?"

She threw him one quick glance of scorn, vouchsafing no other reply.

He looked after her pityingly as she crossed to one of the windows, and stood looking out on the fair landscape spread before her.

His question struck Layton strangely. He spoke as though no interview, such as Beatrice had described to him, had taken place. Allen felt his own brain grow dizzy in amazing wonderment.

"Do you find insane people an interesting study?" asked his betrothed, as she slipped a white, jeweled hand within his arm.

The question, the gesture, irritated him strangely. Involuntarily, he shrank from both.

Her eyes flashed; her cheeks paled.

Conscious of his fault, and anxious to make atonement, he devoted himself at the breakfast table alone to her, casting not even a glance toward the place where Beatrice sat, white and silent. He dared not trust himself to look toward her.

"I feel rarely well this morning," said Chester, as the meal progressed toward its close. "I went to bed last night as soon as you left, Mr. Layton; and, do you know, I never stirred until late this morning? It must have been, dear Beatrice, the soothing influence of your return."

The girl looked up with startled eyes. Truly, she was no match for this arch-plotter!

"You talked to me, then, in your sleep last night, when we met in the library!" she said, with cutting scorn. "I thought you could scarcely be in your waking senses, and am glad you had so good an excuse for the folly of which you were guilty."

An expression of perfectly-feigned surprise swept over Randolph Chester's face.

KICK TO UNCLE SAM

ITALIAN CONSUL THREATENS AN INTERNATIONAL ROW.

Will Complain Because Italian Workmen Were Driven Away From a Kansas Town Where They Went to Take the Place of Strikers — Authorities at Washington Will Be Asked to Give an Explanation—Leaders of the Mob Have Been Arrested and the Trouble Is Over.

Kansas City, May 11. — Jerome Fedeli, Italian consul in Kansas City, said yesterday that the labor trouble in Iola, Kan., that resulted Wednesday night in several Italians being driven from that town by American workmen will be investigated immediately. He continued:

"The governor of the State of Kansas is expected to afford the same protection to Italians that is given to American citizens or any other nationality. These are honest workingmen and entitled to the chance to earn a living in Iola or any other place so long as they conduct themselves properly. I do not doubt that Count Roswadowski will communicate at once with our ambassador in Washington and the authorities of Kansas will be asked for an explanation. I am not familiar with the exact conditions in Iola, but so far as I can learn the Italians were sent there from Kansas City to fill the positions in the works made vacant by disagreements in which my countrymen were in no manner concerned. Wednesday night a number of the old workmen attacked the Italians in their tents and several shots were fired. The Italians were taken to the depot and sent to Kansas City."

Iola, Kan., May 11.—The trouble between workingmen and the Italians sent here from Kansas City to work in the cement plant seems to be about over, the Italians having been returned home and the leaders of the mob were arrested.

ARMOURS AT SIOUX CITY.

Buy Old International Packing Company's Plant and Will Begin Business.

Sioux City, Iowa, May 11.—Armour & Co. have bought the old International Packing company's plant in Sioux City and it is understood they will take practically immediate possession. The capacity of the plant is 500 cattle, 3,250 hogs and 1,000 sheep. The plant originally was built by the Silberhorns at a cost of $400,000. It has recently been the property of the Sioux City Stock Yards company and Armour's negotiations have been with that company. Sioux City is much rejoiced over the prospect of Armour's coming.

MUST HAVE A LICENSE.

Ruling in Montana Which Affects Bird Collectors.

Helena, Mont., May 11. — Attorney General Donovan holds that collections of birds for museums in colleges outside the state cannot be made in Montana unless the hunters take out the license required by the new state game law of non-residents. He held to this effect in answering an inquiry of Prof. Marquis Farr, curator of the Princeton museum, who wanted to make an ornithological collection with his class in Montana.

CRAZED BY SILLY JOKE.

Boys Pulled Toy Snake Across Sidewalk in Front of Woman.

Danville, Va., May 11.—Mrs. R. K. Foster is hopelessly insane as the result of a practical joke. While she was on the street several days ago a number of young men hidden behind a fence pulled a toy snake across the sidewalk. The woman went into convulsions. She lost her mind, temporarily, once before, and physicians say her derangement will be permanent this time. The jokers will be arrested.

England's Population.

London, May 11. — According to the returns of this year's census the total population of England and Wales is 32,525,716. This is an increase over the population of 1891 of 3,523,191, or in other words and increase of 12.15 per cent in the last ten years. The increase for the decade between 1881 and 1891 was 11.65 per cent. According to the census forty-eight counties show increases, while fourteen show decreases.

Big Railway Scheme.

Menominee, Mich., May 11. — A big railway scheme is likely to develop here within a short time. Representatives of the Pennsylvania railway are now at St. Paul and Minneapolis figuring on a line to be built between those cities and Marinette, where a connection will be formed with the Grand Trunk and the Pennsylvania system by a car ferry at either Grand Ferry or Muskegon on the east shore of Lake Michigan.

Esterhazy the Real Criminal.

Paris, May 11.—A rumor is current in well-informed journalistic circles that Maj. Esterhazy is about to publish in London documents which he will support with irrefragible proofs showing that he was the author of the famous bordereaux which ex-Capt. Dreyfus was accused of having written and which led to his degradation.

Arrested for Mutiny.

Kingston, Jam., May 11.—The British steamer Louisiana, Capt. Edwards, from Liverpool, April 18, via Colon, has just arrived here. Capt. Edwards turned over nine of his firemen and coal trimmers to the Kingston police for refusing to work while at sea.

Damages for an Eye.

Faribault, Minn., May 11.—The jury yesterday gave a verdict of $350 for Charles Hofmeister against Edgar and Marshall Denny for an injury to an eye produced by a slungshot in the hands of young Denny. Edgar is the father of Marshall.

Callahan Charged With Perjury.

Omaha, May 11.—Seven counts charging James Callahan, alleged to be one of the abductors of young Cudahy, with perjury on his late trial, were filed yesterday afternoon.

CALIFORNIA HOSPITALITY.

President and His Party Find It Very Warm.

Los Angeles, Cal., May 10.—President McKinley and his party yesterday had their first taste of the hospitality of California. Gov. Gage and the California congressional delegation met the president at Redlands, in the San Bernardino valley yesterday morning and welcomed him to the state. Through an avenue lined with palms and Venetian masts he drove over beds of roses, beneath a triumphal arch of flowers and fruit to the Casa Loma hotel, on the balcony of which the exercises took place. A drive through the orange groves and parks followed. All along the route of the drive ladies showered the president and Mrs. McKinley with flowers. From Redlands down to Los Angeles it was one continuous ovation. Every station was crowded with children with wreaths of flowers in their hands and with cheering men and women. Minute stops were made at Colton, Ontario and Pomona, and at 2:30 o'clock the train drew into Los Angeles. Steam whistles screamed, cannon boomed, and as the train passed through the Chinese quarter long strings of firecrackers hung from awnings, exploded. The city had been beautifully decorated in honor of the president's coming. The fiesta is in progress here and the town was dressed in carnival colors. At the station the party was met by the citizens' committee and many distinguished people from all over California. Gen. Shafter, commander of the department of the Pacific, with his entire staff, in full uniform, had come down from the Presidio to greet his chief. Secretary of the Navy Long, who was to have met the party at San Francisco, also came here to meet the president and was at the station. The party was driven in carriages to the Vannuys hotel. An escort of artillery and several companies of militia had been provided to escort them, but both the military and police had to fight their way through the enormous crowds which had swarmed into the city, drawn by the double attraction of the president's visit and the carnival. At the hotel the police were obliged to literally force a way to the entrance. There the president met Gov. Nash of Ohio and the Ohio congressional delegation who had arrived by different routes an hour before the president. In the rotunda of the hotel the mayor of Los Angeles formally greeted the chief executive and extended to him the freedom of the city. The president then held a short public reception in the parlors of the hotel. Meantime Mrs. McKinley and the ladies of the party had been driven to the woman's club in Figuero street, where they met the ladies of Los Angeles.

MANY WANT WORK.

Jacksonville People Beginning to Realize the Extent of Their Awful Calamity.

Jacksonville, Fla., May 10.—The full meaning of the widespread suffering in Jacksonville was realized yesterday when it was announced in one of the meetings that a great number of men who had never been used to manual labor were clamoring for work. Among them were clerks, collectors, bookkeepers and even professional men, three young physicians especially declaring their condition destitute as they had lost wardrobes, libraries, office fixtures and everything in the fire. The department of labor has undertaken to give clerical employment to all these applicants. The executive committee of the relief association arranged to establish a sewing tent and twenty-five sewing machines were ordered and other appurtenances which will enable the seamstresses who have lost everything to get to work again, and they will relieve the condition of the fire sufferers who have lost all clothing but that which they are wearing. A laundry also will be erected and the colored laundresses will be started in business again. The situation in the city shows that all of the departments have been arranged systematically and the people are being cared for as well as conditions will permit.

RED BERRETTA IS BESTOWED.

Martinelli Becomes a Full-Fledged Cardinal.

Baltimore, May 10.—Sebastian Martinelli, titular archbishop of Ephesus and cardinal-elect of the Church of Rome, yesterday received at the hands of Cardinal Gibbons the red berretta and donned the robes which will hereafter mark his rank. The ceremony, which is the second step in his elevation to his new position, was marked by all the pomp and brilliance usually attendant upon such occasions. It was held in the cathedral, the first edifice of its kind erected upon American soil, and in which the first American priest and the first American bishop were ordained. Among those who witnessed it were men and women prominent in every walk of life, diplomats, legislators, educators, journalists and ecclesiastics, the latter including ten archbishops, fifty bishops, priests, monks and seminarians.

LOCAL AFFAIR.

No Political Significance in the Bridge Incident at Tien-tsin.

Berlin, May 10. — The Berliner Post publishes an inspired statement regarding the firing by Germans on the British tug Ego at Tien-tsin Saturday. According to this version of the incident, the boat belonged to a British lighterage company, but was being used at the time by the Chinese. It fouled the bridge over the Pei-ho which the Germans were guarding. The German watch called a halt, but the boatmen tried to escape hastily, and as they disregarded the third call the watch fired. The statement concludes by asserting that the incident was wholly without political significance.

Indemnity Reduced.

Washington, May 10. — Information has been received here confirming the Associated Press dispatch form Pekin regarding the amount of indemnity to be demanded. The amount has been reduced to $337,000,000 from $500,000,000.

Ice Blockade Broken.

Chicago, May 10. — A special to the Post from Marine City, Mich., says: The ice blockade in the St. Clair river, which was the worst in the history of the lakes, is broken and navigation is now fully opened.

THE THIEF RIVER FALLS NEWS.

VOL. XVIII. NO. 20. THIEF RIVER FALLS, RED LAKE COUNTY, MINN., THURSDAY, MAY 23, 1901. $1.50 PER YEAR.

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY

END OF THE STRIKE

ALBANY STREET CAR DIFFICULTIES ARE SETTLED.

Both Sides Satisfied and Each Claims a Victory—National Guard Is Promptly Removed—Whole City of Albany Celebrates the Event—Funeral of One of the Strike Victims Almost Ends in a Riot—Crowd Catches Sight of a Soldier and Promptly Gives Chase—Cool Heads Prevent a Riot.

Albany, N. Y., May 21. — The great street railroad strike, lasting twelve days, requiring the presence of 3,000 members of the national guard in the city, costing the lives of two prominent merchants and entailing an expense to the county of Albany of over $39,000, is settled, and if the agreements are kept there will be no trouble for three years at least. The whole city of Albany united in celebrating the event. As usual, both sides to the controversy claim the credit. The withdrawal of the guards was as expeditious as was their bringing here.

The incidents of Sunday, the first day of active operation of all the allied lines since the strike, were very quiet. There were two features. The first was the two men shot by national guardsmen were buried in the afternoon, but the pouring rain kept away the thousands of sightseers that otherwise would have marked the occasion with their presence. The departure of the Twenty-third regiment early in the morning was the second feature of the day, and sermons from many city pulpits aided in closing the incident. The funeral of Leroy Smith was devoid of incident except that it was attended by city officials and directors of the street railway company. At the funeral of William Walsh there was nearly a riot. While the services were proceeding in the church the crowd that had been unable to gain admission saw a uniformed soldier coming down the street. Instantly the people were in a state of ferment. A rush was made for the unlucky soldier, but a few wise heads held the crowd back for a minute, while several others advised the man to run. Arguing that discretion was the better part of valor, he did run and avaided trouble. The starting out of the first car of the Intercity line shortly after noon was the cause of a demonstration. Pistols were fired, flags waved, torpedoes placed on the track and exploded, the motormen and conductors wore flags on their coats, and fully 200 men and women fought for the privilige of the first ride. When the conductor got the car started and rang up the fares he found he had 73 passengers, where usually 55 is a crowd. Within an hour so many cars were running that the monotony kept people from riding for novelty sake.

WEST POINT FEUD UNDECIDED.

Differences Between Cadets and Superintendent Are Before War Department.

West Point, N. Y., May 21. — The statement that eighty cadets are under arrest, growing out of the indignities directed against Col. Mills, superintendent of military academy, is believed here to be false. The story of the disrespect to Col. Mills was published nearly a month ago. An investigation followed and the findings of the court of inquiry were forwarded to the war department at Washington a few days ago and no recommendations have yet been made by the latter tribunal so far as known here. It is true, however, that two cadets are under arrest, the result of a court-martial for a breach of discipline which occurred a couple of weeks ago. Both Col. Mills and his adjutant, Capt. Rivers, are away from the post on leave.

Alger Sells His Timber.

Tacoma, Wash., May 21.—Gen. Russell A. Alger, ex-secretary of war, and ex-Senator Hawley have sold their large timber holdings in Skagit and Whatcom counties in the northwestern portion of the state to the Bellingham Bay & Eastern Railway company. The purchase includes nine miles of railroad running from Blanchard, on lower Bellingham bay, eastward to Alger station on the Great Northern, together with the equipment of the road. There is upward of 300,000,000 feet of timber on the lands. The sale was brought about through Peter Larson of Helena, Mont., who is president of the Bellingham Bay road.

Combine May Go Bump.

Tacoma, Wash., May 21. — The big combine of canneries of the Northwest which it was announced would be perfected May 1, and for which options were later extended to June 1, will not take form even at the last mentioned date. A further extension of thirty days will be asked when the present options have expired. The general opinion among fishermen is that the new combine will not be brought about this year, or until this season's pack has been put up.

Shot by a Boy.

Metropolis, Ill., May 21. — Dennis Reed, an eighteen-year-old boy, shot and seriously wounded George Williams. Reed had called on Williams' daughter against the latter's orders. Williams stepped into the room, objected to the young man's presence in his house and the shooting followed.

Hill Moves to New York.

New York, May 21.—J. J. Hill has decided to make New York his permanent home. The family is coming and he has rented an expensive place.

MRS. M'KINLEY IMPROVING.

Was Able to Sit Up for a While Sunday.

San Francisco, May 21. — Mrs. McKinley's condition was so far improved last night that she was able to sit up awhile. Gen. Shafter called on President McKinley and while they were talking word came down stairs that Mrs. McKinley was sitting up. The president at once asked to be excused and hurried to the sick room. The anxiety caused by Saturday night's bulletin stating that Mrs. McKinley's temperature was higher, was dispelled at 10 o'clock yesterday morning when Secretary Cortelyou announced that she had passed a comfortable night and that the slight fever noted Saturday night had subsided. The president did not attend church yesterday, but remained at home nearly all day, only going out for a short walk just before noon. There were many callers at the Scott residence. There was a general belief that the crisis had been passed and that Mrs. McKinley would continue to gain strength. No definite date has yet been decided upon as to when the president will start for the national capital, but it is hoped that Mrs. McKinley will be able to travel within a few days. Secretary Long left yesterday morning for Colorado Springs to visit his daughter who is ill.

FIFTY THOUSAND MEN AFFECTED.

Big Strike of Machinists Scheduled for To-Day.

Washington, May 21. — The strike order issued by the executive board of the International Order of Machinists goes into effect to-day. President O'Connell said that about 50,000 men will be affected. The order instructs the men to refuse to go to work in all shops where notices granting the nine-hour workday have not been posted by 7 o'clock. The officers of the association expect that in many cases a settlement will be reached during the day and that the men will return to work to-day or to-morrow morning. Word came yesterday that all the firms in St Louis and also all those in New Orleans had acceded to the demands of the men. Scattered reports from other cities favorable to the men also were received. The estimate now is that 35 per cent of the employing firms have signed. At least 25,000 union machinists were working nine hours or less when the question was taken up by the association. The 50,000 men who will suspend work are scattered all over the country. The national officers are hopeful that speedy settlements will be reached in most of the Eastern cities, but they fear a more prolonged struggle on the Pacific coast. The Union Iron works at San Francisco, where the battleship Ohio is building, and other large concerns, are preparing to resist the demand. In a number of the cities there are questions pending between the employers and men which may operate to prevent decisive action to-day, but which may be settled for or against a strike in a day or two. These include cities where counter propositions have been made by the manufacturers and where conferences with headquarters at Washington may be necessary before action is taken.

PETTIGREW FOR N. P. PRESIDENT.

South Dakota Senator Said to Be Slated to Succeed Mellen.

Washington, May 21.—Former Senator Richard F. Pettigrew of South Dakota has intimated to some of his confidential friends that he is to become president of the Northern Pacific railroad. Mr. Pettigrew was in Washington Saturday on his way to New York. He has a large block of Northern Pacific stock, which is to be placed at the disposal of James J. Hill, and Mr. Pettigrew is confident that Hill and Morgan have control of the road. The report that Mr. Mellen, president of the Northern Pacific, is to become president of the New York Central, is regarded by Mr. Pettigrew's friends as a move in his interest, and that Mr. Hill will make Pettigrew Mellen's successor as president of the Northern Pacific.

BATTLESHIP OHIO AFLOAT.

President McKinley and Gov. Nash Among the Guests at Launching.

San Francisco, May 21.—In the presence of President McKinley, Gov. Nash of Ohio, many members of congress, high officials and distinguished men of the navy and army the battleship Ohio made its plunge into the sea Saturday. Fifty thousand persons cheered themselves hoarse; the big guns of the warships boomed out a salute, and every steam whistle within a radius of five miles shrieked its loudest as the steel monster slid into the water. The noise lasted nearly half an hour. The president was greeted with a cheer by the workmen who listened to his address and was presented with a gold plate in memory of the occasion.

STEAM LAUNCH WRECKED.

Excursion Party Rescued With Great Difficulty.

St. Paul, May 21.—The steam launch Lilian B., loaded with men and women, ran into a pier of the Chicago Great Western bridge yesterday. The starboard side of the craft was stove in and in a few minutes it was filled with water and rapidly sinking. Only the promptness of several boatmen on Raspberry island saved the lives of those on board. The only mishap, however, was the wetting of the whole party, although all were badly frightened.

Plague Decreasing.

Cape Town, May 20.—There has been only one case of plague reported since Friday. The total number of cases to date have been 639, of which 292 have proved fatal.

A DIVIDED REPORT

CUBAN COMMITTEE ON RELATIONS NOT A UNIT.

Majority and Minority Reports to Be Submitted to the Convention—Majority Report Is Not a Complete Acceptance of the Platt Amendment, as It Distinguishes Intervention on Different Grounds—Minority Report Says Platt Amendment Does Not Express the Wishes of the People of the United States.

Havana, May 21.—The committee on relations of the Cuban constitutional convention will submit majority and minority reports to the convention today. The majority report quotes article 1 of the treaty of Paris, the joint resolution of the United States congress and the Platt amendment, and then proceeds as follows:

"Inasmuch as Secretary Root, being authorized by President McKinley, says the Platt law has for its object the guaranteeing of the independence of Cuba and does not mean interference with its government or the exercise of a protectorate or of sovereignty, and also that intervention will only take place when independence is endangered by outside powers or grave interior disturbances, creating anarchy; and, inasmuch as Secretary Root has said that the naval stations will not be used for vantage points of intervention, but only to protect Cuba against foreign powers, we report as follows:

"That in virtue of the fact that the Platt law, in its preamble, says it is a fulfilment of the joint resolution and has been adopted by congress with the principal object of establishing independence, we do propose to the convention to accept the following as an appendix to the constitution."

The first, second, fourth and fifth clauses are quoted in their entirety. The third clause has the following addition:

"It being understood that the United States have

Right to Intervene

to prevent the action of a foreign power or disturbances causing a state of anarchy, and that the intervention shall always be the act of the United States and not of isolated agents. The intervention shall suppose neither sovereignty nor a protectorate and shall last only sufficiently long to establish normal conditions. Said intervention, it is also understood, shall not have the right to interfere in the government, but only the right to preserve independence."

An addition to the sixth clause says ownership of the Isle of Pines shall be settled by a future treaty. An addition to the seventh clause says:

"It shall be understood that the naval stations do not give the United States the right to interfere with the interior government, but are established for the sole purpose of protecting American waters from foreign invasion directed against Cuba or the United States. Cuba will sell or lease the necessary lands at points to be agreed upon later."

An addition to the eighth clause says that the government of Cuba suggests at the same time a treaty of commerce based upon reciprocity.

The minority report says:

"The explanations given to the commission in Washington show that the Platt law does not express the wishes of the United States. It was intended to protect the independence of Cuba, but the wording gives other interpretations.

Charges Inconsistency.

The United States are inconsistent in asking naval stations, when the amendment provides that no concessions shall be given to foreign powers. Such a demand raises the question whether the United States dies not consider Cuba a part of their possessions."

The report of the minority virtually accepts the first and second clauses. For the third clause the following is substituted:

"That the government of Cuba subscribes to the Monroe doctrine and will help the United States to enforce it against other nations trying to violate it."

For the fourth clause the following is substituted:

"Cuba does not recognize acts of intervention which are not in conformity with the Foraker resolution and the laws of the United States."

The seventh clause reads:

"Cuba will maintain naval stations, handing them over to the United States in time of war."

The minority report recommends a commercial treaty based upon reciprocity.

The report of the majority has caused considerable surprise. It was generally believed that the committee on relations would recommend an acceptance o fthe Platt amendment on the basis of the interpretation given by Secretary Root, but it was not expected that such additions would be made to various clauses as the majority recommend.

TO STAND TRIAL.

Arthur H. Noyes Charged With Contempt.

San Francisco, May 21.—Judge Arthur H. Noyes, ex-Congressman Garey and District Attorney Woods of Alaska must stand trial for alleged contempt of the United States circuit court of appeals as a result of action taken and advice given after Judge Morrow had issued a writ of supersedeas in the McKenzie case.

KILLED HIS BROTHER-IN-LAW.

Family Quarrel Ends in a Tragedy —Murderer Escapes.

St. Paul, May 21. — Henry Mingers went to the home of his sister, 605 South Smith avenue, at 9 o'clock last night and killed her husband, Frank Greipel, by firing three shots from a 38-caliber revolver into his body. Mingers made his escape. One of the shots entered the breast above the heart, a second passed through the center of the breast, and a third bullet struck the left temple. There are two bullet wounds on the left forearm, but these it is thought were caused by the victim raising his arm for protection. The body was removed to the morgue and Coroner Miller will hold an inquest and post mortem examination today. The tragedy was the climax of a series of quarrels between the two men it is stated.

THREE NOW REPORTED DEAD.

Lake Bemidji Disaster Grows Worse as the Final Count Is Made.

Bemidji, Minn., May 21. — The Norwegian celebration disaster was more horrible than reported. Joe Marchaud, twenty-six years old, of Shevlin; Fred Driven, ten years old, and Richard Zacharias, eleven years old, both of Bemidji, lie in the bottom of the lake, and Fred McCauley, twelve years old, and Adolph Zacharias, ten years old, lie at the point of death from burns all over their bodies. The other injured are recovering. Dozens of boats were out all day dragging the lake without success. G. A. Smith of Solway and Albert Snecta of Rosby are in the hospital covered with burns, but will recover.

School Scheme Works Well.

Aberdeen, S. D., May 21.—The centralized school system has proven very successful wherever put in operation, and already has many strong advocates in this section of the state. It is the intention to establish and carry out the centralization idea in Bath township, east of this city. It is estimated that a saving of $1,146 can be saved by the new system and at the same time give better service to the scholars in attendance.

Militia Will Participate.

Fargo, N. D., May 21. — Replies are being received from the members of the different militia organizations in answer to the invitation to be present during the Fargo fire festival. All are of an encouraging nature and the majority are expected to be present. The soldier feature will also be in the nature of a reunion, as so many of the members of the militia are also veterans of the Philippine service.

Homestake Tunnel on Fire.

Lead, S. D., May 21.—One of the old tunnels in the Homestake mine has been discovered to be on fire. It has been burning for sometime and has gained considerable headway. There is no danger of its spreading to other portions of the mine. The fire is in a portion of the mine that has been abandoned for several years. It will be a difficult matter to get the fire under control.

Promising Berry Crop.

Sparta, Wis., May 21.—Prospects for berries and other small fruit in this section have never been as favorable as at present. The spring has been early and exceedingly warm, with sufficient showers to keep the ground moist. Growers think we are now safe from frosts and say unless something unforeseen happens the crop will be immense. All other crops look splendid.

New State Bank.

Sioux Falls, S. D., May 21.—Arlington is to have a new state bank, to be established by J. B. Sullivan and John McKenzie of Lake Benton, Minn., and A. P. Bertelsen of Elkton, S. D. Mr. Sullivan will have the active management of the institution, which will be opened for business as soon as incorporation is perfected and a building can be completed.

Found in a Cave.

Helena, Mont., May 21.—C. R. Engle, a Beaverhead county ranchman who has been missing two weeks, has been found. A searching party found him in a cave in the mountains. He was in an irrational condition from exposure and lack of food. He soon rallied and will probably recover. His actions are beyond explanation.

Sweet Girl Graduates.

Winona, Minn., May 21.—The list of graduates has been announced at the young ladies' seminary in this city and is as follows: Literary, Miss Mae Madden of Rochester, Miss Mae Erwin of Fisher and Miss Ada Talbot of Winona; piano, Miss Anna Malick of Sleepy Eye and Miss Maud Schneider of Winona.

Foundrymen Strike.

Kenosha, Wis., May 21.—Five hundred men are out of employment here on account of the strike in the foundry of the Simmons Manufacturing company, and if no settlement of the strike is reached within a few days the entire factory will be closed down, adding 600 more men to the ranks of the idlers.

Steamer Goes Ashore.

Milwaukee, May 21. — The steamer Nyack of the Crosby line, went ashore at North Point, this city, during a fog. All the passengers were taken aboard a tug and conveyed to this city. Her damage is not thought to be serious.

Iron Near Anoka.

Anoka, Minn., May 21.—Patrick Manley of Coon Creek, about ten miles north of Minneapolis, thinks he has an iron mine. He has sent samples to Duluth and they assayed 60 per cent iron.

ARE LEAVING CHINA

GEN. CHAFFEE ISSUES HIS FAREWELL ORDER.

Ends the American Relief Expedition in China—Troops Will Board the Transports at Taku Wednesday—Will Go Direct to Manila—Ministers Are Hampered in Their Work by Having to Wait for Instructions by Their Home Governments — Von Waldersee Threatens Chinese.

Pekin, May 21.—At midnight Saturday night Gen. Chaffee issued his farewell order ending the American relief expedition in China. The American troops will board the transports next Wednesday at Taku and Thursday will leave direct for Manila. M. Pichon, the French minister, left here for home yesterday morning.

A meeting of the foreign ministers will be held to-day, but it is not likely much will be accomplished as some ministers have not yet received instructions from their governments. The ministers, commenting upon the blame attached to them by the people for their slowness, say that as a matter of fact they are powerless to act without orders from home. One of the foreign ministers said yesterday that he had been instructed to co-operate heartily with the other ministers. He found upon consultation with his colleagues that their instructions were absolutely different from his. He said co-operation was practically impossible.

Field Marshal Count von Waldersee has been in communication with Li Hung Chang regarding the condition of affairs in the Chenting-fu district. A force of Chinese regulars were recently defeated by Boxers in that district and Count von Waldersee threatens to send a German force to restore order, in which case the regulars will probably themselves suffer severely. Great unrest is reported in this district. Business is stagnant and large numbers of the inhabitants are crossing into the province of Honan. Carts are in great demand for assisting them in their flight.

SURRENDER ON GUNBOATS.

Filipinos Received on Warships and Are Now in Arsenal.

Washington, May 21.—The navy department has received the following cablegram from Admiral Kempff, at Cavite:

"Ensign Owen advises that the Urdaneta and Gardouqui received on board May 17 Gen. Mascardo, 20 officers, 184 men, 226 rifles at Binong Bay and Morang. They are now in arsenal, bound for Marciso, where many desire to surrender to army. Others surrendered to Draper, marine officer at Olangjo. This is the last insurgent force in Zambeles province. Gunboats resumed survey work."

Naval officers assume that the portion of the cablegram reading: "Are now in arsenal bound for Marciso," signifies that the insurgents were received aboard the gunboats in token of a technical surrender, and then sent ashore and detained in the arsenal.

ROUTED ALL COMMANDOES.

Gen. Blood Concludes a Successful Campaign.

Cape Town, May 21. — Gen. Bindon Blood has just concluded a successful concerted movement against the Boers in the Northern Transvaal. The British columns engaged in the operations covered a wide area of territory, routing all the commandoes that opposed them and capturing 1,000 Boers and great quantities of supplies, stock and wagons in various districts. They also compelled the so-called Transvaal government to move again. Gen. Blood conducted the operations in the center, with Col. Plumer on his left flank and Gen. Kitchener on his right. The Boer commander, Gen. Ben Viljoen, abandoned everything and succeeded in making his escape with a few mounted men. The Boers did not make a stand at any point.

KRUGER STILL CONFIDENT.

He Believes That the Boers Will Yet Win.

London, May 21.—A man who recently succeeded in interviewing Mr. Kruger reports that he is fanatically confident that the Boers will win in the end. He is not bitter against England, as he considers that the country has been misled. He was pathetically anxious to know if the war in South Africa had hastened the death of Queen Victoria. He also declared that he did not believe that God would desert his chosen people—the Boers.

ROBBERS ESCAPE FROM POSSE.

Bank Burglars and Citizens of Hurland, Mo., Have a Pistol Fight.

Quincy, Ill., May 21.—Five men who attempted to rob the Farmers' Bank at Hurland, Mo., fifty miles west of Quincy, secured no booty, but they escaped after a running fight with citizens. The robbers got into the building and were drilling holes in the safe when they were discovered by the town marshal. He gave the alarm, and a posse of citizens soon assembled, armed with revolvers and shotguns. The robbers fled and a battle ensued in which many shots were exchanged, but no one was wounded. The robbers succeeded in making their escape to the woods and have not yet been captured. Large posses are searching the country for them, but no trace of the men has been found

The latest Swiss mountain railway project is to connect the Engardine with the Italian lake by a road over the Bernia range.

The man who stole the $100 microscope from the University of Chicago might have had a curiosity to see what a 100-pound chunk of ice looked like.

Owing to American sanitary work, there was not a single case of yellow fever in Havana at the beginning of April. This had not happened before in the city's history. The Cubans may not like the American government, but it is at least increasing the number of Cubans who have an opportunity to dislike it.

Mrs. F. M. Smith of Oakland, Cal., wife of the "borax king," is going to adopt 100 girls and rear them as her own children. Mrs. Smith's 100 daughters will live in ten houses, ten girls to each house, on a 35-acre tract of land near Arbor Villa. Mrs. Smith's home is in Oakland. The first of the ten houses is already being built, and work on the others will begin at once.

An adjustable wall is made with an ordinary eightpenny nail, with hole in the head, through which passes a curved galvanized wire. The nail is driven into the studding, and the curved wire laid flat on the brick, and covered with mortar. Being perfectly adjustable, if the building sags or the sheeting shrinks, the bond will not be broken, but remain solid, and intact between the brick in the wall.

John Pondir, once a power in Wall street and for years one of the "ghosts of the street," died recently in great poverty. Pondir launched the Sutro tunnel scheme, and was a great deal in Pacific Mail and Panama railroad stock. At the time of Adolph Sutro's death Pondir had a suit for $1,000,000 against him. In the days of Gould and Fisk he was a well known figure at all the theaters and in old Delmonico's.

King Edward is understood to hold broad views respecting colonial titles, and there has been a suggestion that in the process of unifying the British empire the creation of peerages with such titles attached as "Duke of Quebec," "Earl of Montreal," or "Marquis of Toronto," might be useful. The Toronto Globe meets the intimation by saying "Might we, in the most loyal and dutiful way, beseech his majesty to spare us? We are doing so nicely as it is, most gracious sovereign!"

Clarence Bush went to Harvard university without a dollar, lodged in an attic at a dollar a week, and lived on gruel, milk and water. But he had the material in him of which millionaires are made, and, after a year's starvation, saw his opportunity. He managed to get hold of a cow and a churn, and began to peddle butter of his own make on the streets of Cambridge. While he was studying mathematics, astronomy and chemistry, he was also learning the business of butter-making, and now he is graduated with a salary of $5,000 from a great New York creamery company awaiting him.

The launch of the steamer Celtic at Belfast, Ireland, the other day, still further emphasizes the tendency to increase the dimensions of ocean-going craft. The Celtic is the largest vessel ever built, not only surpassing the Oceanic and the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse, but having a displacement 10,300 tons greater than the Great Eastern. Her dimensions are: Length, 681 feet; beam, 75 feet; depth, 44 feet; gross tonnage, 20,880; net, 13,650; displacement, 33,000. The Celtic is not designed for speed but as an emigrant carrier, her capacity being 2,859 passengers, besides a crew of 335. Although the Celtic is too slow to be conspicuous as an "ocean greyhound," her enormous size will make her an object of keen interest, at least until the advent of a greater.

The new Bishop of London has already given his diocese a glimpse of his sterling democracy. Speaking to an audience of working men at a neighborhood settlement house in Whitechapel, he said that he had often noticed in coffee-houses the sign, "A good pull-up for cabmen." He intended to make the settlement house a "good pull-up for bishops." His office, he found, required that he keep a carriage; but if any of his hearers saw him driving alone he hoped they would give him a hail; he should be glad to give them a lift. Bishop Ingram has been a most sympathetic and successful worker among the poor and unfortunate of East London, to whom he is a familiar figure and a trusted friend. The king has recently placed the stamp of royal approval on his work by appointing him dean of the royal chapels.

A witness to ocean solitude recently reached Liverpool. A four-masted vessel, which sailed seven months before from San Francisco, entered the Mersey. Since leaving the Golden Gate she has not been spoken. Absolute silence concerning her through more than half a year, and then she appears as answer to all inquiries and speculations. So far as human knowledge goes, it was as if vessel and crew had sailed out of life, and been swallowed up in mystery for those days and months. The ocean as yet, does not suffer from overcrowding.

IN THE WEB OF A SPIDER..............

LILLIAN GILLIN.

CHAPTER XX—(Continued.)

"The library—last night, Beatrice?" he repeated. "My dear child, what can you mean? Have you been dreaming? I was not in the library last night. Allen and I were the last to separate, and he bade me good-night on the threshold of my own room, which I did not leave again."

As in a maze, Beatrice began to see the workings of his plot—less dimly, very faintly, she could peer into its labyrinths.

But the curtain which had concealed from her the very possibility of human wickedness, so cunningly devised and skilfully executed, was being slowly lifted, and even this indistinct view thus gained caused her soul to turn sick with dread.

She made him no further reply.

Involuntarily, she looked toward Allen. With studious care he was selecting the choicest grapes to lay upon Miss Lorrimer's plate. Mrs. Layton sat quietly discussing her breakfast, deaf to the conversation. Cora's glance alone met hers. It was full of tender sympathy.

Rising abruptly from the table, she hastily left the room.

"I believe they all think me mad!" she said, aloud, as she closed behind her the door. "I believe they all think me mad! I must have outside help. I cannot bear this alone!"

She was calm now, but it was a calm more pitiful than the excitement which had preceded it.

With despairing gesture she pushed away with her hands the little, clustering rings of sunny hair from the low, white brow, as though their weight oppressed her.

"What can I do?" she said, again. "What can I do? Oh, Bertie! Bertie! have you, too, failed me?"

Just once, she thought, to lay her tired head on his faithful breast—oh, God, to close her eyes and die there! What greater bliss could be offered her? It could not be that, knowing her great need of him, he would find some way to reach her, as she must find some way to let him know this need.

"Bertie, come to me," she wrote. "Come in the guise you promised to assume, but let me know that you are near me. I have returned to Grey Oaks. I am back in the cruel web of the iniquitous spider. Closer and closer he is binding with his merciless withes my fluttering wings. They will soon cease the struggle. Hasten to save me before it is too late!"

Even to write the words brought her some relief; but, having writen them, how could her message reach him?

As she put to herself the perplexing question, a low knock sounded on her door.

CHAPTER XXI.

It was Cora, who, almost timidly, in obedience to her summons to enter, ventured in, not closing the door behind her.

She came forward and knelt beside the chair in which Beatrice sat.

"I want you to look at me—to speak to me!" she said, impulsively. "Everything here is so strange to-day that I feel as if I were dreaming. Are you really Beatrice Markham? Do you know, I could not sleep last night? And I wanted so much to tell you that I love you even better than before, and that I am so, so sorry for all that you have suffered!"

It seemed to Beatrice that she was years older than the child who knelt beside her; yet how short a time ago she, too, had been a girl, happy and lighthearted, unconscious of a care!

"Can I do nothing for you?" pursued Cora, looking up wistfully into the beautiful face, with the eyes gazing ahead so sadly into nothingness.

They turned toward her as she spoke—turned, with a searching, eager light.

Might she not find here an answer to the question which an instant before had seemed so hopeless? was the thought that came to Beatrice almost as an inspiration. Cora, at least, was faithful and true, and it was a little, such a little thing she asked of her.

"May I trust you, dear?" she questioned.

"Indeed—indeed you may! Oh, you will let me help you, then?"

"Yes, Cora, you may help me very greatly. Listen! I have a friend—a very dear and faithful friend—to whom I must send a written message. I dare not put it in the post bag, for I know that it would never reach its destination, and, besides, it would betray him to his enemies; for Randolph Chester is his enemy, as he is mine. It must be posted in the village. I cannot do this, for I should be watched. I dare not trust the servants. Cora, will you do it for me?"

"With all my heart! Give me the letter. It shall be mailed this very day!"

"And you will never let it pass from you hands, Cora, except into the mail? And you will keep my secret faithfully?"

"You need not doubt me," answered Cora, and she meant the words in all loyalty.

That she failed later in her trust was through no fault of the latter quality.

"Thank God for having sent you to me!" exclaimed Beatrice. "Oh, Cora, you have given me new life!"

And, putting the letter she had just completed into an envelope, she sealed, stamped and addressed it; then gave it to the girl, who slipped it in the bosom of her dress.

"I am going to the postoffice at once!" she cried, springing up. "In an hour I shall come back to tell you that my mission is fulfilled. Do you know, Beatrice, I feel as if I were assisting some heroine in a play?"

Beatrice smiled sadly.

"God help the heroines, if such is the clay that moulds them!" she answered.

But her heart felt lighter when Cora had gone. It almost seemed as though an angel had visited her. Meanwhile, the angel, with a coquettish hat becomingly adjusted on her pretty head, came tripping down the grand old staircase, and boldly opened the great hall door; but ere she had time to close it, a preventing hand was laid upon it, and Randolph Chester's face smiled into hers.

"Are you going to venture for a walk, Miss Cora?" he asked, bending his gaze upon her, and noting that her eyes fell beneath his glance, while the color flushed her cheek.

"Yes," she answered. "The sunshine tempted me. Besides, Mr. Chester, I am going shopping in your village, so you must not detain me."

"Shopping?" he repeated after her. "Why, then, should I not be initiated into its mysteries? Permit me to accompany you."

"No, I would rather go alone. Please, let me go alone," she urged, forgetting her politeness and caution in her eagerness.

The man's dark eyes flashed; but he dropped their lids, and she noted nothing.

He had watched her go to Beatrice's room. He now guessed that her errand and this visit were closely allied.

He had been fully conscious, too, of the influence he might exert over this child.

Heretofore he had been too much engrossed by weightier matters to give it due attention. It behooved him now to exercise it.

"You will not deprive me of a quiet walk with you, Miss Cora?" he said, in gentle reproach, while his eyes met hers with a look which seemed to burn into her soul, and thrilled her with strange, new happiness. "How have I sinned against you, that you should be so cruel, and what may I do to win forgiveness?"

"Well, the letter could not be posted to-day," thought Cora. "It must wait until to-morrow, but Beatrice would understand that the delay was through no fault of hers."

"Come with me if you will, Mr. Chester," she said, aloud. "I only feared that it might bore you."

"Bore me to be with you, Miss Cora?" he questioned, in accents of surprise. "You do not know how it rests me," he continued, walking on by her side, "to come near you. I have had so much sorrow of late that to be near one who does not even guess the meaning of the word brings comfort of itself. Then, too, some subtle sympathy has told me that you, too, love my cousin, and can guess what I must suffer in having her restored to me with her once brilliant mind clouded, if not forever shattered."

He paused, as though he could say no more.

Cora's own eyes were filled with tears.

"I—I think you are wrong," she ventured, timidly. "We have been so much together, and I have seen no sign of a disordered mind."

He smiled indulgently.

"She has cunningly concealed it. But you heard her last night say that a voice from the dead had commanded her to return to her home; and this morning she detailed a long conversation as taking place between us last night, all of which exists only in her imagination. But I have a greater fear for her. Will you pardon me, Miss Cora, if I burden you with my burdens and my alarms? I do not know how it is, but something in your nature tells me that I may dare claim your sympathy. Beatrice, as I have told you, was my affianced wife. Since the fatal shock of her father's death, the most singular phase of her madness is to look upon me as her enemy, and to regard the man who robbed her father—and who, indeed, proved his assassin, since the consequent excitement upon the robbery proved his death—as her friend and lover. He was confined in prison, but escaped; and should Beatrice meet him, she would unhesitatingly do whatever he bade her. He is utterly unscrupulous, and has already attempted to force his way into her presence. You can understand now the terrible and increasing anxiety under which I labor. Think what her awakening would be, should reason return to her, to find herself in this man's power, and lost to me forever!"

Again his voice broke; but his keen eyes, under their dark lashes, watched her covertly, saw the blood recede from her cheeks until they were of a ghastly whiteness, and her lips quivered, while an awful sense of responsibility seemed to crush her with its unwonted weight.

The letter burned like a red-hot coal in her bosom.

She doubted not that it was to him of whom Chester had spoken.

His honor, his truth, she had no reason to doubt. Besides, had he not pleaded his love for Beatrice? And what else could be his motive?

Chester saw that the time to strike, and strike boldly, had come.

He stopped abruptly in the middle of the road, and quickly caught her one little gloved hand, forcing her, likewise, to pause.

Then he bent his eyes full upon her face, compelling her to slowly raise her lids and let her eyes meet his.

Through their clear depths he read down into her transparent soul.

"Cora," he said, "you are the bearer of some message to the man of whom I have just told you, though half his wickedness I could not tell you. Your heart is too pure to comprehend. If you would save Beatrice from herself, give me this message."

His eyes were more imperative than his words. She felt under the potent influence of some subtle spell.

His glance never wandered from her face. His hand tightened its pressure upon hers.

Instinctively her disengaged fingers sought the letter. Another moment, and it lay before Randolph Chester's hungry gaze. His own hand reached out and grasped it.

But the clear, bracing air which that moment fanned Beatrice's fevered cheek as she leaned from her open window and prayed heaven to speed her message on its course, brought her no whisper of the fatal truth.

CHAPTER XXII.

"Oh, give it back to me!" cried Cora, as her fingers closed upon the trust she had betrayed. "It cannot be just as you say! Or, even so, I cannot prove false to my word!"

"My child, I have already told you Beatrice is not responsible for her own acts. We who love her so well cannot guard her too closely. Do you trust me so little, Cora, that you think I would intercept any message she would care to send, did I not know how hurtful it would prove to her? Take back the letter, then! Go your way with it! Only remember that you must accept the responsibility of your own act!"

He half-turned away, an expression of pain upon his handsome face.

The child wavered, but his subtle influence was upon her. She gently thrust aside his extended arm.

"Do as you will with it," she said.

He caught her little hands again, and gently pressed them.

"Walk back with me to the lodge," he said, gently. "I wish to leave some orders there. Then we will go on to the village together for our promised shopping."

They turned back. The lodge gates stood open; the lodge door was closed.

He knocked imperatively.

After some delay a shuffling step was heard within, a bolt was withdrawn and the door flung open.

Instinctively Cora shrank back.

A man, evidently scarcely recovered from a night's debauch, stood on the threshold.

Indeed, in his hand he held a jug, the hot fumes of whose contents mingling with the fresh air testified that it was not yet ended. But in his master's presence he seemed in no wise embarrassed or confused.

"You drunken fool!" cried Chester, angrily. "Wait for me outside, Miss Cora. If you will walk up and down before the gates I will rejoin you in a very few moments."

"So this is how you attend to your duties?" he added to Tyrrell, as Cora hastened, gladly, to obey him.

The man muttered a few words beneath his breath, but they were neither excuse nor explanation.

Chester's eyes lighted on the steaming jug and, walking rapidly toward it, he held over it the letter which had just fallen into his hands.

From under his red, bleared eyelids Tyrrell watched him.

The steam soon did its work. The envelope, moistened, but otherwise uninjured, was readily unsealed. Beatrice's eager cry to Talbot was spread before his gaze.

An instant sufficed for him to gain its meaning. A cruel, triumphant light shot into his eyes.

This letter must not fail to reach its destination. It would bring Talbot here and in disguise. Ha, ha! Once warned, what disguise would conceal the truth from him?

The trap was set, and by Beatrice's own fair hands. He had but to wait and watch—wait and watch! No danger of him sleeping on his post. The fly already in his web had brought another victim. Well, the spider would have in readiness the withes from which, this time, there should be no release.

"Let me find you in this condition again, and I'll turn you out of doors, neck and heels!" he flung to Tyrrell, as a parting admonition, as, with the precious missive resealed, he advanced, smilingly, towards Cora.

"I'm not thinking that you will," muttered the man after him, "for I might be turning you out, 'neck and heels,' of yer fine house on the hill, I'm thinking! And, after all," closing the door and taking a copious draught from the still steaming jug, "it's doing me better service, this same jug, this minute, than the dirty, mane task you set it yourself! Ah, it's no good y're up to, and nobody knows it better than Tyrrell O'Byrne!"

But no trace of the "dirty, mane task" was visible in the radiant smile on Randolph Chester's handsome features, as, meeting Cora, he drew her hand within his arm.

In his presence, the scruples which tortured her took instant flight.

"What will I say to Beatrice?" she asked.

"Humor her, my child. Tell her that you have mailed the letter!"

"You think it would not be wrong to so deceive her?"

"Would I so advise you were it wrong?" he tenderly asked.

And once more, poor, little fluttering bird, fascinated and beguiled, she felt a very ecstacy of happiness at the low-whispered question.

Nevertheless, all unknown to her, when from the village they turned their faces homeward her mission had been accomplished, and the letter calling Bertram Talbot to Grey Oaks was on its way toward its destination.

Beatrice's former rooms had been assigned Miss Lorrimer, and in them, some few mornings later, she sat in deep thought.

Things were not working to her satisfaction. She was learning to hate Beatrice Markham with a bitter hatred; to hate the beauty which beguiled her lover's glance; to hate the sweet, low voice which yet held such a note of sadness; to hate the very misfortunes which served to lend her, by their very atmosphere, a greater charm.

Bitterly, too, she regretted having given her consent to this visit. Chester's course in boldly acknowledging his cousin, had taken her, like Beatrice, by surprise, and had but endowed her to Allen with fresh interest.

What should she do? How should she act? In what way make her appear in his eyes unworthy? Only thus might she regain control of his heart. Regain! Ah, he had never loved her, and now—soon he would look upon his marriage to her with aversion.

She felt it—knew it—and her passion for him but flamed the fiercer for the bitter and humiliating knowledge.

Such thoughts made the heated air of the room intolerable. She threw open the window, and leaned out her head, that the light and wind might fan her burning temples.

As she did so, her attention was attracted by two men standing directly beneath her. One was Tyrrell, the man who kept the lodge, and one an old man, with bowed frame and long, white beard. His trembling hands held a staff.

"I'm stronger than I look, when I have proper food," she heard the latter say, "and I could work, if you'd find it for me to do."

"I've nothing for ye," answered Tyrrell.

And just then another figure appeared upon the scene. It was Beatrice, and in her rich furs, she looked, indeed, fitting mistress of the beautiful old place.

"Poor old man," she said, kindly. "What do you want?"

"Work, miss, and a home," he answered.

"Unfortunately, I can do nothing for you," she sadly replied. "My authority here is gone, or you should not be turned away."

The surly look left Tyrrell's face, and he shuffled a step toward her.

"If it would plase you, Miss Beatrice, I don't mind giving him a room in the lodge, and odd chores, now and then, as he's able. I'd like to do something to please you, miss."

Beatrice drew back. The man's manner had a hidden eagerness she could not understand.

"You must consult your master, Tyrrell, not me," she answered, coldly, and moved away.

But Tyrrell, turning to the old man, bade him stay, and roughly ordered him to the lodge.

That night on her dressing table, Miss Lorrimer found a note pinned.

"Courage," it read. "I am here, my darling. Be brave, be patient, and, above all things, cautious, lest you betray us both."

She did not quite understand its meaning, but she understood enough to know that it portended aid and comfort to Beatrice, for whose eye it was intended. Before she slept she had inclosed it to her host.

"Am I doing right?" she added to her short explanation concerning it. "I cannot tell. But, as I occupy Miss Markham's old rooms, I thought it might be the answer to some appeal made by that poor, mad girl, and deemed it my duty to be frank with you."

The fire of triumph blazed high in Randolph Chester's eyes as he, next morning, read these lines, and let his hungry gaze gloat on their inclosure.

So the fly had fluttered into his web at last. He, too, must be cautious—must be wary—that the web was strong to hold. Bertram Talbot was at Grey Oaks! Poor, awkward plotter, who had already twice betrayed himself!

Impelled to movement by excitement, he rose from his chair, and crossing the room, looked idly from the window.

A light snow had fallen during the night, and an old man was brushing it away from the paths. He worked well, spite of his bowed frame and white hairs.

Randolph started as his glance fell on him. He watched him long and keenly, with a curious glitter in his eyes. Then, impatiently, he touched a bell near his hand. To the servant who appeared, he said:

"Who is the old man? No one I have employed?"

"Tyrrell engaged him yesterday, sir," was the response.

"Send Tyrrell to me."

Five minutes later the lodge-keeper shuffled into the room.

"You have engaged a new man, I see, Tyrrell?" asked his master.

"Yes," he replied. "He's not good for much; but Miss Beatrice spoke to him, and seemed not to like my turning him away."

"Miss Beatrice spoke to him, eh? And what's your new man's name?"

"John Armstrong, sir."

"You fool!" thundered Chester. "Would you like me to tell you his name?"

He laid his hand on his servant's shoulder, and, leaning forward, hissed, in a low, trenchant whisper, two words into his ear.

Tyrrell's face grew ghastly white.

"Now, listen to my orders concerning him," continued Randolph, in his natural tone.

But when, five minutes later, Tyrrell went from the room, though the message from his master had found him quite sober, the color had not returned to his cheeks, and he staggered like a man drunk with wine.

(To Be Continued.)

Ship's Cow Boo-ed in Reply.

The captain of an English steamer spun a yarn the other day of the mysterious "Boo-o-o," which answered his foghorn. He was steaming down the Channel, when the thick fog came on. At such times he never leaves the bridge, and sounds the fog horn himself. On this occasion, after sounding the signal, he heard a fog horn in reply right ahead. He turned the ship's head a point, to avoid collision, and then sounded again. Again the reply came, "Boo-o-o!" right ahead as before. The vessel's head was put back to the same position as at first, and once more the fog horn was sounded. Still the reply came, as before, right ahead, "Boo-o-o!" "It was very strange—I could not make it out," said the captain, telling the yarn. "I tried it again; still the same, 'Boo-o-o!' right ahead. A feeling of superstition began to creep over me, and I was giving myself a mental shake to pull myself together, when the lookout man called out: 'It's the old cow, sir.' And so, in truth, it was—the milch cow kept on the forecastle for the use of the ship. She, no doubt, took the 'boo-o-oing' of the signal for the cry of a companion in distress, and gave a sympathetic response."—New York Times.

A Boer Maiden's Costume.

The fashionable young woman of the one-time Boer republic is nothing if not brilliant in attire. This is a description of a costume seen on the principal street of Natal: A carmine plush skirt, a blue silk blouse with trimmings of pink chiffon, large leghorn hat trimmed with one red and two blue ostrich feathers, white kid gloves, brown boots and white sun-shade lined with pink.—New York Tribune.

He Would Know.

He—I suppose we would better let him think so.

She—Yes; but we've got to get married some time.—Detroit Free Press.

KIDNAPPED HIS CHILDREN.

South Dakota Mining Man Takes His Children Away From Oshkosh.

Oshkosh, Wis., May 17.—Two Oshkosh children, Ted and Baring Gould, have been kidnapped, presumably by their father, who has not been living with his wife for two years. He is an Englishman, and has been interested in mining in South Dakota. The children were missing Monday noon, and later in the day a telegram was received from the father by the mother, stating that he had taken the boys for a trip, and had not had time to notify the mother. Chicago detectives were notified, and they announced they had located the children. The parties are prominent. Mrs. Baring Gould was formerly Miss Mamie Bigger of Oshkosh, daughter of a wealthy dry goods merchant. Mr. Gould has been in South Dakota. His visit here was unknown to any until his telegram was received.

NINE HORSES PERISHED.

Also Three Cows in a Boarding Barn Fire at Pierre.

Pierre, S. D., May 17. — Fire early yesterday morning destroyed a boarding barn belonging to A. S. Guthrie, and with it nine horses and three cows, besides harnesses and feed. The loss on the building is about $1,000, with about the same on contents, and no insurance. Adjoining property was damaged several hundred dollars, which is covered by insurance. The cause of fire is unknown.

GRAND LODGE ELECTION.

A. O. U. W. Is Preparing for Final Adjournment.

Huron, S. D., May 17.—At yesterday morning's session of the A. O. U. W. grand lodge, jurisdiction of South Dakota, Fred B. Smith of Hecla, was re-elected grand master, and J. D. Lavine of Aberdeen, grand recorder; Sol Starr of Deadwood was re-elected grand foreman. He withdrew from the contest for grand master in favor of Mr. Smith.

Recruiting at Fort Meade.

Fort Meade, S. D., May 17.—Already enough men have enlisted here for one troop of the Thirteenth United States cavalry and Troop A is being organized. Capt. R. C. Williams, recently promoted from first lieutenant of the First cavalry, is in command. Troop B will be organized just as soon as a sufficient number of men enlist. Both the A and B troops will be sent to Fort Assinniboine, Mont., which will leave but one troop here, that being Troop H of the First cavalry.

Telephone Company's Acquisitions.

Sioux City, Iowa, May 17.—The Western Electric Telephone company has just come into possession of the Greene & Western company's system, including 450 miles of toll line and exchanges at Mason City, Charles City and Osage. The concern now reaches every town in the northwestern twenty-six counties of Iowa, with a number of local exchanges. Three hundred miles of toll lines are to be built in Minnesota and South Dakota.

Possible Cause of Typhoid.

Ashland, Wis., May 17.—The discovery has been made that electrolysis is destroying the water pipes in Ashland. One section of eighty feet was taken up, crumbling like decayed wood. It is thought that this may account for the impurities in the drinking water that caused the typhoid epidemic last winter. The damage is greatest near the electric car lines, but how extensive is not known.

Child Accidentally Killed.

Dassel, Minn., May 17. — The five-year-old daughter of E. Fuller was almost instantly killed by a large belt tightening wheel falling from its casting in a sawmill five miles south of here and striking her across the neck and breast. The child was playing in the mill when the accident occurred. She died before medical help could be secured.

Removed to Mexico.

Northfield, Minn., May 17.—The family of Prof. A. H. Pearson, who until the current year was professor of philosophy at Carleton college, left yesterday for their new home in Guadalajara, Mex., where Prof. Pearson has accepted the position of superintendent of the American schools, the change being necessitated on account of his health.

Change in Mail Route.

Washington, May 17. — Congressman Tawney has been advised that beginning to-day the run of salary postal clerks on the Lyle & Waterloo line has been extended to commence at Albert Lea, and the name of the name of the route is changed to Albert Lea & Waterloo postal route. The increase of distance is twenty-five miles.

Freaks of Lightning.

Davenport, N. D., May 17.—Lightning struck Hans Murahas' barn at 7 o'clock last evening, killing his four horses. The barn had just been filled with hay. Estimated loss, $700.

-o-

Bemidji, Minn., May 17. — During a severe electrical storm last evening Jack and Edward Hoyt were badly stunned and a horse was killed which they were unhitching.

Chinch Bugs Have Arrived.

Kasson, Minn., May 17.—Large numbers of chinch bugs are passing through this vicinity, and unless there is a heavy rainfall serious damage will be done to the crops by them.

Summer School Instructors.

Faribault, Minn., May 17.—The following instructors will teach at the summer school here: W. W. Kilgore, Willmar, conductor; W. H. Hollands, Wells; Dr. F. E. Stratton, Northfield.

Under Tons of Rock.

Helena, Mont., May 17.—T. D. Clark, a mining man, was instantly killed by a cave-in in a mine in Whisky gulch, Fergus county. Failing to return to supper a search was made and he was found under tons of rock in a tunnel.

Saved His Property and Died.

Ellsworth, Wis., May 17.—The dwelling house of Paul C. Hendrickson, town of El Paso, burned. After assisting in saving his effects Hendrickson fell dead of heart failure. He was seventy-seven years old and an old settler.

She Forgot Her English.

A young Russian woman, who has only been for a few months in this country, is an intrepid speaker of English, and is constantly telling her friends that she has mastered the language in this short space of time without any difficulty whatever. The other afternoon, when she called on a Baltimore girl, she was shown at once to the boudoir of her hostess, and found that young woman in charming negligee costume.

"I hope you will pardon my deshabille," the American girl said. "I have just come in."

"No, indeed, certainly not," the Russian maid replied, vivaciously, in her pretty accent, "I would not do so, no, no."

Then there was an embarrassed pause, and the American girl had just commenced, in a constrained voice, to talk of the weather and the Easter frocks, when there were signs of wild excitement from the Russian.

"The answer was 'yes,'" she exclaimed. "I have it all wrong. I have my English forgotten. The answer was most certainly 'yes.'"

And then the conversation ran on smoother lines.—Baltimore News.

A FAMOUS OLD HOUSE.

The house of Walter Baker & Co., whose manufactures of cocoa and chocolate have become familiar in the mouth as household words, was established one hundred and twenty-one years ago (1780) on the Neponset river in the old town of Dorsetshire, a suburb of Boston. From the little wooden mill, "by the rude bridge that arched the flood," where the enterprise was first started, there has grown up the largest industrial establishment of the kind in the world. It might be said that, while other manufacturers come and go, Walter Baker & Co. go on forever.

What is the secret of their great success? It is a very simple one. They have won and held the confidence of the great and constantly increasing body of consumers by always maintaining the highest standard in the quality of their cocoa and chocolate preparations, and selling them at the lowest price for which unadulterated articles of good quality can be put upon the market. They welcome honest competition; but they feel justified in denouncing in the strongest terms the fraudulent methods by which inferior preparations are palmed off on customers who ask for, and suppose they are getting the genuine articles. The best grocers refuse to handle such goods, not alone for the reason that, in the long run, it doesn't pay to do it, but because their sense of fair dealing will not permit them to aid in the sale of goods that defraud their customers and injure honest manufacturers.

Every package of the goods made by the Walter Baker Company bears the well-known trade mark "La Belle Chocolatiere," and their place of manufacture; "Dorchester, Mass." Housekeepers are advised to examine their purchases, and make sure that other goods have not been substituted.

An attractive little book of "Choice Recipes" will be mailed free to any housekeeper who sends her name and address to Walter Baker & Co., Ltd., 153 State Street, Boston, Mass.

Marksman Was After Prizes.

From Aiken county comes a story of Center Hitchcock and George Pollock, who is one of the crack pigeon shots of this country. At a recent shoot a spent shot from Mr. Pollock's gun found a lodging against Mr. Hitchcock's leg. It did not break the skin, but he limped painfully over to Mr. Pollock and upbraided him as follows:

"George, did you know that you had shot me?"

"No; I didn't know it."

"Well, I just thought you'd like to know it."

"Why should I want to know it? It doesn't interest me at all. Why, if I had killed you I wouldn't have won the prize."—New ork Worly.

"Ben Hur's" Close Squeak.

Success with a book is something like having lightning strike you. Up in Mackinac last summer Gen. Wallace told me how narrowly "Ben Hur" escaped publication. It was examined by two of Harper's readers, who reported rather adversely on it, thinking it would not be a good seller. Finally Mrs. Harper, a lady of strong religious tendencies, read it, and advised her husband to risk the expense of printing the book. Then there was "Dr. Jekyl and Mr. Hyde," which ran a somewhat similar gantlet and was almost rejected.—Booth Tarkington, in Washington Interview.

Remedy That Worked.

Of course the other Ostrich knew precisely what would knock that cold.

"It's all caused by indigestion, old bird," said he. "I know just how it is! Suffered everything myself until I ran across Pepsicated Tabloids, and went to taking them regularly! Now I can eat a horseshoe Newburg just before going to roost, and get up in the morning bright as a button. Fact!"—Detroit Journal.

Reformation.

"What's become of that friend of yours who used to write poetry?"

"Do you mean Giddings?"

"Yes."

"O, he's reformed."

"How so?"

"He has stopped writing poetry, and now is general manager of a peanut stand."—Detroit Free Press.

Trying to Break Him of Smoking.

Gayboy—What's wrong with this tobacco?

Slippers—To tell the truth, old man, it's adulterated. I've discovered that my wife has been emptying the dustpan in my tobacco jar for the past few mornings.—Ohio State Journal.

Took the Blow.

"To think that an American banner should ever stand a blow without returning it."

"When did that happen?"

"To the weather bureau storm flag in the last cyclone."—Philadelphia Times.

In Their Dreams.

"Yes; I declined an offer of $5,000 a week to play the Iceum circuit," said the Vaudeville Soubrette.

"Hugh! I never dream 'em that way. always accept, commented the Seltzer Water Comedian.—Baltimore American.

SCORE 2 TO 3.

The Local Club Defeated but Not Dishonored.

The Thief River Falls base ball club—with the exception of two of the best players, Will Vaughan and Chan Fuller—was down to Crookston Monday and played a game with the club in that city, being defeated by a score of 2 to 3. The score up to the last half of the ninth inning was 2 to 1 in favor of the Thief River Falls club, and our boys have nothing to be ashamed of. If all the members had been present they feel confident that they would have won. A return game will be played in this city in a few days.

The Crookston Times says:

"The ball game played here yesterday was one of the warmest propositions ever put up in this city. The season opened with a struggle that for close work should have satisfied the most particular fan, and no one who attended felt that he failed to get his money's worth. The Thief River aggregation scored twice in the fifth inning and that was the only time the up river men succeeded in getting a man across the home plate. In the fourth inning the Crookston team scored once and up to the last half of the ninth inning this was all that had been put down on the tally sheet for either side. At this time the Crookston team bunched their luck and with two men out, scored twice and won the game. The Thief River players accepted defeat gracefully and proved themselves cheerful losers. They were not outplayed and they promise to do a few things to the Crookston team when the return game is played. The umpiring was done in a very satisfactory manner by J. T. Whittemore of Donaldson. The date for the return game has not yet been fixed, but it will be pulled off on Monday next or on Memorial day."

Location Comment.

C. L. Dobner—I am strongly in favor of having the new high school built upon the East Side. This is the proper place for a building of this kind. It should be located as far as possible from the saloons and business portion of the city.

H. E. Mussey—Some day there will be a bridge across the river at Third street, and I would be in favor of seeing the new building located near the east side approach to this bridge. It would be central and at the same time not near the business center.

C. A. Robbecke—I would favor any location near the bridge on either side of the river.

F. J. Stebbins—Locate it as far as possible from the business center and in a strictly resident portion of the city.

K. M. Hansen—I think that a two-room addition should be built to the Central building, and that the matter of building a high school be postponed for a few years.

Dr. Grundy—I think that the Hans Nelson lots on the East Side would make the best location in the city.

James Meehan, Jr.—It should be built on the Fraction, of course.

Rev. W. Allen Sterling—"I would favor seeing the Knox building on the East Side remodeled and used as a high school and a ward school built in Porter's addition to accommodate the small children living in that portion of the city.

A Ditching Apparatus.

The question of rapid and successful ditch digging is interesting the people up in Kittson county, and from results attained by parties at Donaldson seems likely to be settled. Parties there have in operation an immense plow operated by two huge capstans, that exert 480 horsepower. By means of this a ditch is constructed, that is seven feet across at the top, three feet at the base and three feet deep, by one passage of the plow. The work is being done at a cost of 50 cents a rod, which is half the price at which contracts for such work are usually taken. The men who operate the machine have secured contracts that will keep them busy all summer, and while making a good thing out of it are also doing much for the land on which they operate in the way of successful drainage.

A lad eight years of age arrived here yesterday morning who had traveled alone and unattended from his home in Poland, the other side of the big pond. He was unable to speak a word of English, and was not even tagged as is usual in such cases. Ticket Agent Alstrom spent a busy half hour trying to learn something about the kid, and after talking to him in four languages searched his clothing, finding that the lad was bound for Ware, an obscure point in Marshall county north of Thief River Falls. J. R. Hare kindly cared for him until this morning, provided a lunch to eat enroute, and turned him over to Conductor Lockman who saw him to the end of the line of rails.—Crookston Times, May 20.

Prof. James A. Wilson has secured State School Inspector Rankin to deliver the commencement day address to the graduating class in Thief River Falls on Friday evening, May 31. Mr. Rankin is well qualified to perform this task, and will be sure to give the people of this city an instructive address.

The petitions for the uniting of the two school districts in this city have been forwarded to County Superintendent of Schools Jeffers and the matter will be voted upon Saturday, June 1. It is not anticipated that there will be much opposition to the uniting of the two districts, as nearly all believe that this would prove beneficial.

Col. Dave Picket, the manager of the Blackville Serenaders, who gave an exhibition in Thief River Falls last fall, and whose wife left him sometime ago, was arrested in Duluth recently for threatening to kill his better half. After his arrival at the head of the lakes, Dave learned that his wife was living there, and he called upon her for the purpose of inducing her to return to him. She refused and a fight ensued. At the police station the woman said she was but one-eighth negro and didn't care to associate with her colored husband even though he was a comedian.

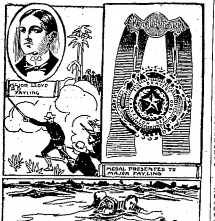
A GALVESTON HERO REWARDED

To show its appreciation of his heroic rescue of forty-three persons during the Galveston floods, the people of Texas have given a gold medal to Major Lloyd R. D. Fayling of Kalamazoo.

The decoration which cost about $500, is of 18 carat gold, solid, handsomely designed and studded with gems. The obverse side bears the coat-of-arms of Texas, supported on a Doric Maltese cross, with the inscription, "For Bravery. Galveston, September, 1900," encircling the state emblem. On the reverse side is inscribed, "Presented by Citizens of Texas to Major L. R. D. Fayling, who rescued forty-three persons at the peril of his own life. Placed in command under martial law, his ability, courage and energy restored and maintained law and order. His work was the saving of the city."

Major Fayling served as Deputy United States marshal in Chicago during the strike in 1894, rendering effective service. In 1895 he entered the secret service of the Cuban Junta with the rank of lieutenant, but was soon transferred to the firing line and for two years saw much hard fighting under General Gomez, participating in many filibustering expeditions. He was twice captured by the Spaniards, once being confined until he was physically prostrated. Ill health compelled him to resign and he left the Cuban army with the rank of captain and a brevet major. When the war with Spain broke out Major Fayling raised the first company from Ohio at his own expense and offered it to the government. He was elected captain of his company, but saw no fighting.



At the time of the flood Major Fayling had been the southern agent of a New York corporation with headquarters in Galveston. When Galveston was placed under martial law he became its sole governor for the time being.

Of the forty-three persons whom Major Fayling personally rescued, all were saved by hard swimming or wading out into the water. When the storm broke Major Fayling had gone down to the beach to get a view of the sea. As the hurricane increased in fury he started to return to his office. He found that he had to swim and wade in an average of five feet of water, and was kept busy dodging live wires. It was almost impossible to stand against the wind. Reaching his office he threw off his clothing, and putting on a bathing suit was ready for work.

An exciting episode of that night was when fifteen tramps and negroes strayed into a building in which the major had placed some women and children whom he had rescued. The gang planned to steal the boat in which Major Fayling purposed to convey the refugees to a place of safety. Major Fayling had a six-shooter and a Winchester at hand and placed the gang under arrest, stationing his servant over them as a guard. He later did good work in hunting out the ghouls who were mutilating human bodies to obtain jewelry and valuables, and it was at his orders that many of these were executed under martial law.

THE HOTEL DETECTIVE.

His Chief Duty Is Not Hunting Crime, But Guarding Guests.

The duties of a hotel detective are not arduous, and his greatest value to the guests is as a cicerone. He is supposed to know the city thoroughly, to be an authority on the theaters and to be able to direct men who want to gamble to places where they can find "square games." One hotel detective who was discharged not long ago was said to have made nearly $10,000 a year in tips from guests and commissions from gambling houses. He was able to do the latter many a good turn, and they showed their appreciation for his work by paying him liberally. Nominally he was engaged by the proprietor of the hotel to preserve order, but in reality he was expected to make himself generally useful to visitors. He must know where to pilot parties on slumming expeditions, and the more weird tales he can tell them about the places to which he takes them the larger will be his tips. A detective employed by one Broadway hotel for many years became quite as well known as the hotel itself. He was an authority on boxing, and the last word about any big contest was not said until he chose to express his opinion. He was also the stakeholder in many big bets.—New York Sun.

"Cantilation"—A Musical Novelty.

The extreme badness of the words usually selected by musicians to write tunes around has often been a matter for sarcastic comment. The musicians have defended themselves by saying that the words are of the very smallest importance, because in nine cases out of ten no one hears them. Singers, so long as they bring out their notes clearly, have the smallest regard for the unfortunate writer of the poem. But this sort of feud between verse writers and musicians, is about to be done away with, so it is proclaimed by the minor poets of "young Ireland," who promise a consequent boom in Irish verse. The theory is that Irish poetry, minor or major, requires musical accompaniment to give it its full flavor, but when the music rises to the dignity of a tune the poetry becomes too subordinate. Hence a new species of music has been specially invented to accompany Irish verse, and a conversazione has been held at which some of the new music has been performed. It is called cantilating, and consists of a long-drawn moaning, which is something between a chant and a monotone, and the melancholy of the music is said to be beyond anything ever heard before. Though it comes forward as a new mode, cantilating is in reality as old as the Greeks, with the difference that while Greek music went by certain fixed rules, cantilating is left to the sweet will of the musicians.—London Globe.

Man Who Gathers Spruce Gum.

There are many strange occupations by which persons gain a living, and one of these is that of gathering chewing gum. There are a few men in Maine who follow this vocation and make a good livelihood out of it. Of course, what they gather is spruce gum, and they pass the greater part of their time in the lonely woods. It is not necessary to say that their lives are most monotonous. The gum picker, as he is called, carries with him an outfit of several poles and knives, a pair or two of snowshoes, a small dog, a couple of blankets and a pair of climbers like those used by telegraph linemen. In October he goes into the woods to study the spruce growth. He travels alone and seeks out the places where storms have injured the trees, for the wounded branches are the ones that furnish the largest supply of gum. He can go up a giant spruce tree like a cat and gather all the gum there almost before you know it. He is an expert workman. A professional gum hunter can make from $3 to $8 a day when he strikes a really good gum country. He works all winter and in the spring he leaves his lonely haunts in the woods, and with his bags and bags of spruce gum hastens to the nearest city to sell his harvest.—Chicago Record-Herald.

Beating an Avalanche.

One of the most exciting Alpine adventures on record was Mr. Tuckett's race with an avalanche on the Eiger Glacier in 1871. He was ascending the glacier with two friends and a guide. Says Travel: The glacier sloped somewhat steeply, and on the upper part, above the climbers, a mass of loose, freshly fallen snow had collected. Suddenly the travelers heard a thundering noise, and perceived a huge mass of snow and ice sliding down toward them. They could only try to reach the rocks at the side of the glacier, hoping to do so before the avalanche should sweep them away. Through the knee-deep snow they ran for their lives. "I remember," said Mr. Tuckett, "being struck with the idea that it seemed as if the avalanche were sure of its prey, and wished to play with us for awhile. At one moment it let us imagine that we had gained on it; and the next, with mere wantonness of vindictive power, it suddenly rolled out a vast volume of grinding blocks and whirling snow and fragments of ice, a frozen cloud, swept over us, entirely concealing us from one another. But still we were untouched, and still we ran. Another half second, and the mist parted. There lay the body of the monster, whose head was still careering away at lightning speed far below us, motionless, rigid, harmless."—Youth's Companion.

Deep Sea Specimens.

Even in the tropics, the temperature of the water at the bottom of the ocean is only about 40 degrees Fahrenheit, and it does not vary at all from summer to winter, says Pearson's Magazine. It follows, then, that the abyssal fishes, though residing in the neighborhood of the equator, are accustomed to an Arctic climate, and, being suddenly exposed to a warm atmosphere, they quickly decompose. Thus it is very difficult to preserve them, and, in order to accomplish this, the tanks of spirits into which they are put are surrounded with ice, while the more delicate invertebrate specimens are placed in a cold room while absorbing the alcohol. The fishes are injected with alcohol by means of a hypodermic syringe, and so likewise are large shrimps and crabs. Deep-sea starfishes, sea urchins, and small corals are first soaked in alcohol and then dried; large corals are sprayed with alcohol and packed in salt; jellyfishes are hardened in a solution of picric acid, wrapped in cheesecloth and kept in strong alcohol.

Three Presidents' Widows.

Three presidents' widows are living. Mrs. Grant makes her home in Washington; Mrs. Harrison lives in Indianapolis, and Mrs. Garfield at Mentor, O. Buchanan's niece and Arthur's sister, both prominent in Washington during the administration of those presidents, still survive.

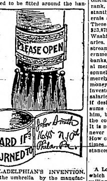
Killed in Spanish Bull-Fights.

About 5,000 horses are annually killed in Spain in bull fights. At these contests from 1,000 to 1,200 bulls are annually sacrificed.

Already nearly $40,000,000 has been invested in electric undertakings in the Argentine Republic.

NEW UMBRELLA PLATE

The advantage of having an umbrella marked with one's own name and address will be conceded by any one, but there are few persons who are systematic enough to go to the trouble of having this done. A scheme has just been devised by a resident of this city by which any person who can handle a pen is qualified to mark his own umbrella, says the Philadelphia Record. It consists of a double ring of metal, one placed inside the other and designed to be fitted around the handle of the umbrella by the manufacturer. The outer ring is in two sections, one hinged, but held normally closed by means of a catch. The outside of this is stamped "please open" and when this direction is complied with the name and address of the owner is revealed with an announcement that a reward will be paid for its return.



A PHILADELPHIAN'S INVENTION.

The name and address is written on a gummed-paper label and pasted on the inside of the hinged portion. In case of any change in the address it is a simple matter to remove the old label and insert a new one. The presence of this device is not only a means of recovering the umbrella should it become lost, but in case of accident it offers a means of identification. This idea has also been made use of in the manufacture of key-ring identifiers, the only difference being that for this purpose they are made smaller.

CHOOSING A CAPTAIN.

Rough and Tumble Custom of Japanese Fishermen of Hawaii.

Where several years ago the fishing for the supplying of the Honolulu market was done almost exclusively by the natives in their canoes and a few Chinamen, now the bulk of the work is done by the Japanese, who are at it in great numbers. The boats which they use are built here after patterns used in Japan, and once in a while an Oriental steamer arriving from the west brings an imported fishing boat, which the fishermen think is superior to those of local manufacture. The boats are of a peculiar shape and are of different sizes, some able to accommodate but three men, which is an ordinary crew, and others are large enough for seven or eight men. Up to the time that the vessel is launched there is no captain selected for the boat. The choosing of this important factor in every case is left until the boat is in the water. It is known who the members of the crew are, and from them the captain is selected. When the boat is in the water and moored securely, the members of the crew, who are generally the owners of the boat, strip themselves and get into the boat. Then the fun of making the selection of the commander begins. There is no voting or drawing of lots to settle the matter. At a given signal from one of the crowd on shore who are watching, the men in the boat begin with all their might to try to throw each other out into the water. Each man is against the other, and so the struggle, as a usual thing, lasts a long time and is remarkably exciting. All the time the play goes on the friends of the contestants yell words of cheer to the struggling men in the boat and throw buckets of water on them and into the boat, seemingly with the idea of making the battleground more slippery as well as refreshing to the men at work. As soon as a man is thrown out of the boat he must stay out, but may assist with water if he so desires. The man who stays in the boat longest, or rather who is able to put all the others out of the boat, has by his prowess shown himself competent to be captain, and so he is greeted with much applause and showered with congratulations at the termination of the scuffle. There is no appeal from the selection so made, and the captain so chosen continues to be captain until he voluntarily retires or sells out his share in the boat.—Ex.

EMPLOYES OF GOVERNMENT.

About $20,000,000 in Wages—No "Hard Times" in Washington.

According to the latest official list, there are 19,446 public functionaries of various kinds and degrees employed exclusively in the District of Columbia in conducting the numerous departments and bureaus of the federal government, says the Washington correspondent of the New York Tribune. These are the civilian appointees in the executive departments, and do not include senators and representatives, and several hundred employes of the houses who vibrate between the capital and their homes in other parts of the country. Nor does this aggregate include 350 or 400 army and navy officers, active and retired, who form a large permanent colony here. The monthly compensation of these 19,446 civilian employes amounts to $1,635,708.81. Therefore, the aggregate sum in salaries annually paid out in Washington by the government disbursing clerks reaches the enormous total of $19,628,505.72. Besides, probably not less than $3,000,000 additional goes to senators and congressmen, and their highly paid subordinates, and perhaps $1,250,000 more to the army and navy officials, most of whom are of high rank, with large pay, there being constantly here not less than sixty generals and admirals, active and retired. These totals form a grand aggregate of $23,878,505.72 annually paid out in Washington in the single item of salaries. It is a vast, unvarying, constant stream of cash flowing from the government coffers into the hands of the banks, business houses and professional men of Washington, the official personnel of the United States acting merely as middlemen, because this money is largely spent or permanently invested here. In all the departments salaries are paid semi-monthly, and if desirable the officeholder can draw sums oftener, if the money is due to him, but this is dependent wholly on the courtesy of the disbursing clerks. It is not singular, then, that there are never any hard times in Washington. How can there be such a thing as hard times in this town in such circumstances?

Exploited a Penny Craze.

A London paper tells of the way in which a shopkeeper exploited the prevailing craze for collecting pennies of this year's issue. In the window of his shop he displayed a notice: "Five shillings given for 1901 pennies." A passerby entered, offered him a 1901 penny and asked for the 5 shillings. "Oh, yes," said the shopkeeper, "but that is only one penny. Where are the other 1,900?"

An Old Copper Coin.

Charles L. Feller, of Providence, has lately acquired possession of a copper coin of the kind used as passports by runaway slaves coming north long before the war. The coin has "Liberty" in a laurel wreath on its face and on the reverse the kneeling figure of a slave woman and the inscription, "Am I not a woman and a sister?"

A GIFTED AND BEAUTIFUL GIRL

Threatened With Nervous Prostration,

PROMPTLY SAVED BY PE-RU-NA.

MISS ROSE CULLEN, OF BUTTE, MONT.

Miss Rose Cullen, President Young Woman's Club, of Butte, Mont., writes from 921 Galena street, as follows:

"Peruna has many friends in Butte. I cannot say too much in praise of it. While finishing school I became very nervous and exhausted from over-study. I was weak and sick, and could neither eat, sleep nor enjoy life. A couple of bottles of Peruna put new life in me. I find that having it in the house and taking a dose off and on keeps me in fine health.

"A large number of my friends place Peruna at the head of all medicines."—Miss Rose Cullen.

How Peruna Quickly Cures Backache, the Bane of Womankind.

MRS. G. W. HEARD, Hempstead, Texas, writes:

"We have moved recently, and I must have lifted something that was too heavy for me in straightening things up, for I had such a backache and could hardly stand on my feet at all. Beside, I was so tired all the time. My face was spotted and I was very thin. I took one bottle of Peruna and was soon real well. When I feel tired and all run down I take Peruna and feel all right before I finish one bottle. I know it is a wonderful medicine, and both myself and husband praise Peruna.

"There has been a great deal of sickness through this part of the country, but, thanks to Peruna, which we use freely, our own family has escaped with almost no sickness at all.

"Could you but see our baby Ruby, (to whom we gave Peruna for bowel trouble), you would see from her robust looks that you need no better advertisement in this little town. She is so fat and rosy, is nearly five years old now, and is a great believer in Peruna."—Mrs. G. W. Heard.

Given Up to Die—All Doctors Failed—It Proved to be Catarrh of Stomach and Was Cured by Peruna.

W. A. Mitchell, dealer in general merchandise, of Martin, Ga., writes:

"I wrote you some time ago concerning my wife's case. She had tried all of the best doctors, and we got to where we thought all they did was against her. She weighed about 190 pounds when she was in good health. When she commenced with our family physician in April, 1898, she weighed about 130, but kept going down all the time. She went to Atlanta, Ga., and took treatment, but it did her no good. Then she went to Harmony Grove, Ga., and took treatment from the best physician there for three months. She kept going down under his treatment, although he was considered the best physician in the county. She went down from 130 pounds to 68, and we saw she could not live long. She was a skeleton. We consulted an old physician who told her to use Peruna. She gradually improved and got stronger. She has gained 38 pounds since she has taken Peruna, and is gaining every day, and does her own housework.

"She was well known when she was so low, and now everybody wants to know what cured her. She had indigestion and catarrh of the stomach. It is as good for children as for grown people. We haven't had to have a doctor for one of our children since 1898."—W. A. Mitchell.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Washington's False Teeth.

The Baltimore Dental college, the oldest dental college in the world, has in its possession one of the most interesting relics of George Washington. This relic is a set of artificial teeth made by Dr. Greenwood, a dentist, who was also an officer in the Continental army. The teeth were worn for some time by Gen. Washington. Dr. Greenwood afterward made the general a second set, which he wore until his death, and which were buried with him. The first set was afterwards presented to the dental college by Dr. Greenwood. As much as $5,000 has been offered for this set of teeth, but the faculty of the college refused the offer. The teeth were exhibited at the World's fair in 1893, and attracted much attention.—Baltimore Sun.

Different Kinds of Violets.

This is the month of violets, and whether blue, yellow or white, they are beautiful. Some have blossomed in April, and others will continue to blossom in June, but the height of the season for these lovely flowers comes in May. Of the blues, there are several common species, such as the arrow-leaved, the ovate-leaved, the bird's-foot and the abundant meadow violet. The birds'-foot violet is one of the commonest, but is one of the easiest species to distinguish, as its leaves are cut into sections. Then, there are several species of the yellow and white violets—each one beautiful and full of interest. Like the polygalas, violets have closed blossoms, which, though hidden away, are yet the surest seed-producers.—Woman's Home Companion.

WHY MRS. PINKHAM

Is Able to Help Sick Women When Doctors Fail.

How gladly would men fly to woman's aid did they but understand a woman's feelings, trials, sensibilities, and peculiar organic disturbances.

Those things are known only to women, and the aid a man would give is not at his command.

To treat a case properly it is necessary to know all about it, and full information, many times, cannot be given by a woman to her family physician. She cannot bring herself to tell everything, and the physician is at a constant disadvantage. This is why, for the past twenty-five years, thousands of women have been confiding their troubles to Mrs. Pinkham, and whose advice has brought happiness and health to countless women in the United States.

MRS. G. H. CHAPPELL.

Mrs. Chappell, of Grant Park, Ill., whose portrait we publish, advises all suffering women to seek Mrs. Pinkham's advice and use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as they cured her of inflammation of the ovaries and womb; she, therefore, speaks from knowledge, and her experience ought to give others confidence. Mrs. Pinkham's address is Lynn, Mass., and her advice is absolutely free.

His Lack of Directness.

The young man was embarrassed, but he began bravely:

"It cannot be a surprise to you, Miss Eupherbia," he said, "that is, you must have suspected, from the length of time I have been coming here, that I—I say that it must have been apparent to you for some time that I could have had but one object in view in—although, of course, I can't claim that you have given me any cause to be confident. Still, you may have asked yourself, what other motive, if any, I could have had, when it must have been evident—and yet—"

"Mr. Bullmore," she interrupted "please be more direct and explicit, if you can. You wabble painfully."—Chicago Times.

Carry Your Dinner in Your Purse.

A restaurant for concentrated food is to be started in Paris by an enterprising French chef. The happy diner will enjoy a menu of tabloids. From the hors d'oeuvres to dessert his entire meal will be presented to him in a few square inches.

In this way a busy man will be able to eat his dinner in a very few minutes, and carry it about him in his waistcoat pocket to swallow in spare moments. Even drinks are provided in the same form, and a bottle of claret or whisky and soda can thus be carried about in one's purse.—Home Chat.

An "M. D.'s" Open Letter.

Benton, Ill., May 20.—R. H. Dunaway, M. D., of this place, in an open letter, makes the following startling statement.

"I had Diabetes with all its worst symptoms. I applied every remedy known to the profession, as well as every prescription suggested in our books. In spite of all, I was dying, and I knew it.

"As a last resort, and with scarcely any faith whatever, I commenced taking Dodd's Kidney Pills. In one week I saw a great improvement. After I had taken five boxes I was sound and well. This is ten months ago, and I have not taken any medicine of any kind since, and am convinced that my cure is a permanent one.

"As a practicing physician, with years of experience, I most positively assert that Dodd's Kidney Pills are the best medicine in the world to-day, for Diabetes or any other Kidney Disease. Since using them myself, I have used them in many cases in my practice, and they have never failed.

"I am making this statement as a professional man, after having made a most thorough test of Dodd's Kidney Pills, and because I feel it my duty to the public and to my professional brethren. The truth can never hurt any one, and what I have said is the absolute truth.

"R. H. DUNAWAY, M. D."

It is no wonder that the public are enthusiastic over this new medicine, when our leading physicians themselves are being won over to its use.

Not Too Pure.

"I suppose," the advertising manager of the Daily Howler said, "you would prefer a position next to pure reading matter?"

"Oh, no," replied the advertiser. "As I cater to the swell trade, a position next to some society scandal or divorce story would suit me best."—Catholic Standard.

NATIVE PLANTS OF HAWAII.

Excessive Use Has Exhausted Supply of Once Abundant Sandalwood.

A description of the native plants of the Hawaiian islands is contained in a bulletin in course of preparation by the department of agriculture. Of these, it is said, the most important are the woods of the islands. They served to make the enormous canoes in which the natives crossed from island to island of the group, and occasionally made voyages to other islands in the South Pacific. Others were used for outriggers and masts, idols were carved from soft as well as the hard woods. The hardest woods furnished the mallets for beating kapa cloth. These mallets were elaborately carved and of a different pattern on each fence. They were used in such a manner as to stamp the pattern upon the cloth. From the forests came the bark, leaves and fiber out of which kapa cloth, mats, fishing lines, nets, etc., were made. From the various trees came the dyes which they used in coloring the kapa cloth, and in tattooing their skins. The materia medica of the kahunas, or native doctors, was gathered exclusively from the forests and fields. The islands once abounded in sandalwood, but the great demand for this wood in Canton, China, for incense and for the manufacture of fancy articles caused a trade which quickly destroyed the forests of this tree. Between 1810 and 1825 this trade in sandalwood was at its height, and while it lasted brought great wealth to the kings and chiefs in guns, ammunition, liquors, boats and small ships, which they received in exchange. It brought from six to ten cents per pound. It was the first export that attracted commerce to the island. So great was the destruction of these trees that it was found necessary to lay a "tabu" on the few remaining ones. A great many sandal trees have since sprung up in the islands, but nowhere in such quantities as to justify a revival of the trade. After the sandalwood was exhausted there was exported to China a false sandalwood, called by the natives naio. The wood and roots of this tree, when dried, possess a fragrance strongly resembling that of the sandalwood. It has also good building and excellent burning qualities, and is used for torches in fishing. The ohia-ha is a durable timber, and is used for railroad ties and posts, while kela is a very hard wood, closely resembling ebony. For fence posts the wood of the mamame is said to be the most durable, while it is also a good firewood. The halepepe was once used by the natives, who carved their idols out of soft wood. So, also was used the wood of lehua, the most generally prevailing tree on the islands. It is very hard, is a good building material, and the best of fuels.—Chicago News.

CHASING WHALES IN PACIFIC.

Big Fish Is Inclined to Be Familiar and Merry.

The coast of southern California is protected, to a certain extent, by the islands off shore. The group begins at Santa Barbara with San Miguel; then comes Santa Rosa, Santa Cruz, Anacapa, and further out to sea, thirty miles, San Nicholas. The next following south are Santa Barbara, Santa Catalina, San Clement, and then with a break of seventy miles to the Coronados. These islands are almost parallel to the coast range and constitute virtually an out-to-sea coast range of mountains, which, in all probability were thrust up at the time the coast was formed, leaving a deep depression between them and the mainland. This region of extremely deep water is a famous roadway for whales, several kinds being found here feeding upon the vast schools of jelly fishes which are nearly always present. The whale most common is the California gray, which goes every year to the shallows of the gulf of California to give birth to its young, then moving north along the California coast in what is virtually a great procession. At this time the channel is the sporting ground for the huge animals, and nearly every steamer that crosses sights a school, the scene forming one of the attractions of the trip, as the whales, far from being wild or timid, sometimes evince a playful mood, or, incited by curiosity, come near the steamer, affording the passengers a near view of the largest of living animals. This social disposition has resulted in several encounters between the whales and vessels, in which the former have always come off second-best. Some years ago a steamer on the trip from San Pedro to San Francisco struck some body, supposed to be a log. Several of the men were thrown to the deck; the wheel turned over so violently that the helmsman was thrown down and the steamer for the moment came to a standstill. All hands were called, the pumps sounded, and as the mate ran aft he saw a large whale lashing the water astern. The vessel had struck it directly back of the right paddle and evidently crushed it down, rising over it. This whale drifted into Santa Catalina some days later, and was towed into one of the little bays of the coast, where it was cut up by the fishermen.—Chicago News.

Assessor Sold the Property.

A citizen of Owosso, Mich., put up a terrible howl to City Assessor Laverock, claiming that his property was assessed at an extravagantly high figure. He wound up by declaring that if Mr. Laverock could sell the property at the valuation named the city official named could have a commission of 2 per cent. In less than two hours Mr. Laverock had sold a fine residence and two business blocks. Then the taxpayer backed water, but the assessor declares he will have his commission, which amounts to $400, even if he has to sue for it.

WHAT WE HEAR FROM ASSINIBOIA, WESTERN CANADA.

"Don't Think of Coming, but Come."

To the Editor: The above is the emphatic manner in which a friend in Yorkton writes to a friend near St. Paul, Minnesota, and it is pretty nearly right, too, with the advantages that Western Canada offers to those seeking homes. The Assiniboia district is one of the best. The writer from whose letter we quote goes on to say:

"John, if you miss this chance you are foolish, for you can get out cheaper when there are so many coming, and I would not tell you to come if I thought you could not do well, and if you don't come in the spring you will have to go away back, for you do not want to think that there is no one living out here but us. I saw nicer buildings out here than I ever saw before, and if the country was no good what would they want them for? John, if you sold everything you have and came out here you would be worth more than ever you were before, and if you can bring your team. You can get anything you want on tick, and when they do that with strangers they are not afraid they can't make enough to pay for it. I saw as nice wheat as I ever saw in my life, and if they could not grow grain what would the flour mill be for, and it cost $20,000."

Now this was what Mr. Thomas Fitzpatrick, of Yorkton, Assiniboia, Western Canada, wrote to a friend.

There will be opened up this summer new districts in Saskatchewan and Assiniboia at low prices, particulars of which can be had of any agent of the government of the Dominion of Canada, whose advertisement appears elsewhere in the columns of your paper. Yours truly, An Old Reader.

Artificial Varieties Are Constructed From the Cold-Weather Covering of Certain Wild Animals.

All artificial flowers are not made of silk or tissue paper. Furs enter largely into their construction nowadays. They are the latest form in which millinery dealers clothe their extravagant prices.

The fur for flowers is taken largely from the heads of various animals, particularly squirrels. The skin is cut in long, rectangular sections, and is folded rosette-wise, in such a way that a blossom-like bunch is formed, the hairs all pointing towards the edge of the petals. A few stitches and a scrap of cloth fastened underneath, to reinforce, finish the blossom.

For a stem, a wire is passed through the flower, with a bunch of hair or fur at the top. The tuft drawn through the center adds the proper finish to the whole, and a green covered tube of rubber drawn over the wire makes the stem complete. The hair makes the petal very life-like, and the addition of a calyx of green adds still more to the effectiveness of the novelty. It lasts much longer than does the cloth blossom.

QUIET AT ALBANY

NO REPETITION OF THE SCENES OF DISORDER.

Hours of Conference Fail to Bring About a Settlement of the Difficulty—Council Threatens to Revoke the Company's Franchise—Military Force Now Numbers 3,000—Cars Are Operated Under Protection of Armed Guards—Arrival of Ninth Regiment Creates a Stir.

Albany, N. Y., May 19.—No settlement has been reached in the street railway strike. After hours of conference the officials of the United Traction company and the committee from the organization of the strikers adjourned without changing the situation. The company will proceed to run its cars to-day on every line within the city limits with the aid of a military force that now numbers 3,000 men.

The only step toward settlement that was made was the appointment of a committee of the common council to arbitrate and the adoption of a resolution declaring that if a settlement is not effected by Monday night the council shall revoke the franchise of the company. The company declares that such action will be of no effect as the road now has a vested right that cannot be taken from it. The reason there was no settlement last night was because the company refuses to discharge the men brought from other points to take the strikers' places.

No Scenes of Disorder.

A drenching rain succeeding a warm humid day made it unpleasant for the military guarding the city last night, but had the effect of clearing the street corners of crowds. There was no repetition of the scenes of disorder that have marked the other days of the strike. There was the same imposing show of military strength and in mid-afternoon 600 additional troops of the Ninth regiment of New York city were added to the already large force now on duty here. Two elements seemed to contribute to the quietness that prevailed, one the general anticipation of a settlement of the strike, and the other a feeling of sobriety that succeeded the anger and indignation over the killing of William Walsh and Leroy Smith. More non-union men were brought into the city, but contrary to expectation their coming did not inflame sentiment to an appreciable extent. The traction company added part of another division to the section operated and as on the preceding day, began late in the morning and quit early in the evening. Under orders from their officials the street patrols kept people moving, and it is doubtful if a crowd numbering 500 assembled anywhere in the city during the day. Quail street barn was again the center from which action radiated. A heavy force of troops was massed there and at 9 o'clock a battalion of the Twenty-third regiment and the signal corps cavalry troop were sent westward to the New York Central tracks and picked up twenty-five non-union men who had been quietly dropped at a crossing some distance from the West Albany station. They were quietly massed inside a hollow square of infantry and marched into Quail street barn. Once the non-union men were safe in the barn the movement of cars began. The first car had glided down into the city before it was generally known that one was in motion, but it attracted only slight notice. The cars carried strong guards who sat with their guns half-aimed, in constant readiness for trouble. The arrival of the Ninth regiment created a stir that subsided after it had marched away to its camp on the other side of the city.

By Force of Arms.

CHINESE PACIFIC.

They Will Turn Their Swords Into Plowshares.

Pekin, May 19.—Li Hung Chang has telegraphed Liu Kun Yi, viceroy of Nankin, to convert the arsenals in the provinces south of the Yang-tse Kiang into establishments for the manufacture of mining and agricultural tools and implements to increase the number of employes.

Militia Will Be on Duty.

Atlanta, Ga., May 19.—Gov. Candler yesterday ordered two companies of the state militia with ball and cartridge to report at Andersonville, Ga., for duty May 30. This is done to preserve order at the famous Confederate prison and burial place of federal dead, the negroes for years having made the federal Decoration day an occasion of drunkenness and disorder.

For Timber Unlawfully Cut.

Helena, Mont., May 19—United States District Attorney Rogers has commenced action in the federal court against the Marcus Daly estate, the Anaconda company and Bitter Root Development company to recover $370,000 alleged to be due the government for timber unlawfully cut in Ravalli county during 1895, 1896 and 1897.

Trial of a Marquis.

Paris, May 19.—Initiatory steps for the trial of the Marquis de Lur-Saluces, who recently returned to France after having been banished, were taken yesterday.

Three Men Killed.

St. John's, N. F., May 19.—The chimney in Jewett's saw mills collapsed yesterday afternoon and three men were killed and another injured.

Family Trouble and Suicide.

Ann Arbor, Mich., May 19. — John Niethammer, for the past fifteen years in the employ of John Lawrence, attorney, shot himself and is dead. Mr. Lawrence rebuked him for being drunk. Family trouble was the cause.

Barrymore Improving.

New York, May 19.—The condition of Maurice Barrymore the actor, who is suffering from paresis, has improved slightly during the past few weeks, and he is now taking more interest in his surroundings.

CANADA OBSTINATE.

Declines to Accede to Newfoundland's Request as to the Bond-Blaine Treaty.

New York, May 18.—Premier Bond of Newfoundland, started for home from Ottawa, according to a Times special. While nothing official is said, it would appear that his mission to Ottawa, with the object of inducing Canada to withdraw her objections to the Bond-Blaine convention, was not altogether a success. It is said the dominion government considered Canadian interests would be disastrously affected if the treaty went into effect. The Canadian view will be submitted to Mr. Chamberlain, the imperial colonial secretary.

QUEEN WAS FAKING.

Story of the Queen of Servia's Confinement a Hoax.

Vienna, May 18.—A Belgrade correspondent of the Tagblatt telegraphs that Queen Dragamaschin of Servia has made a full confession that the story of her confinement, published in February, was a hoax. According to the reported confession the queen's sister, Mme. Petrowich, was expecting a child and the queen intended to pass it off as her own, but her sister's baby was still-born, and the queen was driven to confess the swindle. The populace is greatly incensed against the queen and hostile demonstrations have occurred. Mme. Maschin was a widow when King Alexander married her last August. She was former lady-in-waiting on Queen Natalie and sixteen years older than the king. The marriage caused a sensation in Servia.

HAVOC IN MEXICO.

Nationizing Process Begun There by Angela Ramona.

Phoenix, Ariz., May 18.—Angela Ramona, a Spanish woman of excellent family, has taken up Carrie Nation's work in Mexico, and threatens to wreck every saloon in the republic unless liquor laws are enforced. A dispatch received here says Senora Ramona completely demolished a saloon in Guyamas a few days ago, and created serious havoc with a big club in several others before she was arrested. Her friends soon bailed her out, and she is enlisting women to visit other cities in a tour of destruction. She will go first to President Diaz and endeavor to secure his promise to enforce lax liquor laws. She claims to be divinely inspired to save Mexico from ruin through its consumption of liquor.

"LIAR, SNEAK AN BDACKBITER."

Choice Epithets Applied to the Irish Secretary by William O'Brien.

Dublin, May 18.—The Irish People, Mr. William O'Brien's paper, contains a nine-column attack on Mr. Wyndham, the Irish secretary, for the recent seizure of the paper because of its insulting references to King Edward. The general policy of Mr. Wyndham is also assailed. Some of the subheads are the following:

"Fools or assassins or both," "Better Castle Lawlessness than Castle Cant," and "The meanness of the rascals." "Villainy," "treachery," "hypocrisy and mendacity" are frequently used in reference to Mr. Wyndham, who, in conclusion, is called "a liar, sneak and backbiter." Nothing is said against the king.

GUEST OF CHICAGO.

French Ambassador Central Figure of Receptions and Feasts.

Chicago, May 18.—M. Jules Cambon, the French ambassador to the United States, was the guest of Chicago yesterday and from the time of his arrival over the Pennsylvania road at 9 a. m. until late in the evening when a banquet given in his honor at the Union League club was concluded, he was the central figure in a series of receptions and feasts. M. Cambon came to the city to officially recognize in behalf of the Republic of France the union of the Alliance Francaise with the University of Chicago.

SHORTER HOURS, MORE PAY.

Twenty-Five Per Cent of Employing Machinists Agree to Demands.

Washington, May 18. — Late advices received by President O'Connell of the machinists' association, indicate that about 25 per cent of the employing machinists throughout the country have agreed to the demands for shorter hours and increased pay. Contrary to an opinion which prevails in some quarters, President O'Connell says there has been no new order issued from headquarters regarding Monday's proposed strike. He expects a general acquiescence in the order.

SLIGHTLY INJURED.

The Northwestern Was Not Materially Damaged by Her Mishap.

Ogdensburg, N. Y., May 18. — The steamship Northwestern, from Chicago to Liverpool, which collided with a dredge below the Galoup rapids and ran her bow nearly twenty-five feet upon the bank, has been floated, sustaining very slight injuries. After taking on the lightened cargo she cleared for Montreal. The third steamship, the Northman, has gone safely through the rapids, drawing thirteen feet.

Gen. Fitzjohn Porter Dying.

New York, May 18.—Word was received last night from Morristown, N. J., that Gen. Fitzjohn Porter, who for three years has been suffering from chronic diabetis, is very ill, his disease having taken such a serious turn that it is feared he may die at any time. Gen. Porter is eighty years old.

Larimore, N. D., May 18.—Jim Byrens, a Great Northern conductor, was injured near Shawanee. The plow of the gravel train ran over his foot, cutting off the toes. He was sent to St. Paul for treatment.

KILLED IN A MINE

SIX MINERS DEAD AND FIVE FATALLY INJURED.

Serious Explosion in a Coal Mine at Farmington, W. Va.—Miner Smuggles a Torch Into the Mine—Pays No Heed to the Frequent Warnings of a Fellow Employe—Smoke From a Shot Ignited by the Torch —Most Serious Explosion That Ever Occurred in the Fairmont Region.

Fairmont, W. Va., May 17. — Six miners lost their lives, five were fatally injured and three seriously burned in an explosion at the shaft of the George's Creek Coal and Iron company at Farmington, seven miles west of this city on the main line of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad yesterday morning.

The George's Creek company had headquarters in the Equitable building, Baltimore and extensive mining interests in Maryland. This is the first mine the company has opened in this state and fully $1,000,000 has been invested and the mine is one of the best equipped in the Fairmont coal region. Col. R. L. Somerville, an experienced and capable mine superintendent, has charge of the works. The mine was only recently put into operation and about 125 men were employed, only forty of this number under ground. Owing to a shortage in the car supply the men have only been making about half-time for several days, but yesterday quite a number of cars were left at the mine and the management decided to break all records with yesterday's output. So bright and early in the morning the miners, who reside in cosy cottages on the hill top above the mine, made their way to the main opening and the car carried them

250 Feet Into the Earth.

Fifteen of them were assigned to a portion of the mines that had been worked for some time and the remainder were put to work on headings quite a distance away. One of the men it is believed had smuggled a torch into the mines, as it gives so much better light than safety lamps prescribed by the company. There is an immense fan which sends 5,000 feet of fresh air into the mines at every revolution, and as the shaft was considered one of the safest in the region, the miner did not heed the frequent warnings of a fellow employe who warned him of the risk he was taking. At 9:16 the miner fired a shot and the smoke, which was very dense, caught fire from the torch and spread to either the gas or dust and the explosion resulted. Fortunately the fire did not catch fire to any extent. The explosion vented itself through the air shaft and almost demolished the building on the surface in which the fan was located. The men on the headings did not know there had been an explosion until informed of it. In a short time the headings were cleared of foul gas and the work of rescuing the unfortunate commenced. It was 5 o'clock before the work was concluded. This is the most serious explosion that ever occurred in the Fairmont coal region.

SHOT AT CHOATE.

Widow Who Had a Breach-of-Promise Judgment Against the Ambassador's Nephew.

Denver, May 17.—J. K. Choate, nephew of the ambassador to Great Britain, was shot at twice at 7:30 o'clock last night by Martha Ewart. He was not wounded. Mrs. Ewart, proprietor of The Vallie, a fashionable boarding house, secured a judgment against Choate for breach of promise last winter, but he failed to pay it. The shooting occurred in the law office of Former Senator E. O. Wolcott.

VIRTUALLY DEFIES THE POWERS.

Porte Sends Out Another Letter That Gives Offense.

Constantinople, May 17.—The foreign embassies have received a note from the porte in connection with the recent controversy regarding the foreign post-offices in Constantinople, regretting that the "susceptibilities" of the embassies were wounded by the previous notes, and hoping that the embassies will co-operate in bringing about a settlement of the question in accordance with the desires of the porte.

MARCONI'S NEW CLAIM.

From a Moving Car He Is Able to Telegraph to a Central Base.

London, May 17.—Sig. Marconi announces that he has successfully installed his system of wireless telegraphy in a steam motor car, and that he is able thereby to communicate with a central base while traveling. The war office officials are about to witness a demonstration of the claim.

BIG TOBACCO SALE.

Philadelphia Firm Goes to Wisconsin for the Real Thing.

Madison, Wis., May 17.—One of the largest tobacco deals ever made in the West has just been carried through here by the sale to a Philadelphia firm of 13,000 cases of last year's crop of Wisconsin tobacco. About $350,000 in cash changed hands. The shipment will amount to about 260 car loads.

DEWET HEARD FROM.

He Is Again in the Cape Colony, With a "Long Tom."

London, May 17.—An unofficial telegram from Rosmead reports that Gen Dewet is again in Cape Colony. He is now in the Zurburg mountains with a "Long Tom."

German Spirits Law.

Berlin, May 17.—Owing to a victory of the obstructionist left, in the reichstag, the present spirits law remains unchanged. It expires Sept. 30, 1901, after which there will be a lapse until the reichstag, which reconvenes Nov. 26, passes a new law.

Killed His Uncle.

Des Moines, Iowa, May 17. — In a quarrel near Maryville, Marion county, Iowa, yesterday afternoon John Monteith, aged twenty [illegible], shot and killed his uncle, Phil [illegible], aged fifty.

DULUTH TO BE HEADQUARTERS.

United States Steel Company's Mining Department to Be Located in Zenith City.

Duluth, Minn., May 19.—Duluth is to be the headquarters for the mining department of the United States Steel corporation, as well as for the vessel department of that great institution. The name of the company which will control the mining interests has not been announced, but if the same policy is followed as was in the selection of a name for the steamship company, they will take up with the name of one of the mining companies that has been absorbed. The fact that the mining company of the steel consolidation is to have its headquarters here means that it will be the point from which the production of 18,000,000 tons of ore will be directed, furnishing employment to about 10,000 men.

DISASTER AT BEMIDJI.

Fireworks Explode on a Loaded Steamer—One Killed and Eleven Hurt.

Bemidji, Minn., May 19. — During a big spectacular naval display on Lake Bemidji last night in honor of the Norwegian holiday, fireworks on board the steamer Shadow exploded. The result was disastrous. Eleven persons were badly burned, seven seriously and one fatally. The boat was crowded with people and some escaped injury by swimming ashore. One boy, Fred Driver, is supposed to have been drowned while endeavoring to reach land. The injured were all of Bemidji, except Jentsen, who lives at Rosby. Six doctors worked for an hour in caring for the injured. Fred McCauley was burned so badly that he cannot recover, and others may die.

PUT LIFE ON THE MISSOURI.

Evarts Company Incorporated to Run Steamboat Line.

Pierre, S. D., May 19.—Articles of incorporation were filed for the Evarts Transportation company at Evarts, with a capital stock of $5,000. The incorporators are principally from Chamberlain and Iowa points, being James W. Sanford, John H. Keene, Walter L. Montgomery and Edward J. Somers. The alleged purpose of the company is to operate a steamer on the Missouri from Chamberlain to Evarts. If they succeed they will again put a little life into the appearance of the old Missouri, which has not been used by any other than government boats for many years.

Narrow Escape for Officers.

Milwaukee, May 19—Detectives Wallerman and Peck narrowly escaped death last evening at the hands of a man giving the name of W. H. Harris of Cleveland, Ohio. Harris had attempted to pass a check, believed to have been forged, on a local dealer. When the officers rounded him up Harris drew a revolver and fired two shots. The officers were too quick for the prisoner, and in the melee Harris himself received two flesh wounds from his own revolver. Harris had on his person certified checks amounting to $307.

Peculiar Case of Drowning.

New Paynesville, Minn., May 19. — The eighteen-months-old daughter of Christ Robinson, foreman of the McClure farms near this village, was drowned in a very peculiar and horrible manner. Her mother and maids had been engaged in making ice cream, and had taken the inner pail from the larger, leaving the latter standing upon the ground with about six inches of salt and ice in the bottom. The little one in some unknown way fell into this pail, head down and was drowned before her condition was discovered.

Dr. Lugger's Life in the Balance.

St. Paul, May 19.—Otto Lugger, professor of zoology and entomology at the agricultural school of the state university, and botanist of the experimental station, lies in an extremely critical condition at his home in St. Anthony Park. Pneumonia, which first became serious a week ago, has become complicated with heart trouble. His doctors said last night that there was yet a slight prospect that he might live, and if his strength carried him through the day, the crisis would be passed and he would rally.

Biology Students in Houseboat.

Winona, Minn., May 19.—Capt. Steve Ward, in charge of the launch Bluebird, has started for Lake Pepin, having in tow a cosy houseboat on which are members of the biological department of the state university, headed by Prof. Nachtrieb. They will be taken to Lake Pepin, and from there drop gradually down the river, making scientific investigations.

Petition for a Vote.

Regina, N. W. T., May 19.—At the Northwest assembly Dr. Elliott presented a petition signed by 920 persons in favor of a plebiscite on the liquor question, to be followed by total prohibition if a majority of the plebiscite voters go in favor. The matter was taken under consideration.

Charged With Highway Robbery.

La Crosse, Wis., May 19. — Three men giving their names as Martin Jones, Albert Hemphill and Fred Anderson, were arrested by the North side police, charged with holding up John Bjerbach, a verdant Norwegian, and robbing him of $15.

Another Trial for Hill.

Faribault, Minn., May 19.—The jury disagreed in the case of George Hill, charged with criminal assault on little Clara Nimann, and the judge remanded him to the autumn term of court.

The Annual June Rise.

Yankton, S. D., May 19.—The annual June rise of the Missouri began here yesterday, the water coming up several feet to the hour.

Blew His Head Off.

Watertown, Wis., May 19. — Joseph Busert committed suicide yesterday by filling his mouth with powder. He then placed a fuse between his lips and lit it. In a moment his head was blown off. He was a laborer.

Convicted of Murder.

Chippewa Falls, Wis., May 19. — Ira Steward was convicted of murdering Henry Miller, a farmer, who was killed in cold blood last fall. Steward was sentenced to life imprisonment at Waupun.

MRS. GAGE IS DEAD

WIFE OF THE SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY PASSES AWAY.

Heart Trouble, the Result of Grip Complications, Was the Immediate Cause of Death—Succumbed After an Illness of Nine Weeks' Duration—Maintained Her Bright and Cheerful Demeanor and Was Conscious to the Last—Closer to Mrs. McKinley Than Any Other of the Cabinet Ladies.

Washington, May 19. — Mrs. Lyman J. Gage, wife of the secretary of the treasury, died at 9:30 o'clock last night after an illness of nine weeks' duration. With her when the end come were her husband, her married daughter, Mrs. E. F. Pierce of Evanston, Ill., and Dr. W. W. Johnston, the attending physician. For a time before her death Mrs. Gage suffered considerable pain but she maintained her bright and cheerful demeanor and was conscious to the last. Heart trouble, the result of grip complications, was the immediate cause of death. Mrs. Gage was exposed to the inclement weather for about an hour on inauguration day, but at the time her health did not seem to have been affected. On March 11 she left here for Evanston to visit her married daughter. While there she experienced a chill and took to her bed, but soon recovered sufficiently to return to Washington, where she has been confined to her room ever since.

Mrs. Gage was a native of Albany, N. Y., and fifty-eight years of age. She was married to Secretary Gage in Denver, Colo., in 1887. There were no children from their union, Mrs. Pierce being a child by a former husband. The remains will be interred in Rosehill cemetery, near Chicago. Further than this the funeral services have not yet been arranged. It is probable, however, that religious services of a simple character will be held at her former residence in this city on Sunday morning, in which event the body will leave here by the morning train for Chicago.

During their residence in Washington Secretary and Mrs. Gage have taken quite an active part in social life at the capital. Mrs. Gage was a woman of charming personality, and with her husband delighted in extending the hospitality of their home on Massachusetts avenue. Mrs. Gage was probably closer to Mrs. McKinley than any other of the ladies of the cabinet.

Keep News From Mrs. McKinley.

San Francisco, May 19.—The news of the death of Mrs. Gage was received by the members of the president's official family in this city with expressions of regret. The Associated Press dispatch, which was transmitted to Secretary Cortelyou at the Scott residence, conveyed the news to President McKinley. Extra precautions were taken to keep news of Mrs. Gage's death from Mrs. McKinley.

WISCONSIN ATHLETES WIN.

Illinois Bested in a Dual Meet at Camp Randall.

Madison, Wis., May 19. — Wisconsin defeated Illinois in a dual meet at Camp Randall yesterday afternoon by a score of 76 1-2 to 35 1-2. The divided point in the score was the result of the finish in the two-mile run, when second place was divided between McEachern of Wisconsin and Katzel of Illinois, in one of the most sensational finishes ever seen at Camp Randall. Smith of Wisconsin finished first, well in advance of the others, and McEachern and Katzel raced the last hundred yards side by side, falling across the tape together from sheer exhaustion. In the running high jump Meyer of Wisconsin established a new record for the university at 6 feet. Smith, in the two-mile run made a new record in 10:13 and Poage made the quarter in :10 2-5, the fastest time ever made at Camp Randall.

BRUTAL CONDUCT.

John Townsend Abandons His Wife, Who Dies.

Bemidji, Minn., May 18.—The county authorities and the settlers in the vicinity of Bagley are scouring the woods in that vicinity for a man by the name of John Townsend, charged with most inhuman conduct. He has been living with a woman whom he claims was Belle Lowell, but who was credited as being his wife. To them recently a child was born which is strong and healthy. But the woman died from lack of attention. The authorities found her dying in a filthy bed and covered with bed sores. A warrant for manslaughter was sworn out against Townsend, but he managed to escape. The neighbors are incensed enough to hang him if they can catch him.

Thrown in Front of the Car.

Fargo, N. D., May 19.—George Ross, an employe of the Northern Pacific, was assisting the section crew in propelling a handcar in the Fargo yards. The handle broke and he was precipitated in front of the car, which ran over his body. He was unconscious for some hours after seemingly recovering. It is feared that his spine is injured and paralysis may set in.

Farmer's Peculiar Injury.

Spring Valley, Minn., May 19. — Francis Hall, a wealthy and retired farmer of this section, while driving to his farm his horse refused to cross a bridge. Mr. Hall got out and tried to lead the horse across, but he made a jump, striking Mr. Hall, breaking his ankle and injuring him internally. He has not yet regained consciousness. His recovery is very doubtful.

Farmer's Death in a Well.

Rhinelander, Wis., May 19. — John Miller, a farmer living at Mason, west of here on the Soo line, was killed by the caving-in of a well in which he was at work. He leaves a wife and family of children destitute.

For Selling Oleomargarine.

Milwaukee, May 19. — F. C. Arnold, agent of a Chicago house, was arrested and fined for soliciting orders and selling oleomargarine within this state. This is the first violation of the Brunson law, passed last winter.

COMPROMISE ON N. P.

Those Who Lost in the Deal to Be Treated Fairly.

New York, May 17.—The Press says: Compromise will follow the contest for control of the Northern Pacific. One faction has control of the majority of the common and preferred shares together, while the other faction has absolute control of a majority of the common shares, the directorate and the property. The question to be discussed during the compromise will be a legal one and hinges upon two interesting and novel issues. Under the articles of incorporation "the company" has a right to retire the preferred stock. Just what "the company" is counsel for the contestants must decide. If "the company" includes the directors and the common stockholders the Morgan party can retire the preferred stock, thus wiping out eve na chance of the majority stockholders voting with the Kuhn-Loeb-Harriman combine. It is the general acceptance among railway bankers that for this reason control of the property vests absolutely with the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co. and its associates. There seems to be a disposition, however, so friends of the factions say, to treat fairly those who lost in the contest. The interests of each are associated so closely that a compromise seems necessary to restore harmony and public confidence.

ACCEPT PLATT AMENDMENT.

Majority of Committee Favors an Early Report.

Havana, May 17.—A majority of the committee on relations, Senores Tamayo, Villuendas and Dr Quesada, are in favor of the committee making an immediate report advising the constitutional convention to accept the Platt amendment. Senores Gomez and Silva are strongly opposed to this action. It is said that Senor Gomez in drawing up the minority report interprets the explanations of Secretary Root as an admittance that the United States will change the Platt amendment if the Cubans insist upon it; that clauses will be adopted guaranteeing the absolute independence of Cuba; that the third clause will be stricken out as the Monroe doctrine provides for intervention should this be necessary, and that coaling stations used for coal shall not be used for naval stations. Senor Gomez was not present at yesterday's meeting of the committee. The majority claimed that he was trying to delay the bringing of a motion before the convention for final action. Word was sent to Senor Gomez that he would be allowed twenty-four hours to draw up the minority report. At yesterday's meeting the majority voted that on account of Secretary Root's explanations to the commission "we agree to accept the Platt amendment as the basis of future treaties with the United States."

MATRIMONIAL MIX-UP.

Brothers Wed a Whole Family in an Attempt to Get a Fortune.

Omaha, May 17.—A domestic tangle came up for settlement in the district court yesterday wherein Edward Barrett is charged with having married twin sisters within ninety days, without the formality of a divorce. His brother then married the mother of the twins to increase the peculiar relations of the persons involved. Thus the mother becomes the sister-in-law of her own daughters and the Barrett brothers sustain the relation of father-in-law and son-in-law to each other and Edward Barrett becomes the stepson of his brother John. The people involved are fairly prominent and the women are wealthy. In fact the peculiar matrimonial tangle is the result of the extraordinary determination of the Barrett brothers to obtain the family wealth of the women. Mrs. Mary Eggles, the head of the family, was a wealthy widow of North Platte. Her husband died a year ago, leaving her about $50,000. To his twin daughters he left $35,000 each. All was in ranch property.

LABOR WAR OPENS.

Machinists in Chicago Begin the Strike.

Chicago, May 17. — Opening the expected war between the International Association of Machinists and the machinery manufacturers in Chicago, forty machinists employed in the Nelson & Kreuter laundry machinery manufacturing plant went on strike yesterday because representatives of the firm refused to entertain a demand for the nine-hour day or the increased wage scale. The date for the beginning of the fight had been set for next Monday, but the men employed in the Nelson & Kreuter plant could not be restrained by the officials of the union, and after repeated efforts to settle the controversy had failed the word was given yesterday and the men walked out. It is said several thousand machinists will strike in Chicago on Monday unless the increased wage scale and the nine-hour day is conceded.

Yale Changes.

New Haven, Conn., May 17. — At a meeting of the Yale corporation Henry Wade Rogers, LL. D., formerly president of Northwestern university, was elected a professor in the Yale law school. Frank K. Sanders, Ph. D., at present Woolsey professor of Biblical literature in the college, was formally chosen dean of the Yale divinity school, his term of service to begin at the close of the bi-centennial celebration.

New Transport Line.

Washington, May 17.—A proposition has been laid before Secretary Root for the establishment of a transport line from New York to Manila by way of the Suez canal. The secretary now has the matter under consideration and will probably decide upon it shortly. The plan is not to supercede the Pacific transport line, but to have two lines, and the chief argument in its favor is that of economy.

Crippled Prisoner Escaped.

Baraboo, Wis., May 17. — James W. Wilson escaped from the county jail and the means of his departure is a mystery. Wilson has but one leg and must have had an accomplice to escape. It is thought he left on a train.

Birdshot in His Arm.

Glenwood, Wis., May 17.—While the Glenwood Gun club was engaged in its regular weekly trap shoot one of the guns was accidentally discharged and a load of birdshot was lodged in the arm of Percy Jones.

THE THIEF RIVER FALLS NEWS.

VOL. XVIII. NO. 22. [redacted]EF RIVER FALLS, RED LAKE COUNTY, MINN., THURSDAY, MAY 30, 1901. $1.50 PER YEAR.

SHE TRAVELS WELL

MRS. M'KINLEY SUFFERS NO INCONVENIENCE ON THE TRIP.

Dr. Rixey Makes a Favorable Report on the Condition of the Gentle Sufferer—The Weather Seems Almost Like a Special Intervention of Providence for Her Benefit—President and His Cabinet Devoting Much Time to the Consideration of the Chinese Situation.

Ogden, Utah, May 28.—The presidential train traversed the State of Nevada yesterday, and reached Ogden at 6:30 last night. The route lay along the Humboldt river, through the Ruby and Wahsatch mountains, and then descended into the Salt lake basin. During most of the day the elevation exceeded 5,000 feet and snow-clad peaks were continually in sight from the car windows. At this season of the year the ride across Nevada is exceedingly disagreeable. The heat is oppressive and the dust from the desert is frequently blinding. Fortunately for Mrs. McKinley one of those heavy rainstorms which so rarely visit this region swept completely over the state Sunday night, laying the dust and tempering the atmosphere. It rained also several times during the day. The weather seemed almost like a special intervention of Providence for the benefit of the gentle sufferer. Mrs. McKinley passed a comfortable night passing the Sierras but the trip yesterday was looked forward to with some apprehension. The rain, however, relieved the anxiety, and Dr. Rixey reported that Mrs. McKinley was very well. She suffered no inconvenience from the rarified atmosphere. The day aboard the train was passed without incident. The president makes it a rule ordinarily not to travel on Sunday, but the present circumstances were so exceptional that he hid his compunctions in order that his wife might the sooner reach home. No service was held aboard the train, but the president and the members of the cabinet kept quietly to their rooms the major portion of the day. Once or twice when the train stopped for water they alighted to stretch their limbs. At Curlin early yesterday morning the president shook hands with some of the people who had gathered there, among them a number of Digger Indians who live in the neighboring mountains. On the way back to Washington the president and members of the cabinet are devoting a good deal of time to the consideration of the Chinese situation. The declination of the other powers to join in the suggestion of the United States with reference to scaling down the indemnity was a great disappointment, though it could hardly be said that it was entirely unexpected.

Standing the Trip

HEAD SPLIT, YET HE LIVES.

Man's Skull Ripped Open by Circular Saw—Portion of Brain Taken Out.

Newport News, Va., May 28. — The case of C. E. Garrett, who was probably fatally injured May 7 by coming in contact with a circular saw at one of the city mills, is most remarkable. The blade ripped upward from the chin to the back of the head, passing directly through the center of the face and severing the nose. The blade entered twice, and on top of the skull cut a V-shaped strip of bone. Since the day of the accident little portions of the brain had to be taken out. Garrett was given up for dead, but still lives, eats and talks. Last Wednesday the attending physician had to remove about two ounces of brain. The man's left side is paralyzed.

SAMSON'S HEAD ON MEDALS.

Design for Memorial to Those in Santiago Bay Battle to Bear Commander's Features.

Washington, May 28. — The naval board of awards is understood to have reached a tentative decision upon the design for a medal of honor for those who participated in the naval battle of Santiago Bay. The members of the board decline to give any information on the subject, but it is currently understood among naval officers that the board has followed the precedent of the Manila medal, in showing the head of the commander-in-chief, and that this Santiago medal will show the head of Admiral Sampson.

NO NEW CARDINAL.

Not While Gibbons Lives Will Another American Cardinal Be Appointed.

Vienna, May 28.—The Politische Correspondenz learns from an important clerical dignitary in Rome that while Cardinal Gibbons lives no new American cardinal will be appointed. It is also asserted by the Rome correspondent that Archbishop Ireland, who recently made a strong declaration in favor of the restoration of the temporal power of the pope, has lost many friends by his abandonment of his former attitude on this question, and is now practically an isolated personage in the church.

PLANS NEW SUBMARINE BOAT.

Italian Admiral Claims to Have Devised Vessel Which Is Superior to Any Yet Built.

Rome, May 28. — Rear Admiral Mitchell, inspector general of Italian naval engineers, has presented to vice admiral Morin, minister of marine, plans for a new submarine war vessel, which he claims, will be vastly superior to anything yet invented.

TILLMAN AND M'LAURIN RESIGN.

Will Give People a Chance to Decide Between Them.

Gaffney, S. C., May 28.—United States Senators Benjamin R. Tillman and John L. McLaurin have resigned their high offices, to take effect on Sept. 15 next. The resignations, which have been forwarded to Gov. McSweeney and are already beyond recall, resulted from an acrimonious political debate in this city, the culmination of a bitter factional fight long existing between the two senators, who represent the rival divisions of the Democracy in the South. In Saturday's debate, where McLaurin charged Tillman had no business to appear, personalities and strong language were used with liberality. The senior senator's declaration that the re-election of McLaurin would be taken as meaning that the people could not indorse him (Tillman) was followed by McLaurin's suggestion that both resign and go before the electors of the state for indorsement. Senator Tillman agreed and went farther than McLaurin in that he left the race open to all candidates, refusing to sign an agreement that the governor should appoint him or his rival to the office when the voters named their choice.

It is understood that Senator McLaurin and Senator Tillman have a tacit agreement to contest for the long term to which Tillman was elected last January. Under the state Democratic party rules the candidate must designate specifically the office to which he aspires. Whether McLaurin wins over Tillman or, Tillman is re-elected, McLaurin's unexpired term will be filled by a new man.

DAMAGED BY WIND.

Heavy Storms in Utah Do Much Damage.

Salt Lake, Utah, May 28.—The windstorm which swept over Nevada, Utah, Southern Idaho, Wyoming and Colorado Thursday night and which blew constantly until last night, did damage that will run into the hundreds of thousands of dollars. It resulted in an almost complete prostration of telegraph and telephone service in the states affected and for nearly twenty-four hours during the height of the storm the intermountain region was practically cut off from the rest of the world. At Ogden the storm was felt worst. Here the wind tore roofs from a number of buildings, including the Baptist chuch. The damage in Ogden probably will reach $100,000.

BOERS CAUGHT IN AMBUSH.

Reinforcements Come to the Aid of the Boers and the British Retire.

London, May 28. — A dispatch from Standerton, Transvaal, dated May 22, says a detachment of the Queen's Mounted infantry laid in ambush near Amersfort. Commandant Joubert, the magistrate and a party of burghers rode into the town and refused the British demand that they surrender and attempted to escape. The British thereupon fired on them, wounding commandant Joubert and the magistrate. Reinforcements came to the aid of the Boers and the British were compelled to retire with the loss of three prisoners.

SILVER SERVICE FOR WISCONSIN.

Big Battleship Made the Recipient of a Beautiful Present.

San Francisco, May 28.—A commission from the State of Wisconsin has arrived here with a $10,000 silver banquet service which is to be presented to the battleship Wisconsin by the state whose name she bears. The formal presentation will be made to-day or to-morrow. In addition to the silver service there is also a bronze badger four feet high, cast from Spanish cannon captured during the war.

COLLISION AT SEA.

Fourteen Sailors Are Thought to Have Been Drowned.

Boston, May 28.—The steamer Ohio, from Hull, reports a collision at sea with the Norwegian bark Elise, from Moss, April 1, for New York, in ballast. One sailor was picked up, but his stories are so conflicting that it is hard to tell if the bark went down with fourteen men or not. The supposition is that she did and that only this sailor was saved. The collision occurred in a fog.

NEW LINE FOR TWIN CITIES.

Illinois Central Railroad Completes Its Plans.

Chicago, May 28.—A new route between Chicago and St. Paul and Minneapolis will be opened early in the coming fall by the Illinois Central railroad. The last link in the line that will give the company a through road of its own from Lyle, Iowa, to Albert Lea, Minn., has been finished and train service will be established as soon as other preliminary arrangements are completed.

Boers Driven Off.

London, May 28.—The war office has received the following dispatch from Lord Kitchener, dated Pretoria, May 26: "A superior force of Boers made a determined attack on a convoy between Venterdorp and Potchefstroom May 23, but were driven off. Our loss was four killed and thirty wounded. The convoy arrived in safety.

Rains Cause a Landslide.

Pittsburg, May 28.—The heavy rains of the past twenty-four hours caused a land slide which will delay the Panhandle trains for about thirty-six hours. About 600 tons of earth and stone came down from Mount Washington, behind the McClintock mills, completely covering the tracks.

Village Partially Destroyed.

Madrid, May 28.—The village of Fuparagossa, province of Badajo, has been almost destroyed by a storm. One woman was killed.

RACE ENDS IN DEATH

TERRIFIC COLLISION IN WHICH FIVE LIVES WERE LOST.

Over Forty Prominent People Injured, Some Fatally and Others Seriously—Electric Cars Race for a Switch While Running in Opposite Directions — Passengers Form, a Struggling, Shrieking Pyramid, Mixed With Blood, Detached Portions of Human Bodies and the Wreckage of the Cars.

Albany, N. Y., May 28.—Electric cars racing for a switch while running in opposite directions at the rate of forty miles an hour, cost five lives yesterday afternoon by a terrific collision in which over forty prominent people were injured, some fatally and others seriously. The lobby of the local post-office filled with dead and wounded, hysterical women and children looking for relatives and friends, surgeons administering temporary relief and ambulances racing through the city, taking the wounded to hospitals, were the early intimations of the accident.

The scene of the accident was a point about two miles out of Green Bush, on the line of the Albany & Hudson railway. The point where the cars met on the single track was at a sharp curve, and so fast were both running and so sudden was the collision that the motorman never had time to put on the brakes before south-bound car No. 22 had gone almost clean through north-bound car No. 17, and hung on the edge of a high bluff with its load of Shrieking, Maimed Humanity.

One motorman was pinioned up against the smashed front of the south-bound car with both legs severed and instantly killed, while the other one lived a few minutes. Fully 120 men, women and children formed a struggling, shrieking pyramid, mixed with blood, detached portions of human bodies and the wreckage of the cars.

Some of the more slightly injured of the men extricated themselves and began to pull people out of the rear ends of the two cars, and almost every one was taken out in this way and nearly all were badly injured. The few women and children who had escaped injury and death were hysterical and added their cries to the shrieks of the dying and mutilated. Men with broken arms and bones and dislocated joints and bloody heads and faces, tried to assist others who were more helpless. Help had been summoned from East Greenbush and vicinity and in a little time the bruised mass of humanity with the mutilated dead for a gruesome and silent company were loaded on extra cars and taken to Albany. There ambulances and physicians had been summoned and the postoffice turned into a morgue and hospital. As fast as the physicians could temporarily fix up the wounded they were taken to their homes or to the hospitals.

Motorman Took Chances.

With both motormen killed it was hard to get at the real cause of the accident, but it was pretty well determined that it was caused by an attempt of the south-bound car to reach a second switch instead of waiting for the north-bound car at the first siding. The cars weigh fifteen tons each and are the largest electric cars built, but so frightful was the crash that both cars were torn almost to splinters. Both cars were filled with Sunday pleasure seekers returning from the new recreation grounds that the railway had just opened. The cars on the line were running at switch headway—that is, as a car reached a siding switch it was supposed to wait until another going in the opposite direction passed. The motorman of the south-bound car reached one of the switches, but seeing no north-bound car, decided to take chances and go on to the next siding. It was at a curve between that the two cars met.

SAVES $600 AND GOES CRAZY.

Regular Army Man's Mind Gives Way Beneath Strain of Hoarding.

Allentown, Pa., May 28.—After saving $600 of his pay during a long service in the United States regular army, Charles W. Miller, still a young man, has become mentally deranged. The Lehigh county court appointed a committee to take charge of his person and estate.

FIRE DESTROYS MUCH PROPERTY.

Furniture Company Burned and One Man Killed.

Rushville, Ind., May 28. — Fire destroyed the main factory building of the Rushville Furniture company, a large four-story brick structure, entailing a loss of between $45,000 and $50,000. B. J. Kosse, foreman of the finishing-room, was fatally burned, and died of his injuries.

NEGRO LYNCHED.

Kansas Mob Hangs a Negro Murderer.

Wichita, Kan., May 28.—Bill Campbell, a negro, was lynched at Pond Creek, Okla., by a mob of 400 persons, who broke down the jail, took him to the scene of his crime and hanged him to a telegraph pole. He was hanged for the fatal shooting of Deputy Sheriff George Smith.

ADIEU TO VALKYRIE III.

Lord Dunraven's Cup Challenger Will Be Broken Up.

Glasgow, May 28.—The old America's cup challenger, Lord Dunraven's Valkyrie II., which has been lying in Gouock bay, has been sold to a Glasgow firm of iron brokers. She will be broken up.

PORTO RICAN CASES.

Supreme Court May Hand Down a Decision To-Day.

Washington, May 28. — The United States supreme court will hold its last sitting for this term to-day, and will then adjourn until October. No one outside the members of the court knows positively whether there will be an opinion handed down in the Porto Rican cases. The department of justice has received no notice, neither has the counsel for the prosecution of these cases. The members of the court are known to have given much attention to these cases in the last six weeks. It is also known that several members of the court have been at work upon individual opinions. It has been the belief of government attorneys that the court would hand down a majority opinion in favor of the government's position that the cession of Porto Rico and the Philippines in the treaty of Paris did not make those islands integral parts of the United States, with the Constitution controlling congress and limiting the executive in the administration of them. It is practically certain that the court will not be united upon any opinion, but that there will be several dissenting opinions.

FIRE ON A STEAMER.

Causes Great Excitement Among Passengers.

Menominee, Mich., May 28. — Fire broke out in the boiler room of the passenger steamer Fannie C. Hart while she was coming here from Escanaba with 200 passengers yesterday. The appearance of the flames was the signal for great excitement among the passengers, and in addition to fighting the blaze the crew had them to keep under control. The call to fire quarters was promptly answered and in a short time the fire was put out and the damage will be small.

THIRTY-TWO BODIES RECOVERED.

Victims of an Explosion in a Mine.

London, May 28. — Thirty-two dead bodies, some of them terribly mutilated, have been recovered in the colliery in Sengheidd, in the Rhondda valley, where an explosion occurred last Friday morning. The gruesome work proceeds very slowly and many painful scenes are witnessed at the pit's mouth. King Edward has sent a message of sympathy to the families of the victims and has expressed his admiration of the gallantry of the rescuers.

Razors and Pistols Used.

Chicago, May 28.—Boys playing with a fishing bag started a riot in the Assyrian quarter on Fulton street between Harrison and Polk last night. Razors, knives and pistols were used. Eight men were injured, three of them severely. A riot call was turned in and a patrol load of officers dashed into the midst of the struggling men, women and children. With drawn clubs the police charged the mob and dispersed it.

Great Strike of Oil.

Dallas, Tex., May 28.—A great strike of oil has been made at Sour Lake, twenty miles northwest of Beaumont. A well was struck in the rear of the Sour Lake hotel and at once became a gusher, flowing 15,000 barrels a day. This new strike so far from the Beaumont field has caused renewed excitement all over Texas and a rush to the new district is already on.

Boy Brutally Murdered.

San Francisco, May 28.—Robert Hislop, a thirteen-year-old boy, was brutally murdered by burglars at his father's home here. He was alone in the house and in bed, and the burglars repeatedly struck him over the head with a blunt instrument, crushing his skull. They then ransacked the house and made their escape, securing little of value.

Fishermen Use Dynamite.

Yankton, S. D., May 28.—Reports arrived at Yankton that a gang of scoundrels were exploding dynamite in the Jim river and bringing double loads of fish to the surrounding towns and Yankton for sale. Steps are being taken to bring the gang to justice immediately.

Father and Son Killed.

El Reno, Okla, May 28.—Postmaster Lowry and son of Carter, in Washita county, were shot and killed by a man named Fowler. The shooting was the outcome of an old feud.

ROW WITH GERMANS

AMERICAN SHOOTS ONE OF THE KAISER'S SOLDIERS.

Disobeyed an Order and the American Sentry Fired, Hitting Another Soldier Some Distance Away—Incident Causes Strained Relations Between American Legation Guard and the German Soldiers in Pekin—Full Investigation Will Be Made—German Diplomats Friendly.

Pekin, May 28. — The relations between the American legation guard and the German soldiers have become strained.

Legation street is being repaired near the legation, and an American sentry was placed at the point with orders to direct people around by a side street. Everybody obeyed the request with the exception of the Germans, both officers and soldiers, who have caused th American sentries much trouble. One of the German officers drew his sword and charged an American soldier, who brought his bayonet to "charge," whereupon the officer desisted. Subsequently a German soldier charged past the sentry, who fired,

Hitting Another German

soldier who was standing near the German legation, a quarter of a mile away, inflicting a slight flesh wound. The sentry has been placed under arrest and Maj. Robertson has instituted and investigation. The attitude of Dr. Mumm von Schwartzenstein, the German minister, representing the civilians, and Count von Waldersee, representing the military, as well as that of other high officials, has been particularly friendly toward the Americans, which makes all the more pronounced the unfriendly feeling evinced by a majority of the German officers and men. This unfriendliness is attributed to the American attitude in maintaining control of the gate at the entrance to the Forbidden City, which the Germans consider a reflection upon their national honesty.

-o-

Washington, May 28.—Officials here attach no importance to the disturbance between Germans and American sentinels at Pekin. Such affairs, while regrettable, it is said, are to be expected, especially where the difference in the languages spoken might easily lead to a misunderstanding of orders. No report of the incident has been received at the war department.

WRECKAGE TELLS OF DISASTER.

Steamer Crane Sights Pieces of Schooner Floating in Lake Michigan.

Milwaukee, May 28.—Capt. John Duncan, of the steamer Crane, reached Milwaukee and reported that while off Sheboygan yesterday he found a trunk and pieces of a schooner floating in the lake. The sea was so rough that he was unable to get near enough to the wreckage to pick it up. It is thought by some that the wreckage is part of the schooner C. H. Hackley.

The officers of the steamer Boston, which reached here yesterday afternoon, report having sighted the masts of a schooner, which was abandoned during the gale of Friday. It is thought that this tells of a second disaster near Sheboygan, as the wreck was sighted a score of miles from the place where slabs and hatch covers, supposedly from the schooner Hackley, were discovered Saturday. The Boston did notdid not go sufficiently close to ascertain the name of the abandoned schooner, whose decks were awash. Additional reports from the schooner reported lost say that slabs are strewn along the lake for twenty miles, and it is now believed that the wreck seen yesterday may have been the schooner which lost the slabs instead of a second vessel.

Start a Colony of Farmers.

Duluth, Minn., May 28.—F. G. Kopplin, a wealthy Red Wing man, has purchased 30,000 acres of cut-over timber lands near Iron River, Wis., and will start a colony of farmers there. He has interested many farmers near Wabasha, Winona and other Minnesota points, who are now renting farms, and many of them will join his colony. The soil is said to be very fertile. The land is between the Northern Pacific and Lake Superior.

Murderer's Body Found.

St. Paul, May 28.—The body of Henry Minzers, who killed his brother-in-law, Frank Greipel, in the latter's home Sunday, May 19, was found yesterday morning in Duncan's lake, on the Mendota road, about six miles from St. Paul. There was a bullet wound in the left breast and a fifty-pound granite rock was attached to the body by means of a wire rope. Officers have been scouring the woods in search of Mingers for a week.

Was a Damaging Frost.

Huron, S. D., May 28.—There was a frost Friday night throughout the Jim river valley and another Saturday night. Some fields of corn will be retarded, but garden stuff suffers the most. Wheat was uninjured and Russian thistles, which were making a rapid growth, are killed and small fruit seriously injured.

Boy Badly Bitten.

Winona, Minn., May 28. — Vincent Frost, a boy about fourteen years old, was seriously bitten by a dog owned by Vincent Czarnoski. The boy was standing on the street when the animal attacked him. An ugly wound was inflicted on the boy's leg and he bled profusely. His condition is considered serious.

THIEF RIVER FALLS NEWS

By John W. Eastman.

THIEF RIVER FALLS, MINN

J. Pierpont Morgan did not have quite everything bought in this country before he crossed the sea, but he left a man in charge on this side to pick up what few trifles he had happened to overlook.

The recent reference in Youth's Companion to San Bernardino county, California, as the largest in the United States, has brought out the fact that there is one even larger—Custer county, in Montana. The one contains 19,947 square miles, the other 20,490. In the interest of accuracy, therefore, the palm must be transferred from California to Montana.

The Geneva correspondent of the McKinley has informed President Kruger of the Transvaal that he cannot receive him, either officially or unofficially. No doubt that story will give comfort in London, and it can do no harm anywhere else. We may be very sure that if President Kruger visits Washington he will be received with all the honors befitting his rank.

Liquor dealers in Abingdon, Mass., by way of a joke nominated Rev. W. H. Wyman for constable, but they have about come to the conclusion that the joke is on them instead of on the reverend gentleman. They thought the proffer of such an honor would anger Mr. Wyman, but he enlisted the aid of local church people, was triumphantly elected and now declares that the Sunday and midnight closing ordinances must be rigidly observed.

A film of kerosene on the surface of standing water is fatal both to the larvae and to the adult female mosquitoes which alight there to lay their eggs. A small quantity is sufficient, one ounce being enough for a space of fifteen square feet. Temporary pools which result from heavy rains, and even the water in hollow stumps and discarded tin cans may furnish a generation of mosquitoes.

You may talk of the selfish men who succeed, but when we talk of success we don't mean tumblebugs who roll their treasure home, pigs who succeed in finding acorns, bankers who pile up dollars, trust organizers who rob, or gamblers who successfully swindle. When we mention successful men, we mean men really successful—those whose lives have added something to the dignity and decency of the human race.

The dinner given by the survivors of the defenders of Belfort in the Franco-German war, on the anniversary of the siege, was especially memorable because of the one woman present, who provided one of the most popular toasts. This was Mme. Belfort, a lieutenant of the Francs-Tireurs, who, then but a girl just out of her teens, was enrolled as a trooper in that corps, as she was a capital rider and shot. In this campaign she won both her commission and the military cross.

When digging in the gravel beds of South Kensington for the foundations of the Victoria and Albert museum in London great quantities of the bones of extinct animals were found, creatures which lived in the London basin at the time that the river's drift and brick earth were being deposited. These were the bones of the great stags then common, of the elephant and of the primeval horse, creatures which lived there before the channel was cut between England and France, though not perhaps before man had appeared in what is now the Thames valley. A scientist, to whom some of the remains were taken said that they reminded him of the great discovery of similar remains in the brick earth at Ilford, in Essex, England, thirty-seven years ago, when he personally saw dug from the brick fields of that parish the head and tusks of one of the largest mammoth elephants in the world.

Within the next two months the government will close out its business of educating Indians by contract, and thenceforth will retain practically the whole control and conduct of the matter. The change from the old system to the new began in 1895, when Congress passed a law providing for sectarian schools, the decrease being twenty per cent each year. Meantime, as the cutting off of this aid deprived Indian boys and girls of the privileges which they had enjoyed for them in government schools, the attendance in which has increased from fourteen to twenty-two thousand, and is still growing at the rate of a thousand a year. The next step contemplated by the government is a measure of compulsory education for young Indians. It is a pleasure to note that Hampton Institute, being entirely non-sectarian and performing a service which would be hard to duplicate will still receive a certain measure of government assistance.

An interesting and unusual ceremony will take place in Quebec next month, when a suitably inscribed bronze tablet will be placed by the Sons of the American Revolution upon the spot where the brave Gen. Montgomery fell, on December 31, 1775, in his ill-fated attempt to capture the citadel. The ceremony of unveiling the tablet to the American general will be followed by an international exchange of courtesies and a banquet; and it is safe to predict that, although the city held out successfully against the fathers, it will capitulate to the sons.

BACK TO WASHINGTON.

President Will Begin His Homeward Trip To-day.

San Francisco, May 26. — President McKinley has completed his program in this city, having met every organization included in the original schedule, and Mrs. McKinley's health has so far improved that the president and his party will begin the return journey to the national capital at 10 a. m. to-day. The president's public functions yesterday included a reception at the Scott residence to the members of the foreign consular representatives of this city, a reception at the palace hotel by the Sons and Daughters of the American revolution and the Loyal Legion and a review of the school children of Oakland. The president spent the evening quietly at the Scott residence, resting and superintending arrangements for his departure.

WENT ASHORE IN A GALE.

Crew of a Wrecked Schooner Rescued With Difficulty.

Milwaukee, Wis., May 26. — The schooner C. H. Hackley, Capt. William Oertel, went ashore in a northeast gale off Port Washington at 12:45 yesterday afternoon. The Milwaukee life-saving crew was notified and at once went to the scene of the wreck with a big wrecking tug. After considerable exertion the six members of the crew were rescued and brought back to this city, though the schooner is an utter wreck. She broke in two on the rocks under the pounding of the waves and her crew was hanging to the rigging nearly exhausted when the life-savers arrived.

FIGHT AGAINST SECRET ORDERS.

United Presbyterians Would Shut Masons Out of Heaven.

Des Moines, Iowa, May 26.—The important topic yesterday before the United Presbyterian general assembly was a revision of the creed in order to provide that no member of any secret society can be a member of the church. The matter was discussed for more than two hours but final discussion was postponed till later in the session. The Masonic and Odd Fellows' orders were special objects of attack, one delegate going so far as to say he believed no member of a secret society could ever reach heaven.

NOT TOO OLD TO LOVE.

Groom of Seventy-Four and Bride One Year Younger.

New Richmond, Wis., May 26. — Dr. Joseph Johnson of this city, one of the oldest practitioners of St. Croix county, and Mrs. C. Folsom, one of the pioneers of Polk county, were united in marriage in the Episcopal church in Star Prairie. The groom has passed his seventy-fourth milepost and the bride has seen seventy-three summers.

New Gasoline Engine.

Howard, S. D., May 26.—Martin Hayland, a blacksmith at Fedora, in the western part of Miner county, has invented a gasoline engine which promises to make his fortune and revolutionize light motive power. It is an engine with four cylinders arranged tandem, each automatically fed, compressed and exploded, the explosion timed to keep the piston head continually under pressure of explosive force on both the forward and backward movement.

Vicious Boy Sent to Jail.

Winona, Minn., May 26.—Fred Sherman, a sixteen-year-old boy, was dealt severely with in the municipal court. He had been stealing a ride on the Winona & Western train and was put off by Conductor McCoy. The boy threw a stone after the train and hit the conductor, who was standing on the rear platform. The boy was sent to the county jail for five days.

Makes a Fortune in Oil.

Fort Dodge, Iowa, May 26. — Capt. Terrill of Belmond, who is the owner of 3,600 acres of land in the new Texas oil region, is one of the many who have struck it rich. He recently sold 400 acres for $84,000, or $210 per acre. On the remaining land he has just located a large gusher and the prospects are that he will be a millionaire before he is through.

Daylight Robbery.

Waseca, Minn., May 26.—A bold daylight robbery was committed in this city. Frank Preusser, who recently came here and bought a blacksmith shop, was held up and relieved of $180 in Fred Sebastian's saloon. Shortly after a young man named E. G. Smith was arrested and a large part of the money has been recovered.

Moose Invades a Village.

Stephen, Minn., May 26. — A large moose passed down one of the streets of the village Thursday, evidently deeming life safer amidst the haunts of man than roaming the wilds of Roseau county. He quietly jogged along until the village dogs got after him, when he took to his heels.

Hard Fight With Fire.

Duluth, Minn., May 26.—Fire broke out in the Mitchell & McClure lumber yard, and for a time the entire plant was in danger of destruction. The entire department and several fire tugs fought the fire and held it down to a loss of about $5,000; fully insured.

Unusually Large Strawberry Crop.

Winona, Minn., May 26.—The strawberry crop in this vicinity will be unusually large this year and will commence to come on the market the latter part of next week. The plants are at present in about as fine condition as ever known.

Fourteen Million Feet of Logs.

Special Election Called.

Olivia, Minn., May 26.—The county commissioners of Renville county have called a special election to be held June 26 next to vote upon the question of issuing $50,000 in bonds for the erection of a court house in this city.

TWELVE LIVES LOST

STEAMER FOUNDERS IN A STORM ON LAKE HURON.

Only Two Members of a Crew of Fourteen Are Saved and One of Them Goes Crazy From His Experience—Buffeted by a Furious Sea for Several Hours Before Rescued—Steamer Goes to Pieces Shortly After She Struck—Crazy Sailor Tries to Drown Himself and Companion.

East Tawes, Mich., May 26. — The wooden steamer Baltimore foundered in Lake Huron near Au Sable, yesterday morning and twelve of her crew of fourteen were drowned. Two men were washed about in the lake for several hours, lashed to a piece of wreckage, and were finally picked up by the tug Columbia and brought here. George McGinnis, a deckhand, one of the rescued, went crazy from his experience. The other survivor, Thomas Murphy of Milwaukee, second engineer, was able to tell the story of the disaster. It was some time after the Columbia had brought the shipwrecked men into port before Murphy was revived sufficiently to tell his story. The Baltimore foundered about 6 o'clock in the morning and he was in the water until late in the afternoon, exposed to the buffeting of a furious northeast sea.

"We were bound from Lorain to Sault Ste. Marie," he said, "and had in tow a large steam drill and scow. When off Thunder bay Thursday night Capt. Place saw that the steamer was making bad weather, for the

Waves Had Smashed

in the engineer's quarters and the washrooms and the water was running into the hold. Capt. Place decided to turn about and run for Tawes for shelter. Everything went all right until we were off Au Sable, when the steamer struck heavily on the bottom. The seas broke over her at the same time and carried away the deck house, then the after cabin and finally the smokestack fell. Both rails forward broke in two just aft of the forward deckhouse, and we knew that it would be only a few minutes before the steamer would go to pieces. 'It is every man for himself now,' shouted Capt. Place. We took the captain's advice, and every man started to save himself as best he could. Some of the boys took to the rigging, but McGinnis and I lashed ourselves to a ringbolt in a piece of the after cabin, and we were washed overboard shortly afterward. The strain was too much for McGinnis and he went crazy before we had been in the water long. He tried to throw me off the wreckage, but I talked to him and encouraged him to hold on. Twice he got loose and

Tried to Drown Us Both,

but each time I succeeded in quieting him. I told him a boat was coming to take us off, and then I would get him tied fast again. The Columbia finally came along and picked us up just as I was about to give up hope. I am afraid all the rest of the crew were drowned, including Mrs. Place. I only wonder how it was we lived through it all. Our wreckage was big enough to make a raft, but it was small, and the seas swept it constantly."

The tug Columbia lost a drill scow with six men on board just before she picked up the men from the Baltimore. The Columbia went out again in the afternoon and found the drill making good weather. The men were taken off it and they were badly frightened as the scow had neither boat nor life preservers. Capt. Meno of the steamer City of Holland claims that the gale was one of the worst in fifteen years.

DUCKED THE EDITORS.

Sensational Incident at the Vincennes University.

Vincennes, Ind., May 26.—A sensational incident occurred in the students' chapel at Vincennes university yesterday. The hall was crowded with professors, students and visitors, when H. B. Holman, a member of the senior class, as chairman of a "roasting" committee, arose to read a parody on certain Scripture verses, aimed to ridicule A. W. Burger and W. W. Willis, seniors, who are editors of the Blue and Gold, the college publication. Burger and Prof. Bacon, instructor in science, rushed into the hall and upon the platform and destroyed the speaker's manuscript. Before the faculty could interfere twenty-five students were piled up in a football heap on the stage in a rough-and-tumble tussle. A number received severe bruises. Willis' clothing was almost completely torn off before order was restored. In the afternoon the students pulled Burger through the streets with a rope around his neck, yelling, "Hang him." At night the student editors were ducked in the Wabash river to atone for criticising other students in the Blue and Gold.

LIVES WERE LOST.

Great Destruction by Storm in North Carolina.

Charlotte, N. C., May 26. — Reports from remote counties in the mountain districts show great destruction by the storm. In Bakersville sixteen residences and the Baptist church were washed away. Quinter Moore and his son were drowned. Every house in Magnetic City, a village in Mitchell county, was destroyed. At Roan Mountain station twenty residences were swept away and one man, John McKinney, was drowned, while an unknown man was killed by a landslide.

$20,000 for Hills Claims.

Lead, S. D., May 26.—Martin Johnson has sold five of his mining claims adjoining this city for $20,000, receiving $500 in cash, the remainder to be paid within sixty days. The ground lies on the Black Hills & Fort Pierre road.

Eden Valley's First Fire.

Eden Valley, Minn., May 26. — The State Bank of Eden Valley lost its building by fire. A millinery store also burned. This was the first fire in the business section of the village since its organization.

RAILROAD MACHINISTS NEXT.

Question of Shorter Hours Will Come Up Before the Convention.

Washington, May 26.—President Jas. O'Connell of the International Association of Machinists announced yesterday afternoon that he would recommend to the next annual convention of machinists at Toronto, beginning June 3, that a date be set for a nine-hour day without reduction in wages on all the railroads of the country. On railroads which fail to comply with this demand a strike will be ordered. This recommendation will be made in Mr. O'Connell's annual report. Mr. O'Connell says that such a strike would involve probably 100,000 men. At 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon Mr. O'Connell said the outlook of the strike was very gratifying.

DOWIE IS ARRESTED.

Gives $10,000 Bail for His Release.

Chicago, May 26. — John Alexander Dowie, "overseer of the Christian Catholic church," was arrested here yesterday pursuant to the action of the coroner's jury which has declared him "criminally responsible" for the death of Mrs. Emma Lucy Judd. H. Worthington Judd, a disciple of Dowie and husband of the alleged victim, also was arrested, having appeared at the criminal court building in company with Dowie. Both men were taken before Judge Tuley, who admitted them to bail in $10,000 each.

CREEDON KNOCKED OUT.

Hart Wins a Desperate and Bloody Contest.

Louisville, Ky., May 26. — Marvin Hart of Louisville last night knocked out Dan Creedon of Australia in the sixth round of a twenty-five-round bout before the Southern Athletic club. The contest was desperate and bloody from the start. Hart, the plumber pugilist, had won fifteen straight victories and Creedon, owing to his greatly improved condition of late, was conceded to be the most dangerous proposition of them all. Hart weighed in at 170 pounds and Creedon one pound less.

KILLED BY LIGHTNING.

One Man Dead and Two Others Severely Injured.

Lebanon, Ohio, May 26.—Dr. W. L. Witham of South Lebanon was struck and instantly killed by lightning yesterday afternoon near Hufford's Grove and Charles Weinhoff and Charles James were seriously injured by the same bolt. They were members of a party of pupils of the public schools who sought refuge from the storm in a Hufford farm barn. Scarcely had they entered it when it was struck by lightning. All were more or less shocked and the barn badly damaged.

FAITH IN CHINESE.

Imperial Troops Taking the Places of the Allies.

Pekin, May 26.—Field Marshal Count von Waldersee has made arrangements with the commanders of the French, Japanese, British and Italian troops by which the area controlled by foreigners will be lessened and the Chinese regular troops will be allowed to take their places. The latter will be held responsible for any disturbances that may occur in the districts which will be placed under their control. The conditions can hardly be worse than they are at present.

A SMALL RECEPTION.

Few People Greet Milner on His Arrival in London.

London, May 26. — Sir Alfred Milner arrived in London at 2:30 yesterday afternoon. He was met at the station by the premier, Marquis Salisbury, and Colonial Secretary Chamberlain, who drove with him to Marlborough house, where Milner was received by the king. Milner's reception in London was not so enthusiastic as in Southampton and paled into insignificance when compared with the greeting accorded other home-comers from South Africa.

Killed by a Clergyman's Son.

Kingston, N. Y., May 26. — Frank Heroy, son of a Methodist clergyman, shot and killed Charles Vanderlyn at Greenfield. Heroy was drunk, and abusing his uncle, James Heroy, an aged cripple. His mother asked Vanderlyn to interfere. Heroy resented Vanderlyn's action, and, getting a shotgun, took deliberate aim and fired. Then he surrendered himself.

Anarchists Protest.

New York, May 26.—A cable dispatch of which this is a translation, has been sent to Rome by the Central Group of Italian anarchists in New York: "Minister Zanardelli, Rome, Italy: Against the execrable assassination just committed by the modern inquisitors of Italy the anarchists of New York protest with all their power, and notify you that they hereby inaugurate a renewal of war. —Anarchists."

Won by Roeber.

New York, May 26.—Ernest Roeber was given the decision over Nouroulah, the Turkish wrestler, after a severe struggle lasting twenty-six minutes at the Academy of Music last night. The conditions were that Nouroulah should throw Roeber three times within an hour, Graeco-Roman style.

Wine and Brandy Burned.

New York, May 26.—Fire destroyed 2,500,000 gallons of cheap wine and brandy in the warehouse of the Sonoma Wine and Brandy company, Brooklyn. Loss, $200,000. The fumes of the burning liquor sweetened the air over a large quarter of Brooklyn.

Would-Be Murderer Suicides.

Philadelphia, May 26.—A sensational attempt at murder and suicide took place at a hotel here last night when John A. Jenkins of Brooklyn, N. Y., attempted to kill a young woman and then shot himself while in custody.

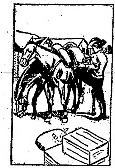
Canadians in London.

London, May 26.—The annual dinner in celebration of Dominion day will take place July 1 at the Hotel Cecil. Lord Strathcona will preside and will be supported by prominent Canadians, residents of London.

In the Slang Foundry

The Society of Amateur Philologists, the members of which are devoted to the study of language, has gravely decided that if it were not for the additions made from time to time by Americans, English would have to be classed as a dead or at least as a rapidly dying language.

From this country, however, come so many apt and novel phrases which are incorporated into the body of the English tongue that it is still alive and growing. And both in the United States and abroad students are beginning to recognize the importance and the value of words and phrases which start as slang, and, because they vividly describe some prevailing condition, gradually find their way into the standard dictionaries.

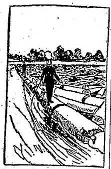


HE HAS A "CINCH" ON THE MULE.

The English society mourns because most all the slang which is found worthy of permanent adoption originates in the "States." But it is proud of the fact that in England has originated at least one popular phrase which has not found its way into this country, and which, if one may venture an opinion, is never likely to do so. The new English phrase is "twencent," and it is used to describe anything which is extremely "up to date." It is, of course, an abbreviation of twentieth century, and in the English eye is a remarkable example of condensation and wit.

Both the philologists of London and American authorities agree in the opinion that comparatively little slang of the sort which endures and becomes part of the language originates in large cities. Nor is it used first by educated and refined people. The so-called "educated classes" add little to a language except some stilted words which are borrowed from the classics or scientific terms which are also likely to be derived from one of the dead languages. It is the men on the farm, on western ranches, in gold and silver mines, and in other similar occupations who give the language its vitality and growth.

Thus the men who pack mules and horses for the trail over the mountains and plains of the great west put a "cinch" on many a "critter" before the general public began to talk familiarly of "getting a cinch" on any proposition in which it was interested. The lumbermen in the great woods of Wisconsin and the northwest piled up many millions of logs in booms and watched the logs go tearing down the swift little rivers after the "boom was busted" for many years before the stock brokers and real estate agents adopted their phraseology. Now there are few people indeed who do not know what a "boom" is and what is likely to happen when a "boom is busted."



WHERE "BOOM" CAME FROM.

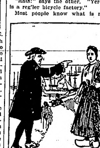
Speaking broadly, there are two kinds of slang. One depends for its popularity on the mere fact that the phrase is mouth-filling and pleases the popular fancy. Such slang is likely to have only a temporary popularity. The slang which lives and which sooner or later becomes a permanent part of the language is that which really means something, which describes some fact or condition in a new and vivid way. There are many people who are greatly impressed by the sound of any phrase the meaning of which they do not understand. It was this feeling which proved so effective when Dr. Samuel Johnson was vocally attacked by one of the famous fishwives of Billingsgate. Dr. Johnson knew that it would be idle and useless to answer the woman in kind, even if he had been willing to lower his dignity to that extent. At the same time he did not wish to listen to more of her abuse. Accordingly he pointed the finger of scorn at her and exclaimed in a voice of indignation and contempt: "Madam, you are an isosceles triangle, a parallelopipedon, an octagonal rhomboid." The fishwife was totally overcome and was unable to answer the doctor's scathing denunciation, but it is not recorded that the use of mathematical terms has ever become popular in the vocabulary of Billingsgate.

Another kind of slang which has a merely temporary popularity is that which exaggerates an already slang expression and carries it beyond the point of absurdity. Two street arabs, for instance, may be quarreling in the gutter.

"G'wan," says the first; "you've got a wheel in yere head."

"Rats!" says the other. "Yere nut is a reg'ler bicycle factory."

Most people know what is meant when a man is said to have "a wheel in his head," but the bicycle factory joke carries it a point beyond permanent appreciation.

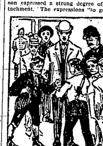


"MADAM, YOU ARE A PARALLELOPIPEDON."

The only class of highly educated people who contribute to any extent to the growth of the language is the college students. College slang is so vivid and has been so generally adopted that a dictionary has been issued which is entirely devoted to the subject.

It was at a college boarding club for instance that a student who wanted the small milk pitcher asked a companion to "drive the heifer this way." From terms originally used in college games the language has adopted many useful phrases. It is not many years since the first curved ball was pitched in a baseball game, and yet the current phrase "I am onto his curves" has a meaning entirely without connection with the baseball diamond. From the field sports of collegians have come the phrases to "jump on" a man and to "jump on him with both feet." Even the great American game of draw poker, which will not be claimed as a college game exclusively, has added several common phrases to the languages. Many a man who has never tried to "fill two pair" has "called a bluff" or declared that he would "go it blind."

It was a farmer's boy who had touched his tongue to the iron pump handle on a below-zero morning who discovered that "to freeze to" a person expressed a strong degree of attachment. The expressions "to get a load on" and "to carry a load" are plainly of country extraction and need no explanation. "A jag" is a provincialism which means a little load, so that to say a man has "a big jag on" is a contradiction in terms. "Jag" is one of the American expressions which has hardly reached England as yet, if one may judge from the expression of a recent author, who defined a "jag" as an umbrella, and quoted as authority a paragraph from a St. Louis paper which announced that "Mr. Brown was seen on the street last Sunday morning in the rain, carrying a fine, large jag." It was a Chicago humorist who declared that a man of his acquaintance was sometimes entirely sober, though he did "jump from jag to jag like an alcoholic chamois."



"G'WAN, YOU GOT WHEELS IN YERE HEAD."

"YERE HEAD IS A REGALER BICYCLE FACTORY."

Almost every business and profession has given the most picturesque words in its particular vocabulary to enrich the language. From the stock exchange, for instance, come "bulls" and "bears," a "corner," and "margins," though these words were originally borrowed and given new meanings by the stock brokers.

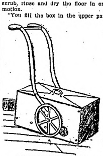
Mrs. Papa and Her Paper.

Mrs. Dano Papa, widow of the late Italian republican journalist of Milan, is now living in Paris, France. Mrs. Papa is an American woman, and, when her husband's paper, Italia del Popolo, was suppressed by the government on account of its liberal thought, she brought out two editions in the city of New York to demonstrate that the paper was not dead. At the time of the New York editions all the editors and contributors were either in solitary confinement as prisoners or in exile. Mrs. Papa is thoroughly familiar with the political situation in Italy, and, while her opinion may be influenced somewhat by her advanced thought, she states that Italy has just passed through a crisis of which the other powers are comparatively ignorant. Two republicans were called to the ministry because the opponents of the government had become so strong that it forced a recognition.—Chicago Journal.

THIS MACHINE SCRUBS FLOORS

If the machine that a Chicago genius has invented does what the inventor believes it will, the days of scrubbing drudgery are numbered. The novelty runs on wheels and is propelled by handles adjusted similarly to those on a garden cultivator. It is said to scrub, rinse and dry the floor in one motion.

"You fill the box in the upper part of the machine," said the inventor to a Chicago reporter the other day, "using clean, warm soap water. By opening a small valve the necessary amount of water is allowed to spread on the floor. When the machine is set in motion the scrubbing begins. The brush revolves and the two rollers, covered with cloth of a suitable nature, rinse and wipe. The waste water is conveyed to a tin box on the under side of the machine. This can be emptied at will."



SCRUBBING MACHINE.

The machine is 10 inches high, 10 inches wide and 20 inches long. It is especially designed for large floors.

England's Most Serious Problem.

The popular illusions respecting the seriousness of the Boer war were naturally accompanied by miscalculations as to its cost. Just before the war broke out, Mr. Stead's prediction that "we shall get off cheaply if it does not cost us more than 10,000 lives and £20,000,000" was considered as ridiculous as his other warnings. But some time ago the bill already exceeded £100,000,000, while a moderate estimate of the present cost puts it at £2,000,000 a week. As to casualties, the official returns up to the end of December reported 61,687, including 12,168 deaths. It is by this time clear that in his speech at Carnarvon Oct. 6, 1899, John Morley made the right retort to the sneer that he was a Cassandra. "Cassandra's prophecies," he replied, "happened to come true."—The Forum.

Queer Business in Turkey.

The sultan of Turkey has given instructions to the police of Constantinople that they are to stop the fires, which have become much too frequent lately. The police have thought the matter over and have come to the conclusion that fires are the result of insurance, and therefore insurance must be stopped. With this object they go round from house to house in the poorer quarters and tell the unfortunate householder that unless the next day he brings a letter from the company annulling his insurance he will be put in prison. The result is that many of them are begging the companies to cancel their insurances. The police offer, as an alternative, to accept a guarantee of several thousand pounds that no fire will break out in the house in question, or any of the six adjoining ones.

The Mayflower

In the gleam and gloom of the April weather,
  When the snows have flown in the brooklet's flood,
And the showers and sunbeams sport together,
  And the proud bough boasts of the baby bud—
On the hillside brown where the dead leaves linger
  In crackling layers all crimped and curled,
She parts their folds with a timid finger
  And shyly peeps at the waking world.

The boisterous west wind flies to meet her,
  And hails her smile with a gleeful shout,
The saplings lovingly bend to greet her,
  And the quickening grass-blades call, "Come out."
So venturing forth with a dainty neatness,
  In gown of pink or in white arrayed,
She comes once more with her simple sweetness,
  A modest, fair little Pilgrim maid.

Her fragrant petals their beauties showing
  Creep out to sprinkle the hill and dell;
Like showers of stars in the shadows glowing,
  Or snowflakes blossoming where they fell;
And the charmed wood leaps into joyous blooming,
  As though 'twere touched by a fairy's ring,
And the glad earth scents in the rare perfuming
  The first sweet breath of the new-born spring.

With the Pine Needles.

By Fannie Burling Crawford.

(Copyright, 1901, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

"Isn't this air fine?" she cried enthusiastically, lifting her face to the fresh wind of the woods.

"You bet it is!" he answered, grimly pulling up his coat collar and pushing his head down into it another inch.

"I love this breezy country, don't you? It reminds me of Chicago," she continued. "You never have cold weather out here on the Pacific slope, do you? Climate mild, but wet," she added joyously sniffing the aromatic breath of the woods. "Here the sharp edges of the Chicago winds are all smoothed and rounded off so that they never cut nor hurt."

What this athletic young woman enjoyed in this endless tramping about in February weather over muddy roads, mile after mile, exclaiming over the shifting clouds and the changing colors of the pine woods, Larry O'Neil could not comprehend. But her whim was his law, and so she walked and he followed. Bred on a big ranch, and accustomed to do his walking behind a plow, that kind of exercise presented to him only the characteristics of hard labor, and he was thinking regretfully of the warm and cosey little room they had left at her imperious command.

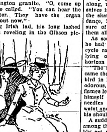
Now five miles from home they were sitting down to rest on a primeval boulder, where the pine woods sloped down to a rutty road. Pine cones lay thick upon the ground. Above them swelled grandly the music of the tree tops.

"People are always telling of the health and joy of sleeping in the woods in a bed of pine cones," said Miss Harwood, picking up a cone and pricking her finger on the sharp tines, "I shouldn't think these rough, prickly things would make a very comfortable bed."

"Wasn't it pine needles, instead of burrs?" asked her companion on the boulder moving more into the shelter of a tree trunk.

"Perhaps it was," and the teacher of physical culture in the little college laughed blithely, jumping up and running up the hill to another big boulder of Washington granite. "O, come up here," she called. "You can hear the wind better. They have the organ stops all out now."

The big Irish lad, his long lashed gray eyes reveling in the Gibson picture, docilely obeyed, though he felt sure that he was leaving a warmer stone for one that was colder.



"Wasn't pine needle?"

"Let's fill your pockets with these cones."

"What for?" he demanded in amazement.

"Why, to burn. They make a lovely open fire," replied Miss Harwood.

"I'll bring you a wagon-load tomorrow, if you want them," he answered. "Meantime lets build a fire here now. This stone was just getting warm and comfortable but——" and he began to gather the scattered dry branches. In a few moments Miss Harwood was down on the damp ground, in spite of protests in a rich Irish voice, before a big roaring mass of glowing branches, cones and decayed logs. Higher the wood flamed among the dark firs, tipping with evanescent fire the green branches of the trees and licking up the dry needles on the ground, while the dirge moaned on through the tall tree tops.

"Isn't this a jolly fire? You're very good to me, Mr. O'Neil."

It was small reward for the months of devotion which he had lavished upon her ever since she had come to the Evergreen state, but it made his Irish heart warm for the darlin'. He loved to be good to her.

"The same old story."

When the brief snow fell, before the Chinook wind had melted it like magic, he would leave the chores at the ranch to take her sleigh-riding through the silent woods where the warm wind fanned their faces and the green boughs bent low under a burden of moist snow. Not a sound but the jingling of the bells as they flew along, not a human being but themselves in the Hiawatha forest. When the skating was good or there was a dance, Miss Virginia Harwood was sure of having the best partner of them all for her escort.

As soon as the roads were passable he had promised to show her the bicycle routes, and the lakes and hills lying over there against the blue horizon she loved so well.

"The fire is going out, Mr. O'Neil," came the voice that was like a singing bird in his heart. He heaped on the odorous, resinous branches and the flames leaped up again. Then he threw himself down beside her on the soft needles and put his arm about her waist and dragged her head down upon his shoulder and madly kissed her lips.

A sudden gust tossed the flames high among the trees. Miss Harwood forcibly sat up and looked at him in an amazement too absolute for words. Truly he was very handsome, this untutored savage. His eyes shone blue fire under the black curling hair, the healthy blood showed red in cheek and lip.

"Don't look that way darlin'. I couldn't help it. I love you so. Sure an' I know the likes of you would not be lookin' at me, the day, but I do be lovin' you better than any one else ever did."

She could not reply. What had she done that this lad should be so ridiculous? The men she had known would have understood. They could take care of themselves but this hot-eyed young ranchero——. The fire was burning low again. "A white angel like you wouldn't want to be chained to a black devil like me," Larry went on. "I've never went to school any and I never wanted to till I knew you. You'll be going home now soon?" he asked.

"Yes, in the spring," she answered crisply.

"An' whatever will I do without you darlin'. You'll be going back east where you'll be havin' lots of friends. But I've got to stay here. I live here," he added fiercely.

The fire had burned down to blackened ashes. The mournful wind blew colder about them. Miss Harwood shivered. As she rose to start on the long road home she stepped on a buttercup just above ground and crushed it.

Back in her own room again with its comfort and color and photographs and other reminding bits of college life, Miss Harwood quickly made another Gibson picture of herself among the enveloping cushions of the couch and prepared to read the letters which the west-bound train had brought in. From among the advertisements with their typewritten envelopes, and the fashionable stationery of girl friends, she picked out the big letter with the Chicago postmark, the letter that she waited for from day to day. They were not engaged—not yet, but she knew they would be some day when he should get established in a good hospital position and should ask her to come.

She tore the envelope open anticipating the pleasure to come. But this one was not like the others. It was short and stated briefly that he expected to be married in May. The lady was Miss Estelle Manwaring, whose father Virginia Harwood remembered is chief surgeon on the hospital staff and a very wealthy man.

There was little else except the name which was signed at the bottom. "The same old story. A girl with money is just as good as a girl without," said Miss Harwood aloud with a hard little laugh as she dropped the sheets to the floor and lay staring at them.

Larry O'Neil's farewell words came back to her. "It will be like death not to see you again. Let me come once more, just once."

For a long time she sat before the fire. After awhile she arose and went to her writing desk. Her pen flew hurriedly over a page of note paper. Then she rang her call-bell furiously.

"Tell John," she said to the boy at the door, "to saddle his horse and take this note to the Malchero rancho. No, not tomorrow, tonight. Quick now!" Then to herself, "I'll take another walk tomorrow with Larry."

VALUABLE GROSBEAK EGGS

$4 Each Received by Lad Who Caught Some of the Birds.

Last February, when the temperature held at zero for a week at a time and the snow was falling every other day, Hector Sanborn, aged 15, set horse hair snares about his home and caught more than two dozen pine grosbeaks, says the Dexter, Me., correspondent of the New York Sun. Most of them were females. He kept the birds in a large, open and well-lighted room at the rear of the barn and fed them on seeds and refuse fruit. While the weather continued cold the birds were mostly healthy and took kindly to the new way of life, becoming fat and frisky with nothing to do but eat and sleep. In March several pairs mated, built nests and began to lay eggs, and by April 1 the boy had secured 34 fine specimens. Then the spring weather came and caused the birds to have convulsions, from which nearly one-half died. Finding that he would be unable to keep his pets through the summer young Sanborn liberated the survivors, allowing them to go north and seek more congenial temperature. Last week the boy received an offer of $4 each for every pine grosbeak egg he could spare. He at once shipped thirty to the Boston naturalist who wished to complete a collection of rare eggs, and two days ago he received a check for $120. If next winter proves to be cold enough to drive the grosbeaks to Maine the boy can see a big fortune on easy terms.

The Sultan as a Sportsman.

Contrary to the prevailing impression, the Sultan of Turkey has a number of tastes in common with the English-speaking people. He admires outdoor sports, and is said to be himself a good shot. He is fond of horses and dogs, and most of his sons, like himself, excel in horsemanship. Some time ago he engaged an expert coachman from England to teach some of the princes to drive tandem and four-in-hand. After a little while, however, the coachman was dismissed and had considerable difficulty in collecting the salary agreed upon. The sultan has a hobby of making a collection of old and curious weapons and arms.

British Army Has Schoolmaster.

The "private schoolmaster" is not unknown in the smart regiments, like the Tenth hussars. This man's employment is a most praiseworthy one, and consists in coaching ambitious privates for their first and second class certificates. Among men in these smart corps there are scores of good birth, but neglected education. Once they attain their first class certificate they are eligible for promotion, and subsequent recommendation for commissioned honors. They often employ some thoroughly well educated ranker to coach them. His pay varies.—Pearson's Weekly.
